Regarding the bizarre view of Mark McGrath of U.S. presence in Japan, I am amazed to find such stupidity exists. Mr. McGrath starts raving in his second paragraph, "Ever since the end of World War II, the U.S. has been purging Japan of its culture and dignity." Hmmm, did I miss something? Just how often does the victor rebuild the vanquished to the point where it can reach global influence, to the brink of wrecking havoc on the victor's prized industries? Is that punishment or not? Did Japan receive payment from China for carnage on Chinese soil or did it help rebuilt what it destroyed? It's called the Sino-Japanese War, Mr. McGrath. Now try to imagine what would have happened if the U.S. lost. My best guess is our payment would go into lubing Japan's war machine for future conquest. It happened that way before. Now get real and justify how the U.S. purges Japan's dignity.

As far as America's "reign of terror," did you forget who started the shooting? Given the atrocious treatments toward civilians and prisoners of war, do you think the enemy would have hesitated one second to use the bomb if they had it? In short, the U.S. was lucky to have the resource and courage to end the fighting. If you have a problem with that, take your remorse of the families of those killed to preserve your rights. Tell them you wish we lost and watch the response.

I'm still wondering why you see the U.S.'s effort to "demilitarize and democratize" Japan as evil. Picture yourself attacked by someone who intended to end your life. You subdue him, then what? Do you disarm him and pursue him not to do it again? Or do you give back his weapon fully armed and pretend it was a joke? You seem to suggest the latter because the first choice is "degrading." Do you prefer to be dead? I would like to hear the logic of it.

The same goes for "destroying an empire in getting rid of the emperor." You state in your next sentence that the emperor is alive and well, being a "symbol of the state." How's that punishment for killing tens of millions of innocent people? Hitler paid with his life. What made you think the emperor had better character?

The act committed by the three U.S. servicemen was a crime. It is a disgrace to their uniform and all man. They should be punished accordingly. But it is a crime unsupported by the state that is no more hideous than the countless crimes committed by Japanese troops in WWII. While Japan has never officially apologized, even downplaying mass rape/killing as fabrications and military necessities, it is using this one incident as a political windfall to leverage trading negotiation. You do keep up with current events, right?

One last point — you wrote, "the only reason we still keep the Japanese under our control is the Japanese could give American the punishment it deserves." Are you referring to the punishment we deserve for protecting Japan against Soviet bombers? Or are you referring to the way we cover up Japan's atrocity by allowing them to keep their war loot and emperor? The Smithsonian's one-sided commemoration of war victims? As a veteran, I demand an explanation.

Hung P. Szeto
Northeast

Voting system needs to be revamped

To the Editor:

I was happy and impressed to read of James Waite's dedication to registering black voters in the Oct. 23 edition of the Collegian. It is always inspiring to hear that others still recognize the importance of voting. However, no matter how many of us register and vote, many citizen's votes in the U.S. simply do not count.

For example, a 30 percent black voting bloc can basically do nothing to defeat a 70 percent white voting bloc, even if all voting age blacks are registered and vote. They simply have to be satisfied with being represented by someone they voted against. This is not fair and it does not have to happen.

Most democracies in the world do not elect representatives using our "winner-take-all" electoral system. Instead, they use systems of proportional representation (PR). PR is not complicated, it works just like it sounds — people are represented proportionally based on their vote. Instead of having a strong 30 percent black vote thrown away, 30 percent of the vote would equal 30 percent of the seats.

Congresswoman Cynthia McKinney of Georgia essentially had her black majority district taken away from her this past summer by the Supreme Court. In response to this action, she will be proposing legislation which would allow for proportional and semi-proportional voting systems. This type of legislation is essential if we want to have fair representation for blacks, women, third parties and all people of color. PR would allow blacks to elect representatives without the political controversies of gerrymandering. For more information about PR and voting issues please contact Five College Students for a Fair Ballot. katf936@hamp.hampshire.edu.

Karen A. Taggart
Amherst

A thanks for success

To the Editor:

The Newman Center has just finished its major fund- raising effort, our Annual Phonathon. We would not have had such a successful campaign if we did not have the assistance of the Greek community. Women and men from the various houses poured in here every evening to staff the phones and solicit donations from our alumni, parents and friends. We are very grateful to all these students for their interest in our Center.

Many other students assisted us as well, but I especially wanted to thank all the Greeks without whom our Phonathon would not have been so productive.

Rev. Francis P. Lavelle
Director of Newman Center

Fear of flippin' the burgers

Matt Audette

The other night I had a dream. Well... maybe it was more like a nightmare. I was standing in line at some non- descript, run-of-the-mill McDonald's, clutching my money and carefully examining the menu. The line seemed endless — the more it moved up, the farther away the register loomed in the distance.

Finally, I reached the front of the line. A disgruntled McDonald's employee, whose back was turned, stood in front of me. I desperately tried everything in my power to get the kid to help me, but he continued to ignore me, content with making the chocolate shake he had so patiently been working on.

"Sir, sir, excuse me but I would like a number four. Super-sized," I pleaded, but to no avail the back stayed turned, and the shake continued to be made.

Finally, after what seemed to be an eternity, I could see that the task of making a McDonald's shake was completed and the employee began to slowly turn towards me. You can only imagine the sheer terror I experienced when I looked to see that this lackadaisical and somewhat rude McDonald's worker was in fact — me.

Only it gets worse. There was no doubt it was a bizarre clone of myself standing before me, but for some reason I looked a bit different. My hair was slightly longer, thinner and greasier and I had an enormous display of acne covering my face. "Can I help you," my evil twin said in a deadpan voice.

I woke up in a cold sweat.

Yes, I am a senior. I will be graduating in May, and the fact of the matter is — I have absolutely no idea what I want to do with my life. I've done a pretty good job of ignoring this fact for quite some time, but the truth that I will soon be leaving the University is growing closer and closer. Even my sub-conscious is beginning to remind me.

The fact of the matter is, this all seemed to creep up on me rather quickly. I first started noticing I must be a senior when telephone conversations with my mother starting becoming like interrogations by the CIA.

"Hi, Mom."

"Hi, Matt. What are you going to do with your life?"

Jeez, so much for beating around the bush. The main concern of parents seems to be, not so much that I get a great job that pays six-digit figures, but rather I never, ever, no matter under what circumstances, move back into their house again.

Don't get me wrong — it's not that I want to move back into my house. I'm sure in the next couple weeks I'll begin having dreams I am 60-years-old, living at home and playing Scrabble with my 103-year-old mother. I just want to be happy, be able to live on my own, and work in a job that doesn't require having to say the words "Have a nice day."

I'm a relatively smart guy. I'm a journalism major who gets fairly decent grades, and I've done a substantial amount of writing. But awhile back I had a friend who graduated from UMass with a degree in Civil Engineering. He ended up delivering pizzas for a year before he was forced to join the military for fear he would murder the next drunken, snot-nosed college student who gave him a dime for a tip.

I don't want to join the military. I don't want to have to fear I may murder innocent college students. I don't want to have to see the Golden Arches when I pull into work every morning.

I don't think this is a lot to ask, considering I've dumped thousands upon thousands of dollars into this institution of higher learning. I'm not saying the University owes me anything — I'm really just using it as a scape-goat for my own apathy — I just wish a college degree meant something more, and that there was some sort of guarantee I could get at least a decent job. But alas, there are no guarantees and the fact of the matter is I'll probably end up freezing my ass off as some gas-station pumping for the Man.

"Have a nice day."

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

A few rotten apples

Matthew Pugh

The Million Man March was an event that will live in the hearts of generations for years to come. Not since the sixties has an event of such power and premise been witnessed in this country.

The march was held as an event to promote change in the black community. Black men were asked to answer the call of responsibility; responsibility for their wives, responsibility for their children and most importantly, responsibility for their own lives. The spark of the black man has grown into a raging fire. The souls of oppressed black forefathers are whistling and stirring in the breeze, unable to rest until America changes her racist and vile ways. This change is imperative to the harmony and prosperity of this country. It is up to the black men to change their ways of living and free themselves from misery.

If this is the case, then perhaps black America should start by questioning the character of the leaders who speak about these necessary changes. Questioning the character of America's black leaders is important. America is not frightened of the possibilities of a few thousand black men; America is frightened of any man who assembles and follows the voices and ideas of blatantly racist and diabolical leaders. The question black America has to ask itself is, can any good fruit fall from a rotten tree?

Rev. Benjamin Chavis, Marion Barrey and Louis Farrakhan are the leaders black Americans chose to speak out and lead them. It seems utterly absurd to think anyone could squeeze an ounce of integrity from any of these men.

Benjamin Chavis, formerly a member of the NAACP, was fired for embezzling over $325,000 in funds. The money was used to pay a woman off to not make public the charges that she was sexually harassed by Chavis. During the march, one of the Islam Nation's ministers asked if each of the marchers would pass down a dollar for the cause. Would you want Benjamin Chavis or someone of his character to collect and handle your money? The fact goes unmentioned that it is illegal to take up any monetary collection on Federal property.

Mayor Marion Barry is a convicted felon. He was videotaped smoking crack cocaine by the Drug Enforcement Administration. Also, while serving time in prison, Barry solicited prostitutes on several different occasions. One of the primary messages of the march was that the use of illegal drugs should be stopped. How can we advocate this coming from a man who uses them?

Louis Farrakhan is by far the president of this growing hypocrite club. Here is a man who, by his own words, is a racist, bigot and anti-Semitic. He has referred to whites and Jews as being "devils and blood-suckers." How ironic is it that Farrakhan speaks freely as he sees prudent about peace and harmony in the black community, when he condones racism? Yes, it is a positive idea black men need to start taking responsibility, but he continues to hold white people responsible for all the black man's woes. He blames the white man for blacks killing blacks. He blames them for putting drugs and guns into the hands of black men. The number of black problems Farrakhan blames on the Jews is countless.

It is also an outrage that any of these men can act and preach in hatred in the name of Allah. By no means did Allah want men hating each other. Nevertheless, these hateful tyrants, as history has shown, will perish when Allah passes judgement upon them. Someone once said, "Hell is an evil place for people and the lawyers who defend them." (No O.J. pun intended.)

The black race is a strong one. Blacks certainly deserve more than a modern day Hitler to lead them. Martin Luther King and Haile Selassie were men who believed in peace, and loving your brother, no matter what his race or religious convictions were. They were men who believed in integration, and segregation.

The Million Man March was a wonderful idea; the idea that thousands of men can join in a common purpose and peace. However, we cannot overlook the deep-seeded, hidden messages behind several of the march's speakers. It is our responsibility as blacks, whites and all other races to question the character of those who lead us. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said it best; "Judge people not by the color of their skin, but by the color of their character." May God rest his soul.

Matthew Pugh is a UMass student.

Arts & Living

G. Love leads a blues explosion

Backed by Special Sauce, Pearl Street is electrified with tunes

By Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

G LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE
Pearl Street
Oct. 28

NORTHAMPTON — Saturday night, Pearl Street could have been called the house of blues. After all, G. Love and Special Sauce were scheduled to play their mellow rap influenced blues tunes in front of a packed club.

As the sold out crowd walked in, all that could be seen on stage were lit candles and sticks of burning incense which made a proper metaphor for the laid-back atmosphere that was to come. Opening the set with a new number off of the recent Coast to Coast Motel, G. Love was dressed in an all black bluesman suit, and was strapped to both a light blue vintage guitar and a harmonica.

G. Love then led his band into one of the many crowd favorites "Cold Beverages" which featured an ace drum solo. Most impressive throughout the night was the musicianship and tightness G. Love's group showed. For example, stand- up bassist (Jimmy "Jazz" Prescott) won the crowd over with his amazing fretwork he exhibited during one of his many brief solos.

Although Special Sauce was definitely in full effect, G. Love was still the one whom all eyes were on. During "Blues Music," one of the highlights of the night, G. Love paid tribute to many of his Blues heroes, singing about B.B. King and Buddy Guy.

During the set there was a great deal of improvisation going on. During "Baby's Got Sauce," G. Love added some new tasty guitar licks, ending the song by singing the verse "love one another" and asking the crowd to recite it back (which they had no problem doing.) Then as G. Love and Special Sauce left the stage, it was obvious to see they would give us all a few encores.

Coming out with a cover of the Beatles' "Help," G. Love sang it with his somewhat whiny voice while giving a blues twist that practically made it unrecognizable to the listener. Lastly, they went through a few more songs off Coast to Coast Motel ending with "Sweet Sugar Mama."

After seeing G. Love in concert, it is safe to say that you didn't see a legend like B.B. King or Elvis. However, after watching G. Love take bits and pieces from all of his idols, it becomes apparent that he can do it with the same sense of honesty as musicians like Jon Spencer and the Beastie Boys. Lastly, from the sound of all of those screaming fans at Pearl Street Saturday night, G. Love must be doing something right.

G. Love & Special Sauce performed at Pearl Street Saturday.

COURTESY KADHAFI

French Primitivism displayed at Mount Holyoke art exhibit

By Nathalie Scriba
Collegian Correspondent

PEASANTS AND "PRIMITIVISM": FRENCH PRINTS FROM MILLET TO GAUGUIN
Mount Holyoke College Art Museum
Oct. 21 - Dec. 17

In this exhibition at Mount Holyoke College Art Museum, some eighty prints in diverse techniques have been selected by guest curator Robert L. Herbert in order to explore aspects of the graphic arts in nineteenth-century France.

The works range from Realism and Impressionism to Post-Impressionism. Many of these works are by famous artists such as J.F. Millet, Camille Pissarro and Paul Gauguin, while others are by less well-known printmakers such as Adolphe Hervier and Auguste Lepere.

In last Thursday's lecture about the exhibition, Professor Robert L. Herbert, a member of the faculty of Mount Holyoke College Department of Art, explained the development and meaning of the "Primitivism" movement in late nineteenth-century France.

Robert L. Herbert was introduced by the director of the museum, Marianne Doezema, who pointed out that "he is one of the foremost scholars in the field of nineteenth- century French art." He has published many books and even was decorated by the French government as "Chevalier d'Art et Lettres."

The exhibition deals with the concept of Primitivism, not only in subject but also in technique and style. The development of deliberately crude or "primitive" processes for making etchings, lithographs and woodcuts was paralleled by the upsurge of images of peasants and small town folk.

Taking into account that Industrialization and Urbanization were at full swing at that time in France, the development of the Primitivism movement seems to be a fundamental paradox. "But it is only an apparent one," Herbert said, "Primitivism and the industrialized culture are one."

At first controversies arose when peasants became the subject of artwork — a shocking assault on the tradition of aristocratic, noble life, which idealized themes drawn from history and mythology. But they quickly became very popular as pre-industrial conditions of rural life, labor and landscape satisfied people's longings for old ways, for nature and health.

Although peasants actually led arduous and often miserable lives, people held to the myth that rural life was healthy and pleasant. Herbert explained that peasants stood for "simplicity, innocence, stable world, freedom, closeness to nature and individualism." Urban poverty and hard factory work made city dwellers seek for a kind of compensation.

The exhibition shows both the simple beauty and charm of these "primitive" works of art and the significant relationship between art and society at a certain point of its development. "Cela vaut la peine" – it is worth to go and see it.

Museum hours are 11 am to 5 pm, Tuesday to Friday and 1pm to 5 pm, Saturday and Sunday. It is free and open to the public.

Jim Rose Circus Sideshow to freak out at Pearl St.

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Correspondent

Imagine a place where one can see audience members drink a mixture of bile and beer, a tattooed man light a cigarette by sticking his head into a blowtorch, and a young male squeeze his entire body through a tennis racket. These and other freakish acts can be seen at the Jim Rose Circus Sideshow.

The group's major exposure came while opening for Nine Inch Nails during their Self Destruct Tour 94/95. Since then they have acquired quite a cult following. Given only about a half hour to perform at the NIN shows, Rose promised the audience that he and his clan would be back for a longer, more perverse show. This year, Rose has put together his most dangerous tour ever, Monsters of Danger and Women of Wonder.

Rose acts as an emcee during this tour of the unnatural that makes even those with a strong stomach squirm. His talent is swallowing razorblades and then regurgitating them in a particular order. Among the other performers is the being called the Enigma. When he is not eating glass or swallowing live bugs, he plays the eerie music which accompanies the show.

Then there is the crowd favorite, Mr. Lifto, who has piercings in just about every piercable place on his body. His forte is lifting heavy items such as suitcases and irons from his ears, nose, tongue and yes, even his genitals. And of course, no show would be complete without a circus queen who walks topless up a ladder of swords.

Whether doing it for attention or shock value, Rose grabs the audience and spellbinds them so that it is nearly impossible to turn away. It has the same gripping effect that one experiences when driving past an accident scene — you want to close your eyes and look away but you can't. Although one may leave the show with such questions as, "How can people do those things to their body?" or "What kind of freaks are they?" no one will ever forget this show.

Jim Rose plays at Pearl Street tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets are available in advance from the Northampton Box Office.

Same old song and dance

By Jim Gately
Collegian Correspondent

GREEN DAY
Insomniac
Warner Brothers

Sid Vicious must be rolling in his grave as he sees the new wave of punk bands. The pissed off attitude of the Clash and the Sex Pistols have made way for a new vision mainstream punk. These days everyone wants to be a snot- nosed, purple-haired rebel. To borrow from a 1970s soft- drink commercial, "I'm a punk, she's a punk, wouldn't you like to be a punk too?"

Since the onslaught of 3rd generation punk ruck bands, the punk world has changed drastically. The music isn't geared at complacent middle class youths, nor is out to rattle people's cages. Punk songs no longer seem to have messages behind them; instead punk bands today strive to be just loud and obnoxious. This neo-punk movement is being led by those Three Stooges of mud and mayhem, Green Day. After conquering the airwaves of radio and MTV, the band has broken down barriers for numerous bands from Offspring to Rancid and even the Foo Fighters.

After selling eight million copies of an album whose title is synonymous with "crap," the question must be asked, can the world take more of this "crap"? Well Green Day certainly thought so when they released their latest album, Insomniac. Call it Dookie 2 or Dookie Strikes Back, but don't call it dumb.

Billie Joe Armstrong, Mike Dirnt and Tre Cool knew they had to release a follow-up to their unexpected major label smash before another band stole their thunder (Hootie and the Blowfish don't count). Plus the band's core audience, teenagers, did not want the band to change their trademark sound — they are just begging for more hits like "Basket Case" and "Longview." But after four albums, the band hasn't grown up musically at all, which makes one wonder how much longer this trio can continue their routine before it becomes hackneyed.

Once again the band follows the Ramones rules for songwriting — short and catchy. Coming in at just under 33 minutes, the 14 songs on Insomniac each last about as long as one of Mike Tyson's fights. Little ditties such as "Brat" and "Jaded" come at you like pugnacious pellets of punk perfection that slam down their point and end faster than you can say, "Green Stink Breath."

Glimpses of musical growth are rare, with the metallic "Brain Stew" and the fierce instrumental opening of "Panic Song" as the main exceptions. Their basic formula hasn't changed much either — three chords, a faux-English accent with raw, pulsing energy.

One might think this puckish threesome lacks talent and manners, which is debatable, but their melodic harmonies, in your face musical approach and their devil-may-care attitude makes the band stand out. Billie Joe Armstrong may proclaim in "Walking Contradiction," "I'm a smart-ass but I'm playing dumb," but Insomniac proves that the band knows how to assemble an album that keeps the listener awake. This band's 15 minutes of fame is hardly over. B

COURTESY ATLANTIC

Green Day is back with Insomniac.

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu® knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wed. October 18 room 174 OR Tues. November 14 room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

Get Real!
You hide, you seek, you BLAST! LASER STORM
The Ultimate Laser Tag Game!
It's not virtual, it's REAL... It's the most exciting, interactive laser tag game in the Galaxy!
LASER STORM... where YOU are the action!
GET TWO GAMES FOR THE PRICE OF ONE... with this ad
Not valid Fri. or Sat. or with any other offer. One discount per customer. Expires 11/30/95
Hampshire Mall · Hadley, MA · 586-8345
Blasting Daily... Call for times

Volleyball wins ninth straight

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Nothing out-lasts the Massachusetts volleyball team. They keep winning and winning and winning...

If there is one word that can describe coach Bonnie Kenny's squad, that would have to be momentum. The Minutewomen have not dropped a match since Oct. 7, when they lost a three-game battle to George Washington (15-10, 15-12 and 15-12). Since then, it's been nothing but checks in the win column as UMass has won the last nine straight games, thus posting an impressive 20-9 overall record, 11-4 in Atlantic 10 play.

The most recent victims were trounced in this past weekend's three game conference road trip to Philadelphia and New York.

First up for the Minutewomen were the Temple Owls, coached by Bob Bertucci. Kenny's former collegiate coach at the University of Tennessee. The last time these two inter-conference rivals met, the match was fought to the bitter end, with Massachusetts picking up the win in a five- game battle.

This time around, the Minutewomen returned from McGonigle Hall with another win. Temple, which dropped to 12-10 overall after the loss (6-7 in the A-10) once again put up a strong fight. UMass took the match in four, winning 15-12, 15-8, 14-16 and 15-6.

Leading the way for the Minutewomen's offense was junior outside hitter Giza Rivera who posted an impressive 25 kills. Following close behind was junior outside hitter Dionne Nash, who tallied 16 kills on the night, senior middle blocker Rachel Sky (14 kills) and sophomore Lesley Nolan (11 kills).

After the close fought battle with Temple, it was smooth sailing for the Minutewomen. UMass disposed of LaSalle handily, dropping the hapless Explorers (3-18, 1-12 in the A-10) in three. A quick glance at the scorecard summarizes the battle: 15-2, 15-8 and 15-8.

Once again, Nash was an offensive power at the net posting 20 kills on the evening. The offensive stats were spread around the UMass squad as each player that suited up for the game tallied at least two or three kills.

A contributing factor to the decisive UMass victory came from man power. While Kenny had 12 athletes suited up for the match, LaSalle had a mere six. Even with the Explorers playing at full power, the Minutewomen were just too strong of a team to put up a fight.

The Minutewomen faced much of the same low-key play when they travelled to the Bronx, N.Y. to face the Lady Rams of Fordham who stand at 3-20 overall. UMass won in three, running over the opposition 15-1, 15-8 and 15-6. This win slammed the door shut in the A-10 basement, which seems to be where Fordham, 0-13 in conference play, is destined to reside for the remainder of the season.

Rivera led the team in kills, posting 11, followed by Nash who tallied 10 for the evening. Nash, the Lancaster, Calif. native, also earned her 1,000th kill in her three-year collegiate career. With 1,003 kills under her belt, Nash is the first player in school history to reach the 1,000 mark in kills.

Can UMass go all the way? With five games remaining in the regular season, the Minutewomen look to extend their win streak right into the A-10 tournament. While momentum is behind Kenny's squad, the Minutewomen must face off against conference leaders George Washington and Rhode Island once more before securing their spot.

Nash and company take to the floor of the Curry Hicks Cage again as they look to revenge losses earlier in the season to GW Friday and Virginia Tech Saturday. Both matches begin at 7 p.m.

■ UMass

continued from page 10

lot of credit," Alessio said. "The mud is just part of the game. We have to play in it. It's what makes football fun."

Then you have redshirt freshman Matt Jordan. The Derry, N.H. native was given the ball only six times. If you want to talk about making the most of opportunities, this kid wrote the book.

Jordan surfed 174 yards on the mud-laden field. Doing the math, that's an average of 29 yards per carry. And people are worried about what will happen when senior fullback Rene Ingoglia graduates. Jordan can fill the shoes like odor- eaters. Like Alessio, one of Jordan's rushes (70 yards) resulted in a touchdown.

"Matt Jordan is a great football player. He is a physical player with great speed and vision," Hodges said. "We hoped he was that good when we recruited him and to step it up today like he did was really something."

Speaking of Ingoglia, the all-time UMass rushing leader did not gain 100 yards. It's hard to imagine a game where the Minutemen have over 500 yards rushing, and Ingoglia doesn't have at least 100 of them. He did have 87 yards, but the dirty work was left to Alessio and Jordan. Ingoglia played the role of the relief pitcher closing out offensive drives. He had three touchdowns including a pair of one- yard TD runs to go with a 10-yard scoring scamper.

"We felt the reason the other guys could make big plays was that they were so concerned with stopping Rene. When you come out with the option it gets things going," Hodges said. "I don't know what the yardage shows, but he was a huge factor in the game today."

Finally there is the other back. When you think of the qualities of a quarterback, you usually think of passing. Sophomore Anthony Catterton did not pass. He did however, do all of the other things a quarterback needs to do to win. He displayed speed, poise, leadership and the ability to handle the muddy pigskin.

Overshadowed by the running backs, Catterton made big gains possible. Most of the big runs were on options or pitches in which Catterton made great decisions. When the time came to flip the ball to the running back, the ball was perfectly placed in the hands of the running back enabling a good run. When Catterton opted to keep the ball, he displayed some running back qualities of his own, scoring two touchdowns. His touchdown runs were 28 and eight- yard TD runs.

"Since he's started he hasn't missed a beat. He jumps in a game and gets the job done," Alessio said. "He's a leader on the field and a great quarterback."

"Anthony Catterton does a great job back there," added center Matt Alegi.

The Minutemen running game is one of the very best; altering an already successful offense to make passing more visible makes no sense.

If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Mike Brown is a Collegian columnist.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Cornell's Karyn Anderer was grabbing at Rachel LeDuc's shirt on this play but the senior forward got the last laugh as her two goals propelled the Minutewomen to a 2-1 win.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

Just three minutes later, UMass almost relived the goal that cost them the Temple game.

Cornell's Carrie Fader tossed a shot from the far corner which knuckled in the swirling wind of Richard F. Garber Field and sent Dion back-pedaling to the far post. The UMass keeper knocked the ball away, but the deflected shot went off the goalpost and bounced back to the front of the goal mouth just inches from the goal line. Freshman defender Amanda Thompson was there to send the ball out of harm's way and Cornell wouldn't have another good scoring chance the rest of the match.

"It was great to come back from that letdown as flukey as it was," Rudy said of the victory over Cornell. "It's good to get back psychologically, the fact that that loss was an oddity and we can beat these teams."

The Minutewomen return to action Friday, as they look to defend their crown in the Atlantic 10 tournament, which will be held at Garber Field.

"We need to play hard and play our game," LeDuc said. "Hopefully, [we can] come out with two victories."

Men's soccer defeats St. Joseph's, Temple

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team maintained its hold of the second place spot in the Atlantic 10 this weekend by winning a pair of important conference matches in Philadelphia.

On Friday night the Minutemen downed the Hawks of St. Joseph's 2-1 and completed the sweep by downing Temple 3-2 yesterday afternoon.

With the wins UMass improves to 14-4-2 on the season, 8- 2-1 in the conference, and will have the second seed at the A-10 Championships this weekend at top seed Rhode Island.

Friday night junior Dave Siljanovski extended his team lead in goals, assists and points as he notched his 12th goal and 16th assists of the season.

Senior Brad Miller, who entered the season with just two career goals, scored his eighth of the season at 35:48 on a 15-yard shot. Siljanovski and Bennie Sheally assisted on the strike.

With St. Joe's forced to play the final 51 minutes of the match a man down after Michael Blue received a red card, Siljanovski tallied the game-winner on a 20-yard shot, assisted by Jake Brodsky, at 52:40.

St. Joe's Les Korsos scored on a penalty kick at 61:42, but the Minutemen held on for the victory. Goalkeeper Eric Gruber had to make just two saves in recording the win.

Temple got on the board first in yesterday's tussle as the Owls' Kevin McNally put a rebound past Gruber at 15:05.

Colin Johnson scored the first of his two goals on the day to even things at one. Johnson scored on a Brodsky cross at 25:02.

Freshman Scott Regina scored from Karsten Bremke in the match's 41st minute, and Johnson notched his second goal of the day, and the eventual game-winner, at 52:14.

Temple would score in the 71st minute, but UMass hung on for the 3-2 decision.

With the two A-10 wins, the Minutemen will carry the second seed into the A-10 Tournament this weekend at URI. Last year, the Minutemen entered the A-10s with the No. 1 seed after winning the regular season championship. This year, the Minutemen will likely have to defeat the Rams on their home field if they are to capture the elusive A-10 post- season title and advance to an NCAA Play-in.

No. 5 equestrian team hoping for National spot

By Julia Wrobel
Collegian Correspondent

The Equestrian team, one of the oldest sport teams at Massachusetts, has come a long way. It was 19 years ago when the team first went to the Nationals in Texas. Currently, the team is No. 5 in the nation.

Two years ago the team qualified for nationals again in Texas, where they rode their best but didn't place. Last year, they made a complete turn-around and placed fifth out of 200 college and university teams at the Nationals, held in Colorado.

The Equestrian team is under the direction of coach Wendy Ciecilu and her assistant, recent graduate Julie Watson.

The Equestrian team has aspirations of qualifying again for the Nationals, to be held in the spring of 1996 in Los Angeles, and by placing better than last year. The team is well on it's way to attaining that goal by their never-ending hard work, determination, talent and total dedication to their sport.

The team has taken part in three competitions so far this semester. For the opening show, UMass placed third out of 13 group-entered schools. The team also won the "High Point Rider" of the day award. For this award, a rider must win two blue ribbons in two classes — fences and flatwork. There was a tie between two UMass riders, Colleen Hayduk and Angela Jasper, for this award. The tie called for a ride- off between the two riders and Jasper won the honor for that competition.

The second show was Oct. 22 at Mt. Holyoke College. UMass placed second out of 15 other colleges from New England.

At the competition, UMass was surprised and pleased to see among its supporters of family and friends, Dr. Freeman, director of equine studies at UMass. The team was very enthused to see a member from the animal science department taking an active interest in their work.

The final show for the semester is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 4 — rain or shine — and is hosted by the UMass team at Hadley Farm.

Mumia Abu-Jamal says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

UMass Majors Fair
Monday, October 30, 1995
6:00 pm - 8:00 pm
Student Union Ballroom
More than 60 majors will be represented
Sponsored by The University Advising Center & The University Career Center

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Decide for Yourself!
If your dream is to become a medical doctor, don't let someone else decide you can't do it. Decide for yourself! Call us today to find out what your options are at the UAG.
800-531-5494
Universidad Autónoma de Guadalajara
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

Now Open
Amherst Barbers
Unisex Hair Stylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across from the Old Town Hall off the Common)
$8 and up
Hours: Mon - Wed 8-5:30
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-3
Proprietors:
Jim Reed and Terri Lonerini
Formerly Of University Barbers

Jim

Terri

When Appearance Counts,
Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
Etablissement d'enseignement supérieur privé
AUP prepares its students to be a part of an increasingly global society.
Bachelor degree programs in ten disciplines. Fully accredited by Middle States.
Traditional Junior-Year Abroad curriculum.
Special Visiting Programs, which include study at the Sorbonne and other French institutions.
Full range of Summer Programs.
Contact our U.S. Office: B.P. 130, E. 11th St., Suite 434, New York, NY 10003-9000
Tel. (212) 677-4810 / Fax (212) 475-5205
Web Address: http://www.aup.fr
AUP. The American university in Europe.

■ football

continued from page 10

option well in just ridiculous conditions."

At the end of the first quarter Lehigh held a 14-7 advantage, as Aylsworth completed 10 passes in a row including his second touchdown pass of the day. Deron Braswell was on the receiving end of the toss. The Lehigh QB threw between two UMass defenders on the left side of the endzone for the score.

In the second quarter, Catterton ended a 63-yard drive as he ran it in from 28 yards out, tying the game at 14. On the next series the Engineers went three and out. Then Matt Jordan broke out for a career-high 75-yard run down to the Lehigh 15. Three plays later, Catterton tallied up his second rushing TD on the afternoon with an eight-yard scamper.

The Minutemen led at the half, 26-14, after a one-yard run by Ingoglia, who scored three TDs on the day, moving him past Jerry Rice in the all-time I-AA scoring leaders and into sixth place with 308 total career points.

"The offensive line did a great job in controlling the line of scrimmage again," Ingoglia said. "We scored when we had to score, and the defense stopped them when we had to stop them. When you do that you're going to win games... and we did."

Throughout the third quarter, Ingoglia kept the Minutemen rolling with two more TDs. However, Aylsworth kept the Engineers in it with the final two of his four TD passes on the day. The last coming at the start of the fourth quarter pulling the Engineers back within 10.

"My hat's off to Lehigh's QB," Hodges said. "He never misses, he puts the ball whenever he needs to put it. He's a heck of a player. He put on a show."

Jordan broke it out again right after Lehigh's touchdown to begin the fourth. He bolted 70 yards for the score and a 44-28 UMass lead. "The holes were there and I just tried to make things happen," said Jordan, who finished with 174 yards rushing on only six carries. "I thought the line blocked well all day long, and I took what I could get."

Lehigh added on more TD and closed the gap to within eight. But with 2:24 left in the game, Aylsworth's pass went right off the hands of receiver Mark Wilson and the comeback fell short, sealing the UMass victory.

The Minutemen had some trouble on the day converting extra points after the TDs. Twice UMass failed on two conversions, two extra-points were missed wide right and one was blocked. UMass will take its 5-3 record to Maine next week for the first of three straight Yankee Conference match-ups, all on the road to close out the season.

"Everybody just kept playing and kept playing hard, and we got a big win out of it," Hodges said. "Lehigh is a good football team and we're getting there ourselves. That's three in a row and we got three more to go."

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

settled and focused on our own play and played great hockey for the rest of the game."

UMass was able to get on the board just three minutes into the second half when senior captain Streya Volla scored on a penalty corner off assists from freshman Kate Putnam and sophomore Sharon Hughes.

"I was happy Streya got the opportunity to show what she is capable of," said Donnelly of her captain. "She's been working so hard on her penalty corner shots and she finally broke through."

The game remained scoreless throughout the rest of the second half, due in part to Massachusetts junior goalkeeper Stacy Walker, who faced 17 St. Joe's shots, thwarting 11.

However the Hawks, who had 14 penalty corners on the day to Massachusetts' two, received two early in the first overtime and were able to convert on the second.

The win means the Hawks finish the regular season campaign with a perfect 4-0 record in the Atlantic 10, assuring them the No. 1 seed in next weekend's tournament. St. Joe's will play either LaSalle or Fordham, while UMass will square off against the No. 3 seed, Temple.

The Owls are a team the Minutewomen have beaten already this season, and also the team that knocked UMass off its perch last year by defeating the Minutewomen in the A-10 tournament finale.

"We're never happy with a loss," Donnelly said. "But it sets up a big weekend for us. We always play well against Temple. We'll be revved up for it."

The Owls will be hosting this year's tournament, so UMass will face its league rivals on their own home turf. Then, if the Minutewomen can move past Temple, they would head to a likely rematch with this same St. Joseph's team.

"If we win, it is possible we'll see St. Joe's again and I think we match up well with them," Donnelly said.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect. You dial 1 800 CALL ATT. Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.*
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.℠

AT&T
Your True Choice

* For interstate calls. Promotion excluded. 1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of MCI. © 1995 AT&T

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H 1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
EB-5 Investors
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
National Interest/Extraordinary Ability
Extraordinary Persons
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five College Students/Faculty
1500 Main Street, 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01115 — 413-781-6370
69 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060 — 413-584-3332

Steve Madden.
(Live from New York)

Downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identitication or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$400 REWARD
For return of my trek 7000 stolen Alrd 1993 from Boulder. No questions asked 546-3063

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1 800 263 6495 ext 19001

FLATBOY NEWS
I love project flatboy and I'm not afraid to admit it. Anonymous

Obnoxious Audio is here! If you need car audio or alarms call us! We have the newest prices anywhere carrying high and low end brands. 549-0880

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Toyota Starlet Good Condition 5800 256-8927

1986 Dodge Colt 5 speed fuel injected $1250 Runs Great Call 253-4012

EMPLOYMENT

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 18-Jan 10 $100 Call Anne 545-3673, 256-6289

If you can convince 20 people to save money you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-709-8142 (PIN 3177)

Looking for experienced waitstaff and hostess. Apply within Ka-Do Restaurant 586-7754

MARKETING REPS
Marketing firm seeks outgoing mar keting representatives for national college promotion this intersession. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Max/Min resume to Collegiate Advantage. Attn: Christina 137 Newbury St. Boston, Mass 02116 or Call (617) 262-3734 Ext 346. Fax 617-236-4713. Information table in Campus Center Thurs 10/26.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal full time employment available at national parks, forests & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call (206) 545-4804 Ext N50012

Seeking. Motivated students for foremen job opportunities during the summer. For further info contact Avi Khann at 6 5577.

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1 800 648-4849

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25 $45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars for info call 202-293-7723

$35,000/yr income potential reading books. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext R-1732 for details

FOR SALE

Car radio Clarion 5750 detach face, tape tuner, cd control. Split in box, was $750, sell $250 obo 256-8834

Diamond back cureca for sale $275 obo. 8 yr ammo roller blades $30 Call Paul 546-6741

Jensen speakers 220 watts 15" woofers $150. JVC car cd player. Pioneers, warranteed $200. Call 549-1642

Mac RX Lowest price around $2 per pack or $1.5 for 60 packs. Call Rob at 549-7588

Used Stereo Equipment Large selection priced to sell. Complete rack systems and separate components. Speakers 8" to 8" tall! Receivers/amps 20 to 200 watts. Guitar amps much more. Call days/evenings 256-0947.

38 gallon fishtank everything incl. to start up except the fish. $175 549-2721

FOUND

Watch Found on 10/23/95 in front of the student union. Call 549-7568

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8931

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3354

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-6887

MUSICIANS

Ivory ticklers original/cover band seeks talented, egotists, keyboardists. Blues, R&B, funk, etc. Call Jay 256-8834 or Greg 256-8508

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Green Stones. Perfect for parties 256-1949

PERSONALS

Hey Salem, North Pleasant St., Irvington, Lonstar!!! Happy halloween? Love, Jody K.

To my little pumpkins in "chess." I love you!! and keep up the good work!! Learn

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted. 3 miles seek 1-2 people to share bedroom in 4 bedroom house. Affordable. In Belchertown, on bus route. N/S call 323 9380 Awar-1/1

Roommate wanted to share with 2 female students. 2 miles from UMass. Quiet apt. 240/mo. 772 6898.

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 549-1794

International students. Visitors DV-1 greencard program, by US Immigration Legal Services tel (818) 772-7168, 20231 Stagg St. Canoga Park, CA 91306

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and call nying assistance. 549-1906.

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page 665-6727

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $745 r/t California $175 r/t Europe from $299 r/t. Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587 0001. Air Tech New England

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Hey why freeze when you can chill spring break by Student Travel Services. Lowest rates, reliable, exclusive benefits. Call Aaron 546-6634

TRAVEL FREE
Travel Free For Spring Break Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas from a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$$. Food and drinks included. 1-800-710-6604

Winter Break Special: Killington, week $269. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

HEARING LOSS
Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 587-9951

Wanted Part Time night servers. Apply at Abbitows No.King St. Northampton MA

Arts & Living

"It's a dream come true.
A haven from the hustle and bustle of UMass life.
A mecca for everything neat.
A place to vent your frustrations.
A way to be creative.
A chance to show your stuff.
In short,
A really cool place to be."

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy.
Sometimes you gotta break a few rules.
And it is during these times that you know ...
There's no going back."

Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 – Feb. 19) You are a person deeply torn between love and lust. Figure it out before it's too late and you become another statistic or worse — married. Life is a highway, ride it all night long.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) Indecisive yet methodical, you have to work it to be on top (in all aspects of your life baby!). Don't back down, but don't forget how – it could be in your head, but that's doubtful.

PISCES (Feb. 19 –Mar. 20) When you swim with the big fish remember that sometimes people don't choose the Ziploc bag and the piranhas get loose. Watch your dorsal fin and everything will be o-ok.

ARIES (Mar. 21 – Apr. 19) Strong and impetuous, you have to learn to tone it down. However, because you are strong and impetuous you will ignore this and do what ever you damn well please. Bravo, because life isn't run by horoscopes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 – May 20) Ever wonder why you're sign is that of a bull? Maybe it describes your head or maybe you method of preserving the truth. Either way, if you stick to the facts, lies sound even better.

GEMINI (May 21 – Jun. 22) You will go to an educational experience, although you won't realize it until you get there. What are you waiting for– hurry up and get married!

CANCER (Jun. 21 – Jul. 22) You dear crustacean are a control freak, but every once in a while it's nice to hand over the reins to someone else. To yield to a better is not a sign of weakness but the ability to tell when you're over your head.

LEO (Jul. 23– Aug. 22) Did you know that your best bet for a good relationship is that with a Ram? Seek out a person under the sun and be sure they're wearing red. Roar. Simba Mufasa is listening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) You are a neat freak and a constant worrier. Usually very decisive, how can you make a decision if you can't decide what stance to take? Can you really afford to lose the love of your life? Oh, and go easy on the cash. Money only grows on trees on your home planet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) Your love planet is Venus, but that doesn't matter because this isn't about love, but life. Be yourself and save the false pretenses for someone willing to get snowed. Wear something sexy and get arrested for indecent exposure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) So what went wrong? You made a decision and now you're totally suffering from its consequences. Never despair, as long as you stand by your choice nothing can go wrong. Aries is Libra.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 –Dec. 21) You are used to getting your way and liking it. People are in awe of your imposing self and bow to your superior knowledge. However watch out because "my how the mighty have fallen" could apply to you — over confident. Remember the little people.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting [illegible] New England's

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

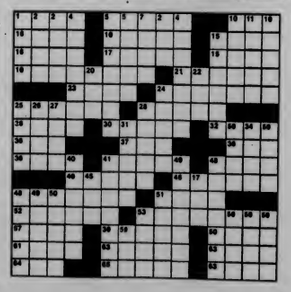
Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

ACROSS
1 Dim
5 Poster person
10 Soak thoroughly
13 Turner
14 Greet the day
15 Coffee
16 Gamete
17 Claimed
18 Russian river or range
19 Home on the range
21 Give
23 Suit to —
24 Member of the battery
25 Catchword
28 Silverheels' role
29 Decline
30 Ontario river
32 London district
36 Everything
37 Miscellany
38 Veto
39 Toy on a string
41 Pure air
43 Coxcomb
44 Superior
48 London's Wolf —
48 Drank heartily
51 Southwestern landscape feature
52 Excluding
53 Focal point of 19 Across
57 Sikorsky
58 English physicist/inventor Robert
60 Boost
61 Gymnastic goals
62 British painter William
63 Sicilian peak
64 Cinnabar
65 Rendezvous
66 "It is the —, and Juliet..."

DOWN
1 Coalition
2 Volcano product
3 E Pluribus —
4 Wild spree
5 Like Job
6 Furious
7 Sneaker type
8 Employ
9 Lavaliere
10 Singer Vaughan
11 Eggtike
12 More wan
15 Snowbirds
20 RR stop
22 Giant great Mel
24 Role for Arnold
25 Waver
26 French composer
27 Except that
28 Carreras, for example
31 Pulled down
33 Burden
34 Screen
35 Beasts of burden
40 Tenders
41 Single chance
42 Factor
43 Raw recruit
45 Uncertainties
47 Cobra of the Nile
48 Andean capital
49 Lemmon or Randall role
50 "Home —"
51 Contrives
53 Mimic
54 Jot
55 Part of rbl
56 "L'—, c'est mol."
59 Bruins' Bobby

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

W	A	L	T		A	R	M	O	R		P	A	D
I	L	I	A	D		N	O	I	S	E		A	I	L
S	I	A	M	U	E	L	A	D	A	M	S		U	T	E
P	R	A	N	C	E			M	A	I	L	L	O	T
			T	A	G		S	I	N	N	E	R
M	I	L	O		I	R	E			A	I	N	E	N	T
A	N	O	N		O	A	R		S	T	O	V	E	R
N	U	N		I	N	F	A	N	T	E		E	V	E
O	R	G	A	N	S		P	A	R	E	R	I	E
R	E	F	I	T			E	P	I		M	E	S	S
		E	R	E	B	U	S			A	D	I	E
B	O	L	E	R	O	S			T	E	R	A	T	O
I	A	L		N	O	A	H	W	E	B	S	T	E	R
A	I	T	O		A	N	G	E	R		T	O	L	A	N
S	I	S	W		L	E	E	A	Y		N	I	L	E



Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IN THE FUTURE, EVERYTHING WILL BE EFFORTLESS!
COMPUTERS WILL TAKE CARE OF EVERY TASK. WELL JUST POINT TO WHAT WE WANT DONE AND CLICK. WELL NEVER NEED TO LEAVE THE CLIMATE-CONTROLLED COMFORT OF OUR HOMES!
NO NUISANCE, NO WASTED TIME. NO ANNOYING HUMAN INTERACTION...
...NO LIFE
LIFE IS TOO INCONVENIENT

Piot (And a Pretty Weak One at That) By Mark Gagnon

I can't believe my 10 page English research paper is due in an hour and I still can't think of a topic!
Sometimes I get so frustrated that I...
HE-YA!
Crash!
Hmm!
Well, at least now I have an excuse!

Loser Crow Comics By Michael Krozy

Leoid By Roger & Salem Salloom

People are really something.

Last night Dad took me out to dinner. The waiter started telling us how he was sure Dad was a Mohican Indian in his past life.

About himself, the waiter said he was positive he had been persecuted and burned at the stake in the 1300's.

(My opinion is, To a man with a hammer everything looks like a nail.)

Dad left him a big $10 tip for a meal which only cost $15!

I asked Dad why did he leave such a big tip.

He said, "The poor guy had been burned at the stake. ....It was the least we could do."

Close to Home By John McPherson

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SPIDER-MAN! THANK HEAVEN YOU'RE HERE!
ME CAN'T HELP YA, LADY! WE GOT 'IM OUTNUMBERED!
IN THAT CASE, I'D BETTER WHITTLE DOWN THE ODDS!
STAN LEE/JOHN ROMITA 9/95

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Hey! whaddya dewin in there?!
Why are you hasslin' me on the john
Yeah, wha?
You know where that paper comes from- things warrant as a penny a ten minute again...
D'you wipe?

Bruno By C. Baldwin

BRUNO, YOU SEEM SO MUCH MORE RELAXED THAN WHEN YOU ARRIVED HERE IN MINNESOTA. I'M SO GLAD...
YEAH, BUT I'M AFRAID THAT AS SOON AS I RETURN I'LL FALL BACK INTO THE GROOVE I HAD SET. THIS VACATION SEEMS MORE A DREAM THAN A REALITY.
BUT WITHOUT SUCH A RELATIVE CONTEXT, THE CHAOS RESULTING IS TOO OVERWHELMED TO MAKE SENSE OF, AND THUS, OBJECTIVITY SIMPLY BECOMES AN ARITHMETIC LACK OF REACTION, IN FACT, SEEMINGLY ARBITRARY.
BUT I CAN STILL HOLD A STRAIGHT FACE LONGER THAN YOU CAN.
YEAH, BUT YOU STILL HAVE YET TO PROVE IT.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

TELL ME YOUR GREATEST ACCOMPLISHMENTS AT WORK. I'LL USE THAT TO HYPE YOU UP WITH YOUR BOSS SO YOU GET A BIG RAISE.
I WROTE A DRAFT OF A WHITE PAPER ON A STRAWMAN PROCESS TO REENGINEER OUR PRODUCT PROCESS.
AND WHAT WAS THE IMPACT OF THAT WORK?
I THINK SOME OWLS LOST THEIR WOODLAND HABITATS.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Jeff Hodge, Dan Burgeron

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Grilled Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Ratatouille

DINNER
Roast Beef
Broccoli/Cheese Strudel
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Veggie Stew
Broccoli/Cheese Strudel

Tuesday

LUNCH
Keilbasa Grinder
Grilled Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Hummus Veggie Pocket

DINNER
Linguini
New England Style Cod
BASICS DINNER
Linguini
New England Style Cod

Wednesday

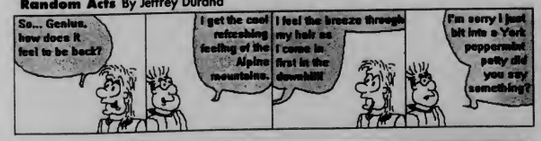
LUNCH
Hamburger
Mac & Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Nachos, Tacos, and Chicken Fajitas
BASICS DINNER
Nachos, Veggie Tacos, and Tofu Fajitas

Lost Horizons By Douglas Celleneri

YEP. THE AMERICAN LOVE AFFAIR WITH THE 8-CYLINDER IS OVER.
WHAT I WOULDN'T GIVE TO RIDE IN MY 69 CHEVY MALIBU AGAIN!.. 307 SMALL BARREL, RAG TOP, AND BENCH SEATS FROM SIDE TO SIDE.
MAN, I USED TO HOLD THAT ENGINE LIKE CHINA! SHE WAS MY FIRST 'M' KNOW?.
MAKES ME WISH I HADN'T WRAPPED HER AROUND A POLE IN '86.
YOU ALWAYS HURT THE ONES YOU LOVE.

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand



So... Genius, how does it feel to be back?
I get the cool refreshing feeling of the Alpine mountains.
I feel the breeze through my hair as I come in first in the downhill!
I'm sorry I just bit into a York peppermint patty did you say something?

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

SWELL!
I marched in to the Pretty Matt Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging male bar dolt pet's where I could hook up with a fix of Tabb Wild and Fruitworm on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the insects out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and chortled into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case and brown paper bag and pulled out the Zeitgeist. "We put the worms in the bottle."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Least Popular Bumper Stickers on UMass Cars

10. PVTA shmee–VTA!
9. I break for O.J.
8. DC food is DC–licious!
7. Honk if you love squirrels.
6. I have a dozen donuts in my back seat and would gladly exchange them for a "warning."
5. You guessed it, my parents are loaded! (For people with nice cars only.)
4. Back off! I'm D.U.I.
3. My son is a blooming alcoholic at UMass.
2. Go Huskies!
1. Project FLATBOY.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Quote of the Day

"Quebec voters and the historians will remember that the sovereignty of Quebec was achieved despite or even against the American will.

–Bernard Landry, Deputy Premiere of separatist Quebec Government"

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, October 30, 1995

inside this issue:

- The volleyball team won its ninth straight game... the men's soccer team swept two games this weekend... and the UMass Equestrian team is No. 5 team in the nation (See stories, page 6).
- The men's and women's cross country teams captured the Atlantic 10 Championship this weekend as Ken O'Brien and Julie LaFreniere both captured A-10 Coach of the Year honors. For a complete story, see tomorrow's Collegian.
- The men's water polo team lost to Queens, 10-8, in the final game of the EWPA North Division Playoffs on Saturday. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

Hockey powers past Army to take season opener

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

WEST POINT, N.Y. — The Massachusetts hockey team was not affected by the pouring rain outside Army's Tate Rink on Friday night. Its umbrella worked better than ever.

The team's "umbrella" power play produced a school- record five power-play goals to lead the Minutemen to a 6-3 thumping of Army in their season opener.

Massachusetts	6
Army	3

By going an astounding 5-for-11 on the power play, UMass registered 25 percent of last season's power play output. In 1994-95, the Minutemen scored a total of 20 power play goals, and never more than two in a game.

The first power play forward unit of Sal Manganaro, Rob Bonneau and Warren Norris combined for four goals and six assists on the night as the Minutemen defeated the Cadets for the third time in as many years.

"There's only one explanation [for our success on the power play] and that's experience," Manganaro said. "Our experience from last year carried over. We've been working hard in preseason and we put a nice power play tonight. We were coming to the net with fire in our eyes tonight and it paid off. I'm as happy as I could ever be with it and I'm looking to continue to improve [the power play] as the season goes on."

"We returned an experienced group on the power play and we started working on it early and often," said UMass coach Joe Mallen. "They moved the puck well and understood what they were to supposed to do. They got the puck to the net quickly and that's a big part."

UMass jumped on the board early as Manganaro tucked in the rebound of a Dale Hooper slap shot from the point. on the power play, just 5:59 into the game.

The Minutemen doubled their lead as Bonneau fired home the rebound off a Manganaro shot at 10:07.

Army mounted a comeback as team captain Ian Winer scored unassisted on a 2-on-1 break 1:08 later, and Bill Morrison converted a beautiful power play set-up from Winer and Dan Hinote at the 16:47 mark of the first period.

Unlike a few instances last year, UMass held its composure, regrouped and was able to sustain its pressure.

Bonneau made it a 3-2 game on a power play at 6:06 of the second period. Bonneau collected the rebound of a Tom Perry shot at the left post and saw that Cadet goaltender Daryl Chamberlain had the net covered. Rather than shooting the puck, Bonneau crossed the crease and slipped in a backhand between the goalie and the far post. It was a pure goalscorer's move.

After Army knotted things at 3-3 with a 25-foot blast by Leif Hansen on the power play, UMass took the lead for good.

At the 9:24 mark of the second, Norris took a 15-foot shot that was going wide, but it deflected off of an Army defenseman and past Chamberlain.

Tom O'Connor scored UMass' fifth goal 12:57 into the third on a power play slap shot from the blue line, and Chris Fawcett iced the victory with an empty-netter at 19:48.

Army played a solid game as the tenacious team twice battled back from deficits, but its third period efforts were to no avail, as UMass goaltender Brian Regan held his ground en route to the win.

"Army does not quit and I'm glad for that because they defend our country," Manganaro quipped.

The win was important for the Minutemen who needed to start off the season on the right foot. Last year, the Minutemen did not win their first game until New Year's Eve when they beat Notre Dame in overtime at the William D. Mullins Center.

Many of the losses in the season-opening 0-14-1 stretch can be attributed to the lack of confidence that accompanies such a streak. In close games, UMass had the skills, but did not have the mental strength to pull out a victory. After the win though they had the season's most impressive stretch as they went 5-4-1, including a stunning win over No. 1 Maine.

"[This win] was huge," Mallen said. "It took 15 games last year to get a win and our guys remember that. We've got one now and we'll see if we can build on that with two and three against Merrimack."

"[Starting off with a win] is definitely a plus," Bonneau said. "We started off [0-14-1] last year and you come back here in the first game and get a victory. It's a whole new attitude for us and hopefully we can take it into the Merrimack series."

UMass wins fifth of year

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Once again the rainy weather and flood watch warnings were in effect and so was the UMass running attack.

While the weather put a damper on many of the fans' plans to attend the last home game of the season, it didn't stop the Minutemen faithful, who were scattered around the stands with their umbrellas and rain gear to witness Mud Bowl II. In doing so, they saw the Massachusetts football team come up with its third straight victory, while setting a new school record for total rushing yards with 515.

Massachusetts	44
Lehigh	36

The Minutemen pounded out seven touchdowns on their way to a 44-36 triumph over the Engineers of Lehigh. Junior running back Frank Alessio ran for 206 yards on 20 carries and one TD, helping the Minutemen break their previous school record of 476 total yards rushing set in 1993 against Delaware.

In a game that didn't offer much of a defensive display, the Minutemen out-dueled the Engineers with the running attack, while Lehigh took it to the air.

"We knew that Lehigh could put points on the board and we knew it was going to be a battle," Alessio said. "I felt like I was playing Sega, so many points were getting put on the board back and forth."

Massachusetts quarterback Anthony Catterton only attempted three passes on the day with no completions. On the other hand, Lehigh quarterback Bob Aylsworth, was a phenomenal 30-for-48 passing, for 357 yards and four TDs.

After Saturday's action, both teams stand at 5-3. The loss snapped Lehigh's three-game winning-streak, while the win extended the Minutemen's winning streak to three.

Lehigh threw first mud, as the Engineers lit up the scoreboard for seven points a little more than four minutes into the game. Aylsworth tossed an 11-yard pass to a wide open tight end David Meurer, to the left side of the endzone. The UMass defense was out to lunch on the play. The Engineer drive took 10 plays to go 64 yards for the game's opening score.

Fifty-six seconds later the Minutemen tied up the contest with one of the many big runs on the day. Alessio ran 51 yards off to the right side finding paydirt. Catterton faked the handoff to the left side to senior Rene Ingoglia, drawing the defense and opening up the right for Alessio.

"That was just an awesome display by the offensive line today," said UMass coach Mike Hodges. "I'm really proud of the way they played, and [the offensive line] is all coming back [next year] which is really nice. Offensively that's got to be as good of a show we've put on here in a long, long time. Anthony Catterton handled the ball great and ran the

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

For 3rd consecutive week, UM doesn't need passing

A passing game? Who needs a passing game? Certainly not the Massachusetts football team.

Saturday, the Minutemen were able to put 44 points on the scoreboard. UMass defeated Lehigh 44-36, despite completing zero passes.

Mike Brown

For the third consecutive week, the field sported a surplus of mud. For the third consecutive week, the UMass passing game was not even a smidgen of importance in the outcome of the game. And for the third consecutive week, UMass was victorious.

To many teams, a passing game is vital to a strong offense. Watching UMass makes you wonder if it knows that throwing the ball is legal.

One reason UMass was able to score 44 points was due to a school record it broke. The Minutemen backs combined for 515 rushing yards, setting a new school mark for a single game.

"I'll tell you what," UMass coach Mike Hodges said, "offensively, that has got to be as good a show we've put on here in a long, long time."

Contributing largely to the astronomical total was junior tailback Frank Alessio. Alessio got his hands on the ball 20 times, and managed to compile 206 yards on the slippery surface. He got his first big taste with 6:56 remaining in the first quarter when he busted through the Lehigh defense leaving 51-yards worth of mud tracks to the end zone.

That was Alessio's only touchdown on the day. He continued to march the Minutemen down the field with an average of about 10 yards per carry.

"I'm not big on numbers. I think the offensive line deserves a

Turn to UMASS, page 6

QB Anthony Catterton (left) dives into the endzone for one of his two touchdowns on the day with Erik Henry (8) behind him and Frank Alessio (20) celebrating in the background.

THANG VO-COLLEGIAN

Minutewomen fall to Owls, beat Cornell

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

By taking a look at the statistics from the two Massachusetts women's soccer matches this weekend, it would be easy to assume that they won both games handily. The Minutewomen out shot their opponents 32-12, while taking five more corners kicks. They just couldn't find the back of the net with enough regularity to sweep the weekend.

Temple	1
Massachusetts	0

The end result was a .500 weekend with a convincing 2-1 victory over a up-and-coming Cornell squad, to bounce back from their tough luck 1-0 loss to Atlantic 10 rival Temple.

Friday in Philadelphia the Minutewomen controlled every facet of the match with the Owls, but could not find the back of the net. The Minutewomen entered the final two minutes of regulation in a scoreless tie. Then, Temple's Kim Fitzgerald lofted a 30-yard cross from the endline which sailed over everyone and dropped under the crossbar and gave the Owls the fluke victory.

"The ball was literally on the touch line and Fitzgerald just turned and blindsided the ball," explained Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy. "It just twisted into the upper corner. These things happen, you just hope they don't happen that often."

With the loss to Temple, UMass needed a victory in the regular season finale to right its ship, as well as make an impression on the post-season picture. From the outset, the Minutewomen proved they meant business.

Less than a minute into the match, freshman Karin Johnson sent a perfect through ball to the top of the penalty area which Rebecca Myers collected and poked through the defense to an open Rachel LeDuc. Then LeDuc, a senior co- captain, had Cornell goaltender Mary Ann Bell at her mercy, as she deposited the ball in the back of the net for a quick 1-0 lead.

Massachusetts	2
Cornell	1

The quick start seemed to pick up the Minutewomen, as they continued to buzz around the Big Red's goal. UMass had three corner kicks and a direct kick from 22 yards away in the following 15 minutes, but could not capitalize on the opportunities, as the lead remained at one. It was a lead that would not last.

In the 24th minute, Genna Terranova worked a beautiful give-and-go with teammate Britta Seppi. Terranova was left alone at the top of the box and the Ridgefield, Conn. native made no mistake as she beat UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion to the far post to knot the game at one.

The goal seemed to light a fire under the Big Red, as they pressured the UMass defense with a flurry of runs, but they were turned away time after time.

During a Cornell flurry, senior Nikki Ahrenholz stepped up and knocked away a through ball that sent Johnson on a counter attack. The ball ended up in the far corner where Sandy Shimogaki collected and passed to an open Julie Magid.

Magid looked up and found a streaking Erin Lynch, who took two dribbles before firing on net. Bell was in position to make the save, but on the way through LeDuc, UMass' leading goal scorer, was in front of the Cornell net and redirected the ball to the open side to regain the lead for the Minutewomen in the 31st minute.

"Coach said that if Erin was coming in with that look in her eyes, like she is gonna shoot," LeDuc said, "get out of the way and open up some space for her. I just saw the goaltender going one way so I just tried to heel it and redirect it the other side."

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 6

Field hockey loses in OT to St. Joseph's Hawks

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The St. Joseph's Hawks won the regular season Atlantic 10 Title Saturday with their 2-1 overtime defeat of the Massachusetts field hockey team in Philadelphia.

St. Joseph's	2
Massachusetts	1

Hawk midfielder Hayley Davidson iced the title with her game- winning goal early in the first overtime period, her second tally of the game. The win was also St. Joseph's first-ever field hockey defeat over UMass.

The Minutewomen end the regular season with a final record of 7-12 overall, but their 3-1 league mark is good enough for second place in the conference and a berth in the post-season tournament next weekend in Philadelphia.

"It has been such a strange season," said Massachusetts couch Megan Donnelly. "We've played some great hockey this year, and it seems inevitable that sooner or later the score is going to reflect that, but it hasn't."

St. Joe's jumped out in front early on Davidson's first goal of the game, a score off a penalty corner at 20:55 of the first half.

"It's a shame," Donnelly said. "We started out well, and then for about a 10-minute stretch in the first half, we relaxed and got back on our heels. After that we got

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 39 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 31, 1995

UMass wins A-10 Championships

Jen Wieger and the men's and women's cross country teams won the A-10 Championships last weekend. (See Sports, page 10).

Ladybugs invade UMass

Large quantities of ladybugs have infested the Amherst area, including many of the UMass dormitories (See story, page 3).

yeP! another Trax

yeP!, Buffalo Tom and The Grateful Dead top off this week's Trax On Trax Off selections (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

The weather will take a turn for the worse as clouds creep in today with a slight chance of rain. Wednesday will be mostly cloudy and cool with highs in the low 50s.

	Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH:	50	50	50
LOW:	40	40	35

Halloween comes to UM dorms

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

On campus, the idea of Halloween usually prompts people to engage in some type of spooky frolic; dressing up their RAs in strange and frightening costumes, going to wild costume parties and frequenting fraternity parties.

But this Halloween, a new and charitable twist was added to this year's festivities. The spirit of charity, masquerading as caring RAs and generous floor assistants, seemed to have the best costume; winning the hearts of excited children, and adults alike, who were invited to UMass to trick-or-treat for some safe Halloween fun.

In both Southwest and Northeast areas of campus, two individual events were planned to bring some safe Halloween fun to many children from the Springfield and Amherst areas.

Last year in Central, children from youth groups in Springfield were invited to UMass to trick-or-treat as part of a community outreach program. The tradition was carried on, in Northeast this year. Ray Li, an RA in Hamlin dorm, was one of the many organizers of this event.

"It was really big in Central last year, and thought we should continue it, but expand it as well."

This year, many youth groups came from Springfield, and about a dozen Amherst after-school programs participated. Li commented that a lot of effort went in making this happen.

"We needed permission from the Area offices, and youth group organizers. It cost a lot of money to do this. We had to pay for candy, buses and decorations. To say it cost a $1,000 would be a conservative amount."

"At first it was just a Hamlin thing," Li said, regarding the involvement of the students, "... then a cluster thing. Pretty soon, word spread and I got calls from many people wanting to get involved."

In Southwest, a similar function took place. The whole event was the brainchild of Alicia Goodman, a Community Development Assistant (CDA) in Coolidge. The 23 year-old senior came up with the concept in an effort to think of some sort of community service, which her position as a CDA requires.

EMILY REES/COLLEGIAN

Tyler Johnson, age six, from the South End Community Center, decides which piece of candy he wants from Mary Ann Shirley, a freshman education major, as Emily Ruggles, a freshman dance major, watches.

"The position of CDA was created this year. I was a RA last year, so when I was called and I accepted, I was trying to think of some type of community service and Halloween was coming up, and then I got the idea. I love doing things for people."

Goodman said that organizing the event didn't require red tape from the administration. "I talked to my Residential Director, Jeff Cullen, and he said it was okay. I didn't have to go to the police or anything."

A large number of people in Southwest came out to help. Seventy-five rooms volunteered in Coolidge, and 14 lounges were used a receptions for the children in Kennedy.

Children and adults from Family Housing were invited to Southwest to participate as one of four events planned for Halloween. Sally Majewski, an assistant manager for Family Housing, was glad to take part.

"Alicia extended an invitation to us, and we were glad to accept. The parents liked the idea of safe fun, and since many of them are graduate students, they were glad to have the time to be a part of an activity for the family," she said.

Another aspect of the event was that many families on international exchange participated in their first Halloween ever.

"Many cultures don't celebrate Halloween", said Majewski, "so this was a real experience, for both the children and their parents."

Canadian federalists win by small margin

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — By a perilously narrow margin, Quebeckers heeded pleas for national unity and voted against secession Monday, sparing Canada a traumatic fracture but leaving the French-speaking province split down the middle.

With more than 99 percent of the 22,400 polling stations reporting, the federalists, with 2,339,414 votes, led by 50.5 percent to 2,294,145 votes, or 49.5 percent, for the separatists. Federalists celebrated raucously at their headquarters, while separatists — who came closer than many had dreamed a few months ago — wept.

But Quebec's separatists, who lost a 1980 independence referendum by a 60-40 margin, improved their performance so dramatically this time that they are sure to shake off their disappointment and launch another try.

"Canada on paper may still be a country — but there's something wrong with this country," said Louise Beaudoin, culture minister in Quebec's separatist government. "We had nine percent more than we had in 1980. Something has to be done."

About 82 percent of Quebeckers are French-speaking, and roughly 60 percent of them voted for separation. As expected, roughly 90 percent of English-speaking and immigrant Quebeckers voted No. The vote will leave scars in Quebec. But it will hearten the throngs of Canadians from other provinces who joined marches, rallies and vigils last week beseeching Quebec to stay.

A separatist victory would have spelled economic turmoil for Canada — and perhaps the greatest political crisis of its history. The nation would have lost one-fourth of its people and one-sixth of its land, a fracture without precedent among prosperous Western democracies.

The narrow federalist victory will leave Quebec bitterly divided, with defeated nationalists likely to seek scapegoats and plot a future campaign to achieve a sovereign, French-speaking nation.

The turnout, after a passionate campaign, was exceptionally large: 92 percent of the roughly five million registered voters. In Verdun, a working-class suburb of Montreal, unemployed Bertrand Fontaine, 48, explained his Yes vote.

"I worked 18 years for a company, and now I've been unemployed for two years," he said. "That's enough. Maybe with new companies here, I'd have new chances. I have nothing to lose."

Annette Dupuis, 83, said she was proud to cast a No vote in the Montreal suburb of Anjou.

"My country is Canada," she said. "This is very important to me. If the Yes vote wins... I will shed tears. It will be the death of Canada."

Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a Quebecker committed to keeping Canada intact, voted in his hometown of Shawinigan, but offered no predictions.

Students protest for financial aid

5 UMass campuses send representatives to Government Center

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will be sending student representatives from all five campuses to the front lines of their battle with republican-led Congress over financial aid. The rally begins today on the steps of Government Center and will end with a demonstration in front of the Republican Committee Headquarters.

The rally is organized by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA). The group expects a turnout of 800 students from 25 private and public colleges.

Sophomore Jenn Corbett, a senator of the Student Government Association and a SCERA coordinator of the event, said this should provide the spark for other institutions across the country to rally in defense of financial aid programs.

"We wanted the rest of the country to hold similar rallies on the same day," Corbett said. "We hope they will take it upon themselves to do the same thing."

Corbett hopes all students who depend on financial aid will attend the rally and take action on their own initiative.

"If they don't come, in a sense, they deserve the cuts to their aid," Corbett said. "They can't just sit back and watch us do it. Everyone has to."

The rally begins at 11 a.m. with speeches from State Senator David Magnani, UMass professor Richard Rogers, and several student leaders and activists. Students will then march to the front of the Republican Regional Committee office where speakers and demonstrators will voice their grievances.

SGA Speaker Dan Castellano is optimistic about the impact of the rally.

"We have a responsibility to the students to make a public statement to say that we oppose the cuts," Castellano said. "We are making a statement on a federal level by local means."

SGA President Christine Lopes and Student Trustee Dan Rivera returned from Washington D.C. this past weekend after an effort to lobby for increased financial aid.

Corbett and her staff hope legislators will take notice of their efforts. They have asked all media, including CNN and MTV networks to attend. Using these national outlets will send their message loud and clear to the politicians in Washington, who hold the fate of the financial aid system in their hands.

"We hope to gain a lot of media attention to stop the cuts," Corbett said. "We've tried conventional methods like phone banks and letters, but we can't get Congress' attention."

Justices to reexamine cocaine cases

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court tackled a sensitive racial issue Monday, agreeing to decide whether federal prosecutors must respond to accusations that they discriminate against blacks in crack-cocaine cases.

The justices said they will review rulings that threw out federal indictments against five men who had been charged with trafficking in crack in the Los Angeles area.

The men said they were chosen for federal prosecution because they are black, and federal prosecutors initially refused to rebut the allegations.

The issue for the nation's highest court is not whether racially biased prosecution took place, but whether lower courts wrongly required the federal government to combat the selective-prosecution allegations.

A decision is expected by July.

The dispute involves race and economic class, as does the national debate over the federal policy of punishing crack-cocaine offenders much more harshly than those caught with the powdered variety of the drug.

Crack, or cocaine base, is known as an inner-city drug, and cocaine powder is used more often in the suburbs.

In other matters Monday, the court:

-Used a Virginia death-row inmate's case to make it harder to uphold some death sentences if errors occurred during the sentencing.

-Turned down a grandmother's attempt to reinstate an invalidated Georgia law that had allowed grandparents to win court-ordered visitation with their grandchildren over parents' objections. -Rejected the appeal of Mexican businessman Ruben Zuno-Arce, sentenced to life in prison for his role in the 1985 kidnap, torture and murder of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena.

In the crack-cocaine case, Christopher Armstrong, Aaron Hampton, Freddie Mack, Shelton Martin and Robert Ronelle were charged in 1992 with participating in a drug ring.

The charges stemmed from a joint investigation by Inglewood, Calif., police and federal drug agents.

The decision to charge the five men with federal, rather than state, crimes was significant. Federal law imposes a minimum sentence of 10 years and a maximum of life for those convicted of selling more than 50 grams of crack. Under California law, however, the sentence for that crime ranges from three to five years. To support their racial-bias claim, the five defendants pointed to a study of every crack prosecution closed by the local federal public defendant's office in 1991. In all 24 such cases, the defendants were black.

"What we have here is institutional racism," said Los Angeles lawyer David Dudley, who represents one of the five men whose indictments were dismissed. "The fact of the matter is they (federal prosecutors) are going after black people."

Fair answers students' career questions

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Tables seating representatives from over 60 University of Massachusetts departments filled the Student Union Ballroom at last night's UMass Majors Fair.

Sponsored by the University Advising Center, the event was designed to present students with the various study options available to them at the University. Several first-year students, many of whom were undecided in their majors, took advantage of the fair.

"[The fair] is pretty good for people who don't know what they want to do," said Mike Burque, a first-year student who has not yet chosen a major. "I had basic questions I wanted answered about jobs in majors."

> "[The fair] is pretty good for people who don't know what they want to do. I had basic questions I wanted answered about jobs in majors."
>
> – Mike Burque, first-year, undecided

Another first-year student, Emily Roberts, has already selected management as her area of concentration, but still came to the fair to consider all academic possibilities.

"[The fair] has been really helpful," she said. "I think the people sitting at the tables were understanding whether you were planning to make their department your major or minor."

Despite glowing student opinions, some faculty noticed a drop in attendance from last year's fair to the present one.

"I think there are fewer students here overall than there were last year or the year before," comparative literature professor William Moebius said. "They come over one at a time. They just drift over here."

However, resource economics professor Richard Rogers said he was not surprised by the decline in student turnout.

"I'd say it's just about as I expected," he said. "I was going to call it a draw. The first one was light, the second one was busy, and this one's right in between."

Graduate advisor Rani Levy, the coordinator for this semester's fair, was pleased with the course the evening took, attributing the lower student numbers to the expansion of UAC advising.

"I really liked the show of faculty, the show of students," she said. "I think the students asked really good questions, and I'm glad they got them answered."

Survivors tell their stories of escape from world's worst subway accident

By Chris Bird
Associated Press

BAKU, Azerbaijan — As a nation mourned the victims of one of the world's worst subway disasters, survivors on Monday recalled harrowing escapes through a pitch-black tunnel billowing with clouds of toxic smoke.

The packed train caught fire between two subway stations in central Baku Saturday, trapping hundreds of terrified passengers. Most of the 300 people killed died of a carbon monoxide poisoning from burning materials in the carriages; more than 260 were injured.

President Geidar Aliev and other officials blamed the tragedy on a malfunction in the electrical system, although the head of the subway suggested that only a "toxic agent" could explain the high death toll.

Survivors said Monday that it took rescue workers and firefighters more than two hours to reach them after the blaze erupted.

"There was a flash of light," 26-year-old Ilham Gamidov said from his hospital bed. "People smashed the windows of the carriage, trying to escape."

Gamidov said he helped a woman and one of her two children clamber out of the carriage. The woman's stockings had caught on fire, badly burning her legs.

"Her other child had to remain behind," he said quietly. In another bed in the Fifth Clinical Hospital, a skinny 12-year-old boy, Aziz Maradov, leaned against his pillows, his chest wheezing from the toxic smoke. "I was so scared," he admitted.

Maradov was reunited with his 17-year-old brother, Mardan, in the hospital and had been told his mother was at another hospital. But out of earshot, a nurse confided the truth.

"She is dead," said the nurse. "He'll know soon enough." Sweating with fever and hoarse from the poisonous fumes, a 33-year-old teacher, Kiraml Khankishiyeva told her story staccato-fashion, then fell silent, her brown eyes wide and staring.

"There were screams and everyone was trying to jump out of the train. I was alone," she said, recalling how she stumbled more than a mile down the dark tunnel, choking from the fumes, to the next station.

As survivors battled their injuries, citizens of the Azerbaijani capital mourned the dead.

Train drivers flashed their lights between the stations where the accident took place and red carnations tied with black ribbons lay at the two station entrances.

A mullah called the Muslim faithful to prayer over a loudspeaker at the Teze Pir Mosque, where stone minarets tower above the narrow, often chaotic streets of the old city.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, October 31

Video — Breaking with Old Ideas. This Chinese movie made during the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution explores two-line struggle in the Great Leap forward. Sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League (RAIL), the Alliance for Student Power (ASP) and the Maoist Internationalist Movement (MIM). Campus Center, Room 905, 7 p.m.

Open House — UVC-TV 19 will be holding an open house. All are welcome to come and celebrate our name change and tour facility. UVC–TV 19 is located at 216 Student Union, behind the old Hatch Stage.

Wednesday, Nov. 1

Workshop — "Afro-Antillean Rhythm." Latin America Cultural Center, Hampden Commons, 7 p.m.

Forum — "What Should UMass Do To Meet Changing Public Needs for Public Higher Education." Moderator: Barbara Partee. Speakers: Professor Sally Habana–Hafner, Professor Craig Moore, Professor David Stemple, Professor Ralph Whitehead and with students, trustees and State Representatives as respondents. Memorial Hall, 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Notices

Forum — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be holding a Career Forum Day for Political Science majors on Thursday in the Sixth floor of Thompson Tower at 3:45 p.m.. For further information call Bill Ramsey at 546-4278.

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is November 3. Contact Charran at 546–2363 or Chinedu at 546–5562.

Spectrum — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submission for its 95–96 issue. Any Five College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240 for more information.

GLB Event — The GLB Graduate Student Organization meets Fridays from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge for all those who identify with GLBT. For more information contact Rosie or Ian at the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPirg will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423 A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information contact Stacy at 546–5779, Nizam at 546–2338 or the MassPirg office at 545–0199

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non–traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546–5632 or Mike at 546–4720

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545– 1506

Community — Iumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Iumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256– 8482

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two–hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733–1194 for more information

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15–17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549–1710 for more information

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program

2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member

3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS

4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.

5 On-site contact lens specialist.

6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.

7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you free postage for normal delivery

8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory

9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses

10 Convenient hours and location.

University Health Services
549-2671 X244

COLLEGIAN, a News Source

IF YOU EVER WANTED TO BE IN THE COACH'S SEAT AT THE MULLINS CENTER
YOU CAN DO IT RIGHT FROM YOUR ROOM IN SOUTHWEST

College Basketball Fantasy Leagues

- Pick Your U Mass Favorites
- The Atlantic 10 And More
- Most Realistic Scoring Format in the Business
- Inexpensive, Quality Service
- Start a League With Your Friends Today! It's Easy!
- Ask About Student Discounts

For Free Info Pak Call 1-800-511-7300
Press Box Statistical Systems, Inc.

Campus Police Log

Assault & battery

Oct. 27
An individual alleged that he was assaulted in the lobby of John Adams Residence Hall. The incident is under investigation.

Annoying behavior

Oct. 26
There were annoying telephone messages left on voice mail in Patterson Residence Hall.
Offensive flyers were distributed throughout John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Oct. 27
An officer extinguished a trash can fire at Lincoln Apartments.
There were individuals yelling in Brown Residence Hall.
Police were called to investigate a broken window on the third floor of John Adams Residence Hall. Pedro L. Rivera, 23, of 8 Calle Bienteveo, Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.
An individual reported that a vehicle was parked against his vehicle in Parking Lot 44.

Vandalism

Oct. 26
There was homophobic graffiti written on elevators on the 12th floor of Washington Residence Hall.
Oct. 27
A vending machine was damaged in Kennedy Residence Hall.
There was a window smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 32.
There was homophobic graffiti on a bulletin board in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Fire alarm

Oct. 26
There was a trash can fire outside Dickinson Hall.
There was smoke from cooking in 5th floor kitchen in John Adams Residence Hall.
Oct. 27
There was malicious activation of an alarm on the second floor of Thoreau Residence Hall.
Several fire alarms were set off by severe weather conditions. The alarms were in James, John Adams, McNamara. Thoreau and Brown Residence Halls, as well as Lincoln Apartments. There was also alarm problems at Tillson Farm and on Cold Storage Dr., Governors Dr. and Campus Center Way.
There was an electrical odor caused by a washing machine motor in the basement of Thatcher Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Oct. 26
An individual in John Quincy Adams with a lacerated finger was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
Oct. 27
An individual vomiting in Washington Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual with stomach pain was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual, who fell outside Holdsworth Hall, declined transport.
An individual who fainted was taken to University Health Services.
There was an unresponsive individual in the lobby of Coolidge Residence Hall.
Oct. 28
An individual in Coolidge Residence Hall possibly had a broken finger. He was to seek treatment.
An individual who passed out in the lobby of Coolidge Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Larceny

Oct. 26
There was a bicycle stolen from Totman Gymnasium.
An individual reported cash stolen from his room in Wheeler Residence Hall.
A VCR was stolen from Brown Residence Hall.
Oct. 27
There was a report by Physical Plant that ladders have been stolen. Three were found.
An individual reported cash stolen from her backpack in Boyden Gymnasium.
An individual reported CDs stolen from her room in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Accident

Oct. 26
A vehicle hit a curb on Clark Hill Road. The tire was damaged.
Oct. 27
A vehicle on Stockbridge Rd. was struck by another vehicle, which left the scene.
A parked vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle on Infirmary Way.

Warrant service

Oct. 27
A restraining order was served on an individual in John Adams Residence Hall.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Oct. 27
There was a TV stolen from a lounge in Brown Residence Hall.

Health/safety hazard

Oct. 27
There was haze/smoke on the 21st and 22nd floors of John Adams Residence Hall. Physical Plant was called to check the fan in the stairwell.
Newspaper hung near exit windows in the Campus Center, which was a possible fire hazard.
A tree was blown down on Munson Hall Annex.
Housing was called to clean up vomit in a bathroom in Washington Residence Hall.

Family offenses/domestics

Oct. 28
An individual in Cashin Residence Hall requested a restraining order.
There were individuals arguing in the Lincoln Apartments parking lot.

Disturbance

Oct. 28
There was a fight reported on the 18th floor of Kennedy Residence Hall.

Liquor law violations

Oct. 28
Police, investigating violations, arrested Jay A. Robbins, 21, of 85 Amity St., Amherst on an outstanding warrant.

Assist citizen

Oct. 28
Housing called for elevator repair in Washington Residence Hall.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Practical Tools For Teaching: A Program for TA Development

University of Massachusetts AMHERST — CENTER FOR TEACHING

Upcoming Seminars For Graduate Students

+Wednesday, November 1 — 12:00-2:00p.m.
"Teaching Large Classes"
Brian Burrell, Mathematics & Statistics
Martha Olney, Economics
The time will come— or maybe is here already!— when you will regularly teach a class of 100, 150 or maybe 300 students. This session will focus on effective techniques for organizing, delivering, and managing a large lecture course. Participants will discuss strategies for facilitating student interaction and participation in large classes, and for keeping the momentum going throughout the semester.

+Thursday, November 16 — 12:00-2:00p.m.
"Managing the Classroom as a TA"
Alex Deschamps, Women's Studies
Panel of Senior TAs from various departments
Has it been difficult to negotiate your role as presumed mediator between faculty supervisors and undergraduates? In this seminar TAs will talk about how to maintain confidence, credibility, and authority in a classroom where you are not "the professor," and how to establish a classroom climate that elicits a diverse range of student responses. We will also address the challenge of managing TAs' multiple responsibilities as students and as educators.

Workshops are free and open to all UMass graduate students

Lunch will be served, but pre-registration is required.
TO REGISTER for any session, please call the Center For Teaching at 545-1225 or EMAIL us at cfteach@acad.umass.edu

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ ON THURSDAYS!

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator.
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Dealing with dorm room pests

Ladybugs becoming a frequent guest in students' rooms

By Melanie Smith
Collegian Correspondent

Swarms of hundreds and even thousands of Harmonia axyridis ladybugs have been found pestering the Amherst area, including the University of Massachusetts and its dormitories.

A larger number of ladybugs have been observed because of the recent low number of parasitic enemies, mild past winter conditions and fairly dry conditions that allow for a plentiful food source in the form of aphids, scales and other soft body insects, said Dr. Craig Hollingsworth, entomologist and Integrated Pest Management specialist.

"Over time we should not see the great number of these ladybugs because their natural enemy population will catch up," he said.

As a State Survey Coordinator for the USDA, the topic of lady beetles sparked his interest, Hollingsworth said. He used a bit of entomological history to explain the large numbers of ladybugs recently found in the area.

Between 1978 and 1981, the U.S. Department of Agriculture attempted to introduce a particular specie of the lady beetle called Harmonia axyridis to the eastern United States in the hope of controlling pests such as aphids, scales and the Hemlock Wooly Adelgid, Hollingsworth said. He added that there was a 10 year lag before the lady beetle Harmonia axyridis was observed once again in Louisiana. The 10 year lag, said Hollingsworth, between the release and recovery indicates that perhaps USDA's efforts did not succeed and that the introduction of the beetles to Louisiana was an "accidental" one, possibly from an Asian ship.

The beetles, having no native natural enemies, have increased their numbers during the summer months. Since daylight savings time has ended and the weather has cooled, the beetles are seeking shelter for the winter. Dorms serve as an ideal sheltering site for ladybugs during their overwintering mode.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The Harmonia axyridis ladybugs have been turning up all over Amherst, and in students' rooms across campus.

Once one beetle finds ideal shelter, it emits an "aggregating pheromone" that attracts other beetles, which explains the swarms of lady beetles within the dorms.

A Washington Tower resident, Chris Brennan, said he solves the invasion problem of lady beetles in his dorm room by just smacking them as they appear on his ceiling and window shade.

"If the ladybugs find an entry to a house, they are likely to exploit it, gathering a mass of dozens to thousands of beetles," Hollingsworth said. "They will stay through the winter, without feeding, and when the weather warms, they will disperse."

Hollingsworth advised that students vacuum the beetles since they are 'reflex bleeders' — when disturbed, the insects bleed from their joints, letting off a bad odor. He also is against the use of pesticides since it is unnecessary and there is no legal ladybug pesticides on the market.

Despite the bad wrap ladybugs have received from dorm residents and others, the beetles are very efficient in reducing the need for pesticides among growers, decreasing the number of aphids, scales and other soft body insects, and reducing the amount of Hemlock Wooly Adelgid's in the Northeast.

New video focuses on eating disorders

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The Media Education Foundation of Northampton, which produces educational videos dealing with the media and society, has teamed up with University of Massachusetts professors of communication Sut Jhally and Katherine Senders for a comprehensive look at eating disorders among college students.

"This video will be an important sequel to the one we have just released on the relationship between advertising images of women's bodies and the obsession with thinness," Jhally said.

The foundation, which produced Dream Worlds, a film examining the images of women portrayed in rock videos, has just completed Slim Hopes: Advertising and the Obsession with Thinness, featuring the top campus lecturer in the country on the topic, Jean Kilbourne, in a lecture given last semester at Amherst College.

"The goal of the study is to interview people who are in various stages of recovering from eating disorders and would also like to talk with willing friends, roommates, family members and partners," Senders said.

Senders stated that most eating disorder statistics show women are at the highest risk and most are likely to begin the struggle with disorders during adolescence or late teens, but she also would like to talk with men.

"College students are coming into a relatively stressful environment and face many pressures dealing with self esteem and control of food intake," she said.

The video, which will be filmed until April, will focus mainly on the effect of the media on women's body images. Eating disorders, which are largely a western preoccupation, stem from the visual cues women receive from television and magazines.

Senders said she feels that "the media feeds images we find attractive back to us reinforcing those images."

"Not all women are obsessed with thinness," she added. "It is a combination of extreme pressure from the media and the expectations the conform to these pressures."

Another interest of Senders is the relation of eating disorders to sports. Not only does the media portray images of thinness, but also expects women to be muscular.

"On one hand sports are a real support for people with eating disorders, a real sense of community," she said. "But on the other hand people sometimes compulsively exercise. With 11 percent of college women suffering from bulimia nervosa, this video will address a major health problem on campuses today, and we hope people will share their experiences with us in order to help others."

Water Watch targets campus pollution

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

Water pollution is a problem that can be found even on the University of Massachusetts campus, according to members of the Water Watch Program.

Program members said areas on the UMass campus have been found to be badly polluted and in need of cleaning.

"We found that the Mill River and a stream behind Sylvan both are badly polluted," coordinator Jeremy Mailloux said. "The water is filled with debris. There's a lot of metal, like old oil drums and bed springs."

One of the biggest problems the members found was road run–off from nearby streets.

"The Mill River is located on campus near the Mullins Center, right by Routes 40 and 116," coordinator Jai Sood said. "Oil from the road is seeping into the water. It's so bad that when you press your hand into the bank, you can see the oil seep from the dirt.

"The pollution could be stopped if drain pipes from the road were re–directed."

Water Watch intern Tom Vigneault offered a specific solution to the problem.

"If the pipes emptied out into an area with grass and trees," he said. "The green would filter out the oil before it got into the water."

The trash removal would be easy, as would redirecting the oil run–off would be a problem, according to Vigneault.

"It would be a big job to change where the pipes empty, bigger than we can handle," Sood said. "It is important, though, that somebody do it. If not, the water will just become more and more polluted with time."

The program is also continuing to clean water ways in the area, but a clean–up for the areas on campus are not yet in the works.

"A clean–up is planned for this Saturday at noon at Cushman Brook," Vigneault said. "We could use a lot of help."

The past clean–ups in the Springfield and Amherst–Northampton areas have collected around 10 tons of garbage.

Judie's
Munchie Madness

Lite-Weigh Potato Skins	~~$6.99~~	$3.50
Shrimp Cocktail	~~$5.75~~	$2.88
Fried Cheese and Onion Rings	~~$5.95~~	$2.98

And More!
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

Auto Glass Center — American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2680
(Only Mile from Litleton Taco Hut)

I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging outhi bar dell joints where I could hook up with a fix of Tuks Maki and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my cult cocoum brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

SPRING 1996
CURRENT ROOM RESERVATION

MONDAY, OCTOBER 30 - FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3

CALL 6-9000, ON CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

CALL 546-9000, FROM OFF CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

TTY - 545 - 0327

9AM - 9PM, MONDAY - THURSDAY
9AM - 4:45PM FRIDAY

If the system says that it is unable to confirm your assignment, you must contact the Housing Assignment Office to reserve your current room for next spring.

Thank you.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

SPIRITED SPECIALS:
FRISKY WITCH
ZOMBIE
NIGHTMARE
DEVIL'S TAIL & MANY MORE!

TOC LOUNGE
Mon - Sat 4:30 pm - 12:00 am
11th Floor Campus Center

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni F. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Gerri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Sage Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Government should slow down

Mark McGrath

You may not have noticed, but every day society is moving faster and faster, and people are becoming busier and busier. Everyone seems to have much to do and not quite enough time to do it. As a result, everyone is always in a hurry. While on the surface, this may not seem to be a huge problem, it does have drawbacks. One of those can be seen on the roads of America.

All too often, we hear reports of serious automobile accidents. Many of these accidents are fatal. The victims, in most cases, are plucked from the prime of their lives. The number of fatal accidents is on the rise.

In 1972, the rate of road fatalities reached an absolute peak, and until two years ago, dropped dramatically each year. While we can be pleased by the progress of the past 20 years, that progress may be reversing. The trend is scary, and if Congress has its way, the deaths are bound to keep increasing.

Some of the causes of the rising number of traffic deaths are unavoidable. Considering how more miles are logged per person each year in the United States, it only follows that the number of deaths should also rise. Other causes, though, are able to be controlled. One of them is the speed at which motorists are allowed to drive.

The National Highway System bill is now standing before Congressional negotiators, and will likely eliminate federally imposed speed limits of 55 miles per hour (65 on rural interstate highways). Instead, the issue would be left up to the states to decide. Most will choose to raise the established speed limits up to 65 miles per hour.

According to Joan Claybrook, the president of the consumer advocacy group Public Citizen, these actions would increase the number of traffic deaths by almost 5000 per year. She also adds that on rural Interstate highways, where the limit has already been raised the total had already risen by about 700 deaths per year.

When it comes to traffic safety, the government is clearly headed in the wrong direction. The same bill, which would eliminate the 55 mile per hour speed limit, could also ease restrictions on trucks on the highway. Trucks are responsible for more than their share of highway fatalities, and reducing the current legislation could cause the loss of almost 1000 more lives per year.

With the amount of deaths on the road already rising, the government ought to be making new laws to prevent these occurrences, not encouraging motorists to go faster and faster. Society goes too fast anyway.

There are already plenty of dangers on the roads for motorists to deal with. Why compound the statistics by increasing the speed limit? At most, a few people will get to their destinations a little bit early, but is that end really worth the added possibility of death?

Speeders already ignore the established speed limits anyway. The speed limit, as a result, is all but at 65 right now. To move it up would only tempt drivers to push 70 miles per hour. That's a little fast for my tastes.

People fail to realize a car is a lethal weapon, and thus should be driven with care. In this day and age life goes so quickly that a drive to the supermarket or local gas station may be taken for granted. The fact remains that the way regulations are, and will be in the future, could make one of those simple trips fatal for you or your family.

Until the government decides to make some laws designed to help protect the people, do yourself a favor — buckle up! Seat belts are one of the few things we still have in our favor.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Stirring up a great meal

I love to cook. Almost as much as I love to eat. However, cooking now a days seems to equal rapidly boiling water and frozen food pouches. I grew up in a very traditional home where meals were a time everyone got together and enjoyed a great home cooked meal and talked.

My mother is a great cook. She comes from an Irish Catholic home and the Irish sure know how to eat. People have these stereotypes of an Irish seven course meal being a potato and a six pack (ha ha ... funny). However, when I visited Ireland last summer I had some of the best home cooked meals ever. And make no mistake about it, they were meals: roast turkey, potatoes, string beans, corn, salad, ham, gravy, bread, butter, french fries, pies and cakes.

To this day I shudder when I remember I seeing my ex–boyfriend viciously stab a hot dog with a fork, nuke it on high, and then cram it down his throat smothered in ketchup. I still grieve for that hot dog.

Tara MK Connelly

I am thankful I don't gain weight because they ate like that five times a day, not including ten times. Yes, I am one of those small waif like creatures you want to stomp (and probably could) beneath your boot. I've been asked if I had anorexia or bulimia. And yes, my Mom is always trying to fatten me up. It doesn't work.

Anyway, knowing how important cooking was, my Mother decided we should start learning to cook at an early age. How early? Well, by the time I was 12-years–old I was whipping up four course meals with my brother and sister (yes, i'm bragging). And it was cooking — real cooking with fresh ingredients and often times made right from scratch. Now–a–days "scratch" has been replaced by Betty Crocker.

We never had a microwave until recently and even leftovers (my Mom could stretch a meal for a month if she wanted due to growing up in the Depression) were heated up in the oven. To this day I shudder when I remember I seeing my ex–boyfriend viciously stab a hot dog with a fork, nuke it on high, and then cram it down his throat smothered in ketchup. I still grieve for that hot dog.

My father loved to cook too. He was half Finnish half Irish and really enjoyed making Nissue, a type of braided sweet bread for Christmas. He was also big on fudge. Our fingers used to be bright red from the pistachios he would have us crack open to put in his secret concoction. A hunter and big fan of venison, he'd love to make roast venison, venison stew and venison chops. For a while he would even butcher his own meat, but my Mom put a stop to that.

My Mom's brother is a priest and a gourmet chef. Now he is a great cook. If you've ever happened to peek into an issue of Bon Appétit and gaze upon those perfect looking ducklings glazed in orange sauce with tender sweet peas and baby carrots — you'll know what he's capable of. He even shops at the same food stores as Julia Child's, and they often talk about the best cuts of meat.

The one draw back with him is his schedule. He is very European having spent large amounts of times oversees while in the Air Force. So he keeps European meal times and dinner usually starts at 8 p.m. — if we're lucky. When we were smaller it was a real hassle — kids don't care if the roast is just so, they want food dammit! Now we're a little more tolerant when visiting him and take advantage of his pre–dinner creations to sate our growling stomachs.

Another draw back is the huge amounts of cooking utensils he utilizes during a meal. I am talking about individual instruments to do separate things like peel carrots, dice onions and filet chicken breasts. It takes not one knife, but threes in various lengths and sizes. Let's not mention the pots and pans one potato dish takes up. And it is policy that the guests do the dishes.

So you could say I learned to cook from the best and I learned to love cooking from the best as well. There is nothing like finishing a meal, serving it and having people look at you with new respect when you say, "I made it myself." It gives you enormous satisfaction to see how much people enjoy what you can do.

At school it is a lot harder to make a good meal. Classes, papers and money are key factors. Cooking in the dorm was hellish, and the D.C. made me ill. I lived in Sylvan my freshman year and everyday for two weeks I went to that Pasta place because I was too stupid to look downstairs to find the regular place. I'd call my Mom crying that all I had to eat here was watery pasta and crappy tomato sauce. Thank God I ventured downstairs one day to find a rest room.

You see, I can never be content with, just say, a roast beef sandwich either. I'd have to toast the bread in garlic butter and parsley, warm the meat and top it with mozzarella, sauteed onions and mushrooms with a dab of french mustard. Sure, this is time consuming and I could have eaten three regular sandwiches in that time it took to make one, but that is the price you pay.

If I ever have any children of my own (key word if) then I'd want them to learn how to cook. I'd also want them to love food and see what different cultures can bring to the palate. Maybe now and then I'll splurge like my Mom did and serve fishsticks with french fries, but for now I'll take the braised lamb chops with mint sauce and spicy german potato salad any day.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

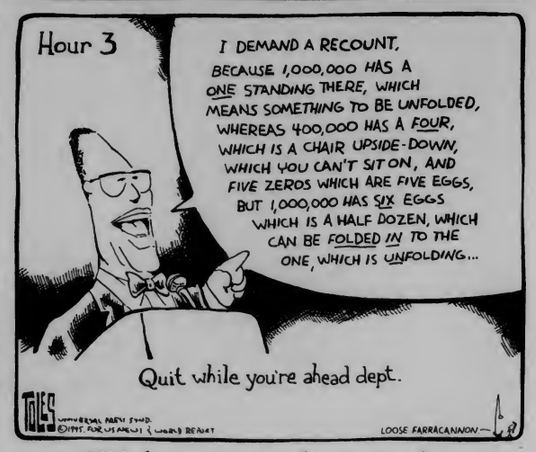
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e–mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

Opinion/Editorial



Hour 3
I DEMAND A RECOUNT, BECAUSE 1,000,000 HAS A ONE STANDING THERE, WHICH MEANS SOMETHING TO BE UNFOLDED, WHEREAS 400,000 HAS A FOUR, WHICH IS A CHAIR UPSIDE-DOWN, WHICH YOU CAN'T SIT ON, AND FIVE ZEROS WHICH ARE FIVE EGGS, BUT 1,000,000 HAS SIX EGGS WHICH IS A HALF DOZEN, WHICH CAN BE FOLDED IN TO THE ONE, WHICH IS UNFOLDING...
Quit while you're ahead dept.
TOLES
LOOSE FARRACANNON

Welcome to the jungle

If you thought only animals created messes, just take a look inside a residence hall on a Friday, Saturday or Sunday afternoon, evening or night. You would be surprised and in awe because you would think the place was hit by wild animals, but the damage was done by residents throughout the whole building.

First of all, let's start with the bathrooms, because we all use them at some point during the weekend. When you open the bathroom door be prepared for a big surprise and cover your nose and mouth if you want to survive the odor given off. There is vomit on the floor, in the sink or in one of the shower stalls, and that is not all. There is dinner in the sink and trash everywhere except in the red barrels which happen to be tipped over. There is also urine on the floor and the toilet seats. What is going on here?

The mess in the bathrooms seem to appear after the janitors leave the building on Friday afternoon having left the bathrooms spotless and filled with toiletries. However, when they return on Monday morning the bathrooms are a mess as if a hurricane or tornado hit the place. Either the residents have no morals or values and do the same things at home, or they have some mental or physical problems which cause them to trash the bathrooms.

Regardless of which is which, the behavior needs to stop because it is not fair to the residents who don't live like animals. They are the ones complaining they have trouble going into the bathrooms because there is garbage all over the place. Enough is enough.

I doubt the same residents who trash the bathrooms do the same at home, but why in the residence halls? The residents either feel they can get away with the behavior, or they simply don't care because it is not their real home. Either way, the behavior is unacceptable for college students.

The weekend janitors are not required to clean up the bathroom on the weekend. They only have to empty the trash and provide toiletry. So if residents trash the bathrooms on the weekend the mess will still be there until Monday morning. Think about it. Three days of mess.

Also on the weekends, residents tend to be very noisy by either playing their music very loud, yelling or screaming on the floors. Unfortunately, this is very normal on the weekend. Quiet hours are in effect from midnight to noon and residents are still loud beyond that time. Yes, there is such a thing as 24 hour courtesy hours, but residents don't keep that in mind. Quiet hours are enforced, but residents will continue the behavior even after being warned or documented for it. Things are just out of control.

Wait, there is more. On the weekends residents bring in cases of alcohol whether 21 or not depending upon the time of day. During the morning and afternoon there is no security so they walk right by with cases of alcohol freely. However, at night when security is on, people try to sneak some in by putting them in big bags. I know there are no books in those bags, but you can't search the bag, so they go right by. If stopped and asked for identification, and they are of age, they bring it upstairs to a room where there are minors anyway.

Some of the residents need to take action because it is their residence halls too, and they need to help the staff get things under control. Otherwise, things will remain the way they are — out of control.

Chinedu Ogbuike

Why am I telling you this? I am telling you this because these are the same individuals confronted for misbehavior or the ones seen passed out somewhere. The weekend in the residents halls is like a zoo.

Where are the resident assistants? They are dealing with the behavior of residents, but there are only a few of them and they can only do so much. What about the assistant residents directors and the resident directors? Well, they are helping the RAs deal with behavior.

Some of the residents need to take action because it is their residence halls too, and they need to help the staff get things under control. Otherwise, things will remain the way they are — out of control.

During the weekend in the residence halls, there is trash all over the place with broken bottles in the trash rooms and in the stairwells along with discharged fire extinguishers on the floors. What the hell is going on? Harsher sanctions need to be implemented because residents don't seem to be phased by the ones in place.

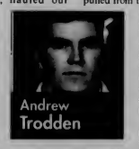
Some residents need to live outside until they behave. Something needs to be done before the dorms become trash dumps. It is bad enough some residents want to move back home because of the chaos going on. Parents are not too pleased either.

On the weekend, the residence halls are a mess. Some of the residents have no morals or values and need to stay outside with that kind of attitude. I feel for the janitors because they work hard during the week and don't deserve to come back to a trashed dormitory. We need to hold residents more responsible for their behavior because right now they don't claim to be responsible.

To those of you who trash the bathrooms — get a life and find something better to do.

Chinedu Ogbuike is a Collegian columnist.

It's all in the stars



Andrew Trodden

After last Saturday's storm rolled out of town, taking with it all sorts of pollution and smog, the sky opened wide and revealed an endless beach of stars. So I and some of my friends, in true idiotic style, hauled our instinctively inquisitive keisters outdoors and traipsed through ankle high grass to gain a better view of God's glory.

As soon as we got out there our eyes began to tell us we were in the right place at the right time. Our feet, as cold and wet as they were, were telling us a completely different story. However, it wasn't long after we got outside that our hearts and minds placed their votes and overwhelmingly tilted the scales towards remaining outdoors under a sky dusted with billions of pinholes of light.

What was it that made each one of us want to further torture ourselves by standing in an open field, soaking our feet in mud while we stared up at the sky till our necks hurt? The answer isn't in what we were hoping to see, but rather in what we had just seen. The most beautiful thing any of us had ever witnessed.

Only minutes after we first ventured outside and turned our eyes towards the heavens, it happened. Almost in story– book fashion, a shooting star raced across the night sky. Though no one said anything at the time, it was as if the collective forces of all our silent hopes had pulled from the sky the amazing sight that appeared before our very eyes. I say this because this was not your average shooting star, this was a gigantic spectacle of astronomical proportions that few will ever be fortunate enough to have grace their field of view.

Standing there, in the company of some very good friends, I, after witnessing that event, could not help but feel unbelievably small and yet still so very important all in the same breath. We had all just seen something of such grandeur that we, as mere mortals, could not possibly begin to fully comprehend the forces at work behind what had just blazed across the sky. I don't think any of us really wanted to understand it, all that really mattered was it happened, or for that matter, we were all there when it did happen.

We stood out in that field, gazing up at the stars, for almost two hours. Time seemed to just fade into the darkness, just as the shooting star did. One moment it was there, and then in the blink of an eye, it was gone.

We all just stood there, each throwing in our two cents of astronomical knowledge. Individually we were each pretty much lost in the night, but collectively we made a pretty good bunch of stargazers.

After those two hours had passed, and our feet had frozen solid, we decided we had seen enough for on night. So we turned to go back inside, but as we turned I reached into my pocket, pulled out a quarter, and tossed it on the ground. I wasn't really sure at the time why I had done that. But upon further reflection I think I understand now. It seemed almost too unfair what we had all witnessed was completely free of charge. So almost as it were in a form of gratitude, I tossed back to God's good earth something man had originally taken from it.

The sky that night brought forth what we all almost considered to be a miracle. And in return we gave the sky our potential miracles, in hopes one day another star might make them reality and carry them back to us.

We all saw that star, we all wished upon it, and we all quietly believed dreams really can come true. Now we just need Jiminy Cricket to back up his statement.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

yeP! debuts with eclectic album

The Dead release live album from 1972; Buffalo Tom lags

YEP!
yeP!onymous
yeP!

The band called yeP! self describes their music as, "comprising an unusual collection of rock–oriented, funkelctic, bluesgressive, jazzska, cartoongrass, hip 'n' groove song." Probably one of the more accurate self descriptions around. The band encompasses nearly every style of music but they do not just dabble in these various musical genres, they become them.

Trax On Trax Off

A relatively new band residing in the Amherst area, yeP! have already received generous amounts of praise locally and nationally. YeP!onymous is the band's long awaited first studio recording and their loyal following who have been waiting patiently for this release will certainly not be disappointed. Nor will any other music loving, free flowing spirit who is looking for a new sound to fill their ears.

The musical performances on the album are high quality and the immense range in styles is incredible considering the fact the band pulls off each one so well. The album is filled with saxophones, pedal steel guitars, banjos, flutes, trombones, tubas, fiddles, pianos and of course the good old electric guitar and percussion.

The diversity and range of the album does lead to one obvious problem, not all listeners will enjoy all the various styles. It would be very easy to love one song on this album while being disinterested in the others. "Muttha Funk In the Soul," the first track, is completely under the control of funk driven horns and electrified grooves.

In these days of major label signings everywhere it is always impressive to see a band release an album on their own, which is just what yeP! has done. According to their soundman, Mark Alan Miller, this is "one of the most ambitious albums he has ever worked on." The final result remains to be a fun, provocative unique journey filled with rock, funk, ska and everything else. A– (Aaron Brandes)

BUFFALO TOM
Sleepy Eyed
East/West

Since their start in 1988, Buffalo Tom have risen from a small local band with a cult following to an internationally recognized act. With five albums under their belt, the band working trio have managed to outlive many of the pseudo punk bands that began to emerge in droves in the late '80s, successfully graduating into the music scene of the nineties.

Their forth album, Red Letter Day, released in 1993, that propelled the band into the mainstream, established them as major recording artists. The success of this album earned Buffalo Tom a broader fan base and a subsequent boost in the band's confidence.

On their latest outing, Sleepy Eyed, Buffalo Tom has aimed for "a more open, more raw" sound in reaction to their last record which they felt had softened some of their rough edges. The lead track "Tangerine," opens the album in fine fashion with a snappy, rambunctiousness that makes it a likely single. Unfortunately it is preceded by two tame tunes of wistfulness and remorse that seem to drain energy from the album's early momentum. "Rules" picks up where "Tangerine" left off and it is quick to re–inject spirit to the proceedings with a heavy introduction to a groove driven track.

Similar patterns emerge throughout the album's 14 songs, emphasizing structural weaknesses in production and poor song selection. "Your Stripes," an up tempo, punkish pop tune reminiscent of the Clash, rumbles along with solid bass and drums, making for another highlight on the album. The album's energy travels in spurts, making it susceptible to lulls brought on by mediocre, plodding ballads like the dull, "Sparklers," or "Sunday Nights" which proves to be as exciting as the song title.

Buffalo Tom's brand of subdued punk connects with the average gen–xer, but it lacks enough drive and motivation; perhaps the most common trait that connects the two. The bands redeems itself for the most part with simple and engaging tunes, yet the multitude of sluggish rhythms suggest that they need to wipe the sleep from their eyes on their next record. B– (Michael McCloskey)

GRATEFUL DEAD
Hundred Year Hall
Grateful Dead Records

Most Grateful Dead fans agree that the only way to capture the band is live, in their purest form. Hundred Year Hall, the first release from the Grateful Dead since Jerry Garcia's death, features a near complete show from April 26, 1972 during the band's famous Europe '72 tour. This time period is generally regarded as their prime epoch and this CD highlights some of the band's best work.

Recorded in Frankfurt, Germany the live album includes sweet classics like "China Cat Sunflower" (which includes the usual Garcia lyric flub), "Bertha" and "Goin' Down the Road." The more "deadicated" will find interesting material in the "Truckin'/Cryptical" jam, followed by "Comes A Time," which makes it first appearance on a live album.

Other treats include a 19 minute version of "Lovelight," featuring the legendary Pigpen, a unique rendition of "Jack Straw" without Garcia on vocals, and a wonderful cover of "Next Time You See Me" written by William Harvey and Earl Forest.

yeP! releases debut album yeP!onymous.

COURTESY YEP!

Hundred Year Hall also includes an anecdote by Robert Hunter, lyricist for the Dead, not to mention creative drawings inside the cover. Although this may be their finest show, it is always nice to listen to a live Dead CD, especially one filled with so many classic songs. Let's hope there is a lot more to follow from the Vaults. A (Jeremy Kipp)

MARILYN MANSON
Smells Like Children
Interscope

With its eerie, goth–like overtones, Smells Like Children, is the smashing follow–up to Marilyn Manson's debut release, Portrait Of An American Family. The 16 song EP features remixes from their first album, as well as a preview of new songs which will be on their upcoming release Antichrist Superstar.

The album begins with the same creepy, spooky feeling that they portray so well at their live shows. All of the songs have a dark and grinding cadence that would be well suited for a funeral procession. The band have taken some of their most inspirational and unforgettable lyrics from their first album and combined them with more sinister music to produce an exceptional album.

"Sweet Dreams" a live favorite is a standout track on this release. Bearing only a slight resemblance to the Eurythmics original, the sadistic lyrics combined with Manson's diabolic voice give the song the macabre feeling that is so characteristic of the band. "Some of them want to abuse you/ Some of them want to get used by you/ Some of them want to abuse you/ Some of them want to abused." Although frequently performed at shows this is it's first release on record. "Many people didn't get into what the song really meant — our interpretation focuses on a much darker side," noted Manson. Another live favorite is the recreated "Rock and Roll Nigger," written by Patti Smith.

Breaking the stereotype that remixed albums are just a boring rehashing of old material, Smells Like Children is an exemplary CD. Embracing horror and rebellion as if they were the bands own childhood fantasies, Marilyn Manson has proven once again that they are an innovative and exceptional band that will be around for quite some time. A (Lisa Oliveri)

Jazz great lights up Iron Horse

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Correspondent

JOHN SCOFIELD
The Iron Horse
Oct. 29

NORTHAMPTON — The Iron Horse was absolutely alive with footstomping music as John Scofield bestowed a deluge of hot jazz and cool blues on a very appreciative crowd.

From the opening riff until the final cutoff, Scofield and his quartet gripped the audience in a musical vice and refused to let them catch their breaths.

The concert opened with a new Scofield original titled "Big Top" which erupted into a full blown improvisational jam which completely overtook the audience. After 20 minutes Scofield finally let their crowd out of his hypnotic musical grip long enough to introduce his band. Then he barreled into another tune, "Don't Shoot the Messenger" which not only featured Scofield's guitar, but Dennis Irwin's masterful bass playing and Larry Golding's expertise on the electronic organ.

The following songs featured a cover of "Self Portrait in Three Colors" originally composed by the late bass virtuoso Charlie Mingus and a tune in tribute to Ed Harris, aptly named "Do Like Eddie." During the latter song Scofield broke loose with an incredible electric guitar solo, not forgetting Eudriee Mohammud's exciting percussion solo.

The concert resumed after a brief intermission and rumbled unstoppably through bass and guitar duets, organ and guitar face–offs and awe–inspiring solos by all four musicians. It finally came to a reluctant halt after two encores. The bands' music was breathtaking as each song got more intense than the last.

Scofield is undoubtedly one of the most important names in jazz guitar today and with his band he proved it effortlessly with dazzling guitar playing and musicianship.

Hong Kong artist expresses culture in paintings

Wiebke Schweer
Collegian Correspondent

"CHAPTERS OF MY LIFE"
Hampden Gallery
Oct. 26 – Nov. 17

Waves of black and red colors seemed to flow and whirl over seven huge paintings placed next to each other at the walls of Hampden Gallery.

They belong to the exhibition, "Chapters of My Life," which was opened last Thursday. The exhibition features works by artist Yim Wong.

Wong was born in Hong Kong and works now as a full– time painter in Boston. She graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Boston in 1986 with a BA Degree in Painting and with a Masters of Fine Arts from the South Eastern Massachusetts University in 1991.

After returning to Hong Kong for two years, she came back to Boston in 1991, where she owns a studio at the Center for the Arts.

Wong's work is very powerful, emotional and the abstract paintings show interesting experiments.

"I paint things which move me," said Wong at the Gallery Talk that was part of the opening reception on Thursday. "I drip, I pour, acrylic and water on Canvas. I give form to the pleasure and freedom I feel in the act."

Wong chose 25 paintings of different styles and periods from her work to present them at Hampden Gallery.

"The exhibition contains four chapters of my life and work," explained Wong. "Painting became a language to communicate for me — I painted the pain I had for the June 4th massacre in China. I painted my gloomy image of Hong Kong. I painted my personal feelings and experiences, my paintings present chapters of my life."

Nine paintings from her series of pictures about the June 4th massacre form the first chapter of the exhibition. It includes two early paintings called "brother" and "sister." The two pictures show the heads of a man and woman, poured all over with intensive red color.

"I saw pictures on TV from the massacre, pictures of people running on the streets and their heads were poured all over with blood, even in their hair their was blood. I had to express this in a painting," said the artist.

The series of seven pictures described above shows the massacre and Wong's feelings about it in an abstract and symbolic way. Wong strew little plum blossoms within the swirls of red and black colors. These plum blossoms in Chinese represent the dead.

The use of symbols from Chinese art can be found in other paintings by Wong as well.

"I use techniques from Chinese painting, but the medium is not Chinese at all," she said, describing her work.

In the pictures of her "second chapter," which deals with Hong Kong and its return to China in 1996, Wong painted Bauhinia flowers on a dark background. The Bauhinia is in Chinese painting as a symbol for Hong Kong.

Chapters three and four show Wong's technical experiments. While working on the paintings, "Watermarks I/II" in 1994, Wong experimented with water.

"I let the water flow over the canvas and the pictures created themselves," she explained. "The name developed from the way I created the picture."

Another series of pictures called "Winter," "Spring" and "Autumn" are based on Wong's view of a tree in front of her window. She made them in May 1995, using sand with the paints to "carry out that earthly smell" of nature.

Yim Wong' versatile paintings are shown till November 17 at Hampden Gallery. The Gallery opens Mon. – Fri. from 3 p.m. – 7 p.m.; Sun. 2 p.m. – 5 p.m.

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

HURRY! GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX PHOTO NOW!
CAMPUS CENTER Rm. 177-178
CALL NOW TO
Schedule a free sitting (800) 836-0558
Be a part of the first all-color yearbook in New England!
the INDEX

Steve Madden.
(Low from New York)
Downtown Amherst

Voted BEST in the Valley
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
PELE'S
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND

The UMASS DENTAL CLINIC offers: Experienced & Caring Staff Cleanings, X-rays, Exams, Consultations, Restoration. 10% discount on preventative services for
Umass students paying the basic health fee. Additional 10% discount on all services when paid the same day as visit. Cash, credit cards or personal checks welcome.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$400 REWARD
For return of my trek 7000 stolen Wed 10/23 from Bowker. No questions asked 546-3067

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext 15001!!

FLATBOY NEWS
I love project Flatboy and I'm not afraid to admit it - Anonymous

Obnoxious Audio is here! If you need car audio or alarms call us!! We have the lowest prices anywhere carrying high end low end brands. 549-0890

U MASS HOCKEY!!!
The first U Mass Hockey game this Friday night @ the Mullins Center vs Merrimack! Students pick up your free tickets today @ the Hicks cage. Check it out - Hockey East Action!!!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Toyota Starlet Good Condition $850 256-8017

1986 Dodge Colt 5 speed fuel injected $1250 Runs Great Call 253-4012

EMPLOYMENT

Attention December Graduates! Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Fax resume to 817-735-4713 Attn: Tricia or Call 1-800-783-4237 ext 334

Car $x / House $x! Amherst Dec 16-Jan 10. $100 Call Amie 545-5803 256-6269

Help Wanted... Men/Women earn $480 weekly assembling circuit boards/electronic components at home. Experience unnecessary. Will train. Immediate openings in your local area. Call 1-520-680-4647 Ext D674

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-209-8142 (PIN 3172)

Looking for experienced waitstaff and hostess. Apply within. Ka-Chi Restaurant 585-2774

National Parks Hiring Seasonal, full time employment available at national parks, forests & wildlife preserves. Benifits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N50017

Seeking: Motivated students for fraternity opportunities during the summer. For further info contact Av. Khanna at 6-5077

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars for info call 202-293-7727

$35,000/yr income potential reading books. Toll-free 1-800-898-9778 Ext R-1732 for details

FOR SALE

Car radio Clarion 575Q, detach face, tape, tuner, cd control. Still in box, was $350, asking $250. Jay 256-8634

Diamond back curves for sale. $275 bo. 1 yr wmns roller blades. $30 Call Paul 546-8741

Please take our two adorable birds. Comes with cage. B/O or most likely free. Call 256-8785. They need a good home

Used Stereo Equipment Large selection, priced to sell. Complete rack systems and seperate components. Speakers 8" to 8" tall. Receivers/amps, 20 to 200 watts. Guitar amps, much more. Call days/evenings. 256-0841

FOUND

Watch Found on 10/23/95 in front of the student union. Call 549-7558

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8931

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-5887

MUSICIANS

Ivory ticklers original/cover band seeks talented, egotists, keyboardist. Blues, R&B, funk, etc. Call Jay 256-8834 or Greg 256-8506

Psychedelic garage band for fine Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949

PERSONALS

Happy Halloween to the pitch freaks of Dickinson! Love Stacy & Anne-Marie

Mike I was the better time. See you next time on the ice

ST JUDE
O glorious apostle, St. Jude Thadeus true relative of Jesus & Mary. Thank you for your intercession
To my little pumpkins in "chess" I love you! and keep up the good work! Laron

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jassor 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share with 2 female students 2 miles from UMass. Quiet apt. 240/mo. 772-6886

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 545-1794

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring/ying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Sublet Spring Furnished 2 bed apt. On bus rt. Call 253-7887

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $180 r/t. San Juan $245 r/t. California $175 r/t. Europe from $299 r/t. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587-0801 Air Tech New England

Hey why freeze when you can chill during break by Student Travel Services. Lowest rates, reliable, exclusive benefits. Call Aaron 546-8634

TRAVEL FREE
Travel Free For Spring Break Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas. Form a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$$. Food and drinks included. 1-800-710-8804

Winter Break Special: Killington week $269. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

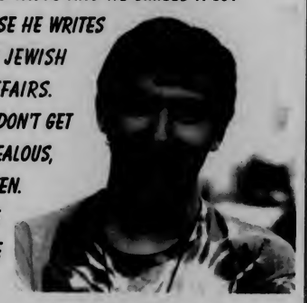
WANTED

HEARING LOSS
Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 582-9951

Wanted Part Time night servers. Apply at Abbows. No King St. Northampton MA

Look at this smile

THIS IS JACOB AND HE SMILES A LOT BECAUSE HE WRITES FOR JEWISH AFFAIRS. BUT DON'T GET JEALOUS, GET EVEN. COME WRITE FOR JEWISH AFFAIRS.



113 CAMPUS CENTER
545-1851

Not everyone is Straight - and neither is the Collegian!

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Needs Writers...Gay Straight, and In-Between. For News, Editorials, Arts, Living, or Title Pages.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

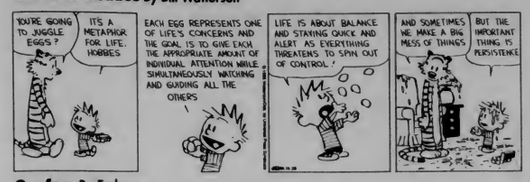
1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family enclyopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those sniviling staties! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



YOU'RE GOING TO JUGGLE EGGS?
IT'S A METAPHOR FOR LIFE, HOBBES.
EACH EGG REPRESENTS ONE OF LIFE'S CONCERNS AND THE GOAL IS TO GIVE EACH THE APPROPRIATE AMOUNT OF INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION WHILE SIMULTANEOUSLY WATCHING AND GUIDING ALL THE OTHERS
LIFE IS ABOUT BALANCE AND STAYING QUICK AND ALERT AS EVERYTHING THREATENS TO SPIN OUT OF CONTROL.
AND SOMETIMES WE MAKE A BIG MESS OF THINGS
BUT THE IMPORTANT THING IS PERSISTENCE

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Kroay

Geofrey By Embrya

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I think one of the secrets of a contented life is obvious....

plan out your time, your month or, your week so that you are occupied by things you find delightful.... even if it's quiet and you're alone.

For instance ..... on:

Mondays- have a nice dinner with friends

Tuesdays- watch your favorite t.v. show with a tasty snack

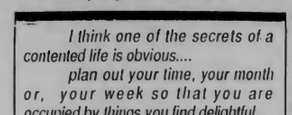
Wednesdays- do a home improvement job or clean something which you've always cherished.

Thursdays- sit in the dark alone for hours

Fridays- go to a local lovely natural setting...like a lake or mountain

Saturdays- do something athletic which pushes you to a new limit

Sundays- sit alone again in the dark until you cry.



Close to Home By John McPherson

"Congratulations! You're going to have a disease named after you!"

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Big Man on Campus By Jim

THIS CLASS SUCKS... I'M SO BORED... MAYBE I'LL START DRAWING MY OWN COMIC STRIP RIGHT HERE IN CLASS JUST TO KILL TIME...
YEAH... THAT'S IT! I'LL CREATE MY OWN CARTOON STRIP AND KILL USELESS CLASS TIME AT THE SAME TIME!
OF COURSE, CARTOONING ISN'T THAT EASY... WITH MY LUCK, I'LL THINK OF A GREAT JOKE FOR A STRIP, START DRAWING IT, REALIZE IT SUCKS AND BE LEFT WITH NO FUNNY PUNCHLINE... BUT THAT KINDA THING PROBABLY HAPPENS TO EVEN THE BEST OF THE CARTOONISTS

Bruno By C. Baldwin

DO YOU HAVE ANY CANDY
NO, I'M AFRAID NOT
WHAT'S YOUR NAME?
BRUNO.
WE HAVE A DOG NAMED BRUNO, BUT YOU DON'T LOOK LIKE HIM. ARE YOU CRAZY? MY MOMMY SAID THAT YOU WERE CRAZY BECAUSE YOU WERE TALKING TO YOURSELF ACTUALLY, I DON'T REALLY EXIST, SO YOU'RE ACTUALLY ONLY TALKING TO YOUR OWN SELF, BECAUSE YOU'RE THE ONE WHO'S REAL.
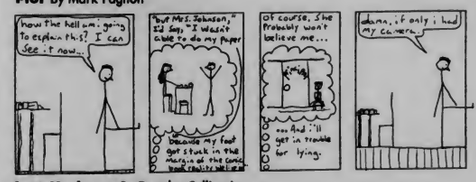
HAH HAH, I LIKE YOU, BRUNO, YOU REALLY ARE CRAZY.

Piot By Mark Fagnon



How the hell am I going to explain this? I can see it now...
"But Mrs. Johnson," I'd say, "I wasn't able to do my paper because my foot got stuck in the margin of the comic book while I was at
Of course, she probably won't believe me...
Damn, if only I had my camera...
...and I'll get in trouble for lying.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

THE PROBLEM IS THE GOVERNMENT WANTS TO RUN OUR LIVES FOR US. IT NEVER USED TO BE THIS WAY!
THAT'S WHY I ONLY READ THE SPORTS SECTION OF THE NEWSPAPER. POLITICS ARE FOR POLITICIANS!
IF PRESIDENT REAGAN AND HIS WIFE HILLARY, WANT FREE HEALTH CARE, THAT'S FINE WITH ME!
...BUT WHY DOES HE HATE 8-CYLINDERS SO MUCH? HE USED TO LIKE 'EM
YOU'RE KIDDING, RIGHT?

ZOOMASS By Pat Rufo

Some of the less popular fraternities

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacLean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... Marc Dionne
..... Kathryn Gracia
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Cod w/ Crumb Topping
Kielbasa Grinder	Linguini w/ Meat Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Cod w/ Crumb Topping
Hummus Pocket	Linguini w/ Lentil Sauce

Wednesday

LUNCH	DINNER
BBQ Rib Sandwich	Chicken Fajita
Ravioli Alfredo	Tacos
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Stuffed Pepper	Veggie Taco
Ravioli Alfredo	Tofu & Chick Fajitas

Thursday

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Turkey Dinner
Mac & Cheese	Beef Stroganoff
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Golden Burgers	Mexi Veggie Stew
Mac & Cheese	Turkey Dinner

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Good Things About Green Day (or 'Day as us hip–in–the–know people call them)

10. Rumor has it that there actually is a musical bone in Billy Joe's body.
9. They discourage drug use in teens.
8. No two of their songs sound even remotely the same.
7. They're so punk, man.
6. Not a single one of them acts like a total spaz on stage.
5. They encourage America's youth to study, study, study!
4. Not one of them has murdered his wife (unlike some celebrities I know...).
3. They're all sooo handsome!
2. They never spit in public.
1. They're living proof that you don't need an inkling

Quote of the Day

"BOO"

– Overheard

Sports

Men's and women's XC win A–10 championships

■ Behl, Maceiko lead UMass to victory

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Correspondent

The Atlantic Ten is as competitive, and tough as any conference in the nation. For the first time since entering the A–10, the Massachusetts men's cross country team has secured the top spot in the conference.

In what might have been one of the team's best performances ever, UMass out–ran the other schools, and won the Atlantic Ten Championships by 18 points. On a grueling course, the runners had a true test of their worth. The Minutemen dominated the meet, having three runners finish within the top ten overall. On this day, UMass clearly was the team to beat.

COURTESY OF TRACK AND FIELD TEAM

Matt Behl (60) and Mike Maceiko (71) placed third and fourth respectively as UMass won the A–10 Championships last weekend.

Juniors Mike Maceiko, and Matt Behl continued their tremendous running, once again finishing first and second for UMass. Maceiko finished third overall, with a time of 25:50.62. Behl finished just behind him with a time of 25:53.02, good enough for fourth overall. No other Massachusetts runner has crossed the finish line before them all season.

These two have been the workhorses on this overacheiving team yearlong. In a season marked by inconsistency, Behl, and Maceiko have turned in tremendous performances week in and week out. The two have basically lifted the squad on their shoulders and carried it to the Championship. Both have clearly earned the honor of being named All–Conference performers, two years straight. It is scary to think that both of them have one more year here, to fine tune their talents.

Behl and Maceiko were not the only Minutemen to receive recognition. In his 28th year of coaching here at UMass, Coach Ken O'Brien has had many impressive accomplishments. He has won 15 Yankee Conference titles, three New England titles, and two IC4A titles. He has now finally received the honor of being named Atlantic Ten coach of the yeas.

To Coach O'Brien, being named Coach of the year was "a terrific honor," he said, but very much of an afterthought. He guided a young team that had a number two preseason ranking, to an Atlantic Ten championship.

When he did have time to think about it, it was a nice ending to a great day. "It is a very satisfying thing to have your peers recognize your accomplishments," O'Brien said. O'Brien accomplished this feat with just two consistent performers, utilizing the talents of many different runners. He challenged his team throughout the season against top teams in the nation. This aggressive strategy pushed the runners to their limits, and exposed them to the pressures of performing in top meets. The team knows how to run against the "big boys." As a result, the Minutemen were ready to take the title at the Championships.

Up next for the Massachusetts team, is the IC4A Championships on Nov. 11. This is the NCAA qualifying meet, and determines which runners will go on to the NCAA Championships. Winning the Atlantic Ten Championships was a huge step for the Minutemen, not only as a big boost for the team, but also for a few individuals that needed votes of confidence.

Junior Jon Way, has had a roller coaster of a season. Last year he was a top five runner, until he suffered a mid–season ankle injury. It knocked him off track, and was very frustrating to deal with. He came back towards the end of last year, but never regained his form. Coach O'Brien characterized him as being, "a victim of circumstance." In what has been a season of ups and downs for Way, it was a nice way to finish.

Another runner who had a significant performance on Saturday, was sophomore Paul Blodorn. He was also one of the top performers from last year. At the end of the indoor season he came down with a case of pneumonia. He then suffered through a rough spring. Up to this point in the season, he has not shown the potential that he did last year.

Both of their performances at the A–10s could be signs that they are regaining their form. "It was nice to see two guys who were so important to us last year, come back and contribute to the team," Coach O'Brien said.

This UMass team is one of many weapons. "We have tremendous depth," O'Brien said. "You never know who's going to pick up the slack. It's a great luxury," he added.

On the Massachusetts team there are nine capable runners. Complementing Maceiko, and Behl, their sophomores Ryan Carrara and Ethan Nadeau. These two, along with senior Mark Buffone have consistently turned in winning performances at earlier meets. These five are the team's top performers. There is also the possibility of a runner such as Way or Blodorn stepping up and turning in a clutch performance.

Looking back at the end of last year's season Coach O'Brien talks of "seeds being planted." He explained that the team had spoken about the improvement on last years second place finish.

"This team knows how much hard work everyone has put in," O'Brien said. "It was nice seeing the team work hard together, and then pull together like they did." A look at the results from the Championships shows just how hard they have worked.

■ LaFreniere named coach of the year

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts women's cross country team boarded the plane to Pittsburgh this weekend, the women had only one thought on their minds: capturing the Atlantic Ten crown.

Having faced perennial A–10 rival St Joseph's at the Paul Short Invitational in early October, the Minutewomen knew what they were up against as they toed the line last Saturday. The Hawks had soundly defeated the UMass squad at the Paul Short, but that only gave the Minutewomen incentive.

Scoring an impressive 46 points, the Massachusetts runners took home the Atlantic 10 trophy and bragging rights for the conference. Much anticipated rival St. Joe's finished second with 49 points.

As the team walked the course with coach Julie LaFreniere before the meet they talked about the importance of the race.

"I told them that this was a tough course, but a good one, a real cross country course. I told them to really concentrate on holding their position, and not to panic when they heard their times," LaFreniere said.

"I knew the times at the mile were going to be fast, because first stretch is slightly downhill," she said. "When runners hear a fast time for the first mile they tend to back off and conserve energy, but I didn't want my women to do that. I wanted them to go hard all the way."

And go hard they did, as Massachusetts placed three harriers in the top 10. As has been the case for the entire cross country season, UMass was led by sophomore Rebecca Donaghue. Donaghue clocked a 17:38, the second best time of her career for 5000m, en route to a second place finish overall. Her time was 9 seconds off the pace of the eventual winner, Sue Yaagielski of St. Joseph's.

Jen Waeger, who has been an emotional leader for the Minutewomen all season long, ran a 18:13 to finish fourth overall, second for UMass. Waeger, who has been on antibiotics for the past three weeks due to an illness, raced this weekend at near 100 percent for the first time in weeks. Showing true dedication to her team, Waeger displayed one of the gutsiest performances of her career, battling fatigue and pain throughout.

"Rebecca was Rebecca. She was great. I knew that she would be one of the front runners, and she really came through. She has been such a dominant force all season, it's incredible," LaFreniere said.

"Personally, I think Jen has been such a key influence on this team. Her teammates know what she is going through healthwise, and to see her give her all everyday like she does really influences everyone else," she said. "The thing I tell people about Jen is that even though she isn't 100 percent, she still gives 110 percent."

Making an impressive crack into the top ten, Katie Greenia was the third UMass scorer to finish, taking 10th overall. Posting a time of 18:45, Greenia made remarkable strides to overcome a nagging back/hamstring/knee problem that has affected her for weeks.

Kristin Donaldson, who ran the majority of the race with front runners Donaghue and Waeger, took the entire way, and she took that step," she said.

"Christy, in a way, keyed the win. If she hadn't finished where she did, there is no way we would have won," LaFreniere said. "That just goes to show you what a team sport cross country really is. Everyone sees it as an individual sport, but it comes down to a team effort, that's where you win or lose. In fact, if everyone thought of it as an individual sport, we wouldn't have come home with that trophy.

"Cross country is one of the most grueling sports I can think of. In every other sport there are breaks in the action, not so in cross country. You can't ask for a substitution, you can't call a time–out, there are no breaks, and those are things you don't realize unless you are involved with the sport," LaFreniere said. "That endurance makes the sport so tough, and makes the victory so sweet."

COURTESY OF TRACK AND FIELD TEAM

Jen Waeger (32) and Rebecca Donaghue (18) finished at the top of the pack for the Minutewomen as coach LaFreniere's squad won the A–10 Championships.

In addition to winning the conference crown, LaFreniere took home some hardware as well, as she was named Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year.

"It was really special to be named Coach of the Year, but I owe it all to my women. I want to thank them for that honor, because it really was them who gave it to me," LaFreniere said.

14th place with a 18:52. Meanwhile Christy Martin, perhaps the keystone of UMass' victory, finished 16th in 18:56.

"Katie Greenia has had a season of frustrations with her injuries. She really hasn't raced at 100 percent for quite some time, but she certainly showed that she's back and getting better," LaFreniere said.

"Kristin ran the gutsiest race I have ever seen her run. She ran with Rebecca and Jen for a large portion of the race, and that is an empowering feeling. Before this race I kept telling Kristin that she just had to take that final step to have a really tremendous race. Well, she ran hard

Polo earns third seed in Easterns

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team certainly didn't throw in the towel, but UMass coach Russ Yarworth threw in a chair.

In a tightly officiated final match of the Eastern Water Polo Association North Division playoffs that saw Yarworth thrown off the deck after reacting to an offensive penalty called on freshman Brian Stahl, the Minutemen suffered a frustrating loss to Queens College, 10–8, and will head to the Eastern Championships in Maryland as the third seed.

"I'm going to let the statistics do the talking," Yarworth said. The ejection total was 11 to four in favor of Queens, and there were 10 offensive fouls whistled against the Minutemen. "For some reason the officials were seeing the game that way," added a frustrated Yarworth.

Massachusetts had easily beaten Queens in their two previous meetings, but were handcuffed by the officiating and couldn't get over the hump falling two goals short.

Senior Luis Limardo and junior Ron Gonen led UMass with two goals each while the Queens defense held Stahl scoreless on four shots. Co–captain John Luviano, playing with acute tendinitis in his shoulder, scored a goal and handed out two assists in a valiant losing effort.

The win in the EWPA North Division playoffs gives Queens the top seed in the Eastern Championships while UMass goes to Maryland as the number three team to face sixth–seeded Richmond.

The Minutemen have faced Richmond three times during the season, winning all three meetings.

"[Richmond] has, basically, three or four really strong players. We can't allow them to dominate the game," Yarworth said. "That [first round match] scares the hell out of me, they're going to be sky–high; we're going to be in trouble if we're not prepared."

Navy, who won the South Division playoffs, will be the second seed in the Eastern Championships and will face St. Francis in the first round.

Assuming they both win their first round games, the Minutemen and the Midshipmen are lined up for a semi– final showdown.

"The bottom line is: you have to win three games. You're going to have to play the best team eventually," said Yarworth.

Queens, being the first seed, will play Bucknell in the first round, and Brown will face a surprising Princeton squad who came out of nowhere to finish second to national power Navy in the South Division. The winners of each of these games will face off in the semi–finals.

Before their disappointing loss to Queens, Massachusetts won its first two matches of the playoffs, throttling Iona 22– 6, and holding on to defeat Brown, 13–11.

Iona hardly put up a fight against the powerful UMass offense as ten Minutemen scored in the match. Limardo had a phenomenal game scoring six goals and assisting on another.

Youngsters Scott Stevens and Pedro Perez contributed to the routing, scoring four and three goals respectively while goalies Alex Mujica and Paul Engin combined for seven saves.

The Minutemen were sluggish after their thrashing of Iona, but held on for a two goal defeat of Brown.

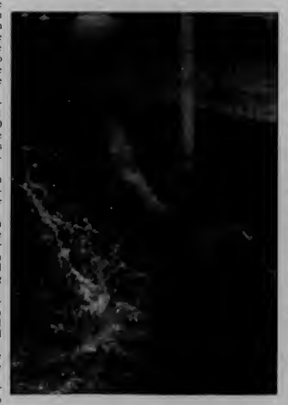
UMass, reverting to early–season form, came out slow, scoring just two first quarter goals, but were able to go Into the half tied, 5–5. The Minutemen took control of the match in the third quarter, out–scoring the Bears 7–3 in the period.

Leading 13–9 early in the fourth quarter, Massachusetts sat on the lead and held on for the two–point decision.

Limardo, playing tremendously thus far in the playoffs, scored two goals and recorded two assists while four other Minutemen scored twice.

It's all or nothing for the UMass men's water polo team as the winner of this tournament goes to Palo Alto, CA to compete in the NCAA tournament to vie for the national title.

"The whole season comes down to this tournament," Yarworth said.



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts water polo team enters the semifinals of the EWPA Championships with a number three seed.

Ex-Cub Sandberg returns to major league for '96 season

NEW YORK — At the time of his retirement, Sandberg, the 1984 NL MVP and holder of several major league fielding records, said he wanted to spend more time with his family, and said he had no intention of ever returning.

But just like another famous Chicago athlete who wore uniform No. 23 and unretired this year — Michael Jordan — Sandberg has decided he'd been away too long from a sport he always loved. Sandberg spent much of his time in retirement living at his home in Arizona, near the Cubs' spring training site in Mesa. Although he was not playing ball, his contract with the Cubs called for some off-field work for the team.

Sandberg recently remarried, and friends have described him as happier than he's been in a long time and said he's ready to return to the game he'd played professionally since he was 18.

When Sandberg left the Cubs, he was upset with the way the team was being run by general manager Larry Himes. Himes has been reassigned, and the Cubs have completely changed their front-office structure.

Ed Lynch, who briefly played with Sandberg and is one of his friends, is the general manager and Andy MacPhail, who built World Series champions in Minnesota, is the president.

Sandberg is a career .289 hitter with 245 home runs and 905 RBIs. In 1984, when he batted .314 with 19 triples and 19 homers and 84 RBIs, and led the Cubs to the NL East title, their first postseason appearance since 1945.

In 1985, Sandberg, showing off another off his assets, stole 54 bases.

Sandberg led the league with 40 homers in 1990 and had 100 RBIs. He also drove in 100 runs in 1991.

He won the Gold Glove from 1983-91, and holds major league records at second baseman for highest lifetime fielding percentage (.990) and consecutive games without an error (123).

Sandberg has never played in the World Series. The Cubs lost the NL playoffs in 1984 to San Diego, failing to a hold a 2-0 lead in the best–of-5 series, and fell 4-1 to San Francisco in 1989. Sandberg hit .385 in those two playoff series.

Sandberg was picked by Philadelphia in the 20th round of the June 1978 draft and signed with the Phillies.

Let's talk about Kids
A panel discussion recently examined the messages in last-summer's critically acclaimed movie, Kids (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Campus Credit Card Scam
UMass Police are warning students of a possible credit card scam being targeted at campus residents. (See News, page 2)

The complete player
Massachusetts junior Kyle Rothenberger has become one of the most complete players in collegiate field hockey (See Sports, page 16).

Extended Forecast
Brrrr.. It's time to bust out the ol' winter jackets cause it's gettin' cold out there. Temperatures will continue to hover around 50 for most of the rest of the week

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 45	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 40 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, November 1, 1995

Mass. students rally together at Gov't Center

■ A thousand gather to protest financial cuts

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — All five campuses of the University of Massachusetts joined 30 private and public colleges from across the state on the steps of Government Center yesterday to protest threatened federal cuts to financial aid programs.

The number of students in attendance was estimated at over a thousand, waving their banners and signs beneath the faces peering from the windows of Boston City Hall.

The rally was a student initiated event under the name of the Coalition of Students to Save Student Aid. Major efforts were made by the Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), who have worked non–stop for the past month putting the details together. Both groups were impressed with the rally's success.

"It was incredible," said Timna Tarr, coordinator of the statewide Higher Education campaign for Amherst's MASSPIRG. "It showed student empowerment. Students can organize and get involved."

Jason Vecchio of SCERA said the turnout was more than anticipated and the numbers alone should send a message to Congress.

"This says that students, deep down, are not apathetic. They have a voice and can use it when provoked," Vecchio said. "They can vote according to their best interests and can influence their legislators."

On Thursday, the House of Representatives passed legislation that would cut $10.2 billion from financial aid programs. Vecchio pointed out that House Republicans Peter Blute and Peter Torkelson, who had originally pledged their support to student aid, voted for the House version.

The Senate version of that bill was less harsh, but still cut $6 billion. However, they did strike down the institutional tax on student borrowing, the elimination of the interest free grace period, and the interest increase on PLUS loans. MASSPIRG's Leif Utne attributes the reduced cuts to pressure from student constituency.

"The Senate voted on Friday to cut the $10 billion figure in half, after hard for the students' cause. Lopes said the trip was both positive and useful. She was proud to see students also taking action at home.

"I am very excited too see students from across the state come together over one issue," Lopes said. "Legislators will see that students will vote in the 1996 elections."

Rivera felt strongly that this rally was one of a growing trend of student activity.

"The student revolutionary movements are going to come back," Rivera said. "This showed that we streamlined the process and we were strategic in out targets, as are the AARP and NOW."

Tables were set up at the rally to register new voters. There was also a booth where student could send postcards to their parents to ask them to call Congress on their behalf. A scroll was signed and addressed to Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, asking him to stop the cuts.

Tarr said one of her group's purposes is to educate students by registering them to vote. "Legislators won't listen to you unless you vote."

COURTESY OF CHRIS LINSTROM

Hundreds of students from all around Massachusetts gather yesterday in Boston for a rally to help try and save financial aid. Among many of the protestors were UMass students.

COURTESY OF CHRIS LINSTROM

UMass students hold up signs and protest the financial aid cuts that are happening all over the state and the country.

Students march to save their aid

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The "Raid to Save Student Aid" stormed the steps of Government Center and blocked traffic for a half– hour on State Street yesterday, as students from colleges across the state let their voices be heard all the way to Washington.

Students from Harvard–Radcliffe to Framingham State to Quinsigimond College attended the rally. Student speakers from various student government groups urged the crowds to provide the spark for other campuses. However, it was the University of Massachusetts students who spearheaded the efforts.

"Let us rise to the occasion," University of Massachusetts– Amherst student Dan Rivera told the crowd. "We need to be the leaders."

State Senator David Magnani (D–Framingham), introduced as one of the "staunchest advocates of student rights and aid," described the rally as the "beginning of a new revolution."

"Today is the beginning of a life–long lesson in politics," Magnani said. "It will take place at the polls in '96."

UMass–Amherst Professor Richard Rogers spoke of his personal successes with a public education, stressing that his degree would not have been possible without federal financial aid.

"The undergraduates are being hit hard during a time of a robust economy," Rogers said. "They are not being fully represented at the table. You can't be a full time student and a full time employee. Nobody should ask you to do so."

Students also participated in guerilla theater. Scott O'Neil, of UMass–Boston, dressed up as the Grim Reaper.

"I dressed up to protest the cuts because this could be the death of education," O'Neil said.

"Stop the raid on financial aid" could be heard on the top floor of the Bank of Boston, where employees looked down at the swarms of students marching to Republican Committee Headquarters.

The procession was orderly, lacking any markings of a mob protest. Peacekeepers monitored the crowds as they walked, making sure all of the demonstrators stayed on the sidewalks and allowed traffic to flow properly.

The crowds amassed outside 114 State Street and conducted a sit–in when police arrived on the scene.

"My father is unemployed and I don't want to end up working at McDonald's," said Chris Larsen of Bradford College. Larsen said she would continue to sit in the street even if it meant she could be arrested.

However, protesters did move peacefully and ended back at the Government Center steps. The rally was estimated to have grown from 500 at its start, to over a thousand at its end. Organizers say the event far exceeded initial expectations.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Halloween Spirit. . .
Chris Savistano, a Senior biology major, shows off his halloween costume while walking through campus yesterday.

UM's UVC–TV 19 offers more than just news

By Amy H. Parodysz
Collegian Staff

In a four–minute span, Sara Demenkoff mentioned the student financial aid rally in Boston, three sports victories, a film on campus and a bomb scare in Chicago. She also said Boris Yeltsin was feeling better and the Dow Co. had to pay in a faulty breast implant case.

UVC–TV 19, the University's Housing Service Cable Network, held an open house yesterday, and gave tours.

Demenkoff's broadcast and a table full of food were the highlights. While visitors ate cake, Demenoff flipped frantically through the Boston Globe.

Every weekday except Thursday she goes to the station at 3 p.m. and reads The Collegian, The Boston Globe and the Amherst Bulletin. At 4 p.m., she watches "Headline News." After two hours of preparation, it's time to go on the air.

Programming

UVC–19 broadcasts from 2 p.m. until 9 p.m. every weekday, focusing on lectures, cultural events and several specialty shows. During off hours, UVC broadcasts a bulletin board which includes campus information.

Also, the weekly Student Government Association (SGA) Senate meeting is broadcast Thursdays at 5 p.m.

Sundays are the big night for UVC–TV. There is a one– hour news program, "UMass Update," including news segments filmed on the scene.

It takes more than 20 people to put together one "Update," according to UVC–TV 19 President Yusef Lateef. They use four anchors, at least two camera persons, three directors, an audio engineer, a producer and several reporters.

"Through that process, students learn a lot about video production and how to put packages together," Lateef said.

"UMass Update" is followed by "Sportstalk," a sports interview show which allows students to call and talk live with University athletes or coaches.

"Just Kickin It," a rap show, is on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Thursdays at 8 p.m.

During the open house, Dave "Ant" Alce, who produces "Just Kickin It," was finishing the editing for last night's show. Alce said he tapes his host segments separately and splices them between the video segments, as opposed to filming the entire show at once. This leaves less room for error, he explained.

The one–hour show, which features videos from groups such as Wu–Tang Clan, Notorious Big, Shabba Rank, Roots and Das EFX, takes about four hours to edit, Alce said.

Another regular show is "Room 307," a current issues and music video show filmed in 307 Gorman Residence Hall, broadcast Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 8 p.m..Three more ALANA Video

Turn to UVC, page 2

Bereavement group helps students

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

"I lost my father to cancer over two years ago. If not for the support I found from others who shared similar experiences I do not believe I could have gotten through the worst of those times," Jethro Heiko said.

Heiko has since then put most of his time and effort into seeing that others who deal with the death of a loved one don't have to go through those times alone. Taking from his own experiences and those of others, Heiko began the Five College bereavement and support program Reflect.

Each semester Reflect offers support groups, where students can share their experiences and receive support from other students going through similar situations. There are two kinds of groups, which meet every week. They set up to accommodate the specific needs of the students. The first are drop–in groups, which are free of charge and held on the first floor of Tobin Hall, and offer services to students who can attend as many or as few meetings as they need.

The second is a six–week support group that is limited in space and requires that all participants make every scheduled meeting. Both groups cover aspects of grieving and coping with death. From dealing with grief at school to identifying and expressing emotions, the weekly sessions tackle issues that don't normally get discussed until times of tragedy.

"People want to talk about these issues (suicide, race, AIDS), but there's always something that keeps them from doing It," says Heiko. "[It's] not realistic to walk around and think everyone's fine and dandy. Everyone's got issues."

Even though the program has been successful in being a source of support since the Fall of '94, Heiko is looking to expand the boundaries of the program into doing even more outreach work on campus and in the Five College Community in general.

"We want to be where they're at, "explains Heiko. "In the dorms, on campus, where ever there's a need."

Student death on campus is a major concern of Reflect, which is why the program is geared towards the needs of students in the Five College area. In situations like untimely deaths Heiko wants students to know where help is available.

"My goal is to make sure students know we're [Reflect] there," says Heiko. "It'd be nice if no one needed us, but people do. Especially when it comes to dealing with student deaths."

Heiko also wants the student community to be aware of those who may be dealing with grief and to be sensitive to those students and how they're feeling.

"Grieving takes a while," explains Heiko. "A month after the death of a loved one, isn't a long time to someone who is grieving."

Reflect wants to educate the community about loss and grievance just as much as it wants to lend support to those who experience it.

If you need support in dealing with the death or serious illness of a loved one, or know someone who does, you can contact Jethro Heiko at 586–5812.

For Your Information

Wednesday, Nov. 1

Workshop — "Afro-Antillean Rhythm." Latin America Cultural Center, Hampden Commons, 7 p.m.

Forum — "What Should UMass Do To Meet Changing Public Needs for Public Higher Education." Moderator: Barbara Partee. Speakers: Professor Sally Habana-Hafner, Professor Craig Moore, Professor David Stemple, Professor Ralph Whitehead and with students, trustees and State Representatives as respondents. Memorial Hall, 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Panel/Video — The International Programs Office (IPO) and the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority students (CCEMBS) present a panel discussion and video presentation on study abroad opportunities for ALANA students. New Africa House, 2nd Floor, 4:30 p.m.

Notices

Forum — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be holding a Career Forum Day for Political Science majors on Thursday in the Sixth floor of Thompson Tower at 3:45 p.m.. For further information call Bill Ramsey at 546-4278.

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is November 3. Contact Charran at 546-2363 or Chinedu at 546-5562.

Spectrum — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submission for its 95-96 issue. Any Five College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240 for more information.

GLB Event — The GLB Graduate Student Organization meets Fridays from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge for all those who identify with GLBT. For more information contact Rosie or Jan at the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPirg will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423 A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2338 or the MassPirg office at 545-0199.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditional aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House international Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB/RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545-1506.

Community — Jumaa Service. The Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m. Campus Center (Check Information Desk for room). For further information call Utama at 256-8482.

Party — The Southwest Area Government is throwing a semi-formal Winterball on Feb. 10. Tickets are on sale now at the early bird special price of $10 and $15 for a couple. The Evening includes Dinner, Dancing and Live Entertainment. Contact the SWAG Office to purchase tickets at 546-0960.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413)733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

Campus Police Log

Disturbance

Oct. 29

There was a reported fight on the sixth floor of Dickinson Residence Hall, resulting in one 18-year-old individual being placed into custody.

Oct. 31

There was a report of a fight in the hallway in Brett Residence Hall. An emergency restraining order was issued by the on-call judge.

Traffic stop

Oct. 30

Corey N. Edwards, 23, of 10 Button St., Northampton, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, as well as failure to notify the registry of motor vehicle of a change of name and/or address and failure to get an inspection sticker.

Oct. 31

Bradford P. Lacouture, 19, of 4 Hoover Rd., Walpole, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle after license or right to operate was revoked, not having registration in pussession, operating an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle, with a number plate violation and no inspection sticker.

Vandalism

Oct. 29

There was homophobic graffiti written on a stairwell in Melville Residence Hall and on the first and second floors of Van Meter Residence Hall.

Oct. 30

There was homophobic graffiti written on a door in Brett Residence Hall.

Assist citizen

Oct. 29

People were extricated from an elevator in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Assault & battery

Oct. 29

There was a report taken on a past assault in Hampden Dining Hall.

Oct. 30

There was a report concerning a past argument between roommates in Hamlin Residence Hall.

Oct. 31

An individual reported that he was walking on the pathway towards Sylvan area when he was assaulted by four subjects who struck him and then stole a pack of cigarettes.

Medical emergency

Oct. 29

An individual in a bathroom in Johnson Residence Hall was reported to be ill, but declined medical attention.

There was a check on the well-being of an individual being carried into her room in Kennedy Residence Hall.

An individual fell against a desk in Crabtree Residence Hall. There was a possible head injury, but the person declined medical attention.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Oct. 29

An individual reported that someone broken into her room in Kennedy Residence Hall.

An individual reported his vehicle was broken into in Parking Lot 13.

Annoying behavior

Oct. 29

An individual in Johnson Residence Hall reported that someone opened his mail.

An individual without ID refused to leave Totman Gymnasium.

Oct. 30

There was an individual on the phone offering money to residents who were willing to answer personal questions. Someone from James Residence Hall reported him to the police.

An individual reported being threatened by another individual in the Campus Center.

Larceny

Oct. 29

There was theft of clothing from a dryer in Washington Residence Hall.

Oct. 30

There was a bicycle stolen from Brett Residence Hall.

There was a wallet stolen from Lederle Research Tower.

There were lug nuts stolen from a tire on a vehicle in Parking Lot 44.

An individual reported that a male subject came into her room in Washington Residence Hall, claiming to be looking for a student. When he left, she discovered cash and credit cards had been stolen.

Missing person

Oct. 31

An individual reported that she had not seen her friend since the previous day and was concerned.

Fire alarm

Oct. 29

Cooking set off an alarm on the third floor of Thatcher Residence Hall.

Police warn students of credit card scam

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For some scam artists Halloween was the perfect night for a ruse, that could put some students in financial trouble.

University police received several calls last night from students reporting that a scam is in the works. Claiming to be representatives from Sprint or AT&T, people were calling students offering 50 percent off long distance calls from November until February. The catch was that all the students had to do was provide their name, date of birth, home address and credit card number.

Police are warning that these calls are fraudulent and that student should not to give their credit card numbers to anyone over the phone, unless they have initiated the transaction.

They added that if you have been hoodwinked, to contact your credit card company immediatly.

Arts & Living

So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike - you just have to do it.

■ UVC

continued from page 1

Project shows are being planned — Chocolate Thunder and Rhythm & Rhyme, R&B and reggae shows, and Bottom Line, a talk show.

The crew

More than 150 students are members of UVC, which means they have received training in cablecasting, camera safety and production, multi-camera production and editing. Also, members are required to be involved in two productions.

Only about 15 staff members of UVC-TV 19 are paid for their work, according to Publicity Director Peter Kurck.

"I do it for love," Alce said.

The Student Union Video Project was founded in 1974, and was originally set up to as a facility to train undergraduates in the video production field. Today it services about 11,000 on-campus viewers.

Correction

In Monday's article concerning the discovery of a fossil by professor Mark McMenamin, it was mistakenly printed that the fossil was almost six million, rather than 600 million, years old. The Collegian regrets the error.

Merger to boost top banks' status

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

The bank mergers which have been occurring across the nation this year will finally hit close to home when Shawmut hands over the management of various branches in Western Massachusetts to Banknorth.

In February Shawmut National Corporation and Fleet Financial Group announced plans to merge the two banks which propelled the two into the nation's top 10 banks.

Before the merger could take effect, the Attorney Generals of Massachusetts and Connecticut demanded that the pair sell branches and assets to prevent a monopolization in the banking market.

Fleet and Shawmut sold 64 branches which includes the sale of $2.9 billion in deposits and $1.7 billion in loans. Student loans are not effected by the merger, said Jeanette Harrison, Fleet spokesperson.

Branches in the Pioneer Valley which have been sold to Banknorth Group, Inc. of Vermont include the Amherst Triangle Street branch, the Greenfield and Hadley branches, and the Northampton Hampshire Plaza branch.

Banknorth will rename the branches First Massachusetts Bank, N.A. when the sale is finally approved by the Massachusetts Attorney General and the U.S. Justice Department.

"We are looking forward to serving the Amherst, UMass, and Amherst College communities," said William H. Chadwick, president and chief executive officer of Banknorth.

All accounts opened at those branches will be transferred to First Massachusetts accounts. Chadwick said terms of all certificate of deposits and loans will remain the same until maturity.

"[Shawmut and Fleet] customers will be notified well in advance of any changes," Harrison said.

Shawmut customers can close their accounts and re-open them with Fleet when the merger occurs, said Harrison.

"Each buyer has agreed to employ all Fleet and Shawmut branch employees and will continue to offer a high level of services," said Anne Slattery, Fleet senior vice president.

Chadwick assured that customers will not see a dramatic change. After the acquisition is complete, many accounts and services will be quite similar such as savings, checking and credit cards, he said.

First Massachusetts has plans to place Automated Teller Machines across Western and Central Massachusetts including stand alone sites. Chadwick said if the University of Massachusetts offers First Massachusetts the opportunity to place an ATM on campus, they will definitely do it.

"First Massachusetts will take a hard look at the student market," said Chadwick.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

A post-office's treat. . .

Geraldean Truehart, Tom "Rocket" Patrick, and Donna Guerrieri-LeBeau, all employees at the Northampton Post Office, wear their creative costumes to celebrate halloween during work yesterday afternoon.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
LAW in HONG KONG
TECHNOLOGY TRANSFERS IN CHINA
May 30 - July 14, 1996
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD
SUMMER PROGRAMS OFFICE
DEPT. AP
119 EUCLID AVENUE
SYRACUSE, NY 13244-4170
1-800-251-9674
DIPASUM@SUADMIN.SYR.EDU

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 → 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

Muhammad Ali says:
"WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

Attention All Engineers & Computer Science Majors
Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40
Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30
No
Limits
TO ONE WAY
20
CONSULT MAPS
Co-op Information Session!
Thursday, November 2nd at 4pm
In Marcus 131
Come hear from top employers who hire co-ops; Monsanto, Volpe, GTE, Pratt & Whitney, General Electric!!!
SOM Information Session!
Tuesday, November 7th at 4pm
In SBA 116
Representatives from organizations who hire UMass Co-ops! Filene's Corporate Headquarters, IBM, Aurther Anderson, General Electric!!

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II
The contest of the semester is here! Don't miss out on your chance to enter! Fill out your Collegian Restaurant Guide's Entry Forms and/or come down to the Collegian today for details.
Win
Dinner For Two At . . .
Judie's
Transportation Provided By . . .
Executive Limousine Service

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Bird Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wirtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
Cem Sahr Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michael Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Corner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daemon Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, changed its name to Aggie in 1905, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, except during formal vacation periods and publication once January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Educational inequalities loom

When I compare my Philosophy and Women's Studies' classes these days to those of 25 years ago, there are some upsetting features. I see less older women's faces. Re-entry women's services have been cut by University budget cuts. Workfare reforms in welfare just made it impossible for one of my few older students, a welfare mom, to continue at UMass. Lack of affordable childcare forced another, a graduate student single mother, to move back with her relatives in Florida so she could get childcare.

There may be a few more faces of color since the 1960s when student activism created New Africa House, the Bilingual Collegiate Program and CCEBMS. More recently the Malcolm X Center, the New Asian Center and the Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center have been created in recognition of the diversity of students on campus. But today there are less students of color than in the late 70s, and those that are there appear tired and drawn. This fatigue seems true as well among the much smaller proportion of white working class students today as compared to the 1960s and 1970s.

And the students of color, and working class students in general, have more problems finishing the classes than they used to. Fewer appear in my senior level classes, even though they have as much initial promise as the white middle class students when they start. Why is this? Do all these students lack motivation or the ability to improve?

Clearly not. Rather, economically disadvantaged students, who are disproportionately older returning women and students of color, are being pushed out of the University altogether by rising tuition and fees. There are many indicators supporting this explanation. Tuition and fees have risen more than 1000 percent since 1963 — now they are $4495 a year, while then they were $939 a year.

Students are working a large number of hours in addition to their school work to pay these increased tuition and fees: 50 percent of students work 10 to 19 hours a week, and almost 30 percent work from 20 to over 40 hours a week to support themselves. Clearly, such large work schedules do not leave much time for study or leisure. Is it then a surprise that economically poorer students have a bad retention rate at the University?

Rather, economically disadvantaged students, who are disproportionately older returning women and students of color, are being pushed out of the University altogether by rising tuition and fees.

Ann Fergusson

A pervasive problem for students with few financial resources, including older students with children, is the large cuts in student services created by the cutbacks in public higher education in the late 1980s and early 1990s. The re- entry program for older women at Everywomen's Center was cut.

Returning students who use the University Without Walls to obtain prior learning credits now have to pay for each credit awarded. Academic tutors and counselors at UWW, CCEBMS and BCP have been cut as well as therapists at EWC and Health Services. Childcare services for students have been cut drastically, so there are less available slots. Graduate student's parents, usually single mothers, are particularly hurt by the lack of slots and subsidies, since they are not eligible for undergraduate childcare subsidies.

Workfare requirements of welfare reform now makes it almost impossible for a welfare mother of pre-school children to attend college. If the proposed $10.4 billion in cuts from the federal student loan program go through, many fewer working class students will be able to afford higher education.

The Campus Convention this week on the Future of Public Higher Education is an important opportunity for all of the University community to discuss the extent of these educational inequalities. I urge you to come to the Plenary today, at Memorial Hall, and to attend other related workshops Nov. 1st and 2nd. We all will learn more about the student needs that aren't being met and what we can do to address them.

In particular, I hope you can attend the workshop on Access and Resource issues sponsored by Women's Studies and Everywomen's Center on Nov. 2, in Herter 107. How long are we going to sit by and watch poor people's right of access to higher education go down the drain?

Ann Ferguson is the Director of the Women's Studies department.

Nothing better than deep thoughts

Do you ever wonder about things? I mean random things that really have nothing to do with anything at all and are of no great significance to our lives. Let me give you some examples of some of the subjects I've been wondering about questions that will probably never be answered and probably never need to be:

1) Why do most of my favorite bands no longer exist?

2) Why do the pipes directly above my head have to clank and bang at three o'clock in the morning? It's warm enough! Turn the damn heat off!

3) Why is it impossible to say the words "Saturday Night Live" really fast without slurring them? I mess it up every single time.

4) Why are there so many fried worms on the sidewalks after it rains? Do they not realize the sun's out and cooking them alive until it's too late to wiggle over to the grass and start wolfing down dirt? Is their brain the first thing to cook, so they just can't function to save themselves anymore? I feel really bad for them. Please, if you see a worm crawling as fast as it can over the sidewalk and it's really sunny and hot out, give him a hand. You'll feel much better about yourself.

5) Why doesn't the Top 10 guy give the talking dolphin thing a rest?

6) Do buttworms really rule the world? I know they live in the campus pond, but how far does their influence really reach? Are they just normal parasitic worms, or do they really take over the brains of their victims? My friend claims the entire faculty is infected. Who is their leader? How can we destroy them before they destroy us?

7) How did Oscar fit elephants and a swimming pool in his trash can?

8) Why do I look forward to eating in the Dining Commons? I'm actually beginning to like the stuff. Have I become immune? Is it really not that bad? Am I just really hungry all the time? What's wrong with me?!?!

9) Where did all these ladybugs on my ceiling come from? And why are they orange?

10) Why was "The Twilight Zone" ever cancelled? Rod Serling was so neat. And what about "Amazing Stories"? Come on! The only freaky show left is "The X-Files" and who wants to stay in and watch T.V. on a Friday night?

11) Why does everyone think I'm a freshman? Am I really that mousy?

12) Which came first, the chicken or the egg? I'm pretty sure it was the chicken, but I'm not positive.

13) Why did I pay money to see Show Girls? I could have done my laundry and still had fifty cents to spare with the $3.50 I wasted on this one. Oh, but it was a good laugh.

14) Does anyone but me have recurring dreams about the lower case "n" standing on the hill?

15) Why is there a bike in the pond? Did the buttworms go for a joyride?

16) Does it really always go to the left?

17) Why can't I find the golden ticket in the Wonka Bar? I want to eat everlasting gobstoppers and flowers shaped like teacups and watch the Oompa–Loompa. Why can't it be real?!!

18) What the hell is Goofy? (Sorry I stole that one.)

19) What's so funny 'bout peace, love and understanding? Whoaohohoh. (Stole that one too. Thanks Elvis.)

20) Do I have buttworms? Would I know it if I did? I'm getting really nervous about this whole buttworm thing. If they've already taken the faculty, what's to stop them from spreading beyond the limits of UMass? For all we know, the President could have buttworms! If he's been infected, then they really do rule the world!

O.K. That's enough for now. I know this was a dumb column, but I hope it inspires you to think dumb thoughts every once in a while. It's good for the soul and it works a different part of the brain than you're probably used to exercising. So have fun ... and watch out for buttworms.

Why can't I find the golden ticket in the Wonka Bar? I want to eat everlasting gobstoppers and flowers shaped like teacups and watch the Oompa–Loompa. Why can't it be real??!!

Nicole Cournoyer

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e–mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e– mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545–1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

PRESIDENT CLINTON IS PARTLY BASING HIS RE-ELECTION STRATEGY ON RUNNING AGAINST CONGRESSIONAL DEMOCRATS.
MEANWHILE, THE CONGRESSIONAL DEMOCRATS ARE RETIRING.
OR BECOMING REPUBLICANS
WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS IS A SECOND PARTY.
THEY HAD A PARTY, BUT EVERYBODY WENT HOME EARLY

It's time we slime the criminals

The future weaponry for our law enforcers reads like something out of a comic book. The list includes such deadly items as sticky spray and Spiderman–like nets. Something tells me this won't be all that effective on our city streets. I'm in favor of less guns on the streets, and less "shoot first then ask" tactics, but how the hell are the men in blue ever going to get any respect with weapons courtesy of Kay–Bee toys?

The federal government is now taking steps to make law enforcement units equipped with more non–lethal weapons. The approach is to eliminate guns and bullets and replace them with non–life threatening tools. Wrongful death lawsuits would be eliminated, and "deadly force" would be a term of the past. The problem is this technology is in the stages of development and has produced weapons that would induce laughter instead of fear.

Imagine this scenario if you will: a person just ripped off a liquor store, runs down the street and hears, "Stop or I'll slime you." Ghostbuster comes to mind, but I don't think that individual is going to stop. The "goo" is suppose to suspend that person's arms to their side, but that would require real good aim, not to mention some sort of super "Dirt Devil" to clean the excess slime off the random passer by.

Another thing to consider is the potential criminal probably has their own weapon, and isn't afraid to use it against a human comic.

On the outset, these technological advances may seem plausible to the average citizen who fears the excessive use of force by police officers. Yet, when you stop to think about those same officers that are out gunned on city streets daily, it may not seem like such a hot idea. Their handguns fail in comparison to the playground friendly semi–automatic weapons already. Silly string for the cops doesn't quite seem the answer.

When the black market and after hours gun shops start carrying slime constraints and sling–shot nets then this plan will fly. Law enforcers will be able to use non–lethal weapons when they don't have to fear for their own life every time they pull someone over. I just don't live in this fluffy world where people wouldn't commit crimes for fear of a stained shirt, do you?

Imagine this scenario if you will: a person just ripped off a liquor store, is running down the street and hears, "Stop or I'll slime you."

Tara Ruelle

The right to bear arms has been popping up all over the place lately, a citizen's right to protect themselves. As long as we think we need this protection from ourselves, we won't be prepared for this futuristic, non–threatening weaponry. Why should our law enforcers avoid these devices when a bunch of nuts on a Mid–Western farm can stockpile heavy artillery?

We don't live in a perfect world where everyone respects the law and police officers can stop crime with sling shots. Violence is a reality, one that some law enforcers encounter on a daily basis. I don't want to see the abuse of power and while I don't want to think guns are the necessary evil, they seem to be for the enforcement of our laws. I also don't want to see Spiderman and the Ghostbusters trying to stop crime. I'd much rather rid our streets of lethal weapons, kids selling slime in the playgrounds instead of nine millimeters.

Let's leave the goop and the nets to the Hall of Justice. Unfortunately we don't live in Metropolis, it's more like Krypton, and even Superman couldn't conquer that planet.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Article full of tasteless humor

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to address Jeremy Hurewitz's column from the Oct. 26 issue of the Collegian.

After reading your article, I found myself searching for the perfect word to describe your pompous, dilatory attitude that was made obvious after just a few sentences.

So you and your friends have coined the term "schwagg" to define something or someone possessing lame qualities. How very clever and articulate of you. It was after you gave numerous examples of "schwagg" that I reached peak frustration. Condoms are schwagg? Wake up you fool. So are STDs and unwanted pregnancies. Your proposal to change the war on drugs to, I believe "the party of drugs" was the phrase you used, struck me as nothing more than a weak attempt at asinine humor.

I was struggling before to uncover it, but the most accurate word to describe your fascicle perspective hits me as I write this. You, Mr. Hurewitz, are the most pertinent example of schwagg I have ever encountered.

Jenn Durkin
Orchard Hill

Local bands deserve more respect

To the Editor:

This is in response to the letter printed concerning PUNK ROCK and Project FLATBOY. I think the idea that punk and punk bands are linked to trouble is ridiculous. I'm a musician myself and self promotion is essential to a young band. The only music that is advertised is music with corporate interest and big money behind it. That is to say un–authentic music. So, when a band like Project FLATBOY, or any other local band plays (regardless of the style), I try to show support and so should everyone in the Valley. This is a somewhat enlightened community and we should all strive together to ward off the capitalist control of art.

Dave Preston, lead singer for Dave & The Chicks
Amherst

An independent Quebec isn't harmful

To the Editor:

This is response to Marni Hellfner's "Quebec: free & independent?" article. There are only two ways that the remaining part of Canada could be part of the United States if Quebec seceded. One would be outright invasion and annexation. Despite what the writers from Developing Nations would have us believe, the U.S. has not been interested in overt control of sovereign nations since the early part of this century. The other way that Canada could become part of the U.S. is if the citizens of Canada voted to become part of the U.S.

In the unlikely event that the Canadians wanted to give up their sovereignty and become "the 51st state," I don't think Canadian culture would be in danger. The U.S. has many different regional cultures. After the Mexican–American War, the American Southwest still maintained its Spanish culture. Even after 150 years the Tex–Mex culture is still present. The same is also true for the Cajun culture in Louisiana, and the Yankee heritage of New England. If Canada became part of the U.S., it would not be the death of Canadian culture, but the beginning of an understanding of Canadian culture by the rest of the U.S.

As for security concerns, I'm not sure who you think would invade Canada if it stayed independent without Quebec. The U.S. would not invade it. The Russians would either have to go through Alaska or across the Arctic to get to it, and I don't think they are capable of supporting such an operation with their economy in shambles. Besides, the Russians would go after the rest of the former Soviet Union before they tried for Canada. That leaves Greenland. Yes, the Greenlanders are going to invade Canada, and then keep marching south and take over the U.S. I know I'll be ready when the big Greenland artillery comes rolling across campus.

An Independent Quebec at worst would have on the Canadian economy for a few years. I do not think that it would cause the collapse of Canadian culture or de–stabilize North America.

Jeff Welch
Orchard Hill

Paper's view is biased

To the Editor:

This is in response to what appears to be an editorial stance against the band Project FLATBOY by the Collegian staff. It began with the cartoon "Buttah" and was followed by a vicious letter slandering not only us, but Punk Rock as a whole. This has been continued by the Collegian's Top 10 List in which we have been attacked not once, but twice.

Really, It's okay not to like a band or a type of music, but just maybe you should open your minds. Before you pass judgment why don't you come see us? You many still not like us, but at least it will be an informed opinion.

Project FLATBOY
Easthampton

Arts & Living

Perspectives on Kids discussed

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Controversial issues surrounding Larry Clark's film Kids were analyzed in a panel discussion organized by the Index following Sunday night's screening of the movie in the Student Union Ballroom.

Clark's hotly debated tale of teenage life in New York City opened this past summer to varying degrees of critical acclaim. The visually graphic and conceptually disturbing film chronicles a day and night of gratuitous sex, intoxication, drug abuse and violence among a group of teens who saunter or skateboard down the city streets in the summertime.

With so many weighty topics emerging from the film, or as panel member David James Macy phrased it, "something to offend everybody," each of the panel members tried to discuss one aspect of the movie, from both personal and professional standpoints.

Macy, director of AIDS Alive and civil rights activist, expressed his personal and academic views on the film as a person living with AIDS. Macy discussed the character of Jennie (Chloe Sevigny) who learns she has been infected by, unbeknownst to him, the HIV–infected Telly (Leo Fitzpatrick). Telly is a sex fiend with an affinity for virgins whom Jennie spends the entire movie trying to locate.

Macy saw the scene where a drugged–out Jennie finds Telly (having intercourse with another virgin) but does not confront him or seek retribution as extremely unrealistic.

"Speaking as someone who's been involved with HIV/AIDS for 15 years now, I know what happens when people find out who has infected them ... when you find the man or woman who infected you with HIV you've got adrenaline to burn — regardless of the hallucinogen you've taken," Macy said.

Michele Leaf, staff attorney of the Student Legal Services office, sat on the panel, and discussed the absence of authority with regards to law and lack of parents in a film was billed for both adults and kids.

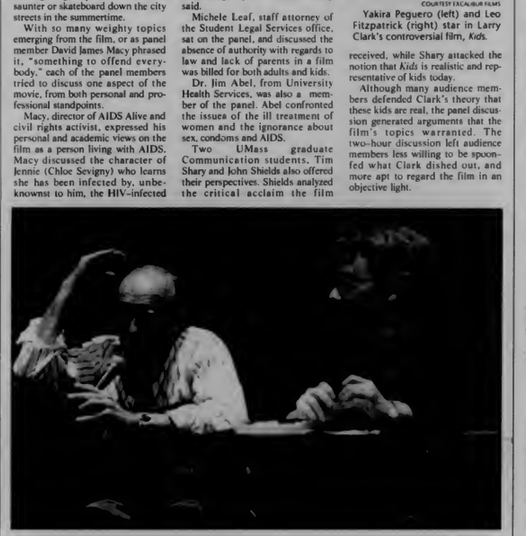
Dr. Jim Abel, from University Health Services, was also a member of the panel. Abel confronted the issue of the ill treatment of women and the ignorance about sex, condoms and AIDS.

Two UMass graduate Communication students, Tim Shary and John Shields also offered their perspectives. Shields analyzed the critical acclaim the film received, while Shary attacked the notion that Kids is realistic and representative of kids today.

COURTESY EXCALIBUR FILMS

Yakira Peguero (left) and Leo Fitzpatrick (right) star in Larry Clark's controversial film, Kids.

Although many audience members defended Clark's theory that these kids are real, the panel discussion generated arguments that the film's topics warranted. The two–hour discussion left audience members less willing to be spoon–fed what Clark dished out, and more apt to regard the film in an objective light.



EMILY BEKT/COLLEGIAN

Dr. Jim Abel (left) and Tim Shary (right) discuss the film.

Another smash for the Pumpkins

By Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

THE SMASHING PUMPKINS
Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness
Virgin Records

Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness, the Smashing Pumpkins' new double–length is the best album of the decade. With this stunning new work, the Chicago–based band has proven twice that they are the most creative and inspiring band of the 90s. The band's approach to popular song is so unique and touching, it should be used as an example to all the struggling artists who are trying to find a musical identity.

The Smashing Pumpkins' last album, the multi–platinum Siamese Dream, propelled the band to the forefront of alternative rock. The spacy sound effects, trippy distorted guitar solos and catchy rifts brought them inevitably to the position of headliner at the 1994 Lollapalooza music festival. On this new double CD, the Pumpkins continue their seven year tradition of incredibly picturesque alternative music.

Similar to the Beatles' White Album, the Pumpkins have overcome the difficult task of producing a masterful double album. Both the White Album and Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness contain 28 remarkable and creative songs. Where the Beatles album had a "no rules apply" where the individual bands members went their own way, the Pumpkins have a more cohesive feel of a band in complete control of their sound and music. But both releases contain a collection of styles that add much needed diversity.

Emotion seems to be the band's forte. Whether it be a heart–warming lyric or a guitar solo of explosion and rage, the Pumpkins always seem to trigger passionate sensation in their music. Their emotions on this new album span the entire spectrum of high and low intensity, a certain bipolar disorder through song. The beauty of making a double album is that the band is now able to display their wide range of musical talent. About half the songs are raw, hard, and fast–paced while the other half are slow, depressing sad songs.

The Pumpkins are not afraid to wear their hearts on their sleeves as all of the songs are deeply intimate and personal. The lyrics are very reminiscent to a poetic Shakespearean mood. Exquisite images of "twilight skies, oceans blue and realms of soft delusions" flutter throughout both discs. The songs are designed to reach out and sweep every Smashing Pumpkins fan's heart away. This style is most evident in the song "Stumbleline." Here the song tells the "lukebox fuckup hanging around the drug store" to "fake it. I'll be your stumbleline, I'll be your superqueen and make you me."

Many of these melancholy songs are tales of youth, stories of yesterday that will never be forgotten. "1979" may become their most overplayed radio song yet. This song has a mystical and foreign sound very much like the odd and irregular alternative style that Sonic Youth has used throughout its experimental history of guitar imagination.

The other side of this bipolar disorder of music is on the opposite spectrum of mellow. The hard songs on Mellon Collie are rougher and more zealous than popular favorites from Siamese Dream like "Cherub Rock" and "Rocket." Songs like the current single "Bullet with Butterfly Wings" show a care–free, "no holds barred" attitude through song. Billy Corgan, the Pumpkins' lead singer has always been known for his arrogantly cocky attitude and he still doesn't care about other people's opinion of him.

Often Corgan separates himself while blasting out his fierce soul. This is the case on "Fuck You (an ode to no one)." In this devilishly scary song Corgan explodes "wreaking havoc" and "taking a virgin mary axe to sweet baby jane."

Many of the songs are like an R–rated horror flick as Corgan screams like a singer in a satanic, heavy metal band. Images of "vampires, death, and black holes" add elements of shock value to the already frightening songs. This style is most evident in the song "Bodies." Try telling this to your lover: "No bodies felt like you, nobodys, love is suicide." Corgan's feelings are burning and passionate, an author of horrifying tales of love.

This album is a masterpiece displaying the unlimited range of talent that the Smashing Pumpkins possess. Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness has everything to offer, every song has a different sound, a unique feel. The songs are each a poem, carefully thought out. Every word is important and meaningful creating a land of Smashing Pumpkins' metaphor and sorrow, a breath–taking roller coaster ride through a fairy–tale land in the center of human emotion. A

Jim Rose Circus a terrifyingly awesome show

By Lisa Oliveri
Collegian Correspondent

JIM ROSE'S CIRCUS
Pearl Street
Oct. 28

NORTHAMPTON — An overwhelming cry of terror rose from the audience Sunday night at Pearl Street as members of Jim Rose's Circus ran out into the pitch black crowd, carrying chainsaws which were spraying water over the heads of the frightened audience. For what seemed like an eternity, people ran to safety as not to fall into the hands of the Jim Rose Circus.

Although many people left the show trembling, no one left without a look of both awe and disgust.

Harsher than the previous shows with Nine Inch Nails, Rose combined both the long–time crowd favorites with additional acts he was not allowed to perform in larger venues.

"This [club tour] allowed us to do more comedy," Jim Rose said.

Rose, interacting well with the topless circus queen, acted as a human dart board, put his face into glass while an audience member stepped on his head. He topped it all off by swallowing razor blades and then regurgitating them up on a piece of string as he worked the crowd into a frenzy.

Always a crowd favorite, the Enigma lived up to everybody's expectations. He gulped down not only a shattered lightbulb, but also a yummy combination of worms, maggots and crickets fed to him by an audience member. Rose then heckled the audience by swinging a live scorpion inches away from the awe–struck faces in the front row before sticking it into the mouth of the Enigma.

Mr. Lifto was in top shape, lifting not only heavy object but also lighting 100 firecrackers taped to his body.

The crowd cheered as the Armenian Rubberman worked his body through a '70s model wooden tennis racket. He then immersed himself in a giant plastic bag while Rose sucked the air out with a vacuum cleaner. If all this wasn't enough, the Armenian Rubberman

Turn to JIM ROSE CIRCUS, page 9

Voodoo Glow Skulls new ska album a treat

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Correspondent

THE VOODOO GLOW SKULLS
Firme
Epitath

This band doesn't sound like Bad Religion, NOFX, Rancid or the Offspring yet, they are Epitath's best band. Imagine a bunch of kids who were weaned on The Descendents and the Adolescents joined by a horn section that listened to a lot of the Specials and the Toasters and you have the Voodoo Glow Skulls.

Firme, the group's second album and first on Epitath, explodes full of energy that will keep you moving your feet. The marriage of frantic mayhem of punk and catchy Ska beat encourages one not to think, just to dance.

What separates the Voodoo Glow Skulls from so many bands today is that they're so much fun. The song "Fat Randy" is about an overweight, alcoholic, bully while in "Thrift Shop Junkie" they admit to not having any taste in clothes. They do steal a little bit from the Mighty Mighty Bosstones on the songs "Drunk Tank," "Trouble Walking" and "Nicotine Fit" which extol the virtues of smoking cigarettes and drinking until you can't walk.

Of course when the music is as good as it is on this album, they can sing about whatever they want and still get away with it. They get a little serious on "Jocks From Hell" which attacks the jocks who have stormed the punk scene. You can tell from this song that the Glow Skulls were into punk before it became cool.

For you pure rudies out there, "Empty Bottles" and the instrumental "Malas Palabras" could have been released on Two–Tone Records. They get political on "Shoot The Moon" and "Construction." However, "Method to Madness" urges the listener to forget about life and just have a good time while listening to the Glow Skulls.

This album in not for the mellower listener. Voodoo gives you lightening quick guitars and drums over a hyperactive horn section, a perfect combination for destruction. Each song is pure thrash–ska. You won't become cool by buying this album and it won't change your way of thinking but then again Voodoo Glow Skulls wouldn't want you to. A

The Voodoo Glow Skulls and Schlong play at the Iron Horse in Northampton tonight. Tickets are $9 in advance and are available from the Northampton Box Office. Call the club for more info.

Collegian News

Because it happens everyday.

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
PEOPLE ARE LINING UP . . .
To Get To The Best Tex-Mex Chow This Side Of The Rio Grande!

Funky, fun & funny. That's what the critics are saying about El Acuna. Offering a tasty variety of authentic Mexican dishes, served in generous portion - - El Acuna is sure to satisfy even the heartiest of appetites. Choose from our selection of the finest Mexican beers (Largest in the valley) . . . and don't forget our 18 oz. Margaritas! Come pull up a saddle and enjoy the ride!

STEAKS • BURRITOS • RIBS • TACOS • SEAFOOD • FAJITAS • MEGA-MARGARITAS •
GREAT MEXICAN BEER SELECTION • & MORE
41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst (Behind Antonio's) 413-253-4040

The Bluewall

Boogie Down All Night Long
with DJs Billy Arnold and Bobby Boy
THURSDAY Nov. 2nd
9:30pm-1:00am
we've got your sound

Crosswalk Balk
Monday Nov. 6
9:00pm-1:00am

DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday Nov. 9th
9:30pm-1:00am
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY NOV. 13TH
9:30PM-1:00AM

"Last Chance To Dance"
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

Want a reason for the Million Man March?

Words to live by: A Challenge to the Government

Editor's note: This is the second part of the Mission Statement of the Million Man March. Next Black Affairs page will contain the final segment.

IV. The Challenge to the Government

16. Central to our practice of responsibility is holding responsible those in power who have oppressed and wronged us through various challenges. At the core of the practice of speaking truth to power is the moral challenge to it to be responsible, to cease its abuse, lenge to it to be responsible, to cease its abuse, exploitation and oppression and to observe its basic role as a structure instituted to secure human rights, not to violate them or assist in their violation. And where it has violated its trust, it must be compelled to change.

17. Historically, the U.S. government has participated in one of the greatest holocausts or human history, the Holocaust of African Enslavement. It sanctioned with law and gun the genocidal process that destroyed millions of human lives, human culture and the human possibility inherent in African life and culture. It has yet acknowledge this horrific destruction or to take steps to make amends for it.

18. Moreover, even after the Holocaust, racist suppression continued, destroying lives, communities and possibilities. And even now, members of the government are pushing the country in a regressive right-wing direction, receiving hard won gains, blaming the victims, punishing the vulnerable and pandering to the worst of human emotions.

19. With this, call on the government of the United States to atone for the historical and current wrongs it has committed against African people and other people of color. Especially do we call on the government of this country to address the morally compelling issue of the Holocaust of African Enslavement. To do this, the government must:

a. publicly admit its role and the role of the country in the Holocaust,

b. publicly apologize for it,

c. publicly recognize its moral meaning to us and humanity, through establishing institutions and education processes which preserve memory of it, teach the lessons and horror of its history, and stress the dangers and destructiveness of denying human dignity and human freedom,

d. pay reparations, and

e. discontinue any and all practices which continue its effects or threaten its repetition.

20. We call on the government to also atone for its role in criminalizing a whole people, for its policies of destroying, discrediting, disrupting and otherwise neutralizing Black leadership, for spending more monies on imprisonment than education, and on weapons of war than social development; for dismantling regulations that restrained corporations in their degradation of the environment and failing to check a deadly environmental racism that encourages placement of toxic waste in communities of color. And of course, we call for a halt to all of this.

21. Furthermore, we call on the government to stop sending hard won guns such as affirmative action, voting rights and distracting favorable to maximum Black political participation; to provide universal, full and affordable health care; to provide and support programs for affordable housing; to pass the Conyers Reparations Bill; to repeal the Omnibus Crime Bill; to halt disinvestment in social development and stop penalizing the urban and welfare poor and using them as scapegoats; to adopt an economic bill of rights including a plan to rebuild the wasting cities; to craft and institute policies to preserve and protect the environment; and to halt the privatization of public wealth, space and responsibility.

22. In addition, we call on the government of the U.S. to stop blaming people of color for problems created by ineffective government and corporate greed and irresponsibility; to honor the treaties signed with Natives Peoples of the U.S., and to respect their just claims and interests; to increase and expand efforts to eliminate race, class and gender discrimination, and to stop pandering to white fears and white supremacy hatreds and illusions and help create a new vision of human and societal possibilities.

23. We also are compelled to call on the government of this country to craft a sensible and moral foreign policy that provides for equal treatment of African, Caribbean and other Third World refugees and countries; that forgives foreign debt to former colonies, that fosters a just and equitable peace and recognizes the right of self-determination of peoples in the Middle East, in the Caribbean and around the world, that rejects embargoes which penalize whole peoples, that supports a just and rightful claims and interests of Native Peoples, and that supports all Third World countries in their efforts to achieve and maintain democracy and sustainable economic and social development.

24. Finally, we call on the government and the country to recognize and respond positively to the fact that U.S. society is not a finished white product, but an unfinished and ongoing multicultural project and that each people has both the right and responsibility to speak their own special cultural truth and to make their own unique contribution to how this society is reconceived and reconstructed.

V. The Challenge to the Corporations

25. We begin our challenge to corporations by rejecting the widespread notion among them, that corporations have no social responsibility except to maximize profit within the rules of an open and competitive market, through cutting costs, maximizing benefits and constantly increasing technological efficiency. Our position is that no human conduct is immune from the demands of moral responsibility or exempt from moral assessment. The weight of corporations in modern life is overwhelming and their commitment to maximizing profit and technological efficiency can and often do lead to tremendous social costs such as deteriorating and dangerous working conditions, massive layoffs, harmful products projected as beneficial, environmental degradation, de-industrialization, corporate relocation and disinvestment in social structures and development.

26. We thus call on corporations to practice a corporate responsibility that requires and encourages efforts to minimize and eventually eliminate harmful consequences which persons, communities and the environment sustain as a result of productive and consumptive practices.

27. We also call on corporations to respect the dignity and interest of the worker in this country and abroad, to maintain safe and adequate working conditions for workers, provide adequate benefits, prohibit and penalize racial and gender discrimination, halt displacement and dislocation of workers, encourage organization and meaningful participation in decision-making by workers and halt disinvestment in the social structure, de-industrialization and corporate relocation.

28. Moreover, we call on corporations to reinvest profits back into the communities from which it extracts profits, to increase support for Black charities, contribute more to Black education in public schools and traditional Black universities and colleges, and to Black education in predominately white colleges and universities, to open facilities to the community for cultural and recreational use and to contribute to the building of community institutions and other projects to reinvest in the social structure and development of the Black community.

29. The further consideration of profit made from Black consumers, we call on corporate America to provide expanded investment opportunities for Black people, engage in partnership with Black businesses and business persons; increase employment of Black managers and general employees; conduct massive job training among Blacks for work in the 21st century, and aid in the development of programs to halt and reverse urban decay.

30. Finally, we call on corporations to show appropriate care and responsibility for the environment; to minimize and halt pollution, deforestation and depletion of natural resources, and the destruction of plants, animals, birds, fish, reptiles and insects and their natural habitats; and to rebuild wasted and damaged areas and expand the number, size and kind of areas preserved.

VI. The Day of Absence

31. We call on those who do not come to Washington, especially, Black women, to mobilize and organize the community in support of the Million Man March and its goals. The Day of Absence is a parallel activity to the Million Man March and a component part of one joint and cooperative project: the standing up and assumption of a new and expanded responsibility by the Black man in particular and the Black community in general.

32. Women are in the leadership of the Day of Absence without exclusion of men as men are in the leadership of the Million Man March without exclusion of women. And both activities are equally essential.

33. The Day of Absence is a sacred day, a holy day, a day of atonement, reconciliation and responsibility. It thus has activities to reflect this. To observe this sacred day, we call on all Black people to stay away from work, from school, from businesses, and from places of entertainment and sports and to turn inward and focus on the themes of atonement, reconciliation and responsibility in our lives and struggle.

34. We call on those who choose prayer and meditation as essential ways of observation to do this in groups of family and friends at home or in larger groups at mosques, churches, synagogues, temples and other places of worship.

35. Also, we call for teach-ins at homes and in community gatherings on:

a. the meaning of this day and the juncture of history at which we are as people;

b. the meaning of the Million Man March, the Day of Atonement, Reconciliation and Responsibility, and the Day of Absence and the goals of this joint project as set forth in the Mission Statement;

c. the importance and requirements of our struggle for liberation and justice;

d. the indispensability of spiritual and ethical grounding in our families, our communities and our struggle; and

e. the glory and burdens of our history as fathers and mothers of human civilization, sons and daughters of the Holocaust of African Enslavement and authors and heirs of the reaffirmation of our Africanness and our commitment to liberation in the 60s.

36. Furthermore, we call on this day for massive voter registration as an essential act of responsibility for being politically active and morally engaged persons profoundly committed to the improvements of the quality of life in the community and larger society.

37. And finally, we all on all to contribute to the establishment of a Black Economic Development Fund as also an essential act of responsibility for the economic development of the community and to embrace the ancient an excellent teaching that small things given return in abundance and the good we do for others is actually done for ourselves. For it helps build and strengthen the moral community we all want to live in.

Honesty is the best policy

Reflection of the Million Man March

by Sean S. Warner, M.ed.

The search for many began in pockets all over this nation. Black and Latino men as far as Hawaii travelled to D.C. for fellowship and exhibit courage and responsibility to the world. More importantly they probed into themselves and it was wonderful to be a part of that.

Every time we stopped at a rest stop regardless of which one you encountered endless melanated face with pounding full dynamic features like my own. We were the majority. It was empowering exciting even-a-bit unnerving. For people who have historically been emasculated just every now in then chance to feel in real significant substantial changes could be made in your hands. The concept of finally commanding one's destiny instead feel like a bolt of lightening coursing from the heavens. We all are Superman chests like superman with every right.

The experience illuminated the ways in which espousal of race perpetuates ruling of our existence worldwide. Human beings more than most species in this planet have very little differentiation, meaning we are more genetically alike than not alike. So race like class and gender is nothing more than a social construction devised to validate the hierarchy among groups that exist on this planet. The idea that an individual feels he or she is more deserving of particular privileges as opposed to someone with a darker skin tone, makes no sense. Its psychopathic in nature. Yet this kind of inculcation or training continues to regulate the way we live. Racism. There is nothing incredible about its foundation. Which is why the march was so important. Since America, acronym for "Team-Race" has failed its male citizens of African descent with respect to defining manhood, it only makes for Black men to initiate the process for Black men. Paulo Freire said, "only the oppressed can free themselves and those who continue to oppress. Yet the issue has not been dealt with honestly. Malcolm said "that if whose people were made to understand the hell that we've been catchin' since 1620 when Plymouth Rock landed on us then would possible be receptive to the vision of helping Black folks help themselves, but we've been sweet-talking them since our inception in this place, so they're made to believe that this is what we want." Hell No."

History teaches us that Jesus, Abraham, and Moses (all Hebrews, Jews) clearly were Africans, yet we are taught differently. It also discloses that in 70 A.D. Hebrew men, women and children fled persecution and escape to Spain, which at the time was inhabited by the Moors (North Africans, who built the first university in Europe- The University of Salamanca- and are responsible for the majority of Spain's ancient magnificence in architecture) and into parts of West of Africa. Why would a Semite (which in Greek means a people who were half of something "semi" being half) flee to a place they could not be protected, detected or understand the culture and language of the people they were co-habitating with? Why were the Black Madonna and child (Mother Mary and Baby Jesus) white-washed? So many other questions could be asked.

The main question is why can't we be honest about racism. Its the only way. Its unhealthy for the victim and the offender. Consequently, the victim must liberate him or her self, starting with the definition of self, by self, for self. That's what the march was all about. Not about Farrakhan who needs to be commended for masterminding this project) or the statements he may or may not have made.

WOULD THAT BE THE CASE

By Pierre Arthur Elysee

Watching tear streaming from your eyes
Hearing your angry vice
Reading your emotions and feelings
Sharing your concern of your rights being abused

Today, no emotions no feelings

For displaying our determination in taking action
For showing our brotherhood unity
For proving violence is not part of our nature

Today, the angry voice is silent
No longer can it be heard?

Would that be the case if
There were only a few hundred of us in Washington?

Would that be the case if
The march had turned into a riot?

Would that be the case if
Some shots were fired?

Would that be the case...?

"Young, Gifted and Black: The Promise of Black Youth"

by Dr. Manning Marable

People of all races, ethnic backgrounds and social classes frequently say that "young people are our most important resource." For people of color and especially for African Americans, our ideas about youth are also affected profoundly by our collective memory, by our sense of the historical meaning drawn from the ordeals our people have experienced in the past, and by the challenges which confront us in the present. We see the promise of our young people as the brightest representation of the real progress of black people collectively in this country: what we have achieved and what we can become. We desperately want our children's lives and futures to be better and more fulfilling than our own lives have been. We want to feel that the burden of racism and social inequality will be lifted from the shoulders of daughters and sons, as they prepare to enter the work place and society. We believe that every African-American child is in his or her own special way gifted, and deserving of every opportunity life has to offer.

The belief in the promise of black youth is also connected with the struggle to achieve freedom within American society. Each successive generation of achieve freedom of young African-Americans has made a vital contribution in the fight to destroy discrimination and inequity. In the 1940s, for example, black young people challenged segregation laws by joining the Southern Youth Congress and the Congress of Racial Equality. In 1960, black college students sparked the sit-in movement across the South. Black young people were in the vanguard of social change in the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Growing up black in the white America has always been a challenge, but never more so than today. To be young and black in the 1990s means that the basic context for human development – education, health care, personal safety, the environment, employment and shelter – is increasingly problematic. To be young and black today means fighting for survival in a harsh and frequently unforgiving urban environment.

Black Homecoming Week Activities

Wed., Nov. 1.

7 pm: Resume Writing Workshop at the CCEBMS Library in the New Africa House.

Thurs., Nov. 2

8 pm: Cassandra Wilson, jazz diva, in concert at Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are $5 for 5-College Students.

Friday, Nov. 3

2 pm: Panel Confronting issues at Home – Domestic Violence in the ALANA Communities with Pearl Cleage and Juan Carlos Arean – (Latino Cultural Center).
10 pm: Lady Apache, Rajamore & Broadway in concert at the Student Union Ballroom. Advance tickets are $5, at the door $7
After Party – at the Southside Room, Hampden Commons, Southwest, $2.

Saturday, Nov. 4

1 pm: Black Homecoming Parade, beginning at the Robsham Visitors Center at U-Mass.
2 to 4 pm: ALANA Organization Fair, Blue Wall, Campus Center.
7 pm: Cultural Night Semiformal, Student Union Ballroom. $6 per person, $10 per couple.
8 pm: (Editor's Top Choice) Flyin' West, a play by Pearl Cleage, Bowker Auditorium. Student $3.50.
1 am: After Party at the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

Sunday, Nov. 5

1 to 4 pm: Black Arts Expo at the CCEBMS Library, New Africa House. Featuring Art, Music, Song, Poetry, Dance and Food.

(For more info, please call "the beautiful" Mary Custard at 545-0084)

Email answers to the last Black Affairs Question, "Why Should Black Unite with White?"

Jeff(Jewish) jlench@student.umass.edu:

Why unite? Because regardless of race, color, creed all people have the same basic goal - to lead a happy, healthy, fulfilling life. Different people will have different ways to make this happen, and they will have different roadblocks to make this happen. People working together can smash these roadblocks, and smash hate- mongorers, racists, and those who seek to better themselves at the expense of others. The further from each other, the harder it will be for people to help others who lead a different lifestyle. Diversity is good; it must be cherished, not feared. When more and more people to realize this, the world will be a more beautiful place.

Byrd(Jamaican) byrd@student.umass.edu:

Why unite? Well, I feel employment is important. Why not unite, since I don't grow my own food money helps.

Lynelle (Caucasian) lengel@cottonis.oit.umass.edu

Why unite? Isolation is the greatest barrier toward change. Love.

Black Affairs

Wednesday, November 1, 1995

The Continuing Black Experience

BLACK HOMECOMING
ALANA CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE
CCEBMS EXCELLENCE THROUGH INVOLVEMENT
ZETA PHI BETA SORORITY INC. 19 20
University of Mass. Black Student Union — United We Stand, Divided We Fall. Together We Can All Stand Tall.
BLACK MASS COMMUNICATIONS PROJECT University of Massachusetts

Our day of LIGHT and DARK a–TONE–ment

We arranged ourselves in a cipher with the darkest and lightest persons in the room standing side by side. Every complexion in between these two were categorized and positioned accordingly. We shared very intimate and sensitive issues that in no way excluded people of European descent. Actually, this group of brilliant student was able to see that white supremacy gave birth to this "complexion problem" that has penetrated the minds and often governs the action of nearly everyone.

A member of the cipher explained that "men don't want to approach anyone that doesn't look like Vanessa Williams" implying that her beauty is based upon her being thin, light skinned with green eyes. Someone added that they weren't willing "to call Vanessa Williams ugly just because she's light". I agree with both statements, because they hold some truth. Is it possible for us to keep in mind that there is no single complexion of people that have a monopoly on beauty? If we simply allow our education's to shine by taking into consideration simple genetics, we would see that all the beauty in this world has one beautiful root.

The Queen I-Serene

In that room, on October 16, 1995, we created a 360 degree circle that did have a beginning: the darkest person in the circle. Anthropologist may call her 'Lucy', but I prefer to call her, "Yuland, Rochelle, or Destree...". Nobody else in that room could reproduce the darkest person, but that person has the ability to reproduce all of us. With this, I acknowledge her as my mother deserving respect and admiration for blessing me, and every existing complexion in the human family, with life.

Not only was your discussion therapeutic for many, it was memorable and historic event in my college experience. I have attended discussion on this campus that tried to dispel the myth of "light is right" and "black is wack", but never has it been done with such order, honesty and progression. We can't avoid this issue academically, simply because we've accustomed to hearing and speaking about it while arguing, or in the intimate setting of gossiping, both being unprogressive. We have access to information and facilities that are not readily accessible to everyone. We as students also have the advantage and luxury to have the time to sit and ponder and philosophize. Therefore, it is our duty to construct and develop ways to heal this destructive problem of complexion and introduce it to our friends and family. Whether it be in the form of literature, music, workshops, psychology, anthropology, biology, or mathematics, it is our duty. This can only be done by first recognizing that this division was imposed upon us by the institution of racism.

We tend to adopt this academic jargon and these collegiate attitudes and forget (or never learn) how to debate or discuss intelligently. We wrongly assume that grandiloquence is intelligence. The two should never be confused. We should be utilizing our education to become insightful and serious thinkers, not pontificating, imoperative puppets. Expand your vocabulary to reveal your great mind, not to conceal it and confuse or impress people. Acknowledge your greatness by acknowledging your roots, for to know self is to know all things in the universe. PEACE.

Judge 1000 Years

Written by Mutabaruka

Transcribed by Hugh Collins

Mutabaruka:(Judge)
Prosecutor: (Pros)
Mr. Religious Believer:(RB)
Mr. Denomination:(Den)

Judge: All rise. Judge 1000 years presiding.

Pros: Your Honor, we have here Mr. RB and his best man Mr. Den. Mr. RB, please take the stand.

Judge: I am now descending that there is a new prosecutor here.

Pros: Yes, your Honor. After the last trial all the prosecutors had to resign. Your Honor, I think both the gentlemen should take the stand at the same time, considering the magnitude of charges against them.

Judge: Mr. RB and Mr. Den. I see where you also have been promising black people but you are even worse than the politicians. You promise them good living after they die. Yes, you say their reward is in Heaven. It would appear to me that both of you have been to Heaven already and have gotten yours. The charges are to numerous to mention here. For over 500 years you have been wanted, from ever since you sent your relative here. Yes, I'm talking about the same Christopher Comebus'us.

RB:. Your Honor, the name is Christopher Columbus.

Judge: Hush up, Columbus, Comebus'us. It don't matter. He did come trick us. It was you who went to the Americas and Africa with your doctrine of civilizing the Savages. You taught black people to pray with their eyes closed. When they opened them you had their land and they had the bible. With the Bible and gun, you robbed, raped, murdered our fore-parents in the name of Jesus. You have divided black people into groups causing them to distrust each other. The first charge is for misleading black people into their color blind blindness. You have black people worshipping everything white as good. White Jesus, white wing angels, white Christmas, even the songs talk about whiter than snow I long to be.

RB: Honor, the Bible did say though your sins be like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.

Judge: So you're trying to tell me if my sins are white instead of scarlet, God will accept my sins? And by the way Michael Angelo painting of his uncle, for years black people keep revering this picture as the true picture of Christ. All your religious holidays originate in Europe. Everything in heaven is white. Everything in hell is black. Is a lucky t'ing Jamaicans start to visit hell an' really see for themselves.

RB: Your Honor, if I may be allowed to speak. Our divine and beloved father Pope.

Judge: Hush up. Dope or Pope. I will not allow you to ask any questions 'ere. I have never heard anyone ask you any questions in any of your church services. You are also charged for collecting money under false pretense. You keep saying the church have no money. Yet every little open land have a tent for a few months, then a mastsive building later. Did not your Bible say your body is the temple of God?

Pros: Your Honor, Mr. Den. has been collecting money from people saying that he can get them into Miami via the Bahamas to guide spiritual crusades. Though such people are in jail sir, trying to reach Miami.

Judge: What? I thought you would be trying to get them to heaven via your church. You are also charged for misinterpretation. You have twisted the Bible to suit white supremacy. You have taken stories and quotes from other books much older than the Bible and made them into myths. Have you ever read "The Egyptian Book of the Dead?"

Den: The what?

Judge: It is because of you why the deejay's have no respect for our black women. You have painted a picture of women as the originator of sin. You have made women look inferior in all your religious acts. You have been preaching a sexist doctrine to our people. From Eve 'til now, you have blamed women for the downfall of the world. You blamed Delilah for Samson's stupidity. You have even placed sin on sex, saying that Mary was a virgin all her life. With these images, what do you expect for our people? You even have the earth as only 6000 years old. Maybe the history of Europe is only 6000 years old. But black people have been here long before. Long, long before.

RB: Your Honor...

Judge: Hush up. Didn't I tell you not to interrupt. You shall get an extra 1000 for contempt of court.

Pros: Your Honor, there's a certain denomination that have been given legal status here. That same denomination have been preaching for years that black people cannot enter heaven. Yet their recruiters travel aroun' on bicycles two by two trying to win souls.

Judge: I have heard of this. I hear that they call themselves church of the Latter-day Saints of Jesus Christ or Morons.

RB: The word is Mormons your Honor. You have to understand that things change.

Judge: Hush up. Understan'. Black people have been under the stand for centuries. These Morons or Mormons as you call them, should never be allowed into a country that is predominantly black to preach about God. You have been collaborating with the politicians to trick black people. You have branded voodoo and obeah and all other African oriented traditions as paganism. Yet you have the people going to church, trying to drink the blood of Jesus and eat his flesh. And I did hear you teaching them to pray and I quote, "Lead us not into temptation." It is you they should be asking to lead them not into temptation. When since the lord lead people into temptation that you should be asking him not to do it.

Den: That was a slight misinterpretation.

Judge: Remember the baker. Remember the one who was swagging hearts. Remember the one who was using his mouth to orally rob us. All of these were collecting souls under false pretense. Mr. RB and Mr. Den., I hereby sentence you both to 1000 years for swindling poor people by way of radio and TV. I also give you 1000 years for each year that black people have been suffering since Columbus came 'ere. Now take them away.

Young black man: In perspective

While watching the Million Man March, I saw something that instantaneously brought tears to my eyes and reminded me of something that was now lacking in my life. I noticed a mother, elegantly and proudly walking with her three beautiful "Black Male Children." I thought to myself, "I could imagine Grand doing the same for me."

Grand, of course, being short for "Grandmother." I was told by her at the age of four that she felt too young to be a grandmother. Therefore, I was to call her Grand. Many times, this same little 95lb grandmother saved my ass from the troubled streets. It seemed as if everyone knew that it would be best not to step in her path. "STRONG BLACK WOMAN COMING THROUGH. MOVE ASIDE!!"

Farrakhan couldn't even mess with Grand. I could imagine her saying, "With all due respect Farrakhan, I'm taking my grandson to the march and there is absolutely nothing you can do about it." I guess in a way, she was my father. She wore many hats.

As far as I can think, I don't recall many of my friends back in Brooklyn having fathers within the household. I can tell you one thing though, their mothers were not to be played with. I can also tell you that everyone's mothers had a few more grey hairs than they should, but in the long run, my boys and I turned out okay.

Looking at the elegant Black Woman and her sons, I remembered Brian and his dad. I was chillin' in his room one day and I came across a note that his father had written to him when he began his Freshman year in college.

1) Pray everyday, read your Bible
2) Eat well. Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner and Snacks
3) Personal Hygiene: Nails, Mouth, Hair, etc.
4) Make lasting friends, have interesting conversations, speak properly, show genuine concerns for your peers, smile, remember names, be friendly.
5) Have fun: Music, Games, Movies
6) Study hard. Use the library and other resources. Ask questions, follow through and spend quality time on your work.
7) Make all appointments promptly. No one is going to remind you. You have to take on the responsibility for your own actions.
8) Make sure your work is done neatly
9) Don't be afraid of challenges
10) Get involved in the wholesome activities that will help you to grow up and develop socially, spiritually, physically, academically, and intellectually.

Don't be afraid of no one, you have right to a good education. This is a major investment. God Bless. Love Dad.

Maybe, the letter was very simple, maybe it's just me, but the simple words that his father wrote for him sent me a (beautiful/loving/powerful) message. After reading that I had tears in my eyes, and I actually wondered what it would be like to have a dad. I am not going to continue much longer. I am up real late tonight and I am thinking about this stuff. I feel its time to be real, and come from the heart. No grandiose language, just emotion. I am not sure if everything that I have just written is in perfect order, and I am not sure if everything makes complete sense to you; all I know it does to me.

"My deepest luv to all of the woman who I will be tomorrow. My deepest respect to the entire BLACK FAMILY."(Aren)

Transitions

Patrick Belizaire

When I first came from Haiti to the United States I never thought in terms of color. One reason, I was not old enough and it was not part of my cycle socialization. I had always been made aware of the fact that Haitians were a great people and later that people of African descent are a great people. But I would soon enough find out about the pain and sorrow that came with being black; but most importantly I would learn of the power, the great history and of OUR manifest destiny.

The road to understanding my people from all types of backgrounds and of all shades and sizes did not come easy but nevertheless it came. It came through denial and shamefulness, sometimes even through resentment for my own people.

When I first enrolled in elementary school, I spoke no English and thus I became a target of ignorant jokes. I would come home with lots of question in my head, like why do these kids call me black and African when they are also black and African? I was facing two worlds of discrimination, one by my own people, the other by white people. I knew then what I always will know: the world is a struggle and our life is a fight — a fight that cannot be won alone and can only be won by using the backneyed expression of "united we stand and divided we fall."

My struggle like most is constantly leading me towards a more refined sense of cycle socialization: a higher understanding of my people, our oppression and how we are oppressed. If we understand how we are oppress we can thus overcome our oppressor. The first lesson I was to learn in regards to overcoming my oppression would come in my high school education.

My education gave me a fistful of what the world held for me outside of my people and my culture. I would learn of the have and the have nots. I also learned that discrimination came in all shapes and sizes and that the ones that were most dangerous were those that one could not pinpoint or quiet relay into words — the subtle racism that made incisions into one's inner being and it always caused one to say, where did these kids and people learn how to be so malicious?

I attended a prep school whose composition did not consist of a diverse population and did not pretend to have one either. Every one there had a silver spoon in their mouths and those who did not just pretended to. I realized that this was education. That only real money could buy it but I did not take advantage of it. I did not try to blend in because I am just not that type; I stood alone and constantly defended my blackness and my right to be. During this era of high school I was very bitter and was unable to focus. I was letting my bitterness eat away at me. As a result I could not analyze and soak — like a sponge — the knowledge that was there to be taken.

I came to realize that my bitterness stem from the fact that I refused to be converted into this happy, go lucky character; the type of black person that just tries to blend in with the crowd, the type that tries to pretend that their blackness does not exist and thus does not pose as an inspediment in their social well being. I know I could never be that type, not even if I wanted to, my emotions would not allow me. My resolution would be to remain angry and keep the passionate part of myself as it was and is, but at the same time, get rid of the bitterness because in the long run it would destroy me. That step was the mental healing that would have to occur within me if I had a plan to survive. This mental healing is a process that any black male experiences — bought upon him by society, because he is black.

Everyday I gain strength in my blackness. I am bound intricately to my ancestor's pass, in Africa, here in America and in the Caribbean. I see myself not as a Haitian or as an African American rather as a black person who makes up part of the great diaspora, that has woven the intricate quilt of the renaissance, the modern day black man. Patrick Belizaire is a Collegian Columnist.

Slavery & Black People

by Chinedo D. Ogbuike

Slavery in the past was used
And many Blacks were abused
Blacks were controlled by the white
People who used Black's strength and might

And displayed it as labor for the land
That brought wealth into the white man's hand
Black people as slaves tried their best
To put slavery and its ideas to rest

But it took a long time to occur
Now our history is a complete blur
To us because the books do not tell
The Blacks about the hell

That their ancestors had to face
In order for us to live in this place
Called America, the land of the free
Sorry mommy, sorry daddy

Sorry relatives of the past
You gave every last
Bit of strength and energy
To help us, We'll never forget thee.

GOODBYE

By Michael Jerry

What is the meaning of life
When yesterday's pleasures just won't suffice
What is the reason for living
When there's nothing left for giving
Why do you tell me I can still be something
When I know my pre-determined destiny is the epitomy of nothing
I have to escape this world of wicked and evil
A member of a race full of confused and lost people
Hatred, famine, disease and war
Mama, I don't wanna live no more
I'm tired of fighting, I'm all out of steam
I rest my head on a pillow of crushed, forgotten dreams
Here stands a man, far too proud to cry
Nothing would make me happier than to bid this world goodbye.

Miller's latest dabbles in occult

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

LINDA LAEL MILLER
Time Without End
Berkley Books

It is rare that an author can combine two topics like horror and romance together and get a good result. Linda Lael Miller has been trying to do both with her vampire/romance series.

The first of her series, Forever And The Night, introduced vampire, Aidan Tremayne, who falls for a mortal named Neely. Of course there is the conflict between being a vampire and not being able to have a relationship with a mortal; for instance what to have for dinner and what do you tell your parents when he won't come over for Sunday brunch. Like Anne Rice, Miller tries to give her vampire a soul and introduces several characters in the first novel to be carried on into its sequel.

The second installment, For All Eternity continues with the story of Adian's sister Maeve, who also falls in love with a mortal, but has an even greater problem because she has to destroy the queen of the vampires, Lisette, and take over her throne.

Finally the third book center's on Valerian, a third vampire, who is a friend of Aidan's and Maeve's creator. Time Without End centers on Valerian's century old tie with one woman named Brenna, a woman he loved until death when he was a mortal and continues to be reincarnated every century into a different life.

It seems as if Brenna is destined to live life over and over again, have Valerian fall in love with her over and over again and yet be murdered over and over again (sense a pattern?) Each time Valerian finds her (one time she was a bar maid named Elisabeth, another a blind girl named Jenny) he vows not to go near her because inevitably she dies and he is crushed — all over again. However this time Brenna has taken on the life of a Las Vegas police officer, Daisy Chandler, who is determined not to let the curse be completed once again.

The book also contains elements of past lives, time traveling and parallel universes that can be confusing at times and make reading the book a little choppy. It isn't something you can open up and just start reading.

Miller introduces different aspects to her vampire world. She has her world set up between vampires and angels who battle over mortals. Angels allow vampires to exist and vampires have a respect for God's messengers.

The author keeps the pace going and although this third book drags a little, the first two really hold your interest. Look out for characters in all three that Miller will hopefully make the focus of further sequels. They include the vampire twins Bianca and Vicka and Maeve and Calder's child, Kristina, the only offspring of two vampires to be born in human style.

If Miller can clean up some of the overly sweet scenes and focus more on the occult side, chances are her next effort will be a winner. B

Playwright to lecture in classes

By Yinan Estrada
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, Nov. 4 the New World Theater (NWT) at the University of Massachusetts, in collaboration with the Mount Holyoke College Department of Theater, will present Flyin' West, a play which explores conditions African– American women had to overcome in the late 1800s.

Playwright Pearl Cleage explores the lives of four African American women who, after the 1860 Homestead Act, fled the South and went West in hoping to escape racism, domestic violence and slavery.

The United States government's Homestead Act of 1860 offered 320 acres of "empty" land to any citizen of the country willing to work the land out West overlooking the Native American population there at the time.

This historical play reflects the way many African– American women made their living as domestics while others cultivated their own land in order to survive. It also shows that although the West was not free from racist attitudes, freedom and ownership of their land made the difference.

Sponsored by NWT and the Five College Multicultural Theater Committee, the Atlanta–based playwright Pearl Cleage will be travelling to Amherst to offer several workshops and presentations related to the play.

On Nov. 2 and 3 Cleage will lecture at the Curtain Theater UMass theater classes. On Friday, Nov. 3 . at 2 p.m., New World Theater, along with the Everywoman's Center, will be presenting a panel discussion and group workshop entitled "Confronting the Issues at Home: Domestic Violence in ALANA Communities." Cleage and Juan Carlos Arean, director of Men Overcoming Violence in Amherst, will be guest speakers at this discussion.

Flyin' West will be presented at the Bowker Auditorium in Stockbridge Hall on Saturday, Nov. 4 at 8 p.m.; the panel discussion and group workshop will be held at the Latin American Cultural Center located at the Hampden Commons. For further details, contact New World Theater at 545-1972, or stop by their office at Hampden Commons in Southwest.

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy.
Sometimes you gotta break a few rules.
And it is during those times that you know ...
There's no going back."

Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

TIME OUT
Red Dog Night
Wednesday Night
Starts At 9 p.m.
Free T-Shirts & Hats
Free Antonio's Pizza
$1.50 Red Dog 12 oz. bottle
37 N. Pleasant Street
Proper I.D. Required

WEDNESDAY NITE RAFFLE
NITE AT MIKE'S
Special 99¢ Busch Bottles
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
$4.00 Busch Pitchers
This Week's Special Prize:
2 Tickets to see
The Bruins at Fleet Center
Shirts, Hats & Mike's Money

Looking to have a voice in the Campus Center/ Student Union Complex?
- Want to have a say in what occurs in the CC/SU Complex?
- Want to work closely with Administrators, Student Organizations, and Student Government?
- Have any bright ideas?
- We're looking for members. COME JOIN US!! Call or stop by our office.

Campus Center/Student Union Commission
817 Campus Center, 545-0198

Finally, you won't mind being carded.

Now, when you use your Visa® card you'll save big at these places.

VISA REWARDS
It's everywhere you want to be.®
© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995 Visa Rewards is a service mark of Visa International Service Association

AMERICAN EAGLE OUTFITTERS EST 1983
TAKE 15% OFF THE BASICS AT AMERICAN EAGLE OUTFITTERS
Enjoy the Perfect Clothes for the Perfect Day. Present this certificate to save 15% off any purchase at American Eagle Outfitters when you use your Visa card. With over 270 stores across the country, American Eagle Outfitters provides durable, top-quality clothing, and your satisfaction is guaranteed. Offer valid August 1, 1995, through January 31, 1996
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of American Eagle Outfitters, Inc. Offer valid for 15% off the basics from August 1, 1995, through January 31, 1996. Offer valid only when you pay with your Visa card. Certificate is valid for one use. One certificate per customer. Not valid with any other promotional offer. Redeem certificate at time of purchase at any participating American Eagle Outfitters retail location. Certificate is not redeemable for cash. Not valid toward any previously purchased merchandise, layaway, and or merchandise certificates. No reproductions allowed. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/100 cent. Note to employees: Authorization code No. 8

NFL PRO LINE AUTHENTIC
GET 15% OFF OFFICIAL NFL GEAR.
Use your Visa card–the Official Card of the NFL–and save 15% on any regularly priced purchase of NFL Pro Line or other NFL products from the Official NFL Catalog. Wear what the pros wear on the field, in practice, and on the sidelines–NFL Pro Line. Take your pick of jerseys, jackets, caps, t-shirts, and more from all 30 NFL teams. All our quality NFL merchandise is backed by a 60-day guarantee. Call 1-800-NFL-GIFT (1-800-635-4438) for your free catalog or to place an order. Please mention Source Code 001597. Offer valid September 1, 1995, through December 31, 1995
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of NFL Properties. Offer valid September 1, 1995, through December 31, 1995. Offer valid only when you pay with your Visa card. To request your free catalog or to redeem this certificate by phone, call 1-800-NFL-GIFT (1-800-635-4438) and mention Source Code 001597. Limit one certificate per household. Certificate is not redeemable for cash and is not valid with any other certificate or discount. No reproductions allowed. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/100 cent.

CHAMPS Sports
Get the real stuff first.
TAKE $10 OFF YOUR PURCHASE OF $35 OR MORE AT CHAMPS SPORTS
Save $10 on your purchase of $35 or more when you use your Visa card at Champs Sports. They have all the top-name sports stuff you want before you even know you want it. The latest clothes. The latest shoes. The latest equipment. So when you want to see what's next, come to Champs Sports first. For the store nearest you, call 1-800-TO-BE-1ST (1-800-862-3178). Offer valid August 1, 1995, through December 31, 1995
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of Champs Sports. Offer valid August 1, 1995, through December 31, 1995. Offer valid only when you pay with your Visa card. Present this certificate at any Champs Sports in the U.S. to receive $10 off a merchandise purchase of $35 or more. Non-sale merchandise only. Certificate must be presented at time of purchase and cannot be used in conjunction with any other certificate or discount offers. Not redeemable for cash. Limit one per customer. Certificate is not transferable. Void if copied and where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Manager key code 04. For the store nearest you, call 1-800-TO-BE-1ST (1-800-862-3178). Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/100 cent.

Pier 1 imports for a change
SAVE 15% ON YOUR NEXT PURCHASE AT PIER 1 IMPORTS
Take 15% off your total purchase of all regular-priced items when you use your Visa card at Pier 1. Your room or apartment could use a few changes. You could use a good deal. Pier 1 can supply both. Offer valid from January 1, 1996, through June 30, 1996
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of Pier 1 Imports. Offer valid from January 1, 1996, through June 30, 1996. Offer valid for a one-time purchase only. Offer valid on regular-priced merchandise only and excludes clearance and sale items, delivery, and other service charges. Certificate must be redeemed at time of purchase. Offer does not apply to prior purchases and cannot be used to purchase gift certificates. Good only for purchase of products indicated. Any other use constitutes fraud. Certificate is not valid in combination with any other certificate, coupon, or discount. Certificate is valid at all Pier 1 company stores and participating franchisee stores. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Offer valid only when you pay with your Visa card. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/100 cent.

BOSTON MARKET Home Style Meals
SAVE $2 ON ANY PURCHASE OF $5 OR MORE AT BOSTON MARKET
Use or show your Visa card and present this certificate at any Boston Market or Boston Chicken location to save $2 on any purchase of $5 or more. Come in soon and try the rotisserie-roasted chicken or turkey, double-glazed ham, or double-sauced meat loaf...and don't forget the freshly prepared sandwiches and side dishes. Offer valid September 1, 1995, through November 26, 1995
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of Boston Market. Offer valid September 1, 1995 through November 26, 1995. Offer valid only when you use or show your Visa card. Present this certificate with your Visa card at time of purchase at any participating Boston Market or Boston Chicken locations. Only one certificate per visit. Any other use constitutes fraud. Certificate is not redeemable for cash and is not valid with any other certificate or special offer. Certificate not redeemable for alcoholic beverages, tobacco, or dairy products. No cash refund. No reproductions allowed. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/20 cent.

CAMELOT MUSIC
GET $3 OFF ANY CAMELOT MUSIC
CD OR AUDIO CASSETTE PRICED AT $9.99 OR MORE
Use your Visa card to take $3 off of any CD or audio cassette priced $9.99 or more at Camelot Music. Limit two selections per certificate. Pick the music and save when you use your Visa card. Offer valid August 1, 1995 through January 31, 1996.
Terms and conditions: Certificate redemption is solely the responsibility of Camelot Music. Offer valid August 1, 1995, through January 31, 1996. Limit two selections per certificate. Not valid with any other offer or discount. May exclude sale-priced merchandise. Offer valid only when you pay with your Visa card. Redeem certificate at time of purchase at any participating Camelot Music retail location. No reproductions allowed. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. Applicable taxes must be paid by bearer. Only redeemable in the U.S. Cash value 1/100 cent.

New musical hits New York City

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

ZOMBIES FROM THE BEYOND
Oct. 29
New York City

NEW YORK —"They came, they conquered, they had their hair done!"

So trumpets Zombies From the Beyond, a campy outer-space musical in which coiffeurs are as important as the conquest of Earth. Well, almost as important.

The show, a genial spoof of those dreadful sci-fi flicks of the 1950s, sets itself an impossible task. How can you make fun of something that already is howlingly funny? What could top Zsa Zsa Gabor in Queen of Outer Space or the classic Invaders From Mars?

The musical, now on view at off-Broadway's Players Theater, is appealingly tacky. Cardboard seems to be the dominant production value in the show, which has book, music and lyrics by James Valcq.

Let's see if we can keep the plot straight. Zombina, a full-figured alien with a large voice, arrives in Milwaukee from outer space in search of a few good men. She needs to propagate her race, doomed by atomic explosions.

The creature, who actually looks more like Joan Blondell than Zsa Zsa Gabor, has a piercing soprano that literally drives men wild. And turns them into zombies.

Will handsome Trenton Corbett, earnest inventor, become one of her slaves? Or will sweet yet determined Mary Malone, daughter of the commanding officer at the Milwaukee Space Center, find a way to save him? Can there be any doubt?

Valcq has written an easy-listening score, circa 1955. It's innocuous prerock 'n' roll, more Patti Page and Perry Como than Bill Haley and the Comets.

The cast could not be more delightful or dead-on target. Particularly effective are Susan Gottschalk as the outer-space lady with the awesome set of pipes, Claire Morkin as the unnervingly competent Mary Malone and Matt McClanahan as Mary's square-jawed suitor.

Director and choreographer Pam Kriger has a tough time sustaining the silliness for a full two acts. Yet whenever things threaten to run out of steam, designer James Schuette, who did both sets and costumes, offers up blissful bits of foolishness. For example, he spins a toy space craft across the stage. Or he puts Zombina in a gaudy pink outfit that would do an extraterrestrial Barbie proud.

Zombies From the Beyond — where no musical has ventured before. Or more apt, is likely to go again.

Threat of vandalism prevents annual grave vigil

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be no graveside vigil for fans of Harry Houdini this Halloween, the date when some people every year expect the great illusionist and escape artist to try to communicate with the living.

Previous Halloween pilgrimages by the Society of American Magicians to Houdini's grave always had a side affect of attracting vandals to the site.

Last year, the management of Machpelah Cemetery barred the vigil. There was no vandalism, so the ban was continued for this year.

Houdini died on Halloween 1926, helping feed an idea that he would try to make contact from the grave on anniversaries of his death.

In a compromise arranged by the state, which took over the bankrupt cemetery in 1987, the magicians' homage will be held Nov. 16, the date corresponding to Houdini's death on this year's Jewish calendar. Houdini was Jewish.

James R. Culligan, a vice president of the magicians' society, has described the ritual as a solemn paying of respect.

The most serious vandalism occurred in 1993, when stone benches at the gravesite were smashed.

■ Jim Rose Circus

continued from page 6

laid out on a bed of swords while a cinder block was smashed on his stomach.

This tour gave Rose more opportunity to showcase his talents, due to the small size of the venues. Audience participation, said Rose, was a main focus of this club tour. Playing in a small venue, he added, gives him more opportunity to interact with the crowd.

For example, in one act, a volunteer held an apple in his mouth while his initials were carved into the apple with a chainsaw. He will always remember that apple and how he got it, Rose explained.

There are no words to describe the excellence and emotion of the show. The Jim Rose Sideshow is unlike anything ever seen before and is a must-see for anyone who hasn't seen it yet.

Lunatic play returns to Broadway

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Clownish lunacy reigns supreme with the return of Bill Irwin, David Shiner and the Red Clay Ramblers in Fool Moon, a giddy grab bag of old and new-style vaudeville.

Two years ago when Fool Moon first arrived on Broadway, this critic was churlish enough to quibble about a sense of aimlessness pervading the comic proceedings. Actually, on a second viewing, that's part of the show's considerable charm.

Irwin and company have concocted an eclectic entertainment that expertly contrasts the two clowns' markedly different personalities. If the silent twosome were Walt Disney cartoons, the wide-eyed Irwin would be Mickey Mouse, a gentle, sweet-tempered soul; the darker Shiner is Donald Duck, easily agitated and more aggressive. He's a bit of a bully if he doesn't get his way. Yet a heart of gold beats underneath all that bluster.

This revival, which opened Sunday at Broadway's Ambassador Theater, again alternates humor and song. The Red Clay Ramblers provide the music. They are a homespun combo, at ease with country, gospel and what sounds like 1920s pop tomfoolery. These boys are a delight, the sort of musicians who would fit easily on public radio's "Prairie Home Companion."

Yet it is the comics, dressed in baggy pants, oversized jackets and cone-shaped hats, who have to carry the evening.

Both Irwin and Shiner are expert physical comedians, who owe as much to Buster Keaton, Charlie Chaplin and Laurel and Hardy as they do to the clowns at Ringling Brothers.

If you didn't know better, you'd swear the loose-limbed Irwin was created out of Silly Putty. The man's body is an accordion, able to squeeze into the most bizarre shapes.

The rubbery Shiner is equally compressible. He is also more confrontational with the audience. Searching for an empty seat, he climbs over patrons like a belligerent mountain goat. He throws popcorn at them, squirts them with water, even steals a purse or two. And still they laugh.

Shiner also brings several theatergoers on stage for bits of extended horseplay. Near the end of the evening, he supervises the filming of a silent movie — with hapless audience members serving as the actors. It's amazing what he can get people to do on stage without making them look totally foolish.

So beware that good-humored participation is required for Fool Moon to cast its special comic glow. Yet considering the talents of Irwin, Shiner and the Red Clay Ramblers, it is downright impossible not to fall under this show's fanciful and very funny spell.

Quebec Prime Minister to resign

Parizeau refuses to apologize to non–French immigrants

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — Stung by defeat in the secession referendum, Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau said Tuesday he will resign as head of the bitterly divided province at year's end.

He also voiced regret at the way he had blamed the loss on non-French immigrants, but he stopped short of an outright apology for a diatribe that drew a firestorm of criticism.

Parizeau underscored his continuing support for the separatist cause that has been at the heart of his long political career. He said his separatist Parti Quebecois would choose new leadership capable of achieving independence for the mostly French-speaking province.

Parizeau, 65, was elected premier last year after promising to hold a referendum on secession. His side lost Monday, but only narrowly — 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent.

But at a time when the separatists could have been taking heart at their strong showing, Parizeau shocked even his allies with a incendiary speech at campaign headquarters, blaming the defeat on immigrants.

"It's true we have been defeated, but basically by what?" Parizeau said. "By money and the ethnic vote."

Parizeau's co-leader in the separatist camp, Lucien Bouchard, distanced himself from the ethnic remarks Tuesday, signaling that the premier's position had become untenable.

Parizeau said he used terms "that could have been much better chosen." But he reiterated his view that Quebec's French-speaking majority had, in effect, been thwarted by non-francophones.

"I was shocked," Prime Minister Jean Chretien said. "I hope that everybody will reject that. Every citizen under the law in Quebec is an equal citizen and you cannot divide a society on 'ours' and 'theirs.'"

About 90 percent of English-speaking and immigrant Quebeckers opposed secession, while French Quebeckers — who make up 82 percent of the population — voted for independence by a 60-40 margin.

Parizeau took responsibility for defeat.

"With my qualities and my faults, I contributed to bringing this great project to the result of Oct. 30," he said. "Others will now take it across the final line."

Earlier Tuesday, Bouchard — a possible replacement for Parizeau — scuffed at an offer from Chretien to negotiate a new status for Quebec.

"Never again will sovereigntists be begging for anything from the rest of Canada," Bouchard declared. He said Quebec would agree to negotiate with Canada only after winning an independence referendum.

Bouchard planned to meet with his party Wednesday to discuss his future.

Chretien, chastened by the razor-thin federalist victory Monday, said he would try to get other provincial premiers to support changes that would decentralize the government and recognize Quebec as a distinct society.

Bouchard described his reaction to Chretien's offer as "boredom" and "big yawns."

"Nobody's going to get us sovereigntists involved in another 30 years of sterile discussions," he said.

Bouchard reiterated the separatists' promise to mount another independence drive. Current Quebec law bars a new secession referendum until after new legislative elections, but separatists control the legislature and could change the law.

Though most of Canada welcomed Monday's outcome, Quebec was uneasy. Montreal police reported 40 arrests after supporters of the rival sides brawled, and a homemade bomb was found at the offices of the federalist Liberal Party. No one was seriously injured in the street fighting, police said.

There was little celebration in the federal capital, Ottawa, where Chretien met with his Cabinet to discuss the impact of Monday's referendum.

The federalists' narrow victory kept Canada intact but drove home the message that Quebeckers, and many other Canadians, want major changes in the federal system.

Quebec investors and executives weary

By Barbara Borst
Associated Press

TORONTO — The Quebec referendum vote that preserved Canada lifted stocks and the Canadian dollar Tuesday. But the federalist victory was so narrow, and long-term prospects so cloudy, that investors and executives remained wary.

The outcome was "a reprieve, not a pardon," said Desmond Morton, director of the McGill University Institute for the Study of Canada.

"The Canadian dollar may go up, but not as far as if the issue had been put in a box and buried," he said.

The Toronto Stock Exchange composite index shot up 130 points Tuesday and settled back to close up 79.40 points, or about 1.8 percent, at 4,459.16. The Canadian dollar ended into North American trading day at 74.35 U.S. cents, up 0.77 cents from Monday.

In response, the Bank of Canada lowered a key interest rate used to set consumer rates. Analysts predicted it will also slash up to 1.25 percentage points off the bank rate. Standard and Poor's and Dominion Bond Rating Service reaffirmed Quebec's bond ratings.

"In the short term, it's good," said Steven Polidoro, president of a Quebec-based bag manufacturing company. "Now we're worried about the long term."

The vote Monday gave those opposed to Quebec independence a narrow victory — 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent.

Maurice Marchon of the University of Montreal School of Advanced Business Studies said that, though the markets may be relieved by the separatists' defeat, the message remains clear: "Accept radical change in Canada, otherwise next time it will be 60 percent Yes."

He is pessimistic about political change because Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a federalist, and Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau, a separatist, are "not the right people to make it."

Without such evolution, Quebec and the rest of Canada will continue "on a collision course" that will continue to make the economic climate uncertain, Marchon said.

However, Marchon was optimistic about the economy. He predicted growth of 2.2 percent for this year and 2.7 percent for next. He believes interest rates will decline, though not as much as if the No vote had been more decisive.

The Toronto Star said the slim victory was "not the win the markets wanted." Despite "initial applause by world markets," the economic dividend could be quite small, the paper said.

Lloyd Atkinson, an economist at MTA Investment Counsel, told the Toronto Globe and Mail that the "this kind of victory, if you can call it that, just opens a Pandora's box."

He anticipates the federal government will have to pursue further deficit and debt reduction and says Quebec, also heavily indebted, will be forced to follow suit.

Analyst Mario Angastiniotis of MMS International expressed faith in a higher Canadian dollar and lower interest rates.

"The uncertainty may still be there but it's a different kind of uncertainty," he said. "You're not on the brink of breaking up the country."

Sherry Cooper, chief economist for investment dealer Nesbitt Burns, said the referendum's close result should motivate the federal government to make constitutional changes for Quebec and to "continue on the train of deficit reduction."

McGill's Morton said the federal government faces intense political pressure, even if it decentralizes power, as most of the provinces insist, and recognizes Quebec as a distinct society.

"What Canada would agree to do that Quebec would find acceptable is mysterious," Morton said. "We'd know better what to do with a Yes victory."

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Ads by Credit Cards
VISA MasterCard
Available Soon

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
Music From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

The University of Massachusetts
Campus Activities Office Presents:

Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday:
Comedienne Kathy Walker
followed by movie:
UNDER SEIGE 2
Bluewall Cafe
November 3, 1995, 8 pm
FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and theVice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

Mourning, Hornets can't settle contract

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Three days before they begin what they hope will be a season that elevates them to the NBA's elite, the Charlotte Hornets are considering trading Alonzo Mourning because of a contract dispute.

"We're trying to work out something where Alonzo will still be with the Hornets," said Bob Bass, the team's vice president of basketball operations.

Several broadcast and newspaper reports said Mourning, whose contract expires after this season, has been offered a seven-year, $70 million deal by the Hornets. He reportedly wants $91 million for seven seasons with an escape clause after four seasons. The Hornets, who open the season Friday against the Chicago Bulls, do not deny they are mulling a trade of one of the game's best players. They have called his demands unreasonable and are said to be talking with up to eight teams about a trade. Mourning is to earn $4.35 million this season, his fourth in the NBA. "All I can say is right now he's under contract to the Charlotte Hornets," Bass said, "and we're going to prepare to play the game Friday night with him as part of our team." Bass said the team was continuing to negotiate with Mourning's agent, David Falk. Messages left by The Associated Press at Falk's office were not returned.

On Tuesday, the 6-foot-10 center avoided reporters, who staged a 3 1/2-hour vigil outside the Hornets' practice complex. Team employees used elaborate car-switches with Mourning's sport utility vehicle to aid his getaway.

Mourning's teammates are not happy about the prospects of trying to improve on last year's club-record 50 victories without their top scorer, rebounder and shot blocker. He has averaged at least 21 points a game each season since joining the Hornets as the second pick in the 1992 draft.

"You don't get a quality center like Alonzo very often," said 42-year-old Robert Parish, one of Mourning's backups, said outside the practice complex. "You just don't replace Alonzo Mourning."

"We'd really hate to see him go," forward Scott Burrell said, shaking his head. "If they're going to trade him, I hope they get some great players for him."

Charlotte, already saddled with Larry Johnson's $84 million contract, has been talking with teams for several weeks about trading Mourning.

One possibility has Mourning going to the Los Angeles Lakers for 7-1 center Vlade Divac, another player and a first-round draft pick. Also said to be under serious consideration is a deal with Boston 7-0 center Eric Montross, another player and two first-round draft picks, or sending Mourning to Portland for point guard Rod Strickland and possibly forward Cliff Robinson.

Talk of a deal dominated the airwaves and sports pages Tuesday in Charlotte, where fans want more from a 7-year-old franchise that has yet to advance past the second round of the playoffs.

Bass was noncommittal when asked how optimistic the team was about retaining Mourning.

"We're trying to get things worked out," said Bass, who spoke at the team's practice facility in neighboring Fort Mill, S.C. Reporters were allowed into the main gym to meet with Bass only after the players and coach Allan Bristow had already left for the locker room, which was closed to the media.

■ Sharks

continued from page 14

Blaine Lacher, but yesterday he got the call against the Canadiens, making it the first time he made consecutive starts in Black and Gold.

Of course the Bruins are happy Billington is playing well, but he's only getting the chance because Lacher has been downright awful. Sadly, Lacher has vented his frustrations on new coach Steve Kasper, who has been quicker to give Lacher the hook than his predecessor, Brian Sutter. Lacher had better button his lips, face a few extra shots in practice and affix blame only where it belongs: on himself. Another of Vautour's insightful analyses regarded the possibility Lacher might only be another flash in the pan that is Boston's crease, as were Mike Moffatt and Jim Craig.

• The Calgary Flames have been all but extinguished through the season's first three weeks, and it's hard to figure the reason. Usually they walk all over the patsy-filled Pacific before stumbling in the playoffs' opening round, which they have done each time they've reached the post- season since winning it all in 1989.

The holdout of center Joe Nieuwendyk and prolonged injury to left wing Gary Roberts still should not put a dent in Calgary's outlook deeper than the dip in the Saddledome, but they have. In 10 games without a win (0–7–3), Pierre Page's charges have scored 22 goals, or 2.2 a game, an NHL low. Heck, the defense could have done better in days gone by. Page, who is clearly better suited to the front office than behind the bench, might consider bumping himself upstairs and hiring Sutter as his replacement.

Then again, Sutter is a lousy playoff coach, where the Flames have suffered their most sour shortcomings, but they need help right now and Sutter could provide it.

• With each passing game, Hartford's Andrei Nikolishin does all he can in 60 minutes to dispel the notion that Russians don't play physical hockey.

• In the Some Things Will Never Change Dept.: Wayne Gretzky leads the league in assists with 13.

• What would this column be without a shot at my colleague? He said Flyers' Legion of Doom right wing John LeClair was due for a down year following his sensational 1994–95 campaign. LeClair had 8–11–19 totals and was plus– 10 through as many games. It's gotts be the linemates, right?

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

■ College Hockey

continued from page 14

In the end, Michigan Tech received a total of five minors and Minnesota–Duluth received nine. Things seemed to be back to normal after sorting out the lopsided penalties, until the officials let the teams skate four–on–four.

To top that miscue, Jason Haakstad and Jimmy Roy were allowed to remain on the ice despite each receiving double minors in the scurmish. For the next four minutes the possibility existed that, for the first time in the history of hockey, someone might score a goal while allegedly being in the penalty box.

Realizing that they completely and utterly failed in their assessment of penalties, the refs corrected themselves after the game, which ended as a 6–5 overtime win for Duluth.

The officials added four Tech penalties at 13:56 of the third period after the game had ended, to make it appear that they were justified in permitting the four–on–four situation. In reality Tech should have had an extended power play.

All this led the Duluth New Tribune's Chris Miller to quip "Richard Nixon is dead. So if this is a cover–up, don't blame him," in regards to ref's efforts to mask the miscues by adding penalties well after the game had ended.

No chairs were thrown by Mancini and there was no repeat of when Los Angeles Kings coach Tom Webster throwing a stick at, and hitting, NHL referee Kerry Fraser. Instead, Mancini handled his frustration in a civil manner.

"The only answer I'll give you," he said while awaiting an explanation outside the official's room after the game. "Is I'll wait for the investigation.

• Much has been said both pro and con on the issue of Hockey East's revolutionary scoring system, which awards five points for a victory and uses shootouts to settle a tie.

One argument in favor of the shootout is the enjoyment of the fan, as Hockey East has to compete for the entertainment dollar just as much as any other enterprise.

Saturday night Merrimack and Northeastern completed regulation and overtime tied at one and went to a shootout.

No Hockey East shootout has ever been more gripping, as college hockey fans throughout New England were captivated, watching the game which was NESN's Game of the Week. It took thirteen penalty shots for the eternal shootout to mercifully end. It was the Huskies Justin Kearns who beat Martin Leagult, and sent the Warriors fans home deflated.

Just 842 were on hand in the Volpe Complex to witness the enthralling events. If Merrimack draws over 1,000 for Saturday's game with UMass there will be some truth to the arguments that the shootouts raise interest. The excitement generated by the never–ending shootout, if the logic follows, should be sufficient to push attendance up by at least 158.

If not, then chalk up another argument to the league's conservative bastion who would rather return to the standard scoring methods.

• Despite opening at 4–1, with four of the games coming against top national competition, Maine coach Shawn Walsh is alarmed by his team's play.

After permitting 14 goals in their first three games (against NCAA caliber teams in Miami of Ohio, Michigan State and Michigan), Walsh started Blair Marsh instead of All–American goalie Blair Allison for Saturday's game at Union. Allison had started 47 in a row for the Black Bears.

Marsh responded by holding Union to just one goal, before yielding to Allison on Sunday against Colgate.

After running around the defensive zone like chickens with their heads cut off against Michigan, Maine's defense stepped forward this weekend. It wasn't so much Allison's abilities that led Maine last year, but Chris Imes and the rest of Maine's exceptional defense. The wake–up call was heard by freshmen Brett Clark and David Cullen who with strong forwards, will have the Black Bears on the prowl.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ Rothenberger

continued from page 14

revolved around field hockey. I just loved it. I just couldn't wait to get there every day. That was my life.

"The safest place in the world for me, and the place I was most complete as a person, was on the field."

• • •

Scoring big goals neither began nor ended with the UNC upset. Rothenberger started the trend when she was only a freshman.

When the Minutewomen upset national power Old Dominion during the 1995 season, it was Rothenberger that netted the game's only goal.

"Scoring against Old Dominion was a highlight," she said. "That was incredible."

The game proved to be the announcement of Rothenberger's arrival. Big things were expected of the Gilbertsville, Pa. native who had the unenviable task of replacing Atlantic 10 Player of Year Ainslee Press, who had led Massachusetts to the Final Four in 1992.

Press, now an assistant coach at UMass, helped Rothenberger make the transition to the collegiate game.

"[Ainslee] had such an outstanding year here and I had big shoes to fill when I came in as a freshman. She was always there to help me out," Rothenberger said. "I could always go to her with questions. Ainslee has helped me a lot with my skill and with my vision, finding open players."

Rothenberger had played well early that season, earning the starting job at center midfield during the preseason, but knocking off a national power brought her considerable attention.

She finished her first season with nine goals and two assists en route to Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year honors.

Rothenberger's offensive numbers were down during her sophomore season, but her presence as one of the team's most talented players continued to grow, as did her leadership.

The 1995 season, with the graduation of four seniors from a year ago and the departure of goaltender Hilary Rose to the British National Team, necessitated her leadership to take an even bigger step forward.

"I try to be a leader as best as I can, and I hope my teammates feel that I'm being a good leader," Rothenberger said. "I've learned to keep my composure a little more and not get frustrated in tight situations."

According to Donnelly, Rothenberger is emerging as a capable leader.

"This year I think she has learned to lead instead of just cheerlead," Donnelly said. "She is becoming a leader instead of just a vocal cheerleader. That's a difficult transition."

• • •

A year from now, Rothenberger will be wrapping up her collegiate career, and will take her place as one of the best players to wear the maroon and white. But she hopes that her field hockey career won't end there, as her life long dream is to replace her UMass jersey with a red, white and blue one for the 2000 Olympics.

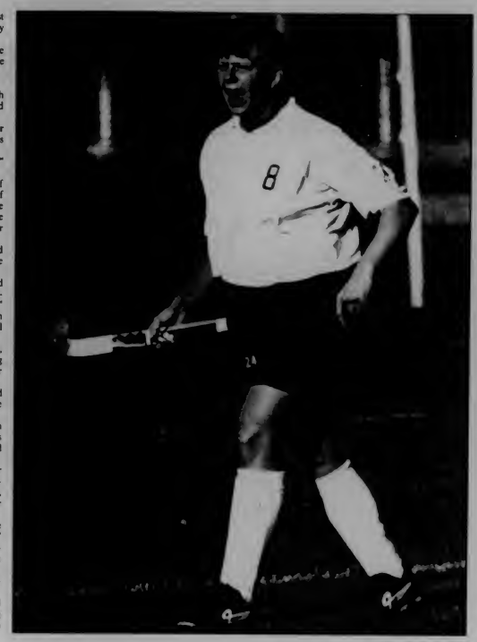
While many athletes have held Olympian pipe dreams, the goal is a very tangible one for Rothenberger. After playing on the US National Under–18 and Under–21 squads, she was selected as an alternate for the National Team.

When Les Lyness, a member of the squad was unable to play in January, Rothenberger joined the team in San Diego. While she didn't make it into any of the teams exhibition games, working out and practicing with the National squad proved to be valuable for her.

"I think that experience made all the difference in the world," Rothenberger said. "Those players are just incredible. I couldn't believe the jump in the level between the collegiate and the national team.

"It's been a goal for as long as I can remember to go to the Olympics. I realized that it was a realistic goal for me when I made the under–21 team and did become an alternate on the national team. It's going to be a long road. But I hope that I can handle it."

Experience wasn't all that Rothenberger gained from the stint. Lyness, realizing that a rookie might have trouble in the more difficult environment, would call with encouragement for Rothenberger. The two became close and Lyness became a mentor for Rothenberger.



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Kyle Rothenberger barks instructions to her teammates during a match.

"Les is the kind of player I want to be," Rothenberger said. "She goes for every ball like that's the one that's going to become the winning goal. She's definitely someone I idolize."

National Team coach Pam Hixon, who has coached Rothenberger as a freshman at UMass, said that while Rothenberger looked lost at times during her stint with the squad, she has what it takes to be an elite athlete.

"Basically when the younger players join the squad, very few of them look like they belong. It's like a colt that's just being born," Hixon said. "The pace of the game and the intensity of the practices and the skill of the players are so very different than what they're used to.

"What Kyle benefitted from was figuring out where she needed to go to play at that level. I think she's strong, she's smart. Her skills are very good. She has good game sense. If her heart is in it with the real desire that is necessary to be an elite athlete, she can make it."

Rothenberger has pledged to put in the work because of what the experience of playing for her country would mean to her.

"It would mean the world to me. When I put the uniform on for the under–21 team, as soon as I slipped that shirt on it was just like, 'Wow. I'm representing the United States. It's such an honor,'" she said. "Just putting the shirt on makes you realize what you're representing."

• • •

With such a lofty goal so close to her reach, it would be easy for Rothenberger to discount the meaning of her collegiate career. Instead Rothenberger holds a humble reverence for the Massachusetts tradition.

"It gives me chills sometimes," she said. "I still feel honored putting on my UMass jersey representing the tradition that's here."

Her devotion to the program is obvious to Donnelly.

"I understand the way she feels about this school," said her coach for two years. "She has so much pride. I talk a lot about what it means to wear the UMass uniform. I think she feels it very strongly. In practice and in games. It really matters to her what she does and if this program is successful. She can't sleep when we don't do well.

"She cares so much that she puts all of herself into it. You can't help but have respect for that."

Rothenberger has given a lot of herself to field hockey, but not as much as she feels it has given back.

"Field hockey is something I can generate all my energy into. It brings out so many aspects of me. It represents so much," she says, pausing. "I give so much time to it every day and I have for a lot of years now. I've never regretted a second of the time that I've put into it.

"It's been such a big part of my life and it's meant so much to me. It's got me through tough times when I just needed a release. I can always count on hockey to relax.

"Field hockey is my life right now and I wouldn't want it any other way."

Get Real!
You hide, you seek, you BLAST! LASER STORM
The Ultimate Laser Tag Game!
It's not virtual, it's REAL... It's the most exciting, interactive laser tag game in the Galaxy!
LASER STORM... where YOU are the action!
GET TWO GAMES FOR THE PRICE OF ONE... with this ad
Not valid Fri. or Sat. or with any other offer. One discount per customer. Expires 11/30/95
Hampshire Mall • Hadley, MA • 586-8345
Blasting Daily... Call for times

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Sports Notice
The first ticket pickup for students will be tomorrow Nov. 2, beginning at 7 a.m. and ending at 3 p.m. Hockey tickets for the Nov 3. Merrimack and Nov. 10 Lowell games, as well as for the men's basketball game Nov. 7 vs. Moscow will be handed out at this time. You must bring your UMass student ID and your activity card to receive tickets.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD
ON THURSDAYS!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800 263-6495 ext F5001.

Obnoxious Audio is here! If you rent car audio or alarms call us! We have the lowest prices anywhere carrying high end 10s and brands. 549-0880

Thank you! To the saint who returned my wallet, my faith in humanity is renewed. What comes around goes around.

U MASS HOCKEY!!!
The first U Mass Hockey game the Fri day night @ the Mullins Center vs Merrimack! Students, pick up your free tickets today @ the Hicks cage. Check it out - Hockey East Action!!!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Toyota Starlet Good Condition $800 256-8821

EMPLOYMENT

Attention Dacambar Graduates! Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national collega promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Fax resume to 617-738-4713 Attn: 1-on or Call 1-800-783-4237 ex 334.

Cal Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 15. $100 Call Anne 545-3673, 256-5099

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-209-8142 (PIN 3172)

Looking for experienced wait-staff and hostess. Apply within. Kai Chi Restaurant 586-1774.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal. full time employment available at national parks, forests & wildlife preserves. Benifits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N4001.7

Seeking: Motivated students for foreman job opportunities during the summer. For further info contact Avi Khanna at 6-5577.

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800 648-4849.

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011.

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. For info call 202 393-7723

FOR SALE

Car radio Denon 5750, detach face, tape, tuner, cd control. Still in box, was $750, asking $250. Jay 256-8834

Diamond back cureca for sale $275 bo. 1 pr wmns roller blades $30 Call Paul 546-6741

Used Stereo Equipment Large selection, priced to sell. Complete rack systems and seperate components. Speakers 8" to 8" full. Receivers/amps, 20 to 200 watts. Guitar amps, much more. Call days/evenings. 256-0941

FOUND

Found new U Mass pin/patch in grad tower. Call with room number where lost and further description to claim 546-3526

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 865-8831

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-6887

LOST

I have lost a small black organizer with hole craft written on the front. If anyone finds it please call Tammy at 548-2088.

MUSICIANS

Ivory tickers original/cover band seeks talented, ejotless keyboardist. Blues, R&B, funk, etc. Call Jay 256-8834 or Greg 256-8506.

PERSONALS

Kitten It's been 3 wonderful years together. I'm looking forward to manym many more!!! W/ great love, Geoff

To my little pumpkins at "chess." I love you! and keep up the good work! Laren

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 548-7942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513

SERVICES

Economical manicures! acrylics, nail art. Robert 546-1794

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Sublet Spring. Furnished 2 bed apt. On bus rt. Call 253-7887

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $745 r/t California $175 r/t Europe from $299 r/t Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587-0001 Air Tech New England.

Hey why travel when you can chill spring break by Student Travel Services. Lowest rates, reliable, exclusive benefits. Call Aaron 548-8834

Spring break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht. One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-783-4001. See us on the net: http://www.nwu.edu/~ssa

TRAVEL FREE
Travel Free For Spring Break. Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas! Form a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$$. Food and drinks included. 1-800-218-8604

Winter Break Special. Killington week $299! Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

HEARING LOSS

Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 582-8951.

Wanted Part Time night servers. Apply at Abdows. No K-ng St. Northampton MA.

Wanted!!! Individuals, student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS. Call inter-campus programs 1 800 327 6013 http://www.1cpt.com

Nothing like a fall day for a good old fashioned family barbeque. The ribs are on the grill, mice and tender, just like we the "real Boss old sir. Earth, he should never have come down to the meat freezer with me. Still... these will be some great ribs.
DAILY COLLEGIAN
You are our friendly neighbor!

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES(March 21–April 19): You receive new recognition for your untiring efforts. A raise or bonus is in the offering. Your emotional and financial security is linked to someone else's. Cooperate with each other.
TAURUS(April 20–May 20): New business trends change the way you work. Your dealings with women or the general public could lead to travel. Spend more time at self-improvement activities. Romance has you on cloud nine.
GEMINI(May 21–June 20): Secrets emerge. Do not pull the wool over someone's eyes. An unexpected financial opportunity comes your way. Problems could arise with a coworker.
CANCER(June 21–July 22): Despite some doubts, your friends and professional advisors are steering you in the right direction. Complete unfinished projects before starting new ones.
LEO(July 23–Aug. 22): The next three days feature lots of paperwork, phone calls and meetings. Give your routine check up. Unusual people and methods deserve a fair hearing. Be a good listener. Ask well phrased questions.
VIRGO(Aug. 23– Sept. 22): New clients and interesting financial developments energize you. A friend presents an intriguing concept, beneficial to you both. An excellent week to share your ideas with people in positions of power.
LIBRA(Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Curb an urge to buy things on impulse. A regular shopping routine could resist temptation. Others look to you in a time of crisis. Keep your cool. A calm, deliberate approach will restore everyone's confidence.
SCORPIO(Oct. 23–Nov. 21): You now take another step up the career ladder. People connected to an organization you recently joined welcome you warmly. Work harder to sustain an old relationship, but don't forget your old pals.
SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22–Dec. 21): You are in agood position to act on a business or career plan. Pour onthe charm if hoping to make new allies. Giving others the benefit of the doubt wins their loyalty.
CAPRICORN(Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Doing a little or alot, you can mold this day to your liking. A writing assignment offers the perfect outlet for self expression.
AQUARIUS(Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Constructive activities and good conversation will revive someone's spirits. Use a computer or travel to find fun. Good news will bring relatives closer together. Do not ignore a health question. Make a doctor's appointment.
PISCES(Feb. 19–March 20): Curb an urge to buy things on impulse. A regular shopping routine could resist temptation. Others look to you in a time of crisis. Keep your cool. A calm, deliberate approach will restore everyone's confidence.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ ON THURSDAYS!

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

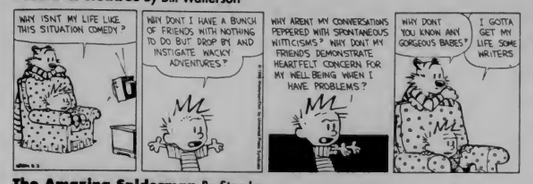
Calling all film junkies:

If you're interested in writing about what you love (film) and you want the best newswriting experience in the Pioneer Valley, come down to the Collegian this week and talk to Laura Stock, film editor.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

LOOK! GEESE FLYING SOUTH FOR THE WINTER.
TWICE A YEAR THEY MIGRATE THOUSANDS OF MILES ACROSS THE CONTINENT IN AN EXHAUSTING, ETERNAL STRUGGLE TO FULFILL INSTINCTS UNYIELDING DEMANDS.
I'LL BET THAT GETS OLD REAL FAST.
YOU DON'T SEE ME KEEPING A SUMMER HOME.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



WHY ISN'T MY LIFE LIKE THIS SITUATION COMEDY?
WHY DON'T I HAVE A BUNCH OF FRIENDS WITH NOTHING TO DO BUT DROP IN AND INSTIGATE WACKY ADVENTURES?
WHY ARENT MY CONVERSATIONS PEPPERED WITH SPONTANEOUS WITTICISMS? WHY DON'T MY FRIENDS DEMONSTRATE HEARTFELT CONCERN FOR MY WELL BEING WHEN I HAVE PROBLEMS?
WHY DONT YOU KNOW ANY GORGEOUS BABES?
I GOTTA GET MY LIFE SOME WRITERS

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I MIGHT AS WELL LEARN WHO'S DOWN THERE -- AND WHY!
YOU CALLED?
MY SISTER, SANDRA STEWART, NEEDS YOU!
SHE'S BEEN KIDNAPPED! HER LIFE IS IN DANGER!
STAY/LARRY TO LEE/STEVE '97

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

DO YOU BELIEVE IN UFO'S?
NOPE.
YOU MEAN YOU DON'T BELIEVE IN OTHER LIFE FORMS?
I ONLY BELIEVE IN HUMAN BEINGS
WOW! WHAT A SHALLOW LIFE YOU LEAD.
WHAT A GULLIBLE LIFE YOU LEAD.
I'D SURE HATE TO DIE WITHOUT EVER BELIEVING IN UFO'S.
I'D HATE TO BELIEVE IN UFO'S AND DIE ANYWAY

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY PRINCESS, I'M A DRAGON. HOW 'BOUT IF I DRAG YOU OFF TO MY LAIR AND TIE YOU UP TILL THE "KNIGHT" IS DONE?
I DON'T KNOW LEMME... DO YOU KNOW HOW TO SET A SPLINT, BANDAGE FLESH WOUNDS? WELL, I'M NOT AN ACTUAL DOCTOR BUT PLATONE ONE'S AH, A PRINCESS WITH SPUNK. OH WELL. WE'LL JUST HAVE TO LET HIM BLEED.
HEY BRUNO, YOU NEED A HAND HERE? THIS LIZARD BOTHERING YOU?
HAPPY HALLOW

GeoFrey By Embryo

Plot By Mark Fagnon

Uh-oh, The Phone!
Well, it's a good thing I have an answering machine.
Click!!
Hi, it's Sandy. I'm not in right now. Leave a message and I'll get back to you sometime.
OH, TOO BAD! I had you been home to answer this call, you would've been the winner of our so million dollar random sweepstakes! Sorry!
NO. WAIT!
Click!!
hmm. this certainly isn't as good as I thought it would be.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When my friend Beeber was 10 yrs. old she claimed she could hear a radio station playing music in her head.

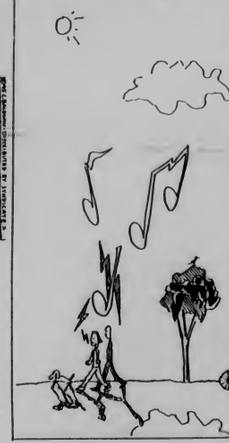
If she turned on the real radio she would hear the very same song. For years she would hear it.

Alot of people didn't believe her.

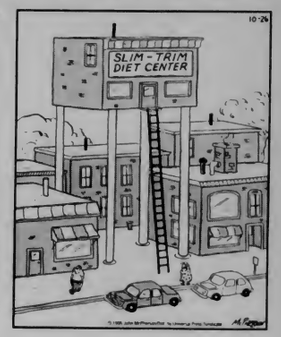
Then, when she was 15, a tv repairman told her that her teeth braces could act like a crystal radio and actually pick up radio signal waves.

I think it's amazing.

To this day,.....
.....even though her braces are off, she told us at lunch yesterday....she can hear Jimi Hendrix's "Purple Haze" when she sticks out her lower jaw.



Close to Home By John McPherson



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Jim Ganley
Production ..... Dave Voldan
Brian Inocencio

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Rib Sandwich
Ravioli Alfredo
BASICS LUNCH
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Nachos, Dips & Tacos
Chicken Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Nachos, Veggy Taco
Tofu & Chicken Fajita

Thursday

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Mac & Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Golden Burgers
Mac & Cheese

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Beef Stroganoff
BASICS DINNER
Mexican Veggy Stew
Roast Turkey

Friday

LUNCH
Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Vegan Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce

DINNER
Chicken Tenders/Sauces
Szechuan Beef & Broc
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Tenders/Sauces
Szechuan Tofu

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Rejected Sports Team Names

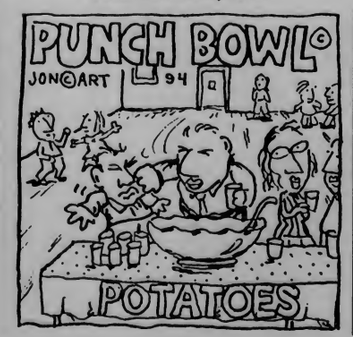
10. The Boston Red Sux.
9. The New York Dwarfs.
8. The UMass Minute–Hermaphrodites.
7. The New England Turn–Coats.
6. The Miami Talking Dolphins.
5. The UConn Afraid–to–Play–UMass–ies.
4. The St. Louis Pigeons.
3. The New York Dwarfs.
2. The Buffalo Made–It–to–the–Super–Bowl–Four–Times– but–Never–Won–Bills
1. The Chicago Ditka's.

Interested in writing for

ARTS & LIVING

Come down to the Collegian and talk to Tara Connelly. Call 545–1361 for more information.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

Quote of the Day

"Oh no! I almost ran over Donta Bright."

–WMUA G.M.
Brad Davidson

Sports

Rothenberger measures up with all-time Minutewomen greats

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

After playing No. 1 North Carolina to a scoreless tie after regulation, Massachusetts field hockey coach Megan Donnelly gives her team a pep talk to prepare her players for overtime. They listen intently, heads down in concentration.

"Someone," she says. "Someone has to step up. Right now."

From the circle of listeners, one head pops up. Sophomore midfielder Kyle Rothenberger locks eyes with Donnelly and nods.

Just over six minutes later, the Minutewomen are cheering, and it is Rothenberger at the bottom of the celebratory pigpile.

She did step up, firing a shot past UNC goalkeeper Jana Withrow to give UMass the upset.

"When coach says that someone has to step up, I think it's me," Rothenberger, now a junior, said after the game. "I want the ball in overtime. I want to be the one to take the shot.

"When things are tough, I want the ball. I want to be the one to get it done for the team. I thrive on pressure. It's such a great feeling. So far I've shown it. I hope it keeps going that was for me."

That kind of attitude is one that every coach likes in a player, but for Donnelly, Rothenberger's approach to the game reminds her of a former UMass player ... herself.

"She reminds me a lot of myself," Donnelly said. "I understand the way she feels on the field. I understand when she's frustrated with herself and the way she likes to play. Perhaps the best compliment that I can pay her is that I wish I had played with her."

The similarities between the coach and her player run far deeper than on-field talent. The intensity, the approach, superstitions and most importantly the devotion to field hockey, especially UMass field hockey, almost mirror each other.

Donnelly, who captured the Broderick Award, an award given to the senior who had the best four-year career, said that there is one difference between the two players.

"She's better than I was," said the four-time All-American matter-of-factly. "I have no problem saying that. She's a better player and is better for the team than I was. It's fun coaching her."

Rothenberger is flattered by Donnelly's comparisons.

"Megan was an outstanding player, very intense. She had four phenomenal years here and then was an Olympian. If I can be compared to someone like that, there couldn't be anything better," she said.

"Her love of the game is just so phenomenal. She's just put so much of her life and hard work into field hockey. I don't know if I can compare myself to someone like that. Hopefully someday I'll be able to look back and say I did that, but I don't think it's hit home yet."

While Rothenberger scoffs at the validity of the comparisons between her and her coach, the amount that each one cares about the game and her team is nearly identical. They think about it constantly.

"I think about it a lot. It gets me in trouble sometimes," she said laughing. "I'll be studying and then my mind will drift off to field hockey. Especially if we're not doing well. When we were losing those games. I'd sit in my room and think, 'What are we doing wrong? What can we do to get better?'

"I'll wake up in the middle of the night and think of a play and think 'Oh my gosh this would work so well.'"

Rothenberger's obsession with the game comes nine years after her coach's.

"I would be in class. I used to just sit and write that day's opponent over and over. Academics were important, but my true love was field hockey," Donnelly said. "Everything

Turn to ROTHENBERGER, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Kyle Rothenberger has become one of the top players in America and hopes to someday play on the national level.

Sharks try to sharpen teeth; Avalanche picking up steam

Ted Kottler on the NHL

Before they became permanently stuck to the bottom of the tank, the San Jose Sharks rose to the surface.

Winless in their first nine contests (0-6-3), the NHL's original teal franchise dealt an aging playmaker (Igor Larionov, 35) and a dissatisfied defenseman (Sandis Ozolinsh) who plays more like a forward for two rough- and-tumble, proven goal scorers, Owen Nolan and Ray Sheppard.

(This week's sign the apocalypse is upon us: now that the Vancouver Grizzlies are active, there is at least one franchise in each major North American professional sports league which has teal for its primary color.)

In its four-year NHL tenure, San Jose has surpassed most pundits' expectations making a pair of stunning playoff runs, wiping out top-seed Detroit in 1994 and No. 2 seed Calgary in 1995. Larionov and Ozolinsh were component comrades in all the Sharks' significant exploits, so it's doubtful SanJose sought to shed its reputation as a West Coast Russian outpost.

Nolan and Sheppard should lend much-needed toughness to a lineup lacking physical presence. After all, this is a team whose chief offensive weapon is Craig Janney, the Human Kleenex. And while Larionov and Ozolinsh could be counted on for points, they're more prone to scoring slumps and defensive lapses. Nolan, a veteran at 23 and the league's only Irish-born skater, and Sheppard, slow but blessed with an uncannily hard and precise shot, are sure to turn around San Jose's minus-14 goal differential.

But the real benefactor of the deal may be Colorado, which could afford to dump Nolan because of its startling depth at forward. One of the wiser remarks uttered by colleague, Matt Vautour last season, was Quebec's need for an offensive defenseman. Quebec went West and got its man in Ozolinsh. The Avalanche now appear to be on a collision course with Philadelphia in the Stanley Cup Finals.

Generally, when a talented performer lands on a new roster, all others who play his position fall down the depth chart. But John Slaney, a defenseman acquired in the offseason by Colorado with much potential for point production, will accept fewer minutes if Ozolinsh can teach him how to make the most of his time.

• If you're the NHL's leading goal scorer, you're either Winnipeg's Igor Korolev or Montreal's Brian Savage (10). That makes them the diamonds of this space's first installment of Rotisserie Gems. Others include the Kings' Yanic Perrault (six goals and eight assists), Ottawa's Dan Quinn (4-8-12 points) and Buffalo's Jason Dawe (5-6-11 as Sabres' scoring leader).

• Those recently seen only on milk cartons are St. Louis' Geoff Courtnall (one assist and minus-four in 11 games), Montreal's Vladimir Malakhov (yours from my fantasy roster for a bag of broken sticks and a pop-up toaster) and Toronto's Dave Ellett (one assist and minus-five in nine games).

• The last time Boston's Craig Billington was a No. 1 netminder, he was wearing the old green-and-red variety of New Jersey Devils' sweaters, before anyone outside La Belle Province ever heard of Martin Brodeur. Last year he came to Causeway Street content to back up

Turn to SHARKS, page 11

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Boston Bruins goalie Craig Billington (1) has replaced last year's starter Blaine Lacher, who has failed to impress new coach Steve Kasper.

Deion Sanders returns to gridiron

Justin Smith on the NFL

The much anticipated return of Deion Sanders happened where his NFL career began for him, Atlanta, except it was in a different uniform.

After surgery on his ankle to repair an injury that occurred during his 1995 baseball stint, he returned to football with his new team, the Dallas Cowboys. The last time Sanders faced his old Falcons squad was when he was with the San Francisco 49ers and had that memorable brawl with Andre "Bad Moon" Rison. On that day, "Prime Time" was something to see on Sunday.

He may not have had an interception but did make several key defensive plays and altered the patented Atlanta "Red Gun" attack. Sanders also made his first reception as a Cowboy and nearly made a beautiful diving grab of a Troy Aikman bomb. He also returned kicks for the special teams. The ex-Seminole may be getting overpaid with his $35 million dollar contract, but you can't argue that he doesn't try to earn his keep.

The return of the oft-publicized and never at a loss words Sanders, may be an even more important factor in the success of the Cowboys. The suspected drug abuse problems of defensive end Leon Lett and now back up cornerback Clayton Holmes could put a dent in the Big D of Dallas.

The league office informed the Cowboys that the two members of their defensive unit tested positive for substance abuse and suspensions will be pending. If the leaders of the NFC East do lose Lett and Holmes for this Monday night's match up with second place Philadelphia, the game may be as exciting as the Cowboy-Eagle clashes of the early '80s.

The Eagles front four has caused havoc on the opposition's offensive line the passed three weeks, making opposing quarterback run for their lives. Defensive end Mike Mamula has shown that he was more than ready to leave college for the NFL as a junior. Right now he is a lock for league defensive Rookie of the Year. The former Boston College Eagle has learned not to be so anxious coming off the ball, drastically reducing the amount of offside penalties he receives, while still getting in the offensive backfield.

If Mamula and the rest of his defensive mates keep up their performance that has been the reason for Philadelphia's current three-game winning streak and the best running attack in the NFL can keep the ball out of Troy Aikman's hands, they can knock of the Cowboys and put can themselves in a position to win the division.

• Imagine someone telling you that the week ten match up of the reigning Super Bowl Champion 49ers and the expansion Carolina Panthers would have major playoff implications. With the Niners, Falcons and St. Louis Rams all losing Sunday, those three teams are tied for first in the NFC West with 5-3 records.

The Panthers are riding a three game winning streak, setting an NFL record for consecutive wins by an expansion club and with a victory over San Francisco would trail the Niners by only one game.

Just the thought of the first-year franchise being heard in the same breath with the best team of the last decade would make people choke on their Rice-a-Roni, but entering this weekend it is a complete possibility that this will be a competitive contest.

With the uncertainty of whether Steve Young will return this week or next, he will not practice with the team until at least Thursday, along with the loss of second year running back William Floyd for the year with a dislocated knee resulting in cartilage damage, makes this a game.

The Niners received good news in the fact that tight end Brent Jones injury is not as serious as first thought, but he could still be out for up to a month. That puts a tremendous burden on Elvis Grbac who has made two professional starts to get the ball to his dangerous wide receivers, John Taylor and Jerry Rice.

Rice eclipsed James Lofton's record of total receiving yards in the 11-7 loss to the New Orleans Saints on Sunday. The only record left that the Mississippi Valley State grad does not have on his resume is all-time catches which is held by Art Monk. With less than 80 receptions to go before surpassing the former Washington Redskin, Rice has left no doubt that he is the greatest wideout ever to step on the gridiron.

• So much for a change of signal callers for the Seahawks. Coach Dennis Erickson decided to go with veteran backup John Freisz this past weekend against the Arizona Cardinals. In the second quarter though, Freisz separated his shoulder handing off to running back Chris Warren. Rick Mirer returned to the huddle as Seattle fell to 2-6 on the season, losing 20-14 in overtime on an interception return for a touchdown.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Referees attempt a Duluth cover-up; Maine improving

Shoddy officiating has made more than one coach legendary for their tirades. Every coach at one point or another has wanted to rip a referee's head off.

Pittsburgh Steelers head coach Bill Cowher will long be remembered for stuffing a polaroid of a blown call into an official's pocket last month. Billy Martin's patented dirt-kicking tirades are legendary.

Leigh Torbin College Hockey

Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight is renowned for his chair-tossing exhibition which was recently impersonated by charismatic UMass water polo coach Russ Yarworth.

Given this, just how Michigan Tech coach Bob Mancini and Minnesota-Duluth coach Mike Sertich kept their composure, while facing a tremendously botched officiating job on Friday night is incredible.

In the eyes of coaches, players and fans from both sides, this was the worst officiating in their collective memory.

The two teams engaged in a spirited game, made nasty after Tech winger Kyle Peterson ran, and injured, Bulldog goalie Taras Lendzyk. As Tech clung to a 5-4 lead with 6:06 to play in regulation, a fracas erupted on the ice.

A Duluth player left the bench to join the melee, while Tech's Jarkko Ruutu was involved in a fight with the Bulldogs' Jason Garatti. Ruutu turtled and received the brunt of the blows, having already received one game disqualification this young season. It appeared as if Tech would wind up with a power play out of the debacle.

Turn to COLLEGE HOCKEY, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 41 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, November 2, 1995

"I have nothing to wear"
As the temperature drops below 50 do you know what you are going to bundle up in? (See Arts & Living, page 5).

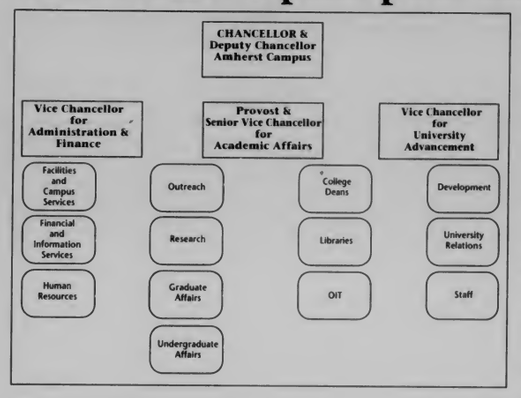
Makin' a connection
Elastica will be playing in Springfield this coming Saturday, fresh from Lollapalooza (See Arts & Living, page 7).

Dion shining in net for UMass
Sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Dion has quietly been doing her job in the Minutewomen net (See Sports, page 16).

Extended Forecast
Today expect rain or drizzle with light winds, showers staying for the evening. Friday, a little warmer but windier with thundershowers. Expect a cloudy weekend

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 56	HIGH: 60 LOW: 52

Chancellor's plan puts administrative jobs at risk



COLLEGIAN GRAPHIC BY JAMES P. CANLEY

The proposed reorganization would result in the above power structure.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The positions of two major University of Massachusetts administrators may be in jeopardy if a proposal from the academic deans is developed.

Yesterday morning, a document concerning the restructuring of University colleges, academia and administration was distributed throughout campus offices. Included in the proposal was the assimilation of the duties of vice-chancellor for student affairs Thomas Robinson and vice-chancellor for research and graduate studies Charlena Seymour into those of already existing administrators.

Described as a "strategic plan," the proposal stated three major goals for the future of the University.

"We must determine whether we can better serve our customers and improve our reputation by emphasizing specific areas of excellence, operate more efficiently to conserve our precious funds and convince the trustees that we are capable of self-examination and internal discipline before we ask for budget enhancements," the document said.

Administration narrowed

Under the plan, the University would be reduced to "three major administrative units" — "academic affairs," "administration and finance" and "university advancement." Institutions with successful structures similar to the deans' proposal include the University of Minnesota, Johns Hopkins University and the University of Michigan, the document said.

If the proposal were to go into effect, current vice-chancellor for administration and finance Paul Page would oversee most of the tasks previously performed by Robinson, among them housing, campus and auxiliary services.

In addition, current Provost Pat Crosson's position would not only expand to include the title "senior vice-chancellor for academic affairs," but would also include all of Seymour's duties. Crosson would also have the greatest number of affairs to handle, with undergraduate studies alone accounting for over 20 various programs and offices.

According to the proposal, these changes can be made in an "orderly" fashion, resolving that the displaced administrators can either "change positions or leave the institution."

Townes reacts

Vice-chancellor for campus activities M. Ricardo Townes said he had mixed feelings about the proposal, specifically the possible elimination of Robinson, who he described as an "asset to the campus." Townes did, however, laud two issues raised by the presentation of the document.

"I think it's good that the deans were willing to put their ideas on paper and advise them," he said. "Second, I think that we should all tolerate the many voices who don't hold back their opinions about restructuring of campus."

Yet, there were also two major concerns Townes said he held about the proposal itself.

"I believe very strongly in the need for the position of vice-chancellor for student activities," he said. "And number two, I'm concerned about any and all discussion on campus without the benefit of governance groups being involved in those discussions about policy.

"I'm concerned that students have not been given the opportunity to take part in discussions about restructuring, especially restructuring which affects them directly."

Townes added that he feels potentially controversial changes are withheld by many administrators who fear being labeled "racists or homophobes or whatever."'n atmosphere of "Glasnost" might alleviate the situation, he said.

NCEL obtains $75,000 grant from foundation

By Elsa Allen
Collegian Correspondent

The National Coalition for Equality in Learning (NCEL) of the School of Education at the University of Massachusetts has received a $75,000 grant from the Danforth foundation in Missouri. This funding is a continuation of a five-year grant that has already supplied the foundation with over $600,000.

This funding is used to carry out the national coalition's programs to reform public schools across the country and help at-risk students continue towards a secondary education.

Robert Sinclair, professor of education at the University of Massachusetts, is the director of the National Coalition, which is staffed by a group of university graduate students. Sinclair and the NCEL work closely with individual administrators, teachers and students in local communities in Alabama, California, Colorado, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Texas.

The goal of the coalition is to develop personalized programs within each school community, in order to successfully address the individual needs of the students in each community.

According to Sinclair, the two main projects that are being worked on presently by the NCEL include a plan to help bring equality in learning to students in schools where civil rights issues need to be addressed, as well as a project to assist teenage mothers in continuing their education.

In order to implement these programs, the coalition works one-on-one with the school communities. Rather than developing a plan which is given to the schools to follow, they assist the schools personally in order to develop a plan that addresses each schools's particular priorities.

In Montgomery, Ala., Sinclair points out that the

Turn to GRANT, page 2

Hillel sets up on-line page on the WWW

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

If you don't look good...
Junior journalism major Dan Sullivan gets a buzz from Barber Arthur Dietz in the Campus Center Wednesday afternoon.

The University of Massachusetts Hillel has taken a step onto the information highway this semester as it has set up a page on the World Wide Web.

According to Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, the main part of the page is an on-line version of Hillel's Calendar, which lists all the major events they are putting on.

It also has several outside links, according to Glen Stegner, who wrote the actual program to put the information on the web page. There are links to the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum Online, to other colleges' Hillels and Jewish organizations and to other places with information about and resources in the Jewish community.

Perlmutter said one of the major benefits will be updated information for the calendar.

"We put out a printed calendar once every two months, but sometimes some events or ideas of interest emerge after the calendar is printed," said Perlmutter. "If someone wants the most accurate updated information ... the Web is the way to go."

Stegner said the page will have minor updates every week. Major updates are made every other month, when the new calendar is made.

Turn to WEB, page 3

Smith prof. speaks on Betty Friedan, modern feminism

By Andee Fu
Collegian Correspondent

Daniel Horowitz, a professor of American Studies at Smith College, presented a speech entitled "Betty Friedan '43 and the Origins of Modern Feminism." The speech took place on Oct. 30, in Seelye Hall at Smith College.

The speech was focused mainly on the life of Betty Friedan.

At Smith College, Friedan was a student and the editor of the student newspaper for Women's affairs in the 1940s. Friedan discovered a character of radicalism throughout her life. Her character of radicalism was influenced greatly by Dorothy Douglas, a very important Economist who taught Marxism at Smith.

In 1941 and 1942, Friedan accepted a series of adversial positions at Smith which included forming rallies against the Administration's labor unions upon the approach of World War II.

After graduating from Smith, Friedan spent a year at Berkeley, where she combined the ideas of Psychology and Marxism which helped her to write her first book the Feminist Mystique later on in life.

Friedan left Berkeley in the summer of 1943, then moved to New York later that fall, where she began to write about women's issues at an organization called the Federated Press, also in New York.

Friedan's writings were mainly about the Afro-American and Latino working women who were employed at the United Electrical Workers Union at that time.

In 1946, Friedan left the Federated Press and began working for the United Electric News. The United Electric News in New York, was at the time, the most radical and the leading largest communist labor union in the history of United States.

From 1946 to 1952, Friedan continued to write about women in a way which was not particularly unusual for the United Electric News. She wrote a lot about the fair treatment for minority women.

Friedan emerged in 1955 as a writer for a women's magazine and wrote a series of articles in critiquing the suburban life.

In 1956, Friedan finally started to work on her book Feminist Mystique as part of her effort about living in an urban setting as a journalist. Eventually, Friedan shifted from reporting about labor journalism to writing about white middle class journalism.

The Feminist movement emerged from two groups in the 1960s where Friedan continued her Feminist Mystique, explained Horowitz.

The first group to have emerged from the Feminist Movement is the liberal white middle class, which is devoted to advocate for women's equality. The second one was a more radical and young group.

Friedan was one of the true founders of social Feminism and most of her life she was devoted to fighting for the equality of women.

"Betty Friedan devoted her entire life in political change for women," Horowitz said. "She is also interest in the social transformation, finally she has been skeptical about women focusing on one's self."

Pentagon reviews Cold war purchases

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is reviewing billions of dollars in arms purchases that may have been based on bogus estimates of Soviet strength that were fed to the government by double agents, a senior defense official said Wednesday.

The review encompasses a range of weapons, from missile warheads to nuclear submarines to high-performance fighter aircraft purchased late in the Cold War. Deputy Defense Secretary John White, the Pentagon's No. 2 official, has established a panel of experts to examine the fallout from a CIA report acknowledging that intelligence officials passed along tainted information from Soviet-controlled double agents.

"One objective of the study will be to review the weight that was given to what we now know was 'directed' information in assessments that influenced policy decisions," the defense official said.

Pentagon officials learned earlier this year that the double agents, apparently under the orchestration of convicted CIA spy Aldrich Ames, provided the CIA with exaggerated reports of Soviet military capabilities. CIA analysts then passed those reports on to decision-makers at the White House and in the Pentagon without any warning that the information may have been bogus.

"We've been working with other members of the national security community to assess the damage this 'controlled' information might have caused," said the defense official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Nov. 2

Movie — "Erendira." Latin American Cultural Center, Hampden Commons, 7 p.m.

Gallery Opening — Opening Reception for new Grayson/Field Art Gallery. All are invited to meet the artist and view the newest residence hall gallery. Refreshments will served. Field Residence Hall, 9 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Forum — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be holding a Career Forum Day for Political Science majors. Thompson Tower, Sixth Floor, 3:45 p.m. For further information call Bill Ramsey at 546-4278

Workshop — The Everywomen's Center announces a workshop entitled "Gutting the University: What Ended Up in the Wastebin." Panel is composed of faculty and staff, as well as returning students who will consider issues of student access and resources in the last 20 years at UMass. It will concentrate in particular on the effects of budget cuts and tuition hikes on returning women students, working class students and minority students. All are welcome to attend. Herter Hall, Room 107, 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — Animal Rights Coalition will be holding. Members and people interested please attend. Student Union, ARC Office, Room 306, 7 p.m.

Notices

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is November 3. Contact Charran at 546-2363 or Chinedu at 546-5562.

Meeting — "Does Eating Control Your Life." Weekly Meetings Overeaters Anonymous. Totally Free for anyone who has a problem with food. Monday and Tuesday 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Campus Center, Room to be announced. For more information, call 548-9040.

Spectrum — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submission for its 95-96 issue. Any Five College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 408E Student Union, or call 545-2240 for more information.

GLB Event — The GLB Graduate Student Organization meets Fridays from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge for all those who identify with GLBT. For more information contact Rosie or Jan at the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPirg will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2358 or the MassPirg office at 545-0199.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720. The non-traditional support group will be visiting the Amherst College Museum on Saturday. Anyone interested in attending is encouraged to meet at the Campus Center, Coffee Shop, 12 p.m.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506.

Community — Jumaa Service. The Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m. Campus Center (Check Information Desk for room). For further information call Utama at 256-8482.

Party — The Southwest Area Government is throwing a semi-formal Winterball on Feb. 10. Tickets are on sale now at the early bird special price of $10 and $15 for a couple. The Evening includes Dinner, Dancing and Live Entertainment. Contact the SWAG Office to purchase tickets at 546-0960.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

■ grant

continued from page 1

coalition has worked closely with the schools as well as the parents of students to help institute the equality in learning program. Through their research, the coalition has identified problems including poverty and illiteracy in the home, as well as lack of parent involvement in the children's education.

Using grant money, they were able to work with the schools to provide things such as health care for the students, as well as forming programs to educate the parents and get them more involved in the educational development of their child.

"We are discovering that it is possible to improve the learning of young people who have a history of failure" Sinclair said.

By working at the local level, Sinclair and his group have found a connection with the students that has proven itself to be successful.

Other than the Danforth Foundation, the coalition has received a great deal of money and support from Amherst area benefactress, Dr. Camille Cosby. The wife of television actor Bill Cosby, Dr. Cosby has been especially involved in helping teenage mothers by providing them with the means to finish high school and offering them scholarships to attend college.

Through grant money, such as the $75,000 that was recently received, the National Coalition for Equality in Learning has been able to make many positive developments in elementary and high schools across the nation. The graduate students have been able to gain new, broad perspectives by working in the schools themselves, one on one with the students.

"It's a very real experience for us" said graduate student Marco Bisssacia, of his opportunity to work personally in the schools.

Graduate students working on the project with Professor Sinclair are Linda Mensing-Triplett, Marco Bissacia, David Raker, Mohamed Good and Shuli Xu.

South Africans go to polls again

Country's first local elections involving blacks and whites

By Donna Bryson
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Voters reshaped South Africa Wednesday, putting blacks in charge of cities and towns that had once been white preserves.

It was the first time South Africa has had local elections with all the country's races taking part and only the second time blacks have been allowed to vote.

The first, in April 1994, brought President Nelson Mandela to power and ended white minority rule at the national level. But at the local level there were still no black elected officials although some black mayors had been appointed as transitional leaders.

"This is the completion of the democratic process that we began" last year, Mandela said on a visit to a polling station in the Atteridgeville black township outside Pretoria.

Voting for almost 700 local and rural councils was marred in some areas by improper ballots, late officials and even a hungry elephant. Some people went to the wrong polling stations or found their names were not on the registration lists, slowing the process and provoking angry confrontations.

Election officials expressed satisfaction with the voting, calling it generally smoother than the problem-plagued national vote last year. But in some areas, long lines formed outside the polling places and the slow pace meant voting continued well after polls were to have closed.

"I want to live in a safe place, to be comfortable. To have a house, a street," said Winnie Cebu, a student living in a squatter camp south of Johannesburg.

Cebu arrived armed with a blanket, a tin pot of coffee and a deck of cards three hours before polls opened. Still, she was far from first in line at three green and yellow tents set up on a soccer field as polls for the Phola Park camp.

Results were expected Thursday but there was little doubt the winners would be with few exceptions black — if only because most of the candidates are black.

Elias Maluleke was pleased several candidates running for his community council in Johannesburg were neighbors.

"I've met them, I've sat and discussed with them. I know what they want out of life," said Maluleke, who is black.

Tommy Swanepoel, a white retired policeman, feared white conservatives would lose control in his town — Ventersdorp, the headquarters of the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement, west of Johannesburg.

"The biggest thing here is to make sure the white wards are still run by whites," he said. "We already pay all the taxes here and the blacks want us to pay over there too. They think we're all Father Christmas."

Mandela himself didn't vote Wednesday because he had registered in Cape Town. Disputes over districts' boundaries postponed voting until next year in KwaZulu-Natal province and the Cape Town metropolitan area. Procedural problems also postponed balloting in some isolated rural areas, which will hold elections later this year or next year.

A holiday was called for the elections. More than 15 million people were eligible to vote.

Going into the election, turnout had been expected to be low because of voter apathy and confusion over a dual ballot that asks people to vote for a candidate and then a party.

Many South Africans also complained Mandela's government had failed to deliver on promises of jobs and houses made before last year's election and questioned why they should vote again.

Hundreds rally against police brutality

By Henry Cutter
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Sheriff's deputies hurried away two noisy protesters this morning as hundreds of people jammed the hallway outside a courtroom where an inquest was to begin into the death of a man in police custody.

Demonstrators in the hallway of the Allegheny County Courthouse and a courtyard below chanted, "No Justice, No Peace," until the two men, one of them from the African-American Workers Union, were taken away.

"They grabbed two guys, from my understanding, that were making a lot of noise over there," said Sgt. James Ward of the Allegheny County Sheriff's Department. He said he didn't know the men's names, nor what they were to be charged with.

A six-member coroner's jury was to hear testimony from about 40 witnesses before ruling on whether police had good reason for force used against Jonny Gammage on Oct. 12.

Gammage, 31, a native of Syracuse, N.Y., died after leading police on a 7.4-mile, low-speed chase from the suburb of Brentwood into Pittsburgh. Police said they saw him driving Seals' Jaguar erratically.

They said Gammage resisted arrest and bit the thumb of one of the five officers who gathered to subdue him and broke the wrist of another. One officer used his baton and knee to subdue Gammage as he lay face-down on the pavement, according to reports in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

The coroner ruled that Gammage suffocated due to compression of his neck and chest.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson has called the death a "lynching." Gammage was black; the six officers are white. His supporters argue that Gammage, who was 5-foot-7 and weighed 187 pounds, would never have attacked police.

A small amount of moldy marijuana was found in the Jaguar, but toxicology tests found no evidence that Gammage had been using drugs.

Roland King, a resident of the Pittsburgh neighborhood of East Liberty, said widespread violence is unlikely even if the officers are not prosecuted. But he said anger will linger among blacks.

"You're always going to have a few hotheads who express themselves in a violent way, but for the majority of blacks it's going to seethe and seethe and seethe," he said. "It raises the tension."

If the officers' actions are ruled to be unjustified, the jury would vote on what charges should be filed and against whom.

Deputy Allegheny County Coroner Arthur G. Gilkes Jr. may accept or reject the jury's recommendations. If he accepts them, he will forward them to the county district attorney's office.

Prosecutors are also free to accept or reject the recommendations. Pittsburgh police and the FBI are investigating the case.

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

The University of Massachusetts Science Fiction Society
Proudly Presents
Movie Marathon '95!
Saturday, November 4, 1995
A day of FREE science fiction films
12 Heavy Metal
2 pm Monster on Campus
4 pm Gate To the Minds Eye
5 pm Dinner Break - no movie
6 pm Slaughterhouse 5
8 pm Brazil
10 pm Heavy Metal
FREE
All films are being shown in the Campus Center Auditorium at The University Of Massachusetts, Amherst

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.
FALLING TEMPERATURES MEANS FALLING PRICES AT SCOTT'S
Thank You For Your Patronage
Quantity Discounts Available
Smirnoff Vodka $6.99 750ml bottle
Bud & Bud Light $6.99 +dep 12 pack bottles
Southern Comfort $7.99 750ml
Red Dog & Ice House $6.99 +dep 12 pk cans
Saranac Brews $4.69 6 pack bottles
Moosehead Ice & Regular $6.99 12 pack bottles
Keystone Regular, Light & Ice $4.39 + dep 12 pack cans
WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!
MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Salters University Drive Alumni Stadium SCOTTS Victory Market Rte. 9

COME SEE THE BIG GUY!
BIG GUY LIQUORS
KEGS BEER BALLS
Full Line of Beer • Wine • Liquors
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
RTE 63 NORTH AMHERST (NEXT TO CUMBY'S) • 549-3555

ATTENTION UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
Now Renting...
Four (4) Bedroom apartment on Rte.9
1 1/2 bath, super clean & quiet!
Call 256-0741

Five state prisons take emergency measures to ease overcrowding

By Richard Lorant
Associated Press

CONCORD — About 300 inmates from five Massachusetts prisons were rousted from their beds, herded onto vans and flown to Texas Wednesday in what authorities said was an emergency measure to ease overcrowding.

"We are in dire straits here," Correction Commissioner Larry DuBois said at a news conference announcing the massive overnight operation. "This is the only viable option we had."

The surprise shipment of 299 medium-security prisoners to a Dallas County jail is part of a national trend. Seven states have sent inmates to Texas counties trying to cash in on extra jail space.

DuBois and Undersecretary for Public Safety Robert Krekorian said there are no plans to send additional prisoners to Texas. But a spokesman for the Dallas County Sheriff said more shipments are being contemplated.

"I think they want to see how it works out — kind of a trial run so to speak," said spokesman James Ewell, who added that the county expected to make more than $3 million profit a year by housing Massachusetts inmates.

Prisoners' rights groups denounced the move as ineffective and inhumane, saying it cut off inmates from family support and punished those who are well-behaved.

"This is the kind of maneuver that destroys families. It creates more crime in the future," said Jill Brotman of the American Friends Service Committee in Cambridge.

Pat Tocci, whose brother John Milley had been serving a 6-10 year sentence in MCI Shirley on a rape conviction, said she was shocked by the transfer. She and Milley's wife, Patricia, said they learned of the move at about 5:45 a.m. from the news.

"The only way we can visit him will be to spend $600 or $700 dollars to pay for a plane ticket and no one will be able to afford that," said Tocci, who along with her mother Sylvia Milley, had been visiting the prison four times a week.

"I feel that the whole group of them were just about kidnapped and taken away from the families without any word at all," she said during a press conference at the American Friends Service Committee.

Sylvia Milley said she felt "hopeless and helpless because you can't do anything about it."

"I voted for [Weld] once, but I'll never make that mistake again," she said. "I hope Mr. Weld sleeps well because I'm sure I won't."

The midnight move comes as the Legislature considers bills to provide money to expand prisons, which are at 150 percent of capacity.

The Senate chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Public Safety, James Jajuga, said he couldn't imagine the need to transfer so many prisoners when there were hundreds of beds available in the state.

"We know we need more prisons, period. We'd like that process to move forward," Jajuga said. "I don't understand what the need is to do this large a number."

But DuBois said he and Krekorian had scoured the state for medium-security beds and found none. He also said the Texas move was cost-effective.

DuBois said transporting and housing the prisoners in Texas would cost $4.5 million to $5 million more than keeping them in state prisons this fiscal year.

The move leaves 10,501 inmates in Massachusetts prisons, Krekorian said. It is one of several efforts to ease overcrowding that he said jeopardizes the safety of inmates and guards.

The department has blamed an August disturbance at Shirley state prison on cramped quarters.

The operation began at 10:45 p.m. on Tuesday but was kept secret for security reasons until near dawn the next day, corrections department Anthony Carnevale said.

Teams of specially armed correctional officers, some using police dogs, went from cell to cell waking prisoners fingered for transport. The teams began at MCI-Gardner and worked their way toward a rendezvous point at MCI-Norfolk. State inmates also were roused at MCI-Shirley, and the Old Colony and Southeastern correctional centers in Bridgewater.

Once they were awake, inmates were searched, questioned and told they were headed for Texas. Authorities said disruptive inmates were excluded, as were lifers, those with special medical conditions and those with a chance of transferring to a minimum-security prison in the near future. Some prisoners were scheduled for release in as little as four months, however.

The inmates were then handcuffed and shackled, and ordered into the vans. The convoy that left Norfolk for Logan International Airport included 40 correction vehicles and dozens of state police cruisers, Carnevale said.

At the airport, prisoners in groups of three were loaded aboard a chartered Rich International airliner, which took off at 6:42 a.m. and arrived in Dallas less than four hours later.

The inmates were bused without incident to the 12-story Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas, sheriff's spokesman Ewell said.

They were being housed on a single floor of the jail.

Ewell said the prisoners from Massachusetts were the first to move into the Dallas County Jail System from out of state. The county has 6,800 jail beds and 5,500 prisoners, not counting the new arrivals.

Several Texas counties have been seeking outside prisoners to replace state inmates they had housed until recently. Ewell said 4,000 Texas state prisoners who had been in Dallas County's six jails are now back in state custody.

The shift comes after the state of Texas spent $1 billion to expand its prisons, said Robert Dearing, deputy director of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Other states with inmates in Texas jails included Colorado, Utah, Missouri, Oregon, North Carolina and Virginia. Hawaii recently voted to ship inmates there as well.

But some critics say the profits are being made at the expense of prisoners' rights and society at large. They say sending prisoners far from home undermines family ties, a major factor in keeping ex-convicts out of prison.

"Why do we do the one thing we know is harmful?" said Jenni Gainsborough of the American Civil Liberties Union's National Prison Project. "It might save money in the short term, but in the long term the social and financial costs are much greater."

And by shipping only inmates with good behavior records, authorities are sending them the wrong message.

"One of the things they say is — 'if you behave well, if you rehabilitate yourself, you will earn things.' Invariably that is not the case, especially since Weld took office in Massachusetts," she said.

■ Web

continued from page 1

Perlmutter said he was unsure how many people have used the page.

"I think it's been used more on a graduate level so far, but I have a feeling it will be used on all levels reasonably soon as people know more about it," Perlmutter said.

The address of Hillel's page is http://www- unix.oit.umass.edu/~umhillel/

— Jacob W. Michaels

Huey P. Newton
wants you to write for
BLACK AFFAIRS
Contact Byrd@student.umass.edu or come down to
113 Campus Center • 545-0719

Li Peng
wants you to write for
DEVELOPING NATIONS
Contact Ali Raza or come down to
113 Campus Center • 545-0719

YOU'RE LOOKIN' AT THE RIGHT PLACE FOR PLENTY OF GREAT DEALS!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
BUDWEISER CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $14.49 + DEP
KEYSTONE, LIGHT & ICE CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $8.49 + DEP
NEWCASTLE BROWN ALE 6 PACK BOTTLES $5.99 + DEP
RED DOG & ICEHOUSE CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS CUBED $12.89 + DEP
CATAMOUNT CHRISTMAS ALE 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.49 + DEP
KALIBER NON-ALCOHOLIC 6 PACK BOTTLES $3.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
CHATEAU STE MICHELLE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $8.99 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $7.49
WINE OF THE MONTH
COLUMBIA CREST CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $6.49 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.49 SEMILLON-CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.49
GALLO LIVINGSTON CELLARS ALL FLAVORS 3.0L $5.99
CITRA MONTEPULCIANO TREBBIANO 1.5L $3.99
K.W.V. RUBY & TAWNY PORT 750 ML $4.49
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $8.99
FETZER WHITE ZINFANDEL, GEWURTZTRAMINER 750 ML 2 for $9.00
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $13.49
BLACK VELVET 1.75L $12.49
TANQUERAY GIN 750ML $11.99
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75 $13.99
CLAN MACGREGOR 1.75L $12.49
SOUTHERN COMFORT $14.99 1.75L
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/2/95 THRU WEDS. 11/8/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Commonwealth Opera presents
OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN & JEROME KERN'S
SHOWBOAT
UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER
Saturday, Nov. 11 at 8 pm
Sunday, Nov. 12 at 2 pm
$18 • $15 • $12 • Student discounts • Groups take 1/3 off!
Northampton Box Office 586-8686
Don't miss this grand musical and dance extravaganza!

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
LABATT'S 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $16.99 + DEP
HARPOON 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $16.99 + DEP
CORONA 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $16.99 + DEP
BUD 30 PKS. $14.49 + DEP
COORS 24-12 OZ. CANS $12.99 + DEP
SAM ADAMS "KEGS" $79.99 + Dep
KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD $36.99 + DEP "KEGS" $39.99 + DEP
BUSCH & LT. 30 PK CANS $10.99 + DEP
BUD DRY 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $9.99 + DEP
NATURAL LT 24-12 OZ. CANS $8.29 + DEP
MEISTERBRAU 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.49 + DEP
HAMM'S 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.19 + DEP
BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 + DEP
ICE! 10 lbs. $1.99 50 lbs. $5.99 100 lbs. $9.99 blocks 10 lbs. $1.99
WE DELIVER! Sale Thru 11/8/95.
BOMBAY SAPPHIRE GIN $13.69 750 ML
SMIRNOFF VODKA $7.49 750 ML
T.G.I. FRIDAY'S $10.99 1.75L
4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
JOSE CUERVO $10.99 750 ML
BOONES FARM $1.99 750 ML
BLOSSOM HILL WINES $6.49 1.5L
FETZER BARRELL SELECT CHARD. $7.99 750ML
M.G. VALLEJO CHARD. $4.99 750 ML
MARCUS JAMES WINES $5.69 1.5L

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m.- 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
Free Consultations for Five College Students/Faculty

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Reid Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Worrell Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rian Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connecticut News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Dashiell Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The pot calling the kettle black

"That guy wears so much cologne, he smells like a Cosmopolitan magazine," I said to my friend.

"He's wearing so much, the paint's coming off the walls," he said.

We glance around the room, looking for someone or something to make fun of. We don't know why we feel we have to, but sometimes it is too easy. If a guy comes into the room smelling like a department store, I will crack on it and my friend will do the same.

Andrew Bryce

We're far from perfect, especially my friend, but it's not about that. We make fun of ourselves, we bust on each other all of the time. It doesn't matter who or where or when, we'll hack just to humor ourselves.

For instance, one of our friend's has a well-grown, black beard. I'll comment on the sweater on his face, and my friend has a habit of calling him Grizzly Adams. I'll say I can use his beard as a rug, and we'll go up to him, pretending we're picking bugs from it. We'll joke about how many minutes it will take after shaving it to grow back. Some may laugh when they hear and see us, others will shake their head in disgust. We don't care. The person shaking their head doesn't stop us. We'd just start busting on that person who didn't like our jokes.

Another person we work with is about 5-foot-5 inches tall, and about seven inches of it is legs. We call him Schnitzel for no apparent reason, and we bust on how he'd rather say facsimile instead of just plain fax. When he brings in a bagged lunch into the office, we rank on him by picking on his PBJ with the crusts cut off and his Suzie-Qs. When he answers the phone at the office, he manages to say his own name, where he is from, why he is answering the phone and how he may help the person calling before the caller has said one word. He's hacked on immediately.

I go to class, and this one professor has about 10 hand-outs each class. We like to call him Professor Mimeograph and comment on his developed triceps from using the mimeograph machine. We talk about the forest he stomped through to give us our study sheets. We say he makes more copies each class than the Collegian's circulation. We mention the need of volumes of three-ring binders just to keep the damn papers together.

There's this kid in the same class who raises his hand an obscene amount of times each day. We hack on how he'll have a question for the professor every three words he utters. There's another person who is right up there in raised hands, seemingly just to compete with the other.

We head to the bars at night, and that's where all the beauties are. Some of the women seen cake on the make-up with a shovel prior to going out, and we have to make a comment to ourselves. We rank on inflatable tough guys with watermelons under their armpits trying to start fights. We bust on toolboxes — or people we think are tools.

By the way, to us, we are cool.

But anyway, here's the thing. We don't mean any harm by it. We don't mean to hurt anyone's feelings by our comments. We don't dislike all the people we bust on. We do it to humor ourselves, we do it to laugh.

To the bearded one, he knows we're just joking. To Schnitz, he knows it's all in fun. Our professor has heard us joke about his many handouts and he gets a chuckle out of it. The kid in our class doesn't know we chart out exactly how many times his hand goes up during class, but if he did, he should know it's in a joking manner.

The women who sport the make-up and the boys who walk around the entire night flexed, they do what they want, and I do my thing. They probably make fun of my sorry ass. Who knows, I doubt it, though.

Yeah right.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

The two buck principle

In the small circle of people I live with and frequently dine out with, on more than a few occasions one person will often ask politely for some one else to help them cover their bill. Most of us think nothing of it because we all know that if the situation was reversed they would do the same for us.

It doesn't matter if Matt's McDonald's dinner comes to a little over six bucks and later in the week my Taco Bell is four. It's money between friends and sooner or later it all evens out in the end. If I need a single to play music on the jukebox and the above situation has happened, Matt gladly passes it on to me.

It is very disheartening to me when others aren't as considerate, and I am less apt to put up money for them because of how tight they are when it comes to money. I couldn't care less about the two bucks, it's just the principle of the matter.

Every Wednesday, two of my housemates play basketball at a private gym which they, along with another 8-10 guys, rent out for a couple of hours for some five-on-five. Three weeks ago, they invited me to go with them.

For the evening, we all chip in and split the $35 charge for the use of the facility. Usually it breaks down to about three to four dollars per person.

Nine guys were present the first night I attended when the man who collects the payment stepped by for the money. Swiftly and without incident, all involved on the court stopped, went to their sweats and pulled out four bucks out of their pockets, then continued the game where they had left off.

About 10 minutes later, another person, I'll call him John, showed up. Since we had already paid, he just joined in the action and no fuss was made about the situation.

The following week John arrived on time and after we had all been playing for 45 minutes the man arrived for payment as usual. We all stopped to put in our portion, except John.

As it turns out this has happened before. On the ride home one of my housemates informed me that John hadn't paid in four weeks of basketball. He never once made a motion to his wallet as he sat right next to the guy who was pooling the $35 together. That just isn't right.

I realize it isn't a heck of a lot of money and it isn't the money that bothers me. It's the principle that we all understand and appreciate the fact we can use this gym at minimal cost and we don't appreciate someone taking advantage by just showing up to play and avoiding the subject when it comes time to pay.

It's the little things like that which get under my skin. I went on a road trip and a friend of mine who was going there as well offered to give myself and a colleague a lift. After the evening I offered to give him money for gas and he declined the offer.

Justin C. Smith

The fact is, when it is that time, we all do our fair share. No complaints or trying to duck the payment, we acknowledge it and pay with a smile for the pleasure of a friendly and competitive night of hoops.

It would be respectful to everyone involved that John cough up a couple of bucks for the plain and simple fact we share the cost of the gym.

Of the 10 guys that play I see two of them at places other than that court (they are my housemates). I know the others first names and if I passed them on the street I could say hello but really wouldn't know what else to say to them. I don't know them other than as guys I play basketball with, but I still respect them. With this attitude, I feel John doesn't respect the lot of us.

It's the little things like that which get under my skin. I went on a road trip and a friend of mine who was going there as well offered to give myself and a colleague a lift. After the evening I offered to give him money for gas and he declined the offer.

"I was going there anyway," he said. "I enjoyed the company, it's always a pleasure."

My colleague was not as polite and did not offer anything to my friend the driver, someone they do not know well, even though he was still kind enough to bring them along. That shouldn't happen.

The day after the trip, I knew my friend was working for an extended length of time and couldn't leave to grab lunch. So I took it upon myself to grab lunch for the both of us and eat with him just to show I appreciated his kindness to myself and my colleague.

It was a respect thing I felt I should do. I knew he was sincere when he said I didn't have to give gas money. He is a giving person and sometimes he can be taken advantage of by some people, as I felt my colleague had done. I wanted to make sure he knew I acknowledged his generosity.

It was just a matter of principle.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to work the system.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e-mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

I.C.U.N.
The world's only remaining super ower
TALES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
DON'T YOU HAVE SOME STARVING CHILDREN YOU COULD CUT OUT OF YOUR BUDGET?

Whitmore storms Goodell

In the wee hours of morning, amidst the pattering of dew and the first notes of bird song, the armies thunder forth from Castle Whitmore.

Led by David "Braveheart" Scott, the Clan of Deans storm the fortress of Goodell, seeking the legendary treasure of the Grants. The war, begun last year with the Massacre of Conti on the fields of Glen Gordon, enters its final stages.

Fred "Lord" Byron and Tom "Edward G." Robinson languish deep in the dungeon, their necks shaved for the block, their sleepless nights serenaded by the sharpening of the great axe. Viking culture is back with a vengeance.

The Proposal of the Council of Academic Deans for Campus Restructuring, dated Oct. 25, 1995, signals the final round in the battle of Whitmore to seize control of the independent Graduate School structure centered in Goodell. It is nothing less than an attempted coup d'etat at UMass.

Hussein Ibish

Whitmore has jealously coveted control of graduate education, especially the grant money it generates.

Chancellor Scott in particular has seen the expansion of Whitmore's power over the Graduate School as a central plank in the strategy to consolidate his own position.

Last year Scott and Whitmore were able to make considerable headway by removing Sam Conti and splitting his position, Vice-Chancellor for Research and Development and Graduate Dean, into two separate jobs.

Now the Deans proposal, under Scott's guidance, seeks to eliminate the position of V. C. for Research and Development altogether and instead consolidate power over research in Whitmore under the Provost. The most telling passage of the proposal refers to the restructuring as "internal discipline," a refreshingly frank admission.

Selective assassination gives way to full-scale invasion with this proposal, a move no doubt occasioned by the current vacuum of leadership, not only on campus, but more importantly with the predictable defection of crook Hooker.

Fears of a faculty uprising are currently attenuated by a belief that without a UMass System President, the Chancellor can withstand a series of no-confidence motions and other protests. Besides, the faculty have proven their abject spinelessness on numerous recent occasions.

Thus it is certain senior members of the Grad Council spent a desperate afternoon recently, huddled in the isolated Newman Center, fearfully plotting in hushed tones.

In fact, one of the worst aspects of this entire affair is the secrecy in which it has been shrouded. The primary characteristic of this "top secret" plot has been the desire to conceal it, mainly from departmental chairs, graduate program directors and faculty. Only one or two principled administrators have recognized the campus requires Glasnost as well as Perestroika. The apparatchiks prefer secret business as usual.

In truth, though, the proposal is a mixed bag. Other than the annexation of the Grad School, it also seeks to eliminate the Vice-Chancellorship for Student Affairs.

Good idea or not, if it means the removal of the right-wing incompetent Tom Robinson, it is still worth doing. Off with his head! It is delightful to read the Deans salivating over the spoils of his sacked responsibilities, such as housing, like Genghis Khan tossing plunder to the troops.

But separating the good and bad parts of the proposal will be impossible if the debate continues to be restricted to a tiny Whitmore cabal. Scott's passion for secrecy is self-destructive, as amply demonstrated by the "Despicable Speakers Policy" fiasco.

Here's how it adds up at this stage, though. The big winners include the Provost, Pat Crosson, who now becomes something of a living god: the Chancellor and his Deputy who will have expunged both institutional and ideological rivals; the Academic Deans, who gain greater control over departments and faculty and the V. C. for Administration; and Finance, Paul Page, who gets lots of Tom's booty.

The big losers include Byron and Robinson, both of whom are written out of existence. Research-oriented faculty and departments whose independence and academic freedom, such as it is, will be mortgaged to Whitmore — and the occupied territory of the Graduate School.

If, in light of this exposed plot, the Faculty Senate meeting this afternoon does not erupt, then little should stand in the way of the armies of Bonnie Prince Davey.

Robinson is robbed! Bye-bye Byron! Delenda est Goodell! Whitmore excelsior! All hail King David!

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Football drivers out of control

To the Editor:

Last week, while I was driving my friend and her 4-year-old son to Grass Roots (the UMass Child Care Facility), we all had the misfortune of driving close to the football stadium at the time when the UMass football team was holding practice sessions at the stadium. What does the football team's practice session have to do with three people driving to a child care center, you ask? Basically, after our experience that day, I have come to conclude that it means life or death, ours, that is.

That fine fall day, as we took the turn off from the University drive unto the Stadium drive, a shiny brand new red jeep zoomed by us at a speed of over 40 miles per hour. As we took the turn towards the day care facility, yet another red shiny jeep and a shiny red car zoomed by us from the opposite side (never mind the newly installed speed breaker at the stadium PVTA stop) and took a wild turn towards the stadium's parking lot.

What's wrong with this whole scenario? First, all three vehicles, which belonged to, and were full of UMass football players, were all driving at a speed which was at least triple the posted speed limit of 15 mph in that zone. Second, one jeep over took our slow car by crossing over the solid line and driving in the wrong lane in the narrow U-shaped road. Third, the other two vehicles never bothered to slow down at the speed breakers and jumped high into the air before settling on the ground again.

I wouldn't even want to comment on the screaming absurdities and yelling emanating from those vehicles. Fourth, all this foolish behavior was displayed in close proximity to a child care facility.

Why didn't we have the time to jot down their license plates, you wonder? I guess at the speeds they were driving, it was a choice between making sure they don't crash into us or jotting down the plate numbers. Call me crazy, but I chose the first, more conservative, option.

UMass football coach Mike Hodges, might have taught his players how to win on the football field, but the players have failed to learn how to win in the field of life. I can see with clarity why UMass's running game is so good and reliable. I can see Rene Ingolia and Frank Alessio going through their practice sessions, trying to avoid being hit by vehicles driven by their teammates.

That day, those few reckless imbeciles broke several traffic laws, but more importantly, they chose to break those laws in a zone where little children, have their school. Call me insane, but I think that people would take extra precautions and drive extra slow in children prone areas.

Sorry UMass Minutemen, but you lost the respect of three of your biggest fans that day, including that of a four-year-old boy who was terror stuck at the reckless driving. If you cannot respect life and you expect respect from fans for playing football, I think you have your priorities mixed up. You might have yet another touchdown in a football game, but in life you'll be left punting.

Rajat Jain
Amherst

Students help make fundraiser work

To the Editor:

On behalf of Amherst Friends for the Homeless, I am writing to extend a heart felt thank you to the 98 volunteers from UMass that participated in the 7th annual "Shelter Sunday" on Oct. 29.

"Shelter Sunday" is our annual canvas of Amherst homes, asking for a $1 or greater contribution to help the homeless and hungry in our midst. The proceeds are shared equally by Amherst's Survival Center, Not Bread Alone, the Amherst Charitable Fund and Northampton's Grove Street Inn. In the past, we have raised from $12,000 to $15,000 in an afternoon, with 100 to 150 volunteers.

This year, we had a record number of 263 volunteers — UMass students alone numbered close to 100. To their credit, 68 fraternity members and 20 members of the Boltwood Project were responsible for this huge effort. As a UMass Alum, I am humbled to say that my prejudiced view of "partying frat boys majoring in pick-up lines and keg parties" is forever changed. I would gladly accept an invitation to dinner.

All UMass students and Alumni can be proud of the commitment to service that these students embody, all the more impressive when compared to the two volunteers from Amherst College and four volunteers from Hampshire College.

Proceeds from this year's "Shelter Sunday" are close to 11,000 and more is expected to be received from contributions in the mail. Don't let your sophisticated cynicism diminish the very real fact that one person can make a difference, and on "Shelter Sunday," three hours of your time can have tremendous meaning.

We will be back recruiting volunteers next year; look for us at the Volunteer Fair in September. Regrettably, the need for the funds we raise is greater than ever, and as long as the need exists, so will we.

Amy Roode
Granby

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday November 2, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 41

Halloween plots not so scary

I admit it. I'm a closet talk-show junkie. There's nothing quite like watching a cat-fight on "Ricki Lake" after chemistry lab or spending a saccharine-loaded lunch hour with "Leeza."

Of course, the novelty wears off pretty quickly. The parade of talk show hosts seems to be never-ending. Everyone has something to say about everything and talk shows seem to be the way to go. After all, there's nothing more important than "My mother is sleeping with my boyfriend." World hunger pales in comparison.

One of the latest Oprah-wannabees to join the fray is "Partridge Family" kid Danny Bonaduce. Makes you wonder in this new era of openess and communication if Bonaduce plans to get personal and talk about his drug arrests.

Another newcomer is "The Cosby Show's" Tempestt Bledsoe. Bledsoe welcomed teen dead-beat dads this week who wouldn't own up to their off-spring. Even blood-tests done in court couldn't convince these guys that the kids were the fruits of their loins. Bledsoe furrowed her brow in an attempt to look concerned as these dads in denial refused to offer any emotional support to their kids.

On Monday night FOX promised to have the biggest Halloween Bash of the night with hosts like Brian Austin Green and Ian Ziering doing wacky Halloween things at Universal Studios Theme Park.

Not only were those excerpts not amusing, but the whole bash was kind of lame. Beginning with "Melrose Place," I expected the usual

Turn to TV, page 10

WINTER FASHION '95

LEARNING FROM PAST FAUX PAS

I used to laugh thinking back to my junior high years. Back then, Foxmore, along with Ups 'n' Downs, were the stores of choice for my girlfriends and I because a pastel wardrobe was just as essential as a curling iron and hair spray. Seeing myself then, I think of how young and foolish I was. Today I know better. I know that no woman looks good in pastels. Except for a Claudia Schiffer, but of course she looks gorgeous in anything — must be rough.

Rebecca Malones

I was recently reminded of my childhood fashion faux pas during a visit to the newly-expanded Ingleside Mall. Out of the corner of my eye I caught a flash of mint green. I tried to assure myself that what I saw was simply a figment of my imagination, but I actually found myself standing in front of a rack of angora sweaters in not only mint green, but also pink, lavender pale blue and yellow.

The following day I actually saw a woman on campus wearing one of them. And then it hit me — sad but true, pastels are making a comeback.

The latest issue of Vogue predicts pastels are not only coming up in the new winter hues but are expected to be in both the upcoming spring and summer lines, as well. This is one trend that I definitely won't succumb to and I urge you not to either. Few people can carry off pastels without looking overly childish or helplessly '80s.

For those of you who might otherwise be a bit too hasty in sending your black wardrobes off to the good-will — hold on. Black and white have only taken a temporary back seat to the color of Easter. Designers declare it the best new no-color scheme and extremely versatile. They sharpen pastels, give bright hues breathing room and can create a definite boarder or a snappy trim on anything from a dress to a trench coat.

Off-white, ivory and camel are all showing up in the new winter lines. Designers from Calvin Klein to Chanel are putting out their own version of the man's classic camel trench coat. Another color that is beginning to oust black is dark brown.

Now don't despair if you haven't the budget to run out and buy an entire new a wardrobe. Why not start with a tiny purchase? Try a little brown eyeliner or get rid of that tired shade of red lipstick and pick up one of the new brown hues. Sometimes even the most

Turn to MALONEY, page 10

A LOOK AT ...G IT TOGETHER

...r trends, where it all ...e haute couture (high fash...hers. Months before the latest ...ll trickles down to us, the con...ner, designers are frantically putting together their newest lines and collections.

Marie J. Demirjian

The process of presenting a line starts with an idea — a hot new color, a raised or lowered hemline, a revival of an old era. Imagine chic designers huddling around Paris, Milan and New York City, with their café lattes and hopeful models. All are searching for the newest look to put in the fashions shows which have become outrageous extravaganzas.

To Buy or Not to Buy

The clothes on the runway sometimes barely resemble the apparel we find in department stores and at local retailers.

As stated in the New Yorker's fashion feature last November, "A fashion show is not a practical guide; you are not supposed to wear that multicolored stretch dress in nylon, cotton and Lycra, even if you wanted to wear it. And if you did buy it could you ease it on like a five foot condom, as (model) Kristen McMenamy does? What would happen if your dog started to pull it from the other end?"

Yet, these shows continue in all their glory, fueled by the ultra rich and glamorous people who buy into the bull, or rather the lavish, luxurious lifestyle.

So how do designers start the process of showing their collections? Until they are among the elite, the couture designers must find wealthy financial backers and the support of the media to "make" them. The collections are designed for a specific season, based on projections for the coming trends.

In fashion time, these clothes must be designed and shown months ahead of the actual season; many times it is a guessing game of what will be "in" for that season. Especially when trends seem to move faster than you can buy them, or even know about them here in Massachusetts.

According to Fashion, by Mary Wolfe, the haute couture fashion houses present two major showings of their collections a year. They are the Fall-Winter showings (held the preceding July) and the Spring-Summer showings (held in the preceding January.) Each design is made to the exact measurements of the model showing it and about 75 original outfits are presented by the designer.

The show must go on

Every show usually has a theme, carried out through the clothes, music, accessories, hair and make-up, all reflecting the designers image. The cost to produce the shows is enormous, taking into consideration all the detail and behind the scenes work.

But who is actually running off to Paris to see (or be seen at) these masquerades of fashion? If you can catch a glimpse at the gleaming audience during MTV's "House of Style," or in magazine photos, you'll see that it is mainly the press eager to get the best seat possible, or spot a run in Linda Evangelista's stockings. Aside from the media circus, others in attendance are wealthy private customers, commercial buyers (buyers represent retailers and manufacturers) and a handful of movie stars.

What the elite have seen glistening down the runway for this Winter is an array of fantastic color. From icy pastels to fierce brights one can see the return of glamour and luxury.

Taking hints

Elle magazine has captured the look with Yves Saint Laurent's collection on the chic 1960's screen star Catherine

Turn to DEMIRJIAN, page 10

TRYING TO DEFINE STYLE

What is style? Designers and fashion connoisseurs have been trying to define it and create it for years. Is it the way a skirt brushes just so on the knee? Is it the drape of fabric across the collarbone or the glide of silk and a swish of a hem?

Style has more often then not been boringly defined as a type of mannerism or dress. But I think it's safe to say that for today's fashion world, it goes beyond just throwing together an outfit or some semblance of one.

Tara MK Connelly

Style is not only clothes or mannerism, but a combination of both. It's attitude, sass, a willingness to shun conventionalism and be yourself.

It is most definitely the curve of a neck, the crook of a elbow. It's sexy and sexual — coy but never cloying and it most certainly is bold, but never brassy.

High pre-requesits for some, basic instincts for others. Who had this inane ability to inspire designers and make mere mortals quiver in jealousy? The most obvious were the late and great Jackie O and Audrey Hepburn. Who else could look so good with a small box-shaped hat perched on a modest beehive? Or don pedal-Norie pushers and a sleeveless sweater managing to look cool and collected rather than frumpy and modest. These two women were pioneers in the fashion industry. Their clothes and tastes have transcended time. They had class.

Today's leaders of the fashion world ask for nothing less than that desired state of perfection. They all aspire for that classic look that will make them a member of the fashion hall of fame. They all want their pill box hat and pedal pushers.

Time and again we see the reversion back to the basics. Flashy vinyl and glittering metallics may reign supreme on the cat walks but it is the well-tailored suit, the tweed jacket and the solid thump of a square heel that today's buyers are looking into.

This winter's style asks for nothing more and nothing less than that. It aspires to the basics, it clings to the inspirational and in essence, makes you realize that without self-confidence and panache even the most illusive and flattering creation can look as dull and lifeless as potato sacking.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Layout & Design by Marni E. Hellner & Tara MK Connelly

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"Young people dictate the trends of music. I'm thrilled to death that they have kind of clasped me to their collective bosoms and said, 'Okay, you're hip, you're cool, we like you.'" — Mel Torme

"Hosting a game show." — Matthew Perry from Friends when asked what power is, in Entertainment Weekly.

"Records are what I do for a living, but acting is an outlet." — Jon Bon Jovi

"I'm Chandler from Friends." — Trick or Treater on "Partners."

People and Pop Culture in the News

It is safe to say that the O.J. Trial hoopla will never end. Word has it that one of its jurror's will pose nude for Playboy. Phrase anything for a buck come to mind?

Tales of the bizarre and unusual — a woman in France broke the "old" record at 120 years. So that means for most of us, we weren't even a thought yet.

The Three Tenors opening up for Hootie and The Blowfish? Either Hootie is looking for another audience or the trio has decided to take a break from records, and yet another album.

John Wayne Bobbitt just doesn't know when to say when and he obviously hasn't learned his lesson.

Rumors have it that the star of Short Cuts (the porno) wants to get back together with Lorena. Obviously, this isn't a decision made with his ....

Anna. Nicole. Smith. If it isn't bad enough that she's still battling over money she has to go and put out a new unisex perfume.

Because of Michelle Pfeiffer's Dangerous Minds, CBS is planing to work on a sequel to "To Sir With Love" a TV movie in the '70s starring Sydney Portier. Wonder if he'll look as cool in a leather jacket as Pfeiffer.

Johnny Depp recently bought a $2.3 million four bedroom house above Los Angeles Sunset Strip. This is Depp's first venture as a homeowner. No word on whether or not girlfriend Kate Moss will reside there, too.

Melissa Gilbert and husband Bruce Boxleitner are proud parents of a two month-old premature son named Michael named after the late actor Michael Landon.

The creator of "Ren and Stimpy" who enjoyed brief pop cult status is suing MTV for merchandising rights to his animated show. John Kricfalusi claims that the merchandising rights revert back to him within four years after the shows original airdate. The artist is asking for an injunction against MTV, compensation and $100 million in punitive damages.

Tired of the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers dominating kid's minds and TV time? Well despair no longer. Sailor Moon is one of the newest addition to American cartoons and is red hot. She is yet another action figure from Japan and already her doll is outselling the Power Rangers.

Sabrina may be the movie that removes Harrison Ford from the realm of action films. The 53-year-old actor signed a $20 million deal to star with Brad Pitt in Devil's Own and there still is the promised and much-anticipated fourth Indiana Jones.

Material from this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Book — Real World

MTV is always thinking. Just when viewers were sick of seeing the "Real World" episodes they'd throw in die hard fans for as lope and a trip to a bookstore by publishing, ta da! The Real Real World. Yes, it is an all-purpose all inclusive guide to your favorite "Real World" people.

Everyone is there, even the ones in London. Fun facts, futures, diets and dress codes are all included. Readers will get to read about past episodes, see what the Puck and Eric are doing and just browse.

It's most definitely will be one of the most popular coffee table books and is sure to spark conversation like, "Remember when ..." It's also a distinct symbol of our generations likes and dislikes. Much like Colorfurms, Betty Crocker Easy Bake ovens, and He-Man, The "Real World" is a definite definer.

— Tara MK Connelly

Band — The Make-Up

R U A Believer? Do you believe in the Make-Up? If you were amongst the crowd at Hampshire College it would be difficult not to be a convert.

While most of the world was out trick-or-treating on Halloween night, the Make-Up performed a fantastic show that most audience members will never forget. Featuring ex- members of the legendary D.C. band Nation of Ulysses, the Make-Up offer a new more soulful twist to punk rock.

The band's music plays second fiddle to the crazy stage antics of the lead singer who acts like a hyper Mick Jagger with a soulful voice much like Prince. Throughout the set, the lead singer was throwing himself to the ground, touching audience members, jumping onto the drum set and just going crazy. From the active audience participation to the band's tight fitting all black synthetic clothes, shows like this don't pass through the area everyday. The Make-Up is one band that will surely reach out and grab you.

— Mike Burke

PBS — Abortion

In 1973, a woman bled to death in a motel room from a horribly botched abortion performed by her lover. The frightening picture of the woman, naked on the floor, was published in Ms. magazine and became the rallying point for abortion rights activists.

On Nov. 3, PBS will present a new movie about the dead woman who finally gets a name — Geraldine (Gerri) Twerdy Santor. The film, which is part of the documentary series "P.O.V.," is titled "Leona's Sister Gerri."

The movie features not only interviews with Santor's daughters, but also her best friend and her sister, Leona. It will also look at the circumstances surrounding and leading up to Santor's deaths and will examine both sides of the abortion issue.

In addition, "P.O.V." will air follow-up shows which will invite viewers' reactions about the movie.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Arts & Living... ...the best of everything!

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN • 113 CAMPUS CENTER • 545-1361

HARTFORD The Meadows MUSIC THEATRE INDOORS

NATALIE MERCHANT
TIGERLILY TOUR

TICKETS ON SALE THIS SATURDAY 10 AM

SATURDAY DEC. 16 8 PM

With Special Guest The Innocence Mission

Pick up Natalie's solo debut, Tigerlily, featuring "Carnival" On Elektra compact discs and Digiteq cassettes

http://www.elektra.com
© 1995 Elektra Entertainment Group
A division of Warner Communications Inc
A Time Warner Company

WHITE ZOMBIE

RAMONES & into another

SATURDAY • DECEMBER 2 • 7:30 PM

Reserved seats available at The Meadows Box Office, (open Mon.-Fri. 11am-2pm) or at STRAWBERRIES MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES (cash only) located in CT & W. MA and at Extra Extra News & Info, 825 Main St., Htfd; M-F 6am-5pm; Sat 7am-5pm.

or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX 203-422-0000

radio 104 rock-solid fm

Budweiser THIS BUD'S FOR YOU

NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility gates. No refunds. No exchanges. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change.

people's bank Member FDIC

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II

The contest of the semester is here! Don't miss out on your chance to enter! Fill out your Collegian Restaurant Guide's Entry Forms and/or come down to the Collegian today for details.

Win

Dinner For Two At . . .

Judies

Transportation Provided By . . .

Executive Limousine Service

Drawing To Be Held Friday, November 3rd, At The Student Union at 4:00pm

~ PREVIEWS ~

Quartet returning to dazzle FAC

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Correspondent

COURTESY STEVE J. SHERMAN

The Lark Quartet will be returning to the Valley Nov. 5.

Nov. 5 marks a special day on the Fine Arts Center calendar as the all-female Lark Quartet returns to the University of Massachusetts for what will undoubtedly be an awe-inspiring performance.

One of the highlights will be the world premiere of the FAC commissioned piece by Bulgarian composer Penka Kouneva — this new three-movement piece entitled "String Quartet" will be performed alongside the more traditional repertoire, including interpretations of works by contemporary composers such as Jay Kernis, Peter Schickele, John Deak, Libby Larsen and Shulamit Ran.

More recent additions to their repertoire include the likes of Amy Beach and Gideon Klein (whose music faced repression under the Third Reich of Nazi Germany). These latter additions were most recently performed at the 1994 Holstein Musik Festival.

The Lark is back to help the Fine Arts Center celebrate its 20th anniversary and they bring with them an accolade of musical recognition. Their pedigree includes such achievements as the winning of the gold medal in the 1991 Shostakovich International String Quartet Competition in St. Petersburg, Russia and the highly-prized 1990 Naumberg Chamber Music Award in New York.

In Australia, they cleaned up the top prizes in the 1991 Melbourne International Chamber Music Competition. Also, in Europe, they have won the London International Competition of Great Britain, the Paolo Borciani Competition in Reggio Emilia, Italy and the Karl Klinger Competition in Munich, Germany.

One of the most important elements that also helped win over audiences is the Quartet's commitment to a broadening of chamber music awareness into all walks of society — most notably in the field of education. This has been facilitated by their highly-successful residency at Dartmouth College and by their visiting professorships at San Diego State, Florida State and Florida Atlantic Universities.

Founded in 1985, the Lark Quartet (which is ensembled in residence at Dartmouth College, but which resides in New York) is composed of Eva Greusser and Jennifer Orchard, violin, Anna Kruger on viola and Astrid Schween on cello.

The Lark Quartet will be performing at Bowker Auditorium on Nov. 5 at 7 p.m.tickets (available at the FAC box office 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS) are priced at $23 and $18, with $5 tickets for Five-College students and $10 tickets for those aged 17 and under.

COURTESY JUERGAN TELLER

Elastica to take Springfield this Saturday night.

Elastica makes the connection

Britain's best new wave punk band to appear at Mikara's

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Not too many people consider the Springfield music scene on par with Liverpool or Seattle (or even Sunderland for that matter), and it is hard to find a large city with a worse music scene. However, this is slower changing. This Saturday at Mikara's in Springfield, England's hottest export in years, Elastica, will take the stage in what will surely be one of the more entertaining shows to pass through the city.

Since the release of their debut album earlier this year, Elastica have been the buzz of the music world as they dominated the airwaves and MTV with hits like "Stutter" and "Connection" which were named by the Los Angeles Times as the two best rock songs of the year. Elastica first big American exposure came this summer as they toured aboard the Lollapolloza festival.

Much like their American male peers Green Day, Elastica's music borrows (if not virtually steals from) several punk bands from the late '70s and '80s such as the Buzzcocks, Wire and the Stranglers. Although the songs have a familiar feel to them, the band has the ability to write sweet, catchy punk tunes that offer a breath of fresh air amongst the mediocre sounds of today's guitar driven alternative rock scene.

Their debut album simply entitled, Elastica, contains 16 short punky fun tunes that will keep your head bobbing and your toes tapping. They are filled with enough punch and pop to knock you out. Many critics rank Elastica as one of the most impressive debut albums of the year. Even Seventeen enjoyed it, "These days, some Brit bands are cool, many aren't. File Elastica under the former."

Elastica formed late in 1992 after Justine Frischmann left Suede before the band hit it big. Wishing to form her own band she ran an ad in Melody Maker, a popular British weekly music newspaper, looking for a guitarist into Wire, the Stranglers and the Fall. Before the band even played their first gig, the British music press was hyping Elastic as the next big thing. Unlike most press faves, Elastica's fame has lasted much longer than a week on the cover of Melody Maker or New Musical Express.

This Saturday's show is part of their third American tour within the past year, an unprecedented amount of touring for a British band considering the fact that the Stone Roses have toured the States once in the last seven years. If their previous live shows are any indication, this is one performance you will not want to miss.

Elastica performs at Mikana's in Springfield this Saturday with Loud Lucy. Doors open at 8:00 p.m. and the show is 18 plus. Call the club for more details at 796-7127.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring, "Sam Adams Lager" $16.99 case

Captain Morgan $15.99 1.75 liter

Genuine Draft case bots. $9.49

"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues

Smuttynose- Shoals Pale Ale, Old Brown Dog Ale
Catamount- All flavors including 'X-Mas Ale!'
Harpoon- all flavors including 'Winter Warmer!'
Shipyard- Stout, Brown Ale, Export, & 'Old Thumper!'
Pete's Wicked- Ale, Lager, Wheat, Red, & 'Winter Brew!'

Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95

Woodchuck Draft Cider $4.99/6pk pack

Bacardi Limon $8.99 750 ml

Glen Ellen White Zinfandel $3.99 750ml

All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON $140	$280
PARIS $175	$350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220	$439
TOKYO $859	Roundtrip

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS

ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99

ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99

7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.

LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri. 8 p.m. - 1a.m. Call 256-4560 or 256-3425

SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99

COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

Green Day

LIVE IN CONCERT with special guest
THE RIVERDALES
November 13
7:30 pm
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
General Admission
ALL TICKETS ONLY $15*

TICKETS ON SALE NOW
AT THE SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER BOX OFFICE,
CIVIC CENTER PHONE CHARGE (413) 787-6600
TICKETMASTER OUTLETS: TOWER RECORDS • FILENE'S • ANN & MORE
TICKETMASTER PHONE CHARGE: (413) 733-2500 • (617) 931-2000
*DOES NOT INCLUDE SERVICE CHARGE EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP
Green Day Insomniac available on Reprise CDs and cassettes

WHAT NEXT AFTER THE FINAL FINAL?
RELAX

WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOUR CAREER

The Monster Board is An Eye Opener.
The Ultimate Career Site On The Web.
Conduct a job search, post your resume, even apply on-line in minutes ... all free!
No Pen. No Paper. No Postage. Just sit back and click.
What could be easier? Or more worthwhile?

The Monster Board

Find Your Future Online With The Monsters!
http://www.monster.com

pay attention to life ... share what you find ... make noise ... move on ROAR
to detect and serve the new leaders of this world
http://www.monster.com/roar/Roar.html

Because The Job Market Is Scary Without Them

Take a trip back to Our Town

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will present Our Town, the classic play about life by famous American playwright, Thornton Wilder. The play will be featured at the Rand Theater in the Fine Arts Center on Nov. 2-4, 8-11 and 17-18 at 8 p.m.

The drama, directed by award-winning Edward Golden, examines the fleeting and often unpredictable passage of time that defines a human life.

Golden offers a probing view into Wilder's script, taking a close and intimate look into the affairs of people who live out their lives in the small New England town of Grover's Corner. The experiences shared by the townspeople is a microcosm of the sometimes touching, always interesting ways in which people in a community interact when they know one another over a long period of time.

The story revolves around two families who live next door to each other, the Webbs and the Gibbs. The plot follows the two families as their lives weave in and out intricately. Ultimately Emily Webb marries George Gibb. After Emily's death, she looks back at her life and takes a deep look at what was and what will be.

Our Town is about growing up and the endless quest for identity. Reflective and thought provoking, the play traditionally borders on sticky sentimentality.

Golden has taken a different approach to the play. His version searches out the hard truth of the characters' behavior and thereby avoids any of the usual sugary sweet mentality so often associated with the play.

The cast of more than twenty includes Skid Maher as Doctor Gibbs, Mary McCue as Mrs. Gibbs and Ken Ward as George Gibbs. Mrs. Webb is played by UMass Associate Professor Julie Nelson, Editor Webb by Marty Nurden and their daughter Emily by Deirdre O'Keefe.

The set design is created by Troy Hourie with lighting design by Kathe De Vault and costume design by June Gacke.

Tickets are $6 general; $3.50 for students and seniors. Advance purchase of tickets is recommended. For more information, call the FAC box office at 545-2511.

The popular American play Our Town will be shown at the Fine Arts Center.

COURTESY DEAN WILLIAMS

Powder starring Jeff Goldblum, Sean Patrick Flannery and Mary Steenburgen.

Powder misrepresents real issues

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

POWDER
Directed by Victor Salva with Mary Steenburgen, Jeff Goldblum, Sean Patrick Flannery
Playing at Mt. Forms Four

Powder is the tale of discrimination against someone because his skin is too white.

Diagnosed with albinism at his tragic birth, newborn Powder is rejected by his father who, grieving the coincidental loss of his wife, cries, "That's not my son." Left to be raised by his grandparents, Powder is kept in the seclusion of a farmhouse basement, away from the society which will soon condemn him.

We find teen-aged Powder in the shadowy cellar amongst piles and piles of books after the death of his grandparents. Jessie Caldwell, the head of a school for troubled youths (played by Mary Steenburgen), is called in by the town's sheriff, Barnum (Lance Henriksen) to talk the boy out of his isolation and into school.

Powder's experiences at school reveal the boy to be a genius, as he scores off the charts of an I.Q. test and can memorize the text of every book put in front of him. Bug-eyed Jeff Goldblum plays the wacky science teacher who is convinced that Powder's body is essentially a lightening rod and his brain is composed of sheer energy.

Powder's strange powers, such as utilizing his energy to make everyone's silverware in the cafeteria fly across the room and stick together in a floating mass, or make a cold- hearted deer hunter feel the pain of death by touching the hunter with one hand and the deer with the other, gain him more ridicule than approbation. Shocking as they may be, Powder's antics with electricity fail to inject the same energy into this drab film.

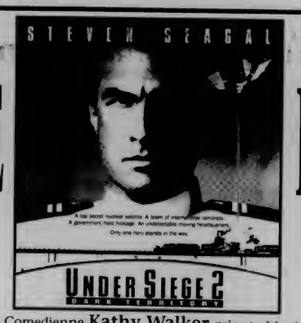
Sean Patrick Flannery's Powder is so perceptive, he can understand and actually accepts why he is discriminated against by both his peers and the adults in town. He is different, so he is feared — no leaps or bounds in the surface issues of this plot. His solution is to run back to the sanctity of the farmhouse, which he can not inhabit because it has been seized by the bank.

Apparently, Powder's option to run rather than face the town's rejection is supposed to be estimable, because he is intellectually and spiritually above them. Powder is looked upon as an angel, sent to these callous people to try to change the way they look at the world. He does enlighten a handful of people, but the overall feeling the film generates is one of sapsy insincerity.

Questions can be made about the representation of albinos in Powder. The film plays off people's ignorance towards albinism, but does little to explain anything about the disease itself, thus propelling the stereotypes further. By portraying Powder as an alien, almost E.T.-like being, the film dehumanizes a very real disease.

Another controversy circulating is the fact that writer/director Victor Salva — a convicted child molester — made the PG-13 film for Hollywood Pictures, which is associated with Walt Disney/ MGM Pictures. Carrying this prejudgment into the theater, several interpretations regarding Powder's ostracism and abuse have been tainted, perhaps justifiably so. The bullies in the film don't beat him up — they sexually and physically humiliate him by stripping his clothes off and taunting him.

Powder lacks the seriousness and sensitivity a film about discrimination and ostracism requires. It is difficult to sympathize with a victim who doesn't regard himself as such, and equally as challenging to enjoy a film which cannot break through surface issues and get to the heart of the matter. C



FREE FREE
Comedienne Kathy Walker prior to Movie
BLUEWALL CAFE
NOVEMBER 3, 1995
8:00 PM
MOVIE COMEDIENNE

Collegian Classifieds
They Work!

Looking to have a voice in the Campus Center/ Student Union Complex?
- Want to have a say in what occurs in the CC/SU Complex?
- Want to work closely with Administrators, Student Organizations, and Student Government?
- Have any bright ideas?
- We're looking for members. COME JOIN US!! Call or stop by our office.

Campus Center/Student Union Commission
817 Campus Center, 545-0198

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATIONS 586-6843
33 WEST STREET NORTHAM

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Rolling Rock	$6.99 12 pack Bottles	Bacardi Limon	$8.99 750 ml
Natural Light	$4.39 12 pack cans	Seagram's Extra Dry	$11.99 1.75 liter
New Amsterdam (Blonde, Black & Tan, Amber, Ale)	$4.99/Six	Gordon's Vodka	$5.99 750ml plastic
Shipyard (Ale, Brown Ale, Stout)	$4.99/six	Keg Special Sam Adams Lager	$80.00
Early Times Bourbon 750 ml	$6.99

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
Music From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

FORMERLY TWISTEN'S
PRUDDY'S
OPEN!
YOU GOT THE BUCK, WE GOT THE BREW!
HOUSE BREW $1 / PINT
$2 JUMBO RUM & COKE
$2 RED WOLF PINTS
$1 MUNCHIE MENU
Just Opened for NIGHTLIFE!
9PM til 1AM
THURS FRI SAT
Across From Police Station

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Bela Fleck jazzes up Halloween

By Jeremy Kipp
Collegian Correspondent

BELA FLECK AND THE FLECKTONES
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 31

There are few finer pleasures in life than relaxing and enjoying four extremely talented musicians play beautiful music. This Halloween night at the Iron Horse was a prime example as Bela Fleck and the Flecktones put on a fantastic display of fusion jazz featuring a banjo, a SynthAxe Drumitar, outrageous bass-playing and a special guest on wind instruments, Paul McCandless. If you have ever wanted to see an incredible instrumental jazz show, you just missed an opportunity.

Adorning festive Halloween masks, Bela Fleck and the Flecktones nonchalantly walked right past a few people who were still waiting to get into the packed club to take the stage. Their masks stayed on during the opener, "Vix 9," which led into "Backwoods Galaxy," both excellent previews of the night to come. As a newcomer to Bela Fleck, it took a little while to appreciate their presentation and unique orchestration — the use of a Drumitar (guitar/drum machine) instead of a drum set, a wild electric banjo, oboe, recorder, and soprano saxophone, all driven by the mastery of Victor Lemonte Wooten on bass.

"Scuttlebutt" really got the show moving, and was followed by some great trade-off solos on "Irish Medley." Then came the bass solo and the crowd never recovered. Playing the fret like a piano, Wooten spun out bass-slapping ecstasy, including renditions of "Amazing Grace" and "The Benny Hill Show Theme."

After more recent tunes, "New South Africa" and "Rainlands" won the crowd approval, Bela Fleck blew the crowd away with a blistering banjo solo. From here on end, the show went all acoustic, with bassist Wooten breaking out a cello to accompany McCandless' recorder and percussionist Future Man's "Box" with a rattle and various drum sounds.

Jazz has come a long way and there is no doubt that Bela Fleck is ready to take it further. Their "fusion jazz" style is as original as it is exciting. As for Jazz fans — keep your eyes peeled for the band to return with more outrageous fusion jazz.

COURTESY MERCURY

Plaid, Plaid World

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones bring their brand of ska core to the stage at Pearl Street for two shows — Nov. 18 and 19. Saturday's show is 18-plus and Sunday is all ages. Tickets go on sale this morning at Tix Unlimited or the Northampton Box Office.

Film festival to be held in Northhampton

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

This weekend Northampton will celebrate the art and craft of film and video in its first-ever film festival.

It sounds surprising that Northampton — the Valley's definitive haven for the arts — has never been host to a film festival. Thanks to Northampton Film Associates and the Northampton Center for the Arts, history will change.

Howard Polonsky, who founded Northampton Film Associates along with his wife Dee DeGeiso, and one of the head coordinators of the Festival, said he could not think of a more ideal place than Noho and wondered why it had not been done before.

"Our ultimate goal [in creating the Festival] is twofold. We want to show the films of independent filmmakers as well as have people who don't often go to see independent films view them," said Polonsky. "We also will add an educational component by having panel discussions with filmmakers and writers after each screening."

The Festival will begin tomorrow night at 6 p.m. with an opening reception at the Words & Pictures Museum. Special guest Frederick Marx, one of the makers of Hoop Dreams, will discuss the making of the documentary, show out-takes from Hoop Dreams, and present a screening of his Emmy nominated film, Higher Goals.

From a submission pool of over 90 films, 22 were selected by the committee to be presented in various locations Saturday and Sunday. Four local filmmakers were also invited to display their creations.

turn to FILM FESTIVAL, page 10

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2-27
Three credits

Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27-January 27
Up to six credits

January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico

These programs emphasize firsthand learning through guided group activities and intensive individual study. Each program provides room, board, and local transportation. Please call for application deadlines and other details.

Call now!
617 287-7915

Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE Friday, Nov. 17
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information: Campus Activities Office Student Union or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

WHEN YOU SAW TORI AMOS, CRACKER AND COUNTING CROWS ON TOUR LAST YEAR did you have a dog's eye view?
(featuring Peter Stuart) dog's eye view
happy nowhere
THE DEBUT ALBUM. In stores now
WRITE TO:
To order call J&R Music World at 1-800-221-8180 CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

Pearl Street Nightclub
THURSDAY NOV 2 WHIMP DANCE PARTY
18 & OVER hosted by Rich Danger
The Area's Biggest Dance Party FREE FOOD COURTESY OF SUBWAY
DOWNSTAIRS 7:30 PM CLUTCH
FRIDAY NOV 3 RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70'S & 80'S FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD
DOWNSTAIRS 8:30 PM Led Zeppelin Tribute PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
SATURDAY NOV 4 CLUB NIGHT
DJ Dave Playing Retro to Techno
MONDAY NOV 6 WRSI Welcomes ROBBEN FORD & THE BLUE LINE
TUES NOV 7 10 pm PENNYWISE
WEDNESDAY NOV 8 GAY NIGHT
THUR NOV 9 10:00 pm Release Party KNUCKLE SANDWICH
FRI NOV 10 8:30 pm WRSI Welcomes BEN HARPER
Pearl Street Welcomes the CLUE/RAVE FOR CHARITY See You at 11:00 pm
SAT NOV 11 9:00 pm WRSI Welcomes POI DOG PONDERING
MON NOV 13 8:00 pm JEFFERSON STARSHIP
(Featuring the Grand Of Light Show)
SAT NOV 18 SUN NOV 19 THE MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
SAT 18+/SUN All Ages
COMING TO PEARL STREET...
11/10 7 SECONDS / NOFX
11/15 THE BOOMEN (down)
11/19 THE BATTLEFIELD BAND
11/21 KORN
11/23 THE SKIDS
Tickets for all shows available at N Iron Box office 586-8686, 1-800-THE-TICK Strawberries. For The Record in Amherst About Music in Greenfield
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413 586 7751

1177 N. Pleasant Street
North Amherst (3 minutes from UMASS)
549-4555
muddy duck cafè
Dinner & Cafe Menus:
Delicious Rotisserie
CHICKEN, DUCK, and TURKEY
...vegetarian to grilled fish to Hamburgers...
Thurs., Fri., Sat. Cafe Menu 'til Midnight
Bar 'til 1am
We Want To Be Your Special Late Night Place
NEW HOURS
DINNER
Tues., Wed. & Sun. 5-9 pm
Thurs., Fri., Sat. 5-10 pm
SUNDAY BRUNCH
10 am - 2pm
Fine Selection of Wines, Beer, Microbrews & Frosted Mugs

■ Maloney

continued from page 5

subtle changes make all the differences.

Remember those tight sweaters with the big stripe across the chest that Greg Brady used to wear? With Retro in, these tiny bits of wool and cotton are back big time. The style first started with the ski slopes — it's snug fit was supposed to ensure warmth without the bulk. Now it is part of the new ski–wear inspired line that is anything but cool. The look revolved around the concept of sleek, aerodynamic shapes and vibrant colors.

High–tech fabrics which allow for the warmth without looking like you were going sledding at age five are guaranteed to keep you warm and dry even out here in Western Massachusetts.

The nylon jacket (favored by snowboarders and skiers alike) have been taken off the slopes and onto the runways. Found in a barrage of colors from "look at me" neon to sparkley shiny metallics, the emphasis is on shiny versus matte. Since one of the key ideas this season is contrasting flat with shine, pairing these jackets with a cable knit sweater shows savvy fashion sense.

Everytime I pass Zanna on North Pleasant Street, I see the same pair of black leather knee–length boots sitting in the window. They call to me. They draw me inside. The other day they even tricked me into trying them on. "Mod" inspired these boots are a perfect example of the other big buzz word in the industry that hasn't been able to die off.

I couldn't actually advise striding around campus comfortably in them, but at least you'd look chic. Go–go boots, rib–hugging turtlenecks, hip–hugging mini–skirts and chain–link belts are all part of this look. Be care not to go overboard — like the pastels, this look is not for everyone.

Also bringing to mind traces of nostalgia are this season's tweeds. Rugged and a little bit rough, they have a '90s sensibility. No longer strict and formal, they have become more out–doorsy and casual. Traditionally considered the opposite of young and sexy, it's now being used in shapes very skinny and close to the body. Like the new ski–wear line, tweed is also very warm, making it a stylish and practical choice.

The best thing about this season's trends and looks is the fact that one doesn't necessarily need a lot of money to get the desired look. All you really need to know is where to look and what to look for.

The tight–fitting sweaters, the classic tweeds and plaids, mini–skirts and turtlenecks can all be found at low prices in second–hand stores and vintage shops thought the area. All you need is some vision and a little touch of creativity.

Rebecca Maloney is a Collegian correspondent.

OUTS OF FASHION

COLORS:

IN	OUT
1. Pastels	1. Vamp
2. White	2. Black (briefly)
3. Metallics	3. Baby blue

OUT
1. Cindy Crawford
2. Kate Moss
3. Naomi Campbell

STYLES:

IN	OUT
1. Sling back heel	1. Stiletto heels
2. Small handbag	2. Waifness
3. Sleek ski inspired wear	3. Blunt layered hair cuts

■ TV

continued from page 5

intrigue and wackiness. Viewers were tempted with a wild Halloween party at Shooters. Instead it turns out that the only big party there involved Amanda getting drunk and Peter carrying her off.

The entire episode reeked of predictability, from Brooke and her pregnancy power trip to Jo and Jake having yet another misunderstanding. Why do they even bother to get together? Even the Matt and Michael incident with the grades didn't phase me nor the fact that Shooters is now having a dance night. You see, people have seen these plots before — when they were on "90210." And doesn't anyone else feel like heaving when Alison starts sucking face with Hailey?

"Melrose" is beginning to sink fast if they have to recycle plot lines from the Beverly Hills brats. If Starr wants to keep up the ratings he's going to have to get better writers.

On "Partners," hilarity ensued with Bob ending up at a party with two dates. The plot revolved around Owen and Alicia trying to convince everyone how much Hellaware bit the big one.

The only truly amusing part was when this little round Asian boy shows up at their door in a bowling shirt and glasses. When asked what his costume is he replies, "I'm Chandler from 'Friends.'" Another mildly funny part was when the hapless couple were forced to give out canned goods and magazines in lieu of candy because they ran out of the good stuff.

In "Ned & Stacey" it seems as if the writers were scrapped for ideas and used a lot of the same gag lines as "Partners." There was the person who hated Halloween (Stacey), the person that was into it (Ned) and of course, they didn't have any candy. Familiar, huh?

The only highlight of the show was when Ned and Stacey end up making out unknowingly (think costumes and mistaken identities), but fortunately the writers were awake enough to not let this blossoming attraction ruin the show (remember "Moonlighting?"). They killed it before it can go on, thus ensuring viewers continuing attention.

The highlight of the entire Halloween hoopla (with the exception of the "90210" love potion thing, which thankfully wasn't available for this column) was the "Simpsons" which involved Homer going into a techno 3–D type world and saying, "Wow. It looks expensive in here." Of course there were the reruns of Homer and the time– traveling toaster and "The Shinnin'," but it was the "Simpsons," which is consistently funny and always good.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member. Collegian columnist Tara MK Connelly contributed to this column.

■ Demirjian

continued from page 5

Deneuve, (from the film Belle de Jour). Classic elegance with black and white silks and close knit dresses, with strong jewels to complete the visage. This month's Elle also spotlights mod floral prints; with inspiration from Andy Warhol's brightly colored silk screens. These looks are accented by model's toting around tiny handbags in vinyl, leather and metallic materials.

To counter these dramatic looks is a western appeal seen in jeans and leather worn loose and casual. Along with an assortment of resort ensembles in whites and pastels, for all of us skipping off to tropical islands this winter.

It is difficult to scratch the surface of what is hot now, with the saturation of designers all trying to stand out from the rest. One French designer who has successfully made his mark with the seasons strangest take, is Jean–Paul Gaultier, featured in Top Model magazine this month. His runway show tagged as "the weirdest show on earth," with a cast of not only models but rock stars, Hollywood faces and even grandmothers. His peculiar creations have a futuristic, punk look bordering on freakish.

Gaultier has put together an eclectic collection of leather, latex, satin and metal — ranging from coats and dresses to second skin bodysuits and plenty of fishnet stockings. The designer distinctly crosses sexuality with the bizarre and pulls it off perfectly; leaving us with eccentric, unforgettable images.

Now we are left standing in our closets scratching out heads trying to make something of the piles of flannels and jeans. After these elegant and outrageous looks have been adapted to fashions that filter into our wardrobe. The best approach is to take one key style or image from these designers, to encompass the full view of the season and trends.

Alice Demirjian is a Collegian Correspondent.

Play focuses on creator of latest trends

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — According to Diana Vreeland, fashion editor extraordinaire, bad taste wasn't so awful. It was having no taste at all that truly was abhorrent.

Vreeland was a woman of definite opinions, and those opinions are proclaimed with fearless abandon in Full Gallop, a hilarious one–woman show starring Mary Louise Wilson as New York's grandest style maven. The production currently is on view off–Broadway at Manhattan Theater Club's Stage II.

Listen to her bark "God! I miss fringe!" and her insistent enthusiasm will have you ready to redo the slipcovers.

The play, actually more of an extended character sketch, was co–authored by Wilson and Mark Hampton. So it's not surprising that it is eminently actable, a real workout for the actress who seizes its wit with considerable flair.

Vreeland, who died in 1989, was not an ordinary woman. "As Joan Crawford once said, 'If you want the girl next door — go next door,'" cackles Vreeland, between puffs on a perpetually lighted Lucky Strike.

The woman was a trend–spotter and a trendsetter. "Give them what they never knew they wanted," she says. And as editor of Vogue, the fashion magazine, Vreeland was in a position to do so.

David Letterman beefs up weekly line up

By Fraizer Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — What David Letterman needs is a getaway. A break. Say, a week in L.A. Catch some rays. Browse the shops on Melrose. Get a snapshot of the spot where Hugh Grant got busted.

And as long as he's out there, maybe Dave could toss off a week's worth of shows.

Yeah, that's it. Originate "Late Show" from Los Angeles next Monday through Friday (airing, as usual, weeknights at 11:35 p.m. EST on CBS).

Better round up some stars to come on. People like Danny DeVito, Ellen DeGeneres, Bruce Willis, Jerry Seinfeld, David Duchovny, Heather Locklear, musical guests Bonnie Raitt and Green Day, and, to kick things off Monday, Arsenio Hall in his first TV appearance since giving up his own late–night hour.

Then drag out that fancy set with the wading pool from "Late Show's" memorable first L.A. trip in May 1994, spruce 'er up, and roll tape!

To be honest, when "Late Show" goes on the road, things aren't quite that spontaneous. You know how it is. They have to do some planning.

In fact, Letterman has already made a West Coast hop to pre–tape some comedy bits. F'instance...

"We filled a Buick convertible with 1,000 tacos," Dave reported a few days ago. "I drove around with a bullhorn, passing them out. Now THAT'S comedy ... ain't it?

■ film festival

continued from page 9

Other highlights of the Festival include a discussion and presentation by one of the first feature–length animators, Vincent Fago, about his film Mr. Bug Goes to Town, as well as a screening of Don Was' new documentary, I Just Wasn't Made For These Times, about Beach Boy Brian Wilson. A question and answer brunch with Ken Burns will be held at Spoleto at 10 a.m. Sunday morning.

Festival events will take place at various locations Nov. 3– 5. Call the Academy of Music or the Northampton Center for the Arts for ticket prices and information at 586–7282.

WILLIAM baldwin
CINDY crawford
HE'S A COP ON THE EDGE.
SHE'S A WOMAN WITH A DANGEROUS SECRET.
THEY'VE BEEN TARGETED BY THE RUSSIAN MOB,
AND NOW THEY'RE BOTH...
FAIR GAME
WARNER BROS. PRESENTS
A SILVER PICTURES PRODUCTION WILLIAM BALDWIN CINDY CRAWFORD
FAIR GAME STEVEN BERKOFF CHRISTOPHER McDONALD
MUSIC MARK MANCINA EDITED BY DAVID FINGER, CHRISTIAN WAGNER, STEVEN KEMPER PRODUCED BY JAMES SPENCER
DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY RICHARD BOWEN A.S.C. EXECUTIVE PRODUCERS THOMAS M. HAMMEL CASTING BY CHARLIE FLETCHER
BASED ON THE NOVEL BY PAULA GOSLING PRODUCED BY JOEL SILVER DIRECTED BY ANDREW SIPES
OPENING NOVEMBER 3

SPRING 1996
CURRENT ROOM RESERVATION

MONDAY, OCTOBER 30 - FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3

CALL 6-9000, ON CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

CALL 546-9000, FROM OFF CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

TTY - 545 - 0327

9AM - 9PM, MONDAY - THURSDAY
9AM - 4:45PM FRIDAY

If the system says that it is unable to confirm your assignment, you must contact the Housing Assignment Office to reserve your current room for next spring.

Thank you.

■ table tennis

continued from page 16

cial for Chui, it was where the festival took place.

For her senior year of high school, Chui lived in Colorado Springs. Dedicating herself completely to improving her game, Chui studied and trained on site at the U.S. Olympic Training Center. The Olympic Festival was a homecoming of sorts.

"I really enjoyed this year's festival because I got to go back to Colorado," she said. "There are a lot of memories for me there, a lot of people I hadn't seen in a long time. Winning medals is terrific, but it was extra special to compete in Colorado Springs."

Chui's competition experience is not limited to the Olympic Festival, as she has competed in the Junior Olympics, the U.S. Open, the U.S. Nationals and the College Nationals.

After taking the gold in the 1991 Junior Olympics, Chui added to her trophy case by winning the College Nationals in 1993 and 1994.

"For me, every competition is special. It's great to get out there and play," Chui said. "I like playing the national level competition, but it makes me work to improve my game."

Currently, Chui is ranked among the top 10 nationally in table tennis. Rankings in table tennis are based on a point system for each tournament. With each tournament carrying a weight of one to 50 points, playing national tournaments can affect rankings dramatically. With a points total estimated in the high 2,100s, Chui currently ranks sixth in the nation for her sport.

Chui will take those points and her ranking to several tournaments later in the season. First up is U.S. Nationals in Las Vegas, which will be held in December. Chui will then look to make the 1996 Olympic team, when the trials are held next March in Michigan. Finally, April will bring about the College Nationals, at a site to be announced later.

"I'm looking forward to the Nationals, both U.S. and College. They are always a lot of fun," Chui said. "But the Olympic Trials will be special. If I train really hard there is the chance that I will be invited. But there's also Sydney [2000 Games] down the road."

Chui is not sure what the future holds in store for her, only that she wants to continue playing for as long as she is able.

"It's hard for me to say what I'm going to be doing down the road," Chui said. "I want to play until I can't. I would like to be able to teach more people about the sport, to involve more people.

"A big part of my life is table tennis. I love this sport. It's in my blood and it always will be."

■ football

continued from page 16

Virginia 20.

Penn State at Northwestern

At 6–2 the Nittany Lions come into this game trying to play the spoiler, imagine that.

Northwestern is 7–1 and is ranked No. 6 in the nation. The Wildcats need this one if they hope to win, or tie, for the Big 10 championship. After State, the Wildcats only have to play Iowa and Purdue, two winnable games.

Penn St. counts on QB Wally Richardson and wide receiver Bobby Engram. The offense needs to be consistent Saturday and the defense must be able to stop the run.

Northwestern looks to running back Darnell Autry to get the offense going.

He has nine consecutive 100–yard rushing games dating back to last season and is in the top five in the nation in rushing yards.

The Wildcats "Magical Mystery Tour" comes to an end Saturday as Joe Paterno's troops steal a close one. Penn St. 29, Northwestern 26.

Iowa St. at Nebraska

Insert yawn here. You know it's a slow week when this one makes it in. Two questions surround this game.

Question: How much will the Huskers win by? Answer: A lot.

Question: Will Lawrence Phillips see a lot of action in his return form suspension? Answer: Who cares, he shouldn't be playing.

Huskers cover a 40–point spread and solidify their No. 1 ranking. Nebraska 61, Iowa St. 19.

Greg Corey is a Collegian columnist.

■ swimming

continued from page 16

last year and we expect the same thing this year."

There are nine newcomers on this year's team, including three transfers and six freshman. Shana Strothers, who is from Sellersville, Pa., will be competing in the 200 and 400– yard butterfly.

Kerrin McCarthy, from Marblehead and a transfer from Bowling Green, will compete in the backstroke events.

Julie Alexander, a native of Boothwyn, will swim in the middle distance freestyles and the breast stroke.

Kim Schadt, from Keene, N.H., will be diving and is expected to be a contributing member of the team.

"They are an extremely dedicated group," Newcomb said. "They will make the personal sacrifices to do what they have to do. They work hard."

Struggling Patriots sign Wagner

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots, desperate for punting help, have rehired a journeyman who drilled his last kick for them into a teammate's backside four years ago.

"I just want to say that was not my fault," a smiling Bryan Wagner tried to explain Wednesday.

Wagner has played for or tried out with 10 teams since 1985. He never lasted more than two seasons with any of them. Yet he set a Super Bowl record for punting average with San Diego last season and had a decent training camp last summer with the New York Jets.

So the Patriots, eager to replace struggling Pat O'Neill, gave Wagner the job Tuesday without even a tryout and cut O'Neill. New England coach Bill Parcells said Wagner was the only experienced punter available.

Wagner, 33, tried out with four teams before finally catching on with Chicago in 1987. He spent two years with the Bears, two with Cleveland and joined the Patriots in 1991. He lasted just three games and was cut after his final punt, from the end zone, struck blocker Eugene Lockhart's rear. Ernie Mills fell on it for a touchdown with 3:18 left in a 20–6 Pittsburgh victory.

"My claim to fame after this happened is I made that sports bloopers," Wagner said. "The ball was on the one–foot line and he (Lockhart) basically backed up into me ... I'd like to forget that."

He averaged 39.1 gross yards and 29.1 net yards in 14 punts with the Patriots. He found work the next two seasons with Green Bay and had a career–high 42.9–yard average in 1993. But the Packers gave the job to Craig Hentrich in 1994 and Wagner ended up with the Chargers.

He had a good season, then became a free agent. He kept working out after failing to win a job with the Jets and noticed about a month ago that O'Neill was struggling. The Patriots contacted his agent about three weeks ago, then talked with him Monday morning, he said.

"It's tough circumstances to come in for a guy in a slump," Wagner said, "but three of the last four years I've done that. I've come in for a guy that's not done very well or was hurt. I guess you can call me a janitor. I'm just a mopup guy."

O'Neill also handled kickoffs. Wagner's potential to do that is one reason the Patriots signed him, Parcells said, although field–goal kicker Matt Bahr might take over that job.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

glory days when he coached the dangerous backcourt of Derek Harper and Brad Davis. Now if they only could do something about their uniform colors.

Speaking of uniform colors, I realize that teams are trying hard to market everything, but some of the styles and color schemes teams are dreaming up are just plain ludicrous. The trend began last year with the brand new Cleveland Cavalier costumes. Black, orange and that sky blue just doesn't make me what to run out to Champs on a shopping binge. This year things are just out of control. Let's start with the two– time reigning NBA Champion Houston Rockets.

Granted their old uniforms were a little boring but they have gone completely overboard. The spattering of red and white on their blue away jersey look like someone let their four–year–olds finger paint all over the shirts.

The two expansion teams have gotten on the pastel and purple bandwagon, which started with the NHL's San Jose Sharks. First–year franchises Vancouver Grizzlies and the Toronto Raptors have joined the league–wide trend of ugly uniforms. The Raptors have a purple–based dinosaur for a mascot (sounds, like after games they will play that, "I love you, you love me" song), which might influence the kids to cheer for them.

The Grizzlies attire is a bad version of the Cavs' clothing. But even worse than their uniforms is the fact that the color of the floor inside the three–point arc is blue. Why? What ever happened to traditional stadiums and uniforms where the players were on the court to make baskets, not to be on a catwalk? The new style of clothing can't cover up the fact that the two teams combined will not register more wins than the two expansion football teams will finish its inaugural season with.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGE SKI or SNOWBOARD $18 a day STUDENTS

Killington. Mount Snow Haystack sugarloaf/usa Waterville Valley BROMLEY

a free lift ticket is just the beginning

When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement. With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half–pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.

And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.

	Monday thru Friday	Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington	$25	$30
Mount Snow	25	30
Haystack	18	25
Sugarloaf/USA	25	29
Waterville Valley	20	29
Bromley	18	28

Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996

If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.

So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.

the extra credit card is now valid every day!

Call 1-800-86-PEAKS
(1-800-867-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

Celebrate Santana Day!

Selected Santana H2O-proof boots on sale!
One day only–Friday, Nov. 3
Free gift with purchase!
Enter to win free Santanas!

ZANI
Downtown Amherst

last chance to prepare for the December test
Last class begins on: 11/18/95
Phone #549-5780
GRE
get a higher score
KAPLAN

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

OPENING NIGHT
SATURDAY
NOVEMBER 4
10PM - 1AM
House Music with DJ Rich Nunez
Runway Show by Chameleon Salon
Formal to Outrageous Attire
CLUB METRO
World Class Sound & Lights
492 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA
TEL 582-9898

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:00pm	Orchard Hill	4:15pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Newbury Comics

GRAND OPENING

NOVEMBER 4, 1995

50 MAIN ST. • AMHERST, MA

256-8840

TOP 50 COMPACT DISCS ON SALE AT WICKED LOW PRICES!

NOON TO 4PM

ALL T-SHIRTS REGULARLY PRICED $16.99 or less are just $9.99!

FREE NEWBURY COMICS T-Shirt with purchase of $10.00 or more while supplies last.

We Also Carry:

Lava Lamps • Black Lights • Posters • Comic Books • Pop Culture Books • Jewelry

$9.99 T-Shirts

Green Day • Beastie Boys • Charlie's Angels • Rage Against the Machine • Nirvana • Silverchair • André the Giant

And Many More!

HATS! HATS! HATS! NINE INCH NAILS, PHISH, GRATEFUL DEAD AND MANY MORE!

$4.00 off any COMPACT DISC* WITH COUPON At Newbury Comics

no double discounts • sale items excluded

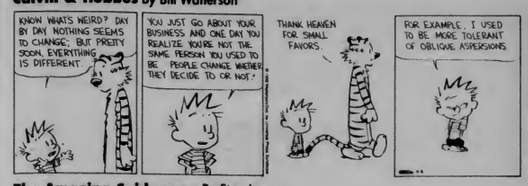
expires 11/12/95 889966

$4.00 off any COMPACT DISC* WITH COUPON At Newbury Comics

no double discounts • sale items excluded

expires 11/12/95 889966

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



KNOW WHAT'S WEIRD? DAY BY DAY NOTHING SEEMS TO CHANGE; BUT PRETTY SOON, EVERYTHING IS DIFFERENT.
YOU JUST GO ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS AND ONE DAY YOU REALIZE YOU'RE NOT THE SAME PERSON YOU USED TO BE. PEOPLE CHANGE WHETHER THEY DECIDE TO OR NOT.
THANK HEAVEN FOR SMALL FAVORS.
FOR EXAMPLE, I USED TO BE MORE TOLERANT OF OBLIQUE ASPERSIONS

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

KHHKHHKT BOY GENIUS TO FANGED TERROR. COME IN! DO YOU READ ME? OVER? KHKT-KHHKT
I'LL TAKE THE WALKIE TALKIE YOU TAKE THE TEST.
IXSAY INUSMAY OURFAY! URSEHWAY!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

MAYBE I'VE BEEN TOO HARD ON PETER. IT'S NOT HIS FAULT THAT SANDRA STEWART HAS A CRUSH ON SPIDER-MAN!
THE LAST THING I EVER WANT TO BE IS A JEALOUS WIFE!
MEANWHILE... YOU'VE GOTTA SAVE SANDRA! SHE'S BEEN KIDNAPPED BY A GAMBLER I OWE MONEY TO!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Life is just totally tough.
It's a bear.
I meet my ex-girlfriend and she says, "How are you?"
I say, "Fine." Actually, I felt so nervous and upset to see her that "Fine" described the tiny particles my brain had broken into when I saw her.
She was stading there looking fragile, lovely, hair by Warner Bros., lips by Renoir, and gentle vocals by Lee Remick.
I said, "How are you?"
She started to cry.
That made me feel much better.

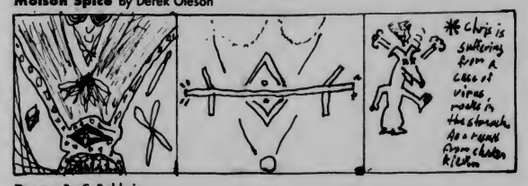
Close to Home By John McPherson

"It's all right. I wrote our PIN number underneath this counter last year."

Plot (and a pretty weak one at that) By Mark Gagmen

hmm. no matter how hard i pull...
DON'T Don't?!
oh great! COME IN!
The door's locked!
Locked? Well that figures... ARE YOU SURE IT'S LOCKED?
Yup, it's locked. Common, open it!
Now what? ARE THERE ANY OTHER DOORS OPEN?
Weekend!! Just open the door you lazy bum!
I CAN'T OPEN THE DOOR! ARE YOU SURE THERE'S NO OTHER WAY OUT?
Look! If you're going to play these stupid games I'M leaving!
No! DON'T GO
Hmm, i would've at least liked to know what it was.

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson



Bruno By C. Baldwin

So... WHAT ELSE DID YOU DO IN THE TWIN CITIES?
GLAD TO SEE YOU WERE SUCH AN IDEAL PERSON WHILE YOU WERE THERE
WELL, I WROTE THIS GREAT SHORT STORY, AND I DID SOME REALLY BRILLIANT DRAWINGS.
COME ON SUSAN, STANDARDS ARE SUBJECTIVE, AND MY STANDARDS ARE BASED LARGELY ON MY ABILITY. WHICH I EXCEEDED, AND THEREFORE AM ABOUT READY TO RAISE MY STANDARDS. I THINK I SHOULD BE PROUD OF THAT. BESIDES, WHAT KIND OF VIRTUE IS SELF-DEGRADATION?
BUT THERE'S A CERTAIN VIRTUE IN HAVING HUMILITY.
OH, LIKE, "I HAVE TO BE HUMBLE SO PEOPLE WON'T GET MAD AT ME, BUT IT IN NO WAY IS A REFLECTION OF MY ACTUAL TALENT."

Generation X By Chris Lehman

HEY, BABY! WHAT'S YOUR NAME?
DO YOU MIND?! I'M STUDYING.
HOW 'BOUT IF I GET YOUR NUMBER..
SHH! I HAVE A TEST TO STUDY FOR.
YOU KNOW, DOUG, CONTRARY TO WHAT YOU TOLD ME...
A LIBRARY IS NOT "THE" PLACE TO PICK UP BABES!!
HUH, ARE YOU GUILTY?!

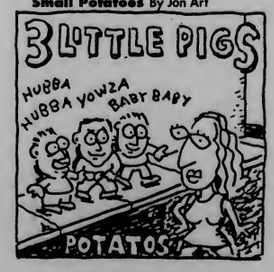
Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

WHAT ARE YOU DOING, NEIL?
OH, HI VIRK! I'M TRYING TO WRITE IN MY JOURNAL BUT THIS PEN KEEPS RUNNING DRY.
WHAT ARE YOU WRITING?
WELL, I'M SUPPOSED TO BE WRITING DOWN MEMORIES OF AN OLD GIRLFRIEND.

GeoFrey By Embryo

HOW MANY LICKS DOES IT TAKE TO GET TO THE TOOTSIE ROLL CENTER OF A TOOTSIE POP? ..... GEOF MAY NEVER KNOW!!
TO BE CONTINUED
CRACK
PROJECT FLATBOY
HELP!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

Ask for our specials.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... T.J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Ryan Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Hellner
Production ..... Amy Paradysz
Leon Latino, Matt Audette

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Roast Turkey
Macaroni & Cheese	Beef Stroganoff
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Golden Burgers	Mexican Veggy Stew
Macaroni & Cheese	Roast Turkey

Friday

LUNCH	DINNER
Sloppy Joe	Chicken Tenders/Sauces
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce	Szechuan Beef & Broc.
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Vegan Sloppy joe	Chicken Tenders/Sauces
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce	Szechuan Tofu

Saturday

BRUNCH	DINNER
Omelet w/ vegetables	Stuffed shells in sauce
waffles, corn beef hash	Pancakes & sausage
BASICS BRUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Jumbo waffles	Black-eyed peas
Polynesian vegetables	Stuffed shells in sauce

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things That Could Make UMass More Exciting

10. Open bars at every D.C.
9. Chancellor Scott legally changing his name to "David 'the Sex-o-cutioner' Scott."
8. Live dancers in Campus Center concourse every day.
7. Every week is Polka week!
6. Filming an episode of "COPS" on campus.
5. Special guest lecturer: Matlock.
4. On campus paint ball wars.
3. Renaming the W.E.B. DuBois library to "The Bitchin' Tower of Power."
2. Beavis and Butt-head on HSCN every day.
1. The UMass faculty all nude review.

Quote of the Day

"It's not easy being green"

–Kermit the Frog

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as tilled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Kai Chi restaurant now delivering to 3am Friday and Saturday. 586-2774.

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services (1-800) 263-6495 ext. FS001.

Obnoxious Audio is here! If you need car audio or alarms call us! We have the lowest prices anywhere carrying high end brands. 549-2980.

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Toyota Starlet Good Condition $800 256-8547.

EMPLOYMENT

Attention December Graduates! Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Fax resume to 617-236-4713. Ann Trenz or Call (800) 782-4237 ex 334.

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec. 16 Jan 10 $100. Call Anne 545-5803, 256-6289.

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING

$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ + free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii). Seasonal/permanent, no experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 ext. C1040.

Exotic dancers Flex hours no age 413 536-0562

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call (800) 209-8142, PIN 3123.

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-5pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri: 413-586-8635. ABT Associates Telephone Research Center. Mt Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal full time employment available at national parks, forests & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N50017.

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849.

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011.

FOR SALE

Brother correctronic (4) typewriter & thousand character storage memory. Almost new. Best offer. Call 546-3904.

Car radio Clarion 5150 detach face tuner cd control. Shallin box was $350 asking $250 Jay 256-8834.

Dioneed back curoce for sale $275 bo 12v ammo roller blades $30 Call Paul 546-6741.

Used Stereo Equipment Large selection pieces to sell. Complete rack systems and separate components. Speakers 8-10 ft tall. Receivers/amps 70 to 200 watts. Guitar amps, much more. Call days/evenings 256-0941.

FOUND

Found new U Mass sweatshirt in grad tower. Call with room number where lost and further description to claim 546-3526.

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8531.

Private Tutor for LSAT GRE SAT. Barry 549-6887.

LOST

I have lost a small black organizer with hide craft written on the front. If anyone finds it please call Tammy at 546-2068.

MISCELLANEOUS

Thank you St. Jude

MUSICIANS

Ivory tickllers original/cover band seeks talented, egotists, keyboardist. Blues, R&B, funk, etc. Call Jay 256-8834 or Greg 256-8606.

PERSONALS

Jose M. Here is clue #2 and this time it's not in dotiguise! I have brown hair and brown eyes. Do you know who I am? Sigma Love, Your big sister.

Kitten It's been 3 wonderful years together & I'm looking forward to many many more!!! W/ great love, Geoff.

To my little pumpkins in chess I love you and keep up the good work! Leeann.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2542.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513.

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robin 546-1794.

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs on the student union 545-7711.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

Sublet Spring Furnished 2 bed apt. On bus rt. Call 253-7687.

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $118 r/t Europe from $298 r/t. Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587-0001. An Encl-New England.

FREE TRIPS AND CASH

Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 spring break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Hey why freeze when you can chill! spring break by Student Travel Services. Lowest rates, reliable, exclusive benefits. Call Aaron 546-8634.

Winter Break Special Killington week $299. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED

HEARING LOSS

Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 582-9951.

Wanted Part Time night servers. Apply at Addown Rt King St Northampton MA.

Wanted!!! Individuals student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS. Call inter-campus programs at (800) 327-6013. http://www.icpt.com

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to stay on the same wavelength as your employers and colleagues. Your determination to broaden your horizons is put to the test. Be patient.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Resist those who urge you to change direction. Have the courage of your convictions; press on. Take a new approach to recurring romantic problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not let your finances become chaotic, especially if this could affect others. A gift of money is headed your way. Welcome an opportunity to help the needy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tend to your professional and commercial obligations. Collect whatever you have coming to you, but wait until next week to launch new ventures. An older person shares useful information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Exercise patience when dealing with family members who are difficult or demanding. You need to postpone signing a document until up-to-date information is available. A long distance relationship heats up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A romantic relationship is passionate but explosive too. Try to gain a better perspective where a long-term partnership is concerned. Communicate your needs clearly but avoid confrontations. A professional matter straightens itself out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22) In business, play your cards close to your chest. Beneficial forces are shaping your future. Armed with the latest facts and figures, you are unbeatable! Romantic prospects are great this month. Mix and mingle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Do not let someone's demands or ego upset you. Those who count know that you are in the right. This afternoon, a change of pace will boost your spirits. Let your imagination...

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Research helps you eliminate some confusion. A fireside chat will restore domestic harmony if you are sincere. Be willing to travel. A spur-of-the-moment trip could salvage a consultant-client relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A romantic partner wants a more permanent relationship. Consider the consequences before making a commitment. A business trip could help you expand your base of operations. Make sure that your car is in top condition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You and a family member should share special moments together. Make plans to visit a local attraction both of you will enjoy. A good book or computer program captures your attention. Seek further information.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The pace picks up at work. Prophetic insights help you pick new business trends. Motivate others to do their best. Professional relationships are more rewarding than in the recent past. Keep business entertainment simple.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

It's the exhilarating feeling you get
When you realize you're in total control of the situation,
When you know things are going your way.
It's the power of information flowing through your fingertips,
When you have all the words
And know all the right moves.
It's being on top.
Numero uno.
King of the Hill.
Top of the heap.
It's feeling the pulse of the world, the beat of the country and the main core of the campus.

It's the Collegian, it's News and it's where you want to be – page one, baby.

Come down to 113 Campus Center and ask for Chris Conner.

Learn how you can be a winner too.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

PUT OUR JEANS ON

GAP
DENIM

For the nearest Gap store call 1-800-GAP-STYLE

Sports Notice
The first ticket pickup for students begins today at 7 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m. Hockey tickets for the Nov 3. Merrimack and Nov. 10 Lowell games, as well as for the men's basketball game Nov. 7 against Moscow, will be handed out. You need your student ID and activity card to get tickets.

Sports

Dion's making saves for UMass

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Dion has given up just 11 goals (0.67 goals-against-average) while making 67 saves for the 11-3-2 Minutewomen

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

When the casual observer takes a look at the Massachusetts women's soccer team in action, it's easy to overlook goalkeeper Danielle Dion.

The sophomore plays behind Nikki Ahrenholz, Erin Lynch, Erica Iverson and Amanda Thompson, who together form one of the best defenses in the country. With that outstanding defense in front of her, she doesn't get tested much.

But Dion shouldn't get overlooked. The 1994 Atlantic 10 All-Conference team member has been making great saves for the No. 16 Minutewomen. She made a game-saving save against George Washington last season and another one this season against Texas A&M. In fact, whenever she's tested, she makes the save.

"I think for the common spectator to watch her, they may not think much as a qualified observer would, because she doesn't get a whole lot of balls in there," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "To me, the impressive part [about her game] is that she is a kid that can stay back in there and she gets all the ones she's supposed to get. That's to me the sign of a great keeper. Not one that's visual, that's loud, that's all over the place, but one that gets all the ones that she should get. That gives your defense great confidence. She's got a few this year that most people wouldn't have got."

In 16 games for the 11-3-2 Minutewomen, Dion has made 67 saves while giving up just 11 goals. Her play this year has proven once again that she is one of, if not the best keepers in the A-10, as well as the country.

"I think she's the best keeper in the conference," Rudy said. "In the country, I haven't seen a better keeper this year. I feel like she was the better keeper of everyone we've faced. There may be some that are a little in front of her right now in terms of experience or age, but I think if she can keep going and expand some parts of her game, which will come with time, I think she's certainly in the top 10 [in the country]. She may be there right now."

Indeed Dion, who currently is rated second in the A-10 for goalkeeping, has been one of the best in the country. She recently just fell out of the nation's Top 10 for goals-against-average where she stayed for most of the season peaking as high as No. 7 in the country.

"I don't really think about [how I compare to other keepers]," Dion said. "I try not to think about it. I don't like to think of myself [like that]. I don't know why. I just never have. Last year, when I got all of the awards I was so surprised. If I am [in the top 10]. I'm surprised, if I'm not, then I don't expect it. When I first got here, being able to start was a really big accomplishment. Coach had said you are going to come in and start.' But you don't believe it until you actually get here and you do it. It was just so amazing to me to be able to start."

In 21 games last year, Dion had 87 saves, eight shutouts and a 0.71 GAA. This year she has 7.5 shutouts and a 0.67 GAA. She just keeps improving.

"We've got a young kid that had a good start, and now she's taken a step up and she's maturing as she goes. She's had a very solid season," Rudy said. "She allows us to be fairly relaxed in the back because we know there's not going to be too many softies going in, and in two year's basically, she's let in one goal that I felt was really directly her error."

"I think some of my decisions are smarter than I did last year. I think it was just a matter of learning," Dion said. "Learning from coach has helped me so much. He's a great coach. I've learned so much from that man."

Even with all the accolades being thrown her way, Dion would rather not talk about it.

"I don't really evaluate [my stats]," Dion said. "Honestly, I haven't really sat down and looked at what I've done or thought about it because I really don't like to during the season. When I see it after the season, then I realize maybe I did to something."

OSU's the real No. 1, Heisman race still open

GREG COREY on College Football

If you didn't have a chance to see the Ohio St. Buckeyes play this past weekend against the Iowa Hawkeyes, you missed one heck of a performance. The Buckeyes are currently ranked No. 4 in the AP Poll and showed plenty more last Saturday.

The Hawkeyes entered this game with a 5-1 record and had lost only to Penn State. This up-and-coming team was simply no match for an Ohio St. team which is the No. 1 team in the country in this writer's opinion.

In the first half of this game the Buckeyes teed-off on Iowa for 56 points and led 49-0 with 10 minutes left in the half. The Ohio St. defense even scored themselves and shut down the Hawkeyes while the OSU offense scored on their first six possessions.

John Cooper's team is 8-0 and have one of the nation's toughest schedules. While Nebraska and Florida State, currently ranked ahead of OSU, have beaten on the Pacifics and Wake Forests of the world, OSU has had to play quality opponents. State's wins have come against the likes of B.C., Washington, Pitt, Notre Dame and Penn St. Not to mention the rest of its Big 10 wins.

QB Bobby Hoying, running back Eddie George and wide out Terry Glenn have been sensational all season and the defense led by Shawn Springs and Matt Finkes hasn't been too bad either.

Ohio St. should run the table until its season finale in Ann Arbor against Michigan. If the Buckeyes win out it would mean a trip to the Rose Bowl and most likely a dead end in the quest for a national championship. Reason why, Florida St., Nebraska and Florida are all currently ranked ahead of OSU. Two of these teams have a real good chance of going into the Fiesta Bowl undefeated and playing for the pseudo-national championship.

Let's hope for justice sake that Ohio St., the true No. 1 team, doesn't have a job done on them like Penn St. did last year when the Nittany Lions went 12-0 and were shut out of the national title.

• The Heisman race is wide open to this point. Here's a quick look at the contenders.

Eddie George still has the inside track. He had 110 yards and four TD's in one half of action last week. His numbers are aided by the overall success of his team.

The under-appreciated Troy Davis of Iowa St. had another 202 yards last week and is up to 1,526 yards on the season.

Tennessee's Peyton Manning (273 yards per game), Florida's Danny Wuerffel (22 TD's), and Florida St.'s Danny Kanell head a strong crop of QB's.

Speaking of QB's, the words "rising stock" come to mind when considering Tommy Frazier. He has accounted for 23 TD's on the ground and through the air, not to mention he is coming of a career-highs with four TD passes and 241 passing yards last week.

• Here's a look at this week's "key" match-ups.

Florida St. at Virginia

This game doesn't appear to stimulating on paper and shouldn't prove to be on the field. The 'Noles come off a bye week and lost a spot in this week's AP Poll. FSU has owned the ACC since it joined four years ago, winning 29 consecutive conference games. Looking to make it 30 in a row will not prove too difficult with Kanell and Warrick Dunn backing a tough offense.

No. 24 Virginia also had a week off. QB Mike Groh and tail back Tiki Barber will need to put up some serious yardage to keep this one close, despite a game-plan that will be designed to slow the game down. 'Noles roll to number 30. Florida St. 48.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

Newcomers make season exciting

Justin Smith on the NBA

Tomorrow begins the 1995-96 professional basketball season. There are many injuries around the league that will determine if teams get off to fast or slow starts. But the biggest influence on the new NBA season, provided regular officials are there to blow the whistles, will be the newcomers.

Golden State selected Joe Smith with the first pick in the draft last June. Along with naming new coach Rick Adelman, formerly of the Trail Blazers, the Warriors have a new attitude. It should be one which will breed winning, now that Latrell Sprewell and Tim Hardaway can play on the same court. Come April, they will be the team that no one wants to play in the first round of the playoffs.

There is another reason why it is fitting the Denver Nuggets play on a Rocky Mountain high (sorry about the John Denver reference). Opponents will now not only have to try and get around the shot-blocking mountain that is Dikembe Mutumbo, but the second pick in the draft, Antonio McDyess, may inspire calling Nugget games, "Twin Peaks."

First-year GM and ex-Celtic great Kevin McHale moved from Timberwolves analysis to front office, taking over as Minnesota's general manager. His first big move will either prove he will be an effective executive or his team will be destined to be the New York Jets of the NBA.

McHale chose Kevin Garnett with his first-ever draft choice. Garnett is the 18-year old high school phenom who decided he was ready for the pros without even giving Dick Vitale the opportunity to call him a "diaper dandy."

The biggest stir in the preseason was made by the third selection in the draft by the Philadelphia 76ers, ex-Tar Heel Jerry Stackhouse. He played most of the exhibition schedule with an injury to his hand and still managed to average double-digits in points. His confidence also shone through as he hit a game-winning three-pointer with the bad hand.

As long as newly acquired trouble-maker Vernon Maxwell isn't a bad influence on the first-year player, the comparisons with that guy from Chicago who wears No. 23 could come to fruition.

During the last few years new additions to the Dallas Mavericks have turned them from NBA doormats to a serious threat to beat any team on any given night. First it was Jimmy Jackson and Jamal Mashburn. Last year Jason was the new Kidd on the block and this year Cherokee Parks will fill the void left by the Mav's troubled superstar, Roy Tarpley. Dick Motta's return to Reunion Arena has given this team some direction and revived memories of the

Turn to NBA, page 11

Women's swimming to begin its season at Vermont

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team will be opening its season this Saturday in Vermont to take on the Catamounts at 1 p.m.

The Minutewomen finished their season last year at 7-4-1, fifth in the Atlantic 10 Conference, fourth at the New England Championships and seventh in the East Coast Athletic Conference.

UMass coach Bob Newcomb has compiled a record of 74-54-1 over his first 11 seasons.

This weekend in Vermont, the Minutewomen will be competing in relays, diving and nine individual swimming events, in freestyle, breast stroke, butterfly and backstroke. The distances of the freestyle range from the 50-yard to the 1,650-yard, 66 laps in the pool.

"Swimming is not easy," Newcomb said. "It is a very tough sport. I would say that the amount of work that the swimmers do can be stacked up to the amount of work from any program here."

What Newcomb was most likely referring to is the 10-12,000 yards the Minutewomen swim in one practice. Not to mention that there are eight workouts a week, including two double sessions (one on Saturday) and three days of weightlifting, two hours apiece.

This year's team has 26 members, 21 in swimming events and five in diving. They are taken from a very large recruiting group each year and work extremely hard to earn their spots.

Senior Sarah Baker returns as one of the Minutewomen's biggest assets to the team.

"She has developed into one of the best sprinters in the East," Newcomb said. "I expect her to really dominate."

Baker is the defending Atlantic 10 champion in the freestyle and will compete in the 50 and 100-yard.

Senior Jessica Griffith will compete in the 100-yard, the 200-yard breast stroke and the 50-yard freestyle.

"She is extremely talented and a great swimmer," Newcomb said.

Karen Sonnwald returns after her freshman season and holds the UMass records in the 500, 1,000 and 1,650 yard freestyles. However, she is unavailable, she will start the year on injured reserve due to a broken foot.

"Karen is special with her distance ability and it will be definitely tough without her," Newcomb said. "We hope to have her back in the water practicing by the end of the month. But until then we have people who can fill her spots and will do a good job."

Angelique Rodriguez, a junior from Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, is one of UMass' best divers.

"She has one of the best diving lists in the East right now," Newcomb said. "She made a huge improvement

Turn to SWIMMING, page 11

Table tennis gaining in popularity

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

To most people who flip to the sports page first thing in the morning, news and updates from the world of table tennis are not the most pressing issue. Ask anyone what they think of when they hear the words table tennis and you will hear a variety of answers — backyard barbecues, family rec rooms, something to do on summer vacation, or more often than not, "you mean ping pong, right?"

But over the past several years, the table tennis market has seen a marked upswing in participation and interest. Clubs specifically designed for the sport are popping up in metropolitan areas across the country. Tournaments and competitions are receiving more recognition, more press coverage.

Jane Chui is a UMass junior in the School of Management. The 20-year-old Bedford native has been playing table tennis since she was six years old. What makes her so special is not the fact that she has participated in the sport for so long, but that she is one of the top-ranked players in the nation and an Olympic hopeful.

Chui began playing table tennis after her father introduced her to the sport. Playing on a table in the garage, Chui's father taught her the basics of the game. But that garage was not enough, so Chui's father started a table tennis club in neighboring Burlington.

"My father is the one who taught me the game. We had a table in the garage, but it's not the best table. We wanted something better," Chui said. "My father helped to start a club in Burlington, and it was a big difference. I play there all the time when I'm home."

Chui started competing in tournaments when she was that young, as well. Only six, she traveled north of the border to take part in the Canadian Open.

"That was scary and I didn't really do all that well," Chui said. "It was my first tournament and I was so young and so nervous."

With hours of practice and competition under her belt, Chui began to make an impact on the national table tennis scene. In 1989 in Oklahoma City, Chui played on the gold medal-winning North team at the Olympic Festival. In individual competition, she took home the bronze in singles and mixed doubles.

"That was a lot of fun. I remember being really nervous because it was my first Olympic Festival," she said. "But there are so many great memories from that year.

"I can picture the opening ceremonies and the medal presentation. It was so big to me, so many people there, so much going on. It was glamorous and exciting."

This summer, for the fifth time, Chui took part in the Olympic Festival. Competing in Colorado Springs, she took home a team gold and a silver in women's doubles. But it was not the medal-winning performance that made the tournament spe-

Turn to TABLE TENNIS, page 11

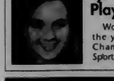
DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Jane Chui, a UMass junior, is ranked No. 6 in the nation for table tennis.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 42 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, November 3, 1995



Lynch named Player of the Year
Women's soccer, with A-10 player of the year Erin Lynch, host the A-10 Championships this weekend (See Sports, page 10).

Columbia declares state of emergency
After the assasination of a prominent political opponent, Columbia's president declared a state of emergency yesterday (See story, page 3).

Look what's popped up!
Papas Fritas will bring their classic pop sounds and catchy lyrics to the Bay State Saturday night (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
There will be rain today continuing into the evening. Expect a high around 60 and a low of 45. Rain will be on and off tomorrow, and there will be a partial clearing on Sunday.

	Today	Saturday	Sunday
	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 55 LOW: 42	HIGH: 58 LOW: 45

Blood, sweat and tears.

JEFFREY J. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

Glass blower Timothy Landers practices his artistic skills. Landers works in the bottom floor of the Graduate Research Center as a technical glass blower but is launching a 'fine art' glass business in the area.

Opinions vary on deans' plan for University

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Since yesterday's publication of the academic deans' proposal for administrative restructuring at the University of Massachusetts, the deans' office, the Faculty Senate and the Student Government Association have been vocal in their reactions to the plan.

The plan represents the deans' response to the Chancellor's "Strategic Thinking Plan" distributed last Spring, in which Chancellor David K. Scott explained his vision of how the University would look in the future, after restructuring certain programs and departments.

The Chancellor then invited respective university bodies to draw up their own ideas and restructuring plans. The deans' proposal was just one of those input documents submitted.

The deans' version eliminates two vice chancellorships, which Dean Joseph Goldstein of the College of Engineering stresses are already temporary.

"The goal of the program is to operate more efficiently, not to save money," Goldstein said.

"The deans feel a lot of the programs under student affairs belong under the Provost, such as admissions, financial aid and the Registrar," Goldstein said. "The deans are fully in support of the proposal and will talk with anyone who wants to discuss it."

Goldstein said the proposal was designed and discussed over a 2-3 month period, and that there was a "very positive" discussion with the Chancellor following.

Dean Thomas O'Brien of the School of Management is also in full support of the deans' proposal and said it was a recommendation, not a rule of implementation.

"It's up to the Chancellor," O'Brien said. "If he decides to use pieces of it, he will follow the traditions of the Faculty Senate. I wouldn't proceed without them and I'm sure he wouldn't either."

However, not all of the administration was in silent accordance with the proposal. Thomas B. Robinson, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, whose job would be eliminated under the plan, said this particular restructuring plan is "not in the best interests of the University."

"Simply rearranging the departments will not automatically further the mission of the University," Robinson said. "I firmly believe that parceling out student services among the other executive areas will hinder rather than help in the provision of optimal support for students and the academic enterprise. I fear that it will inhibit rather than encourage team work among those who endeavor to provide these services."

Many felt there was much confusion and alienation surrounding how the dean's plan was submitted to the Chancellor.

Yesterday's faculty senate meeting in Herter Hall became a forum for those who had problems with the deans' proposal to voice their complaints.

Faculty Senate Secretary John Bracey first heard of the deans' proposal through an anonymous fax sent to his office. He was "puzzled" to receive a document which had no authors' or addressees' name on it. Bracey said that it was not his responsibility to respond to "other people's mail."

"It's the deans' prerogative to discuss it, but we have to wait until it's out in the open," Bracey said. "We have a procedure in place. If it comes before the senate, we will deal with it. It's not our business yet."

Bracey would not further comment on the proposal because he felt that it had not been addressed properly to the senate, and therefore not an issue as of yet.

Many groups, including the SGA, were angry that they were not included in the process of a proposal which affects everyone. The confusion and frustration felt by the SGA stem from what they term the "secretive" process in which the plan was submitted to the Chancellor.

"The document disturbed the SGA very much," President Christine Lopes said. "We want to work with the faculty and the deans. It's not the plan, but the procedure."

Robinson also noted that all departments at the University should have input with regards to such a major rehauling of the system.

"Wherever we go from here, all interested parties must have access to the discussions, including the SGA as a recognized governing body," Robinson said. "This restructuring plan cannot be viewed as simply an intellectual exercise. It has caused a great deal of anxiety and pain for students, faculty and staff alike."

Student Trustee Dan Rivera asked the Deputy Chancellor for copies of all the documents submitted. In turn, the SGA will start working on their own proposal for administrative restructuring to submit to the Chancellor.

Dean Robert Helgeson of the College of Food and Natural Resources responded to many of the student and faculty complaints.

"The deans did not intend to sit down and write a plan for the university," Helgesen said.

Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams spoke on behalf of Chancellor Scott, who is out of the country, in addressing the concerns of the assembly.

"The Chancellor will take this input and commentary as well as the others in redrafting his document," Williams said.

Amherst history seen in writing of local authors

By Amy H. Peradysz
Collegian Staff

"She's very hard to shake," said Polly Longsworth, author of "The World of Emily Dickinson," the most pictorial book about the poet.

Longsworth will be book signing at 3 p.m., Saturday at The Jeffery Amherst Bookstore.

Longsworth, who says she has "worked with Dickinson for 25 or 30 years," wrote "Emily Dickinson: Her Letter to the World," in 1961. "That just started a love affair with Emily Dickinson," she said.

Norton Publishing asked the author to put together "The World of Emily Dickinson," said Longsworth, who is now working on another biography for Norton.

"Dickinson is such a challenge visually," she said. "There's only one picture of her."

Yet, "The World of Emily Dickinson" has a photo on almost every one of its 136 pages. Longsworth explained that she was able to do this by widely interpreting the subject of the book, using photos and illustrations that show the reader some of Dickinson's world, which was centered around her family and her town.

"It was a small town and she knew everybody in it," Longsworth said. "She knew everything that was going on even when she was a complete recluse."

Dickinson's father was the treasurer of Amherst College for 47 years, and after he died in 1874, his son Austin became treasurer.

"The townies and college students were neighbors and friends. It wasn't as distinct a divide as it is now," said Longsworth.

Her husband and daughter were both graduates of Amherst College, and Longsworth lived in Amherst from 1961 until 1977.

Other books Longsworth has written include "Exploring Caves" and "I, Charlotte Thornton, Black and Free," both of which are now out of print.

Yet, Dickinson seems to be a favorite topic for Longsworth. She even wrote a book about two of the most important people in Dickinson's life — "Austin & Mabel: the Amherst Affair & Loveletters of Austin Dickinson and Mabel Loomis Todd."

"I'm trying to find answers to all the mysteries about her," said Longsworth, who admitted she is convinced the mysteries of Emily Dickinson will never be solved.

A lifetime of English papers

William H. Pritchard will be signing copies of two new books,

Turn to AUTHORS, page 3

Faculty speaks of financial crisis

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Correspondent

Wednesday there was a convention on the future of public education sponsored by the University of Massachusetts faculty, focusing specifically on financially restructuring the flagship institution.

The convention tried to offer some answers to the question, "What should UMass do to meet changing public needs for public higher education?," the title of the discussion. This question was posed after the current edition of Statistical Abstract of the U.S. suggested that funds for public institutions are shrinking while enrollments are increasing.

"I believe in the University since I am a product of this University," said Sally Habana-Hafner, adjunct professor of education, who received both of her master's degrees from the University.

The panel shared a positive attitude about creating public higher education institutions equivalent to their private counterparts. There were two policy perspectives on what the University should do during this time of financial constraint.

Two perspectives

The first perspective noted that the University is experiencing a financial crises that will continue to worsen as the state budget struggles to meet the rising costs of elementary and secondary education. Medicaid and anti-crime measures.

The five-point argument of this perspective includes a loss of public confidence in public higher education and low budget funds. Public institutions must become cost effective in terms of cost per student, and universities will feel the financial pinch unless they are recognized by legislators.

Results of this perspective would include sharp cuts of non-teaching activities, increased student-teacher ratios, downsizing public institutions by terminating departments based on employment prospects, and reduction of costly subjects and forms of education such as tutoring, seminars, discussion sections and post-graduate programs.

Those of the second perspective argued that declining legislative support for public higher education is reversible. In agreement with those of the first perspective, it was stated that legislative support is decreasing because legislators face the rising demands of funds for elementary and secondary education, Medicaid and anti-crime measures. It urges establishing new priorities to gain support for higher education, rather than assuming such support will continue declining.

Those of the second perspective also argued that when people support the downsizing of the university, they assume that with fewer jobs the number of college graduates will be reduced. Rather, the more educated people have a better chance of responding in a tight job market by creating companies that provide jobs, or relocating to find a job. Therefore, during a job-market shrinkage, access to higher education should not be reduced.

Results of this second perspective include the expectation of public higher education institutions in shaping the job market, developing state economies and enlarging the tax base as a resource for higher education.

Public vs. private education

Massachusetts is the only state in the U.S. where private college enrollments outnumber the enrollments in public institutions. Data from the 1994-1995 Statistical Abstract of the United States showed that in 1992 fewer than 44 percent of college students were enrolled in public institutions, and public institutions educate students at a lower cost than private institutions.

Turn to FINANCES, page 2

RYAN TRZCINSKI/COLLEGIAN

Ralph Whitehead, professor of journalism, addresses the audience Wednesday at a discussion titled "What should UMass do to meet changing public needs for public higher education?"

SGA passes two motions; Trustee to eat at Berkshire

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association passed two significant motions Wednesday night, creating more options for students at the University of Massachusetts.

The first resolution was to create a program of evening child care for student parents. Senator Vicky Dunbar, who must bring her son to senate meetings weekly, presented a motion to extend University child care service into the evening hours.

Currently, the UMass Child Care Facility's hours are 8:45 a.m.-4:45 p.m. Dunbar said these hours prohibit student parents from taking 8:00 a.m. classes or using the library in the evening.

Spaces in the child care program are also limited and competitive. Slots are divided three ways: among faculty, undergraduate and graduate students. Dunbar waited a year before she was admitted into the program.

"On-campus care is expensive and the waiting lists range from six months to two years," Dunbar said. "Holyoke Community College has morning and evening child care services available even though it's smaller."

SGA President Lopes said that because of rising costs, undergraduate and graduate students are not able to afford the service, thus giving faculty the monopoly.

The service is paid by the students who use it. Dunbar did not make a provision in her motion for student fees to pay for the service, but did mention she pays for other university services she does not use herself. However if passed, the means of financing the extended hours would be left up to the University to decide.

Phil Copeland said the motion speaks for itself. "People need child care and the senate should agree."

The senate also enacted a revision to the Undergraduate Rights and

Turn to CHILDREN, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Notices

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 5- 1506.

Volunteers Needed — WFCR needs help sorting records for its Used Record Sale, food and drink is provided and volunteers get first dibs on records and CD's in WFCR's collection, help needed Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100 if you have time.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545-0137.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696-7752.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Mon.–Fri.

■ children

continued from page 1

Responsibilities.

Senator Ashavan Doyon presented the motion for all students who repeat a course to have their highest grade be averaged into their GPA, regardless of the grade received the first time the student took the course.

Under the current system, students who get a CD or worse in a class may take the class again, with the better grade received replacing the lower when averaged into the GPA. Students who get a C in a certain class but want to raise their GPA cannot take the class again and have it count. Doyon explained that students who find themselves not getting the grades they want will do badly on purpose so they may take the class again and do better.

"A student who got a CD the first time and an A the second would have a higher GPA than the student who got the B." Doyon said. "There's a degree of favoritism."

Senator Christopher Amshe disagreed with Doyon and made a presentation for the opposition.

"Students would be taking courses just to increase their GPA's," Amshe said. "They should do well in the course the first time."

Amshe also made the point that students who get a CD in a course will have to repeat it anyway if it needs to count towards their major.

Lopes disagreed with Amshe, saying students should have the option to take a class over if they so choose.

"If you vote against this, you are saying that you don't want to give the student body a choice," Lopes said.

Upcoming events

On Monday, the SGA will make a presentation on the steps of the Student Union at noon. The "student information session" will educate students on what motions and actions the student government is currently working on. Speaker Dan Castellano said the purpose of the session is to get other students more involved in the governing process.

One of the issues the SGA has been working to improve on campus is the quality of Food Services. In response to student complaints about the food plan at the University, Trustee Robert Karan will be eating at the Berkshire Dining Commons in the upcoming month. At a student–trustee luncheon held last month, senator Maurice Caston voiced his concerns to the trustee. Caston, a former D.C. worker, told of his own personal experiences to which Karan was receptive. Karan made arrangements with the chancellor to visit the campus, making a trip to the dining commons to personally to speak with students.

Commuter Services has also been improved through SGA means, according to Patrick Crowley.

After last week's resolution to allocate $850 from Finance reserves to Commuter Services, the off–campus agency registered 150 voters in Coolidge Residence Hall alone in just an hour and a half period as part of the Student Voter Registration Project. Crowley, the graduate assistant for community advocacy, attributes this success to the new funding, making it possible for commuter services to hire eight work–study students.

"We've registered 550 students so far this semester," Crowley said. "We want to register a total of 2,000 by its end."

Commuter Services is also working towards making the University a polling place.

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy.
Sometimes you gotta break a few rules.
And it is during those times that you know ...
There's no going back."

Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

Correction

Due to an editing error, the headline on yesterday's story about the plan to restructure the administration was incorrect. The plan was put forward by the academic deans, not the Chancellor.

The Collegian regrets the error.

SPRING 1996
CURRENT ROOM RESERVATION

MONDAY, OCTOBER 30 - FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3

CALL 6-9000, ON CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

CALL 546-9000, FROM OFF CAMPUS, TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR NEXT SEMESTER.

TTY - 545 - 0327

9AM - 9PM, MONDAY - THURSDAY
9AM - 4:45PM FRIDAY

If the system says that it is unable to confirm your assignment, you must contact the Housing Assignment Office to reserve your current room for next spring.

Thank you.

Campus Police Log

Larceny

Oct. 31

There was a report of an antenna stolen from a housing van on Thatcher Way.

There was a wallet stolen from a book bag in Tobin Residence Hall.

There was a bicycle stolen from Thatcher Residence Hall.

There was a report of an electric shaver stolen from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

There was a report of clothing stolen from a washing machine in Thatcher Residence Hall.

Nov. 1

There was a report of CDs stolen from a room in Van Meter Residence Hall.

An individual reported his license and credit cards stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

An individual reported that his wallet was taken from Boyden Gymnasium on Oct. 31. A bank card from the wallet was used to withdraw a large sum of money.

There was a vacuum cleaner stolen from a janitor's closet in the Campos Center.

There was a bicycle stolen from Parking Lot 50.

Accident

Oct. 31

There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive. There were no injuries and no citations were issued.

An individual reported making a turn into Parking Lot 43, when a woman stepped into the side of his vehicle. The victim momentarily sat on the curb, then fled up towards Sylvan yelling at the operator. No report was received from the victim.

Nov. 1

There was a minor accident on Massachusetts Avenue. One vehicle had already left the scene after the owners had exchanged paperwork.

A vehicle rolled out of a parking space, striking two other parked vehicles on Massachusetts Ave.

Warrant service

Oct. 31

The UMass Police delivered a restraining order.

Christopher L. Tabb, 20, of 97 David St., Springfield, was arrested on a warrant.

Annoying behavior

Oct. 31

There was a report of women in the men's locker room in Curry Hicks Cage. It was determined that they were retrieving scuba equipment.

Nov. 1

There was a dispute between two roommates in McNamara Residence Hall.

Nov. 2

There were bottles and fireworks being thrown from windows in Cashin Residence Hall.

There were skateboarders on Campus Center Way.

Motor vehicle theft

Nov. 1

An individual reported that her 1987 Chevrolet was stolen from Parking Lot 13.

Medical emergency

Oct. 31

An individual at Emerson Residence Hall with an ankle injury was taken to University Health Services.

Nov. 1

An individual in John Adams Residence Hall with a hand laceration was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Intoxicated person

Oct. 31

An individual passed out in the bathroom on the 14th floor of Washington Residence Hall and were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Vandalism

Nov. 1

There was a vending machine tipped over in Thoreau Residence Hall.

The soft tops on three jeeps in Parking Lot 49 were damaged.

Disturbance

Nov. 1

There was a report of two individuals fighting outside the Campus Center Ballroom.

Fire alarm

Nov. 1

A microwave fire in Van Meter Residence Hall was extinguished.

■ finances

continued from page 1

According to the abstract, Massachusetts also had a higher cost per student than the national average of $4,257. Tuition rose with the share of student support as Amherst budget cuts declined from 65 percent in fiscal year 1989 to less than 45 percent in fiscal year 1992, as reported by the Campus Office of Institutional Research and Planning.

Journalism Professor Ralph Whitehead noted that in the past two decades, a lot of UMass parents were burdened with the choice of investing in their child's education or in their financial security. Helping financially troubled families is the soul of the University, he said.

Job market prospects

Economic models, such as the Asklund model, projected an annual job market increase of 1.8 to 2.0 percent from 1993 to 1998, posing the question of whether to risk educating too many or too few students. The panel said if too few students are educated, graduates from other states will relocate, but if too many are educated, those graduates will have to relocate to other states.

The dilemma is that under–educating children dooms them to declining incomes, yet over–educating future citizen– taxpayers forces them to compete for better jobs elsewhere, the panel said.

Cost of tuition jumps

Tuition increases have taken their toll on admissions, the panel said. In the last seven years, tuition and fees have increased by approximately 167 percent, said Cecilia Rio of the Graduate Employee Organization.

"We are being priced out of this university," she said.

The abstract's figures show that the annual application rate has fallen from 14,885 in 1988 to less than 10,000.

With a narrowing admission pool, SAT scores have dropped sharply, according to a report from the Campus Office of Institutional Research and Planning.

With recent cutbacks in financial aid at both the graduate and undergraduate levels, poor and minority students are limited in pursuing higher education. The University is no longer a state aided institution but a state supported institution, according to University Trustee Robert Karam.

Traditionally, public institutions have paved the way for minority student enrollments, the panel said. The University ranked 15 in the nation in producing minority doctoral degrees, higher than any other university in the Commonwealth, including all private institutions, according to the Campus Office of Institutional Research and Planning. This data also showed that the University ranks second nationally in award–winning doctoral degrees to Hispanic– Americans, and 12th for African–Americans.

Although public higher education was examined in depth at the discussion, some felt that certain topics had been ignored.

The panel did not adequately address the subjects of sexism, racism, social class differences and homophobia, according to junior Phillip Copeland, chair of the University Policy Committee of the Student Government Association.

Also, the question of how to financially restructure the $1.25 billion university was not answered.

"This university is becoming a watershed for the have's and have not's," Rio said.

Study says teen drug use getting higher

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Marijuana use by black males as young as 11 has tripled in four years. For white girls, it's more than doubled. And teens who carry guns or join gangs are more likely to use cocaine, a national survey says.

Against this bleak statistical backdrop, President Clinton said yesterday he will convene a White House conference to counter messages to teens that it's "cool, sexy, attractive" to drink or get high.

"This is madness, pure and simple. And we all have to do whatever we can to get it out of our lives," Clinton said in a speech before the Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America. The one-day conference, slated for January, would bring together police, academics and clergy, and officials in government, education and media to seek ways to reduce crime and drug use among juveniles, Clinton said.

As the president spoke, the Atlanta-based National Parent's Resource Institute for Drug Education, or PRIDE, released its annual survey of drug use and violence in junior and senior high schools.

With illegal drug usage by high school students steadily climbing over eight years and currently hovering near 35 percent, overall teen drug use will, in three or four years, reach 1979's all-time high of 51 percent, said PRIDE President Thomas J. Gleaton.

And junior high students seem to be leading the way.

"Clearly, the new movement back to drugs is led by younger students," commented Doug Hall, a PRIDE spokesman.

The survey of 200,000 students in 32 states found that marijuana use in grades 6 through 8 skyrocketed during the 1994-95 school year. It measured 13.3 percent for black males for a 195 percent increase over the 1991-92 report; 6.7 percent for black females, a 253 percent increase over four years; and 7.2 percent for white females, a 118 percent relative increase.

Slightly more than 10 percent of white males in the same age group reported using marijuana last year, a 79 percent increase over the 1991-92 school year.

And high school students who carried a gun to school were 12.4 times more likely to use cocaine than their peers; those who joined gangs were 8.7 times more likely to use cocaine.

Overall, white students reported higher incidence of drug use than black students for the 10 substances studied, including cocaine, hallucinogens and inhalants. One example: 13.2 percent of white senior males used hallucinogens in 1994-95, compared with 4.6 percent of their black male peers.

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:

Something Every Friday

a weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday:

Comedienne Kathy Walker

followed by movie: UNDER SIEGE 2

Bluewall Cafe
November 3, 1995, 8 pm
FREE

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and theVice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

JEFFREY L. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

Going up to the alter...

Teresa Sanchez inspects the altar in the Graduate Lounge that was set up for El Dia Del Muerto.

Columbian politician murdered yesterday

By Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Gunmen ambushed a prominent opponent of Colombia's president in a crowded Bogota street yesterday, killing him and an assistant.

President Ernesto Samper declared a state of emergency, giving himself and security forces wide powers after the assassination of Alvaro Gomez Hurtado, a former senator and ambassador to Washington. Gomez was hit four times in a hail of automatic weapons fire in front of the university where he taught law.

In a somber, nationally televised address last night, Samper said Gomez's assassination "makes the entire nation mourn." He then announced police could make searches and arrests without court orders, and he placed limits on press freedom, saying the media could not carry any declarations by persons involved in crimes.

Under the 90-day state of emergency, Samper said, the government could legislate "in extraordinary form" to restore public order. However, the government insisted that no constitutional or press freedoms were being suspended.

The administration's new, sweeping powers come amid investigations into allegations that Samper won the 1994 elections with large donations from the Cali drug cartel.

Gomez, 76, had written editorials in an opposition newspaper urging Samper to resign over allegations that the cartel had given millions of dollars to his 1994 election campaign.

A man telephoned radio stations and claimed responsibility for the attack on behalf of a group called "National Dignity." The caller said, "Await more actions." In some of the calls, he demanded Samper's resignation.

A similarly-named group, Movement for the Dignity of Colombia, claimed responsibility for an attack on Sept. 27 on Antonio Jose Cancino, a lawyer defending Samper against the allegations that drug traffickers had financially aided his election.

Cancino was lightly wounded and two bodyguards were killed in the attack, which some Colombians suspect was mounted to divert attention from the political crisis that threatens to topple the president.

Samper condemned Gomez's murder as "an attack on the entire nation." Army commander Gen. Harold Bedoya called it the work of terrorists trying to destabilize the country.

After the late morning attack, troops and riot police took up position in the streets. Hundreds of demonstrators clustered outside the hospital where Gomez died, chanting "Samper resign!" Dozens of heavily armed police sealed off the area in front of Sergio Arboleda University, where the attack occurred. Bullet casings littered the street.

The attack also killed aide Jose del Cristo Huertas and wounded a bodyguard and a street vendor.

The assailants escaped, possibly in a car or on a motorcycle, radio reports said.

The ambush recalled the worst days of the government's war against the Medellin cocaine cartel in the 1980s, during which dozens of senior officials were assassinated.

Brazilian Indians face suicide

Young women suiciding on rise because of poverty, loss of land

By Todd Lewan
Associated Press

DOURADOS, Brazil — When Silvinha Cavalcante, a Kaiowa Indian, didn't return to her straw-roofed hut one evening last April, Luciano Arevalo knew where to find his 12-year-old niece. He crossed the dusty plain of his reservation where a forest once stood and stopped at the foot of a lone guava tree. It was there that Silvinha's widowed mother had hanged herself a year earlier.

From a branch a girl in a sundress dangled by the neck, her body swinging in the moonlight.

"Silvinha went to her mother," said Arevalo. "She had eight baby brothers. They were going hungry, and she could not bear to watch this. It was killing her soul. To save her soul, she killed her body."

Suicide, once rare among Brazil's native Indians, is ravaging the Guarani-Kaiowa tribe that lives on the remote brushlands of the western frontier state of Mato Grosso do Sul.

In the first nine months of this year, 43 Guarani-Kaiowas killed themselves and dozens of others tried, according to the government's National Indian Foundation, known by its Portuguese acronym, FUNAI.

That is nearly double the average of 23 suicides in each of the four preceding years. And before the 1990s, only a handful of the tribe's 25,000 members killed themselves each year. By contrast, the suicide rate for Brazil as a whole is less than one for every 25,000 people, the census agency says.

An especially troubling aspect is that 40 percent of the tribe's suicides this year have been girls under 16, FUNAI says. Only about 2.5 percent of the nation's total suicides involve young girls. Experts say they do not have good statistics for Brazil's Indians but they sense that the Guarani-Kaiowa situation is much worse than for other tribes.

"What we are dealing with is a culture in crisis," Otilia Nogueira, a Guarani-Kaiowa specialist for FUNAI, said in an interview in Brasilia, the capital.

Indian experts attribute the phenomenon to poverty, the disintegration of families and forced acculturation of the Guarani-Kaiowa in the face of a violent westward push by white settlers, an encroachment similar to that on North American tribes a century ago.

Anthropologists also blame the clearing of forests for pasture and plantations and the loss of more than half of the tribe's ancestral lands to ranchers and farmers.

"To resist giving up their identity, the Guarani-Kaiowa appear to see no alternative but death," said Rubem Thomaz de Almeida, an anthropologist who has studied the tribe since 1973. "It's not only a disgrace, but the shame of a country that likes to call itself the most racially integrated nation on the planet." Fewer than 300,000 Brazilian Indians are left today, down from an estimated 5 million when Portuguese explorers arrived in 1500. The Guarani and Kaiowa then were separate, nomadic tribes, their villages stretching 1,500 miles from the Atlantic Ocean into what is now Paraguay.

About 50 years ago, white settlers began moving west and expelling Indians by violence or by obtaining questionable land titles, often from corrupt territorial judges. The two tribes were lumped together and isolated on tiny "island" reservations in Mato Grosso do Sul.

In 1978, FUNAI secured bank loans on behalf of the tribe for mechanized farm equipment and offered as collateral hardwood trees on the reservations.

With no farm training or understanding of planting for profit, the Indians went bankrupt in two years. FUNAI divided the reservations into lots and authorized the cutting and sale of hardwoods.

Today, about 25,000 Guarani-Kaiowa survive in 22 villages scattered over 68,000 acres of largely deforested scrubland. The fragmented reservations are so small they cannot support even subsistence farming.

"Our sorrows begin with the lack of land," Chief Amilton Lopes and seven other Guarani-Kaiowa leaders wrote in a letter to Congress earlier this year. "There is not enough space to plant, hunt or live."

The problem is most severe near Dourados, a boomtown of 80,000 people that has grown rich on cattle ranching and soybeans. Here, 9,065 Indians live on 8,750 acres of scrubland. Gone are the animals, fish and forest that once sustained their villages. The soil is parched and sapped of nutrients.

Extended families are crammed into one-room lean-tos and ramshackle huts of scrap wood, mud and brick. They have no running water or electricity, only mud floors and kerosene lamps.

With few prospects, boys as young as 10 leave to earn the equivalent of $20 a week as migrant farm laborers, cowhands or sugar cane cutters for the state's many alcohol distilleries. Human rights groups say some Indians are lured into forced labor camps on plantations, sawmills, charcoal-producing furnaces and shoe factories.

Guarani-Kaiowa girls, who normally would marry and start families by age 14, are left without potential mates. Many drop out of school to care for their siblings or join their mothers picking crops for meager pay.

By 15, many girls flee to Dourados to work in strip clubs or as maids in hotels. Some are kidnapped to work in brothels in remote gold camps.

Bouchard may secede from movement

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — Quebec's most popular politician declared yesterday that the separatist cause is "more alive than ever" but said family pressure may dissuade him from leading the comeback from a referendum defeat.

Were Lucien Bouchard to quit politics, as he suggested he might, it would be a devastating blow to the separatists, removing the only leader with a proven ability to electrify audiences and win over wavering nationalists.

Quebec's separatist premier, Jacques Parizeau, resigned less than 24 hours after the narrow defeat in Monday's secession referendum. Throughout the separatist movement, there was agreement that Bouchard — currently leader of the separatist faction in the federal Parliament — was the obvious choice to take over.

But Bouchard, at a remarkably candid news conference yesterday in Ottawa, raised the ironic possibility that his wife, an American, and his two young sons could hold the key to the separatists' fortunes.

"It's well known that my wife is not crazy about politics," he said. "She doesn't hate politics. She knows it's important ... but we had an agreement that everything would be over after the referendum."

He said his sons, like many Canadians, are weary of referendum politics.

"Young children of 5 and 4 can't understand what we are doing," he said. "They learned the word 'referendum' and they hate it. They spit when they pronounce it."

Bouchard, 56, alluded to his brush with death last year, when a near-fatal flesh-eating disease cost him a leg.

"I've gone through a very difficult time," he said. "The whole family came out of it traumatized ... I have strong personal pressure to go back to private life."

He said he would reveal his decision after a family vacation that ends Nov. 20.

The possibility that Bouchard could leave politics sent the Canadian dollar higher on currency markets, where traders are worried about long-term political instability if the separatists try another breakaway.

"The possibility that he would no longer be involved in the day-to-day sovereignty agenda is being viewed as a favorable thing," said Rob Palombi, a market analyst with MMS International. Although Bouchard was unsure of his own future, he announced a firm decision by his Bloc Quebecois to reverse their long-term plan to quit Parliament. Instead, he said Bloc members would keep their seats, despite the referendum defeat, to fight proposals aimed at keeping Quebec in Canada.

"The objective of sovereignty is more alive than ever," he said. "More than ever, it's important to have Quebeckers in Ottawa who defend the interests of Quebec when unprecedented attacks will be launched against us."

The Bloc, with 53 seats, is Parliament's largest opposition party. A few Bloc members might resign, but special elections would be held to replace them, Bouchard said.

Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien has promised that Parliament, controlled by his Liberal Party, will act swiftly on political changes intended to satisfy Quebec nationalists. Chretien said those changes would include formal recognition of Quebec as a "distinct society" and a commitment that the constitution would not be amended without Quebec's consent. Bouchard said these proposals were a "decoy" and not worth discussing. Quebec will negotiate with Ottawa on only one basis, he said: "Equal to equal, the day after the next referendum." Chretien's strategy also was assailed yesterday by Preston Manning, leader of the Reform Party. The conservative, western-based party advocates a major shift of federal powers to the provinces.

Manning said Chretien should offer no special status or privileges to Quebec, and instead should focus on decentralization that would give more power to all the provinces, on an equal basis. Several premiers of English-speaking provinces also have urged the federal government to transfer more powers to them, in areas ranging from environmental protection to personnel training.

This prospect alarms Canadian Indian leaders, who have a generally amicable relationship with the federal government. "We have to guard ourselves against the power grab by the provinces," said Ovide Mercredi, grand chief of the national coalition of Indian peoples.

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$140	$280
PARIS	$175	$350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$220	$439
TOKYO		$859

Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs-immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

■ authors

continued from page 1

"English Papers: A Teaching Life" and "Playing It by Ear: Literary Essays and Reviews" Saturday at noon.

In his book, "English Papers," Pritchard reviews life as a student and teacher of English at Amherst College. He said he sketches the differences between teaching English and literature between when he attended Amherst College in 1949 to 1953, and today, as well as institutional changes at the college.

For example, Pritchard said he wrote about the late 1960s and the relative turmoil on campus, the beginning of co–ed education at Amherst College in the fall of 1976 and the move from sequenced curriculum to more course choice.

Many of the episodes and issues raised in "English Papers" are derived from Pritchard's experiences as a professor since 1958, as well as his experiences reviewing and writing books.

"I wrote about the changes in the profession and the terrible difficulty now, in English, of getting a job, even with a Ph.D.," he said.

Although "English Papers" concentrates on Amherst College, Pritchard said he also deals with institutional change at Harvard and Columbia, where he is taking graduate courses.

Other books written by Pritchard include "Frost: a literary life reconsidered," "Lives of the Modern Poets," and "Randall Jarrell: a literary life."

Ads by Credit Cards
VISA MasterCard
Available Soon

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Ceril Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Magerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Content in being the Newtral target

Bob Dunn

I love Newt.

Yup. You heard it here first, dear readers. I love the Ging- man.

I want him to be everywhere. I want him to get an endorsement deal with Nabisco to start selling Fig Newt-ons. I want him to drop a Newt-ron bomb, and start rebuilding society, starting with a Newt-ist colony. Just think, it'll be a Newt-opia!

I want him to have his own 24-hour-a-day cable channel. NewTV. I want a satellite shaped like his big, gray head floating up in space beaming his messages of love and joy down here to the waiting masses.

I want to see Newt-shaped Pez dispensers sitting on candy store shelves. I want to be able to lean his head back and let little red, white and blue colored candy bricks come shooting right out of his neck. Yummy.

I want him to have his own back-up group called the Newt Kids on the Block, following him around the country, doing dance routines behind him while wearing those stupid little headphone mikes.

Why? Why all this borderline (okay, maybe not so borderline) obsession? Why haven't I been this excited about something since I heard the erroneous rumor that NBC was bringing Manimal back? Simple.

He's a pig.

Not just any run-of-the-mill pig, mind you. Oh, no. This guy is the prince of porcine. The sultan of swine. He makes Joey Buttafucco look like Dick Cavett. Newt doesn't do anything halfway, he's a classic. He figures if he's going to be rooting around in his own vile excrement, he should smile doing it.

He fills a need by providing almost everyone with a common enemy. I mean, even if you agree with his politics, I find it difficult to believe anyone can condone some of his actions.

This is the same guy who served divorce papers to his wife while she was in the hospital recovering from cancer surgery.

"Gee honey, could you sign this before those pain pills kick in? You've got to press through a few copies."

This is also the guy who couldn't understand why there could be a conflict of interest brewing when he agreed to a multi-million-dollar book advance from a publisher who was about to be investigated by the federal government.

Newt decided that the way to make everything all neat and tidy was to trim the advance down a bit, down to one dollar to be exact, and still couldn't comprehend why people thought that he might still be pushing the bounds of ethical behavior.

How about the royalties? How about the fact that you're still dealing with the same publisher? I think that could be potential trouble, don't you, Newton?

Newt's a futurist. He's convinced that the golden road to glorious salvation is paved with silicone chips and super- conductors. He thinks that all of our hopes and dreams can be picked up at various rest stops on the information super- highway, provided that he and his Republican toadies get to run the toll booth at the on-ramp.

Newt's vision is for a computer on every lap and a modem in every phone. Regular trips to the lunar surface for fun and frolic. Vacation packages, special rates for couples and newlyweds. Honey-moon shots. The old, poor and underprivileged need not apply.

I'm not sure who's going to develop and use all these wonderful new toys. If Newtie gets his way, student loans will be slashed, leaving a whole generation whose entire experience with technology will be shared with a computer- generated hedgehog.

Oh, well. The price of balancing that darn budget in seven years rather than 10, I guess.

I suppose he could have some kind of ulterior motive for denying educations to thousands of people. Perhaps he figures that by keeping people ignorant, they'll be more likely to vote Republican. Nah, that can't be right? Can it?

In a world where everyone is creating and destroying heroes as fast as they can, it's almost a comfort to know that there's at least one person who sidesteps all of that. He aspires to be a slime ball. He makes it easy to hate him. He gives people a common enemy. He usually gives everyone something to be angry about. Even though he seems to have forgotten that the same people he's alienating, are the same ones who got him this job in the first place. He's giving the voters plenty of rope to hang him with. String him up.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian Columnist.

Quebec secession more than history

Peter Orvetti

My all-consuming hatred for and animosity toward all things French seems to be well-known. Then it may come as a surprise to hear that I really feel quite sorry for the separatists of Quebec.

The right of self-determination is crucial to a democracy. Our own nation was first a spurned colony, rebelling from the root because our cultural identity had become distinct. Both federalists and separatists in Canada admit that Quebec is a different idea than the rest of Canada, a peculiar entity.

In America, we tend to view our northern partner with patrician condescension. Many of us cannot fathom the bitter emotions, built on decades of resentment, that nearly led Quebec to strike out on its own. After all, Quebec has been a keystone of Canada for longer than our own republic has existed.

Quebec is home to one-quarter of all Canadians. Montreal is perhaps the most renowned Canadian city. Though the few observers who feared actual civil war if secession came were guilty of hyperbole, the effect of separation would have been damning to the remaining nine provinces. Canada would have been severed neatly in two, its economy left in disarray.

Since Canada has always been America's northern counterpart, and a friendly, relatively docile one, it has been easy to overlook its history. Canada in its present incarnation has only existed for 13 years. In 1980, two years before Canada adopted a constitution effecting a full separation from the British Crown in all but title, Quebec separatists put together a last-ditch effort at secession, fearing that Quebec would become just another province.

The measure failed and, in 1982, Quebec's fears were proven true. Quebec lost its status within Canada. Quebec had been absorbed into the British Empire in the 1700s, and the English granted the new acquisition special rights based on Quebec's French heritage. In 1982, Quebec became just one of 10 provinces, no different than Saskatchewan or Prince Edward Island.

As Quebec's grievances deepened, the Canadian government granted the province more privileges, declaring it a special society. But, seeing the power that it had attained, the Quebecois decided to seek their long-elusive independence.

In the modern era, it is heartening to see a political debate framed in national identity and culture rather than the turgid numbers of economics. Nations carved out of identity and ideology against all odds, like the United States, have been the most successful. Meanwhile, nations born of political expediency, like Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, or out of coercion, like the Soviet Union, no longer exist.

Quebec sought to become a nation because of history, not money. Quebecois have never realized a state reflecting their unique identity as a former colony of France in the New World. North America's existing nations were all once colonies of either Britain or Spain.

However, as 50.6 percent of voting Quebecois ultimately acknowledged, cultural identity does not put bread on the table. The separation would have been ruinous to the economies of both Canada and the new Quebec, and would impair the United States as well. The Clinton administration placed significant pressure on Quebec, although it made little difference in the outcome.

It is likely that Quebec, on its own, would be akin to Slovakia, which separated from the Czech Republic a few years ago in a move to assert its heritage. It wasn't until after the triumph and the celebrations that Slovakia realized that its entire economic viability lie in the Czechoslovakian union. Had the Quebecois said "Oui," they might have ultimately regretted it.

Quebec may ultimately gain independence. Separatists are not limited in the number of times they can call the question, and, having lost by just 50,000 votes, they will certainly try again. It won't take 15 years this time.

But, even as they grow in stature, the separatist alliance is coming apart. Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau thought he might wake up on Tuesday morning as the President of the Republic of Quebec. Instead, on Tuesday he resigned from office.

Parizeau's much more significant cohort, Lucien Bouchard, will press on. And, in the end, it may be Bouchard who plays George Washington — or Charles de Gaulle — in a new state. But today, Canada must remember that their Quebecois siblings are not Canadian in the same sense as the rest. And Quebec must again consider whether or not its legitimate grievances necessitate disowning the family.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@ot.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

Living in fear not the answer

Wendy Darling

A woman can't be too careful these days — or can she?

Since arriving at this university two years ago, I have learned a lot about what it means to be a woman in this society. I've heard talks dealing with employment discrimination, debated pornography, and discussed problems in women's health care.

But through it all, one theme keeps coming up that I simply cannot absorb, cannot understand, and cannot believe — the world is not a safe place for women, and unless you protect yourself, you're going to go the way of Nicole Simpson.

At first the messages made sense. Don't walk around campus late at night by yourself. Don't accept rides from men you don't know. Don't walk around the dorm in your underwear. Short, sensible ideas that can go a long way to keep a woman safe.

And even if I did resent the fact that I was being told to look over shoulder now and then, it didn't bother me too much. It wasn't as if people were asking me to change every aspect of my life. After all, why on earth would I want to walk around in my underwear anyway?

Millions of women are being verbally harassed, physically assaulted, raped, and murdered every minute of the day, I kept hearing. Over in that dorm, behind that bush, in such and such a town, in this state, around the world, the violence goes on and on.

I nodded my head, taking sober note of the statistics glaring out from posters hung in my dorm — one in four women will be attacked by a rapist during her college career and one in seven will actually be raped. Well, I guess that's it for me and my laissez faire attitude about this, I thought. Maybe I should be a little more worried.

So like a dutiful little girl, I locked my dorm room at night to protect myself from the man who might try to get into my room and assault me.

I called up the escort service when I had to make a long trip across campus late at night. I ran from streetlight to streetlight to stay in "well-lit areas." I listened to the sounds around me, kept track of stray shadows, and watched out for suspicious characters.

Riding the bus, I kept my eyes out for strange men looking at me or trying to draw me into conversation. Watch out, you can't be too careful, I told myself, confident my vigilance was paying off.

But was it? On the nights when I didn't lock my door, nothing terrible happened. Many times I found it very convenient not to have to worry about getting locked out in the middle of the night just because I'd made a quick trip to the bathroom.

And out of the many times I made long trips across campus late at night, I'd never seen or heard a single thing that was suspicious or even vaguely frightening.

I had met a few strange men on the bus, but that didn't seem like something I could avoid.

So did changing my behavior make a difference in my life? Well, in one respect, I'd say yes. It made me afraid.

Walking across campus any time of day, I feel like I should be wary. I look around for lingering eyes. I go out of my way to avoid empty stairwells because they make me so frightened. I shy away from conversations with strangers. In short, I've become the stereotypical shrinking violet, too afraid to go about the basic tasks of life.

I'm not the only one either. I have plenty of female friends who seem to face a similar problem. None of us has ever been assaulted or followed or threatened in any way. But we all felt like we're going to be. Remember — one in seven women will be raped at some point in her college career. So you can never be too careful.

Recently I noticed a flyer on dorm safety hanging up in my dorm. Printed by the local action group Riot Grrrl, the flyer offers several pieces of advice on ways female college students can protect themselves from sexual assault. I flew into a rage.

Lock the door even when you're in the room. And when you're "just running down the hall for a minute." I obviously must have the wrong kind of mentality to accept this kind of thing, because the way I see it, I'd rather be "unsafe" than live like I'm in the midst of rapists and axe- murderers. Sure, locking my door might reduce the chance of some strange man coming in, but what kind of chance is that?

That wasn't the only bit of advice I took exception to either. No, there was also one warning me that "the guy down the hall may seem very nice" but could be a rapist in disguise. Don't shut the door when you're in the same room and don't go over and visit him without telling someone first. You never know what could happen.

Attention to all you guys down the hall — don't you feel insulted? In case you don't, let me tell you that I, at least, am very insulted. How dare somebody tell me that — just because somebody is a man I have to treat him like he's some kind of high explosive. Smacks of prejudice to me.

So now I'm angry. And afraid.

Afraid that just because I dare speak up about what I see as militant paranoia, the entire women's community is going to come down on me and chew me up.

Because I don't get it. Because I don't go along with everything they say. Because I'm not afraid enough.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Editing distorts messages

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article "Our Day of Light and Dark a-Tonement" which ran on Nov. 1. I would like to clarify that I was not self-exalted to "Queen." This was solely the work of the editors. It is also very important to note that originally there were three names preceding the three mentioned in the article, which are vital in making my point. These women are Ebony, Bunmi and Jennifer. Anything that has been mixed, diluted or tampered with in any form, loses its potency and may change the message.

I-Serene Lincoln

Articles cause more tension

To the Editor:

As I write this, the rift between blacks and whites widens. By printing incorrect facts and ridiculously-biased article, The Daily Collegian is in fact aiding in this ever critical division. I would like to ask how and why "Honesty is the Best Policy — Reflection of the Million Man March," in the Nov. 1 issue of the Collegian, was printed seeing as it is just a hollow egg. This article had very little truthful meat to it and should have been reconsidered come printing time.

The author begins with an excellent purpose in describing his "illuminating experience" at the Million Man March. He furthermore touched upon the biological equality of the human race and the invalidity of racial, economic and gender social hierarchies. It is here that the article and the Collegian are guilty of poisoning the community with ignorance.

1. Jesus, Abraham and Moses were of Middle Eastern decent, human evolution had already been in effect for 3–5 million years.

2. Hebrew men, women and children were exiled to Europe after the destruction of the Second Temple, in 70 A.D., and Moors hadn't even stepped in Spain until 711 A.D.

3. The University of Salamanca was established by Catholics upon that region's conquest.

4. Spain's architectural magnificence is attributed to the Moorish inhabitants of Andalucia at the other end of the heap.

5. Semites were of Indo-European decent.

6. How do any of these facts relate to the impact of the Million Man March and our ability to work together.

Ignorance is not bliss, so cut the crap. The other day my friend said to me, "Is segregation alright if its coming from a minority? Think about it." The fact is minorities do have to try harder and do better in order to succeed and overcome, rather than just continue fingerpointing. I know I do. Believe it or not, there are more people in this world than blacks and whites.

Steve Leshem
Amherst

Word completely misused

To the Editor:

Since I've arrived here at UMass, there has been this incessant onslaught from certain members of the GLBT community on homophobia, claiming that anyone with any disagreement or discomfort with any type of gay activity is, of course, homophobic. I would like to address this issue. First, the phobia aspect of the term, the definition of phobia is "an intense, abnormal, or illogical fear." The term Claustrophobia is also defined, in the American Heritage dictionary, as "an abnormal fear of being in an enclosed space." I pose these questions to the reader — 1. Have you ever met someone who calls themselves claustrophobic? 2. Have you ever met someone who is clinically claustrophobic and when in a small area will act out violently, pass out, endure distorted vision and simply go crazy?

You see, it's an easy mistake to use terms wrongly, so I forgive those few GBLT members who are sincere, but in grave error. In closing, I call those members of the GBLT to stop using a medical term for political purposes. Labeling is disabling.

Josh Greeley
Northeast

Arts & Living

Boston's best pop band in town

Papas Fritas to bring hits & fun vocals to the Bay State

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Pop Has Freed Us! This Saturday night, one of the most promising pop bands in ages will appear at the Bay State in Northampton. Since the release of their debut album last month, the name Papas Fritas has been on the lips of virtually everyone who has heard the band.

The self-titled album is a sensational creation, packed with 13 of the catchiest pop melodies you will find anywhere. Amazingly, this trio is even better live than in the studio. All three members share singing duties in a fashion similar of small factory. Plus, the band's laid back attitude makes them a pleasure to watch.

Unlike most bands who are forced to hide behind feedback and noise, Papas Fritas let their songs shine with minimal interference. This band was raised on the real rock 'n' roll tunes of the Beatles and the Beach Boys and are not ashamed to sound like none of their contemporary peers. They are not out to reinvent pop music, instead they just want to prove that there is nothing better than a well crafted catchy song.

After the band released two cassettes on their own and a single on Sunday Driver, Minty Fresh Records (the home of Veruca Salt) signed the band. Their first single on Minty Fresh ranks as one of the best of the year with two excellent songs, "Passion Play" and "Lame To Be." Both songs later appeared on the album in new version.

Since their humble beginning as students at Tufts University in Medford, the band has evolved from a Pavement-sounding slack band to a classic pop band. Any fans of 1960's style pop should definitely check out Papas Fritas because they are one of the few pure pop bands left. Catch this band now when you can still see them in a comfortable setting like the Bay State.

Playing alongside Papas Fritas will be local stars Tizzy and Zeke Fiddler — both of whom know how to write a catchy pop tune themselves.

Papas Frias, Tizzy and Zeke Fiddler will appear at the Bay State Saturday night. Call the club at 584-8513 for more information.

COURTESY JACKIE GENDEL

Papas Fritas will play the Bay State this Saturday.

Punk–ska band leaves crowd glowing

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

THE VOODOO GLOW SKULLS
Iron Horse
Nov. 1

There are good concerts and then there are great concerts. After a good concert you feel fulfilled and relatively happy about yourself, but after a great show your legs feel like jelly from dancing and you can't stop smiling.

Wednesday night at the Iron Horse, The Voodoo Glow Skulls put on one of their all-time greatest shows. From the first song until the final second of the last tune, the Glow Skulls had the crowd dancing.

Furthermore, the opening band of a show is usually a talentless waste and you wonder why you went to the show so early. However, this was an all-around great show — even the opening band Schlong were excellent. Schlong played a mix of heavy metal, country, lounge and hardcore and they made it all sound punk.

Opening with "Insubordination," the Glow Skulls came out with guitars churning and horns blazing. They immediately showed off their brand of punk-ska that only they can pull off. Playing a solid mix of songs off both Who Is? This Is! and Firme, the Glow Skulls blew the crowd away. Classics like "Bossman," "Dirty Rats" and "Ugly Stick" mixed perfectly with newer ones like "Fat Randy," "Shoot The Moon" and "Method To Madness."

The crowd was skanking, pogoing and singing along to every song. The only disappointment was that after playing for an hour and a half, the Voodoo Glow Skulls had to end their set. Yet even those last moments were memorable as they smoothly flowed from "Revenge Of The Nerds" to "Land Of Misfit Toys" without missing a beat.

The Iron Horse was an odd place for a punk show. The stage was so small that they could barely fit all of the Voodoo Glow Skulls on it. The tiny stage forced the bassist to stand behind the horn section. The stage also inhibited the dancing of the lead singer, who looked like he was the verge of exploding at any second.

It was also ironic that a band who has a song "Nicotine Fit" was playing in a strictly non-smoking club. The dance floor was also too small and the two drunk jocks only served to make it smaller. However, none of that would hinder the power of the Glow Skulls.

As the crowd of people walked off into the night, with steam rising off them it was clear that nobody would be the same after witnessing the Voodoo Glow Skulls.

Complaints about campus issues

Mike's MENTAL Stew

I boarded the bus this morning really struggling to come up with something to write about today. I had been brainstorming for the past few days but honestly, I had a lot of other more important things on my mind to deal with.

So this brings me back to the bus. When I got on, a friend of mine was already sitting there. I sat down next to her and said "hi," and proceeded to vent my frustrations about how I couldn't think of anything to write about.

To this she answered, "I can't believe you don't have anything to complain about."

Now I'll be the first to admit that I complain a lot when I get going, but I usually try to think of something interesting or funny when I'm pondering a subject to write about. But then it occurred to me — why not just talk about all those things that annoy me, that by themselves wouldn't be enough to fill a column. Drum roll please...

• Staying with the bus motif.. it is really rude when people refuse to move to the window seat when the bus gets crowded, thereby leaving the seat next to them open, but inaccessible to those who want it. Usually they do this so they can talk to someone across the row. Here's a revolutionary idea — how about sitting next to each other?

• Or how about people in the Student Union/Campus Center who stop either in the middle of the hall (or even better) at the top of a stairwell and carry on a 15-minute conversation about their cat's hairballs? Do you think that they notice the traffic jam of people forming around them or are they really that oblivious?

• I won't even explain this one because I'm sure you all know what makes this so annoying — the perpetual Blood Drive.

• How 'bout that wacky administration? I called this summer to inquire about getting credits from a summer class at home transferred to UMass and guess what happened? Well, first I called the Registrar's office, because I didn't know where else to call, gave them a five minute speech about my situation and inquired what to do. "Click," and instantly I was transferred to, well I'm not sure where, but someone else answered and I proceeded to give them the same speech after which they said, "Oh, no, you want (such and such) office." — click.

Little did I know that my journey was only half over. After the same speech was given to some other poor summer phone lackey, I got the last straw — "Oh, you want to take a class somewhere else besides UMass? That's CASIAC. I'm not sure how to transfer you, but here's the number." At this point, I felt like explaining the transfer process to this person myself but I just gave up and dialed myself. Time spent on the phone: about 10 minutes. Information gathered: another number to call.

• Sure maybe the "Mean People Suck" stickers have been around forever and seem to be everywhere now, but lately I think I have met every single person that inspired the creator of those things. If you are one of those people — and you know who you are — why are you so mean? All of these people should learn two simple theories. One: just because someone of the opposite sex talks to you does not mean they are hitting on you. Two: treat people the way you want to be treated.

• Two things about the Dining Halls. People who, regardless of the fact that they have an entire table to chose a spot from, decide to sit so close to you that they can hear you chewing. And secondly, a message to the D.C. administration — how about some ventilation in these places? I mean, I know that any cafeteria is going to smell like food and other things to a certain point. But last week I went in for about 10 minutes and couldn't figure out why no one sat near me on the bus that night. Well, needless to say, I reeked like D.C. almost to the point of requiring fumigation. I expect the employees to stink after a few hours, but 10 minutes?

• Bands like Bush, Sponge and the whole lot that are exploiting the music that Nirvana and Soundgarden managed to put so much life into and the record companies pushing this crap on the young kids. I thought that when the "Music Revolution" came around we would smarten up and not have to have another Europe or Cinderella to bombard us with junk. Oh well, I guess it's time for another revolution. Long live Indie Rock!

• Possibly the only thing scarier than these bands are the writers that keep praising them. Can anyone remember the last time that Rolling Stone actually panned an album that had a big corporate push behind it? (Especially those by bands long since washed up — a.k.a. Chili Peppers)

• Lines, lines and more lines. If this University has taught me one thing, it is that the person in charge of figuring out how much stuff we need in relation to the amount of people here at the school couldn't have graduated with honors. Look at the lines that we have to constantly wait in. Four ATM's for roughly 18,000 students? Give me a break. I could go to a real bank, conduct several transactions and open an account faster than those lines move.

And the check cashing window is a pain too. I think about 95 percent of the student populous gets paid on Friday, but would anyone consider opening an extra window or something on Fridays? No, of course not. As a result, the line frequently wraps around past the Campus Center Auditorium.

I'm sure that in the process of writing this I offended or upset someone, but I guess that was the point. If I can anger someone then maybe something might get done or at least get discussed eventually. But regardless, it sure made me feel a lot better.

Mike MacLean is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY MARC CENTRELLA

Dazed qnd Confused.

Led Zeppelin cover band Physical Graffiti will be performing at Pearl Street tonight. Expect a fun show filled with big hair, monstrous guitar solos and all the classic Zep tunes you have grown to love.

"I HATE MONDAYS" SPECIAL
Bring in this ad to receive
$4off HAIRCUTS
(REGULARLY $14-17)
ON MONDAYS DURING NOVEMBER ONLY!
256-0438
103 N. Pleasant
AMHERST
(next to Bart's)
HAIR EAST

Arts & Living...
...It's more than just indie bands.
113 Campus Center•545-3500

Collegian Classifieds
They Work!

Mikara's
270 Cooley St. Springfield
Mikaras presents: elastica
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4TH
9:30 PM
18+ TIX ON SALE AT: 18+
STRAWBERRIES, TICKETMASTER
OR BY PHONE: (413) 586-8686
Coming Nov. 9
Shaggy, Mr. Boombastic
Also: "Nov. 16 Beenie Man"

Free for all!
PLAY ONE HOUR AND GET THE SECOND HOUR FREE WITH THIS AD...
Great food and cocktails. Open 7 days 'til 2 a.m.
Free hour be completed by 10 p.m. One ad per table per night.
BOSTON BILLIARD CLUB
885 Riverdale Street, W. Springfield MA (413) 731-POOL
Boston • Worcester • W. Springfield • Warwick • Danbury • Fairfield

Torre named top Yankee

By Ronald Blum
& Bob Unruh
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Insisting he's not worried about interference from George Steinbrenner, Joe Torre on yesterday accepted baseball's least secure job — manager of the New York Yankees.

"If I concern myself with what-ifs and how I'm going to handle it, then I shouldn't be here," Torre said at Yankee Stadium after his two-year $1.05 million deal was announced.

Bob Watson, the team's new general manager, said the deal was agreed to Wednesday night in Tampa, Fla., during a meeting that included himself, Torre, Steinbrenner, former manager Gene Michael and Brian Cashman, the team's new assistant general manager. "Bob and I are going to decide the baseball side of this operation," Torre said. "Until I see otherwise, I have no reason to think otherwise. I worked for Ted Turner and Anheuser-Busch, people who are used to winning and are very impatient when they don't win, and I can understand that. I get a little impatient myself."

Neither Turner's Braves nor the Busch's Cardinals have seen the kind of turnover that takes place at Yankee Stadium. Yesterday's shift was the 20th change in managers since Steinbrenner bought the team in 1973.

Torre, a Brooklyn-born fan of the New York Giants, succeeds Buck Showalter, who balked at Steinbrenner's attempt to force out some of his coaches.

The team announced Showalter's resignation last Thursday but he said he was willing to continue negotiations. He was offered a $1.05 million, two-year deal.

Showalter, popular with many Yankees players and fans, has been manager since October 1991 and served the longest continuous term of any manager under Steinbrenner.

Showalter already has interviews scheduled with the Detroit Tigers and Oakland Athletics.

Torre, fired by the St. Louis Cardinals in June, got "goosebumpy" when offered the Yankees job. He wasn't contacted about it until Tuesday.

"It's a once in a lifetime thing," he said. "For Billy Martin it wasn't, but for me it is."

Torre has asked Willie Randolph and Tony Cloninger if they would return as coaches next season, and he may ask Chris Chambliss as well.

Torre, 55, has a .471 winning percentage in 14 seasons as a major league manager. He has led just one team to a first-place finish: the 1982 Atlanta Braves, who won the NL West and were swept by the Cardinals in the playoffs.

His motivation is to be in the World Series, something he's never achieved as a player or manager.

"That's one more piece in the puzzle in my career," he said. "I'd still like to get this managing thing right."

Torre was contacted about the Yankees' general manager job but said he wasn't interested. He watched the Yankees' turmoil of the past two decades from a distance and said he had the same attitude toward them as many baseball executives.

"There's a lot of times you say, 'I'm glad I'm not there,' " he remembered.

He also showed he can joke about life under Steinbrenner. Referring to Watson, Torre said: "He's jumped into the same foxhole."

Torre becomes the fourth person to manage the Yankees and Mets, following Casey Stengel, Yogi Berra and Dallas Green. He was 351-354 with the Cardinals, a team he took over during the 1990 season.

Watson also considered Sparky Anderson, Gene Lamont, Butch Hobson and Chambliss. He said he picked Torre because the manager is open, plays aggressively and is a bit of a gambler in his decision-making.

* * *

DENVER — Saying it is important for the Rockies to keep their core players together, Colorado general manager Bob Gebhard agreed yesterday to a three-year deal with Dante Bichette worth about $11 million.

Bichette, who had a $3.1 million salary this year and made $200,000 more in performance bonuses, can make about $1 million a season in bonuses under the new contract.

"The way the year ended up on a real positive note, I felt really good about the situation," Bichette said. "We as a family wanted to stay in Colorado."

In other moves, the Rockies agreed to a two-year contract with reliever Darren Holmes and said they would not offer salary arbitration to shortstop Walt Weiss.

The Rockies reached the playoffs in their third season, the fastest ever for an expansion team. They lost 3-1 to Atlanta in the first round.

Bichette's statistics topped teammates Larry Walker, Vinny Castilla and Andres Galarraga. He hit a National League-leading 40 homers, drove in 128 runs and hit .340. He led the league with a .620 slugging percentage.

"This is a win-win situation," Gebhard said. "He needs to be here. He wants to be here. And it's the best for the Colorado Rockies."

Manager Don Baylor noted that Bichette has improved in all three of his seasons with the Rockies.

"I don't think too many guys can compare (to him) the last three years," Baylor said.

Holmes, 29, was 6-1 last season with a team-high 14 saves and a 3.24 ERA.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Come on, make my day...

Goalkeeper Stacy Walker will be in net as UMass field hockey plays in the Atlantic 10 Tournament this weekend at Philadelphia.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

could make a run at the crown. In fact Donnelly gives Temple a slight edge in the contest.

"Temple has a great goalie and is very strong up the middle, and St. Joe's is very strong on the sides. I would give the edge to Temple. I just think they're ready to take off, and I think they'll play well at home."

Awards Preview: St. Joe's coach Michelle Finegan will likely get Coach of the Year honors for leading the Hawks to their first ever league title, but Rhode Island's Rebecca Provost will get some attention here as well.

There is no clear cut Player of the Year, but Kyle Rothenberger, St. Joe's Melanie Taube, and Temple's Tara Silvestre will all likely receive consideration.

The Freshman of the Year spot is also muddled, but UMass' Kate Putnam will get some consideration.

■ horn

continued from page 10

to see the excitement that the fans added to the game. They were knowledgeable and charged up as they were treated to an amazing game.

There is no reason that UMass can't have the same atmosphere. Here are some keys:

• Rivalry. Almost every team UMass plays is local, which is reason enough to hate them, and the conference opponents face-off three times a year. This much head to head competition always brings out the spirit of nastiness.

• Razz the opposing goalie. Yell sieve anytime he gives up a goal.

• Find a creative item (bananas?) to throw on the ice anytime UMass scores. At New Hampshire, the fans throw fish. In Detroit octopi hit the ice every time the Red Wings score.

• Most importantly show up. The game is free and will be well worth watching. Hoop fans at the Curry Hicks Cage will tell you that watching a program on its way up was one of the most exciting institutions in sports.

So tonight when the team takes the ice. Be a part of something. Know all the words to "Black Betty" and help get the team fired up and the program even further off the ground.

* * *

So many people said if the Atlanta Braves had lost the World Series that they would have become the Buffalo Bills of baseball.

Impossible. The Braves have far more class than the losing Bills ever did.

* * *

Erin Lynch is a great player, but it's too bad that after the year that Rachel LeDuc had, she got passed over for the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year.

* * *

Some of sports' best names come from some of high school basketball's most sought after recruits. If you were a coach, is there any way you could turn down Philadelphia guard Mike Jordan.

Looking to add some entertainment to your lineup? How about Springfield, Ohio small forward Johnny Carson? Finally a top prospect that Bill Bayno should be in hot pursuit of, and my favorite name: 6-foot-3 shooting guard Vegas Davis.

• In case you're charting the progress of former Minuteman guard Michael Williams, he signed with the Continental Basketball Association's San Diego Wildcards on Wednesday.

Hey, I guess we always knew Williams was a Wildcard.

• If there is a nicer person anywhere than hockey office secretary Grace Niedal, I would like to meet him or her.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

Lemieux scoring despite not being in perfect health

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

What a scary thought for NHL goaltenders. And what a scary start for Lemieux, who sat out last season for health reasons only to return even better than before.

"You never expect to go out one night and get seven or eight points," Lemieux said after his one-goal, six-assist night Wednesday in the Pittsburgh Penguins' 10-0 victory over Tampa Bay. "I was fortunate enough that the power play's been working good for us, and that's where I get most of my points."

Actually, he's getting them almost every time he steps on the ice.

"It was almost kind of scary, because he could have had a few more out there," Penguins coach Eddie Johnston.

Funny, how that word scary always seems to make its way into any conversation about Lemieux.

Lemieux expected to make slow but measurable progress in his first month back, but goals and assists are coming even faster than they did when he led the Penguins to Stanley Cups in 1991 and 1992. It's more than just the one year away from hockey, too. Lemieux didn't use the time off just to rest his oft-troublesome back and to shake off the anemia and fatigue that dogged him following his 1993 bout with Hodgkin's disease.

For the first time since he first picked up a hockey stick at age 2 or 3, Lemieux began an extensive off-season conditioning program. Now, he lifts weights, walks on a treadmill, uses a stair-climbing machine and even had a conditioning room built onto his spacious Pittsburgh home.

Before, when his back hurt almost every night — he missed nearly one-quarter of the Penguins' games from the rink. I've never felt better. I never felt this good at the peak of my career." Of course, who's to say this isn't his peak? It probably seems to Penguins' opponents that

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Balls away!

Junior Dave Siljanovski was named to the 1995 Atlantic 10 All-Conference team. He and his teammates will take part in the A-10 tournament this weekend in Kingston, R.I.

News needs writers!

If you're interested in having the best experience in your life, come down to the Campus Center Basement and talk to Chris Conner, News Editor.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-0719

The University of Massachusetts Science Fiction Society Proudly Presents

Movie Marathon '95!
TOMORROW!

November 4, 1995

A day of FREE science fiction films

12	Heavy Metal	6 pm	Slaughterhouse 5
2 pm	Monster on Campus	8 pm	Brazil
4 pm	Gate To the Minds Eye	10pm	Heavy Metal
5 pm	Dinner break- no movie

All films are being shown in the Campus Center Auditorium at UMass

V-ball hopes to continue streak against top Atlantic 10 rivals

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The last time the Massachusetts volleyball team dropped a match was Oct. 7th. That is almost a month since Bonnie Kenny's squad has suffered a loss.

Since then, the Minutewomen have been on an amazing nine-game win streak, moving them up into third place in the Atlantic-10 after riding out the majority of the season in fourth. With an impressive 20-9 overall record and an even better 11-4 mark in the A-10, Massachusetts would like nothing more than to spike its way to a conference championship over Thanksgiving weekend on their home court. With only five matches remaining in the season, this seems like a reasonable task.

However, this weekend UMass finds itself smack dab in the middle of an A-10 sandwich as they face second place George Washington and fourth place Virginia Tech tonight and Saturday.

It was the 1994 A-10 Champion Colonials, in fact, that gave the Minutewomen their last blemish in the loss column on that day early in October. GW coach Susan Homan's squad dropped UMass in four that day narrowly edging them out 15-10, 15-12 and 15-12. Since then, GW went on to maintain its spot as the No. 2 team in the conference, now standing at 20-5, 11-2 in the A-10. The two losses coming from two other teams at the top of the heap, Rhode Island and Virginia Tech.

George Washington is led by last year's A-10 Tournament MVP Svetlana Vtyurina who boasts an impressive .375 hitting percentage connecting on 637 kills. With a substantial seven game win streak behind them, GW looks to be tough as ever. Looking at the last time the two squads met, tonight's match should be an out and out battle.

Elements of revenge aside, the Minutewomen would like nothing more than to boost their streak into the double digits. As tournament fever begins to boil, Kenny's squad could be lethal if they can carry this momentum into the Mullins Center at the end of the month.

As for Virginia Tech, the last time they met UMass, they dropped the Minutewomen the day before the GW loss. However, this match was an up and down struggle that went a full five games. In the end, the Hokies reigned supreme winning 5-15, 15-3, 10-15, 15-7, and 15-9.

Even a quick glimpse at the score card shows the irregularity of the match. If UMass wants this one, they'll have to play a strong game physically and mentally. The Hokies now stand at 17-8 overall, 9-4 in the A-10. While they may not have the momentum or a record that jumps off the page, they cannot be counted out.

This is a huge weekend for the Minutewomen. Though the season doesn't end after Virginia Tech, as UMass must still face first place, undefeated Rhode Island, these two matches will be a good measuring stick.

Looking at their lineup, Massachusetts has much more than momentum at their back. Junior outside hitter Giza Rivera has been a major catalyst/offensive force since her return from an ankle injury. She is paired up with junior outside hitter Dionne Nash, who became the first woman with 1,000th career kills in team history in last weekends four-match sweep.

In the front, freshman setter Katie Pearce has been a pillar of success. Last week, the Seal Beach, Calif. native averaged 12.78 assists per game, raising her season average to 10.16, earning an impressive 59 assists against Temple. This, combined with a career high 11 digs and three aces in the Temple win earned her the distinction of A-10 Rookie of the Week.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The UMass volleyball team looks to hammer home two more victories this weekend as they tangle with Atlantic 10 foes George Washington and Virginia Tech.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

leads through GW at some point, and this year, we just have them a little bit early."

* * *

Atlantic 10 honors: Several Minutewomen received A-10 honors last night at the Atlantic 10 women's soccer banquet held in the Springfield Marriott Hotel.

For the second year in a row, junior defender Erin Lynch was named the A-10 Player of the Year. Lynch has been outstanding throughout the entire season and has only improved since last year. She leads the formidable UMass defense that has allowed just 0.66 goals per match. She's also been producing offensively as well. Lynch currently is UMass' third leading scorer with three goals and seven assists for 13 points.

• Rudy was also honored last night. For the second time in three years, he was named the A-10 Coach of the Year. Rudy also won the award in 1993 when he directed the Minutewomen to the Final Four. In his eight years at UMass, Rudy has compiled a 110-32-12 record.

• Named to the A-10 All-Conference First team was Lynch, LeDuc, Rebecca Myers, Danielle Dion and Erica Iverson. Amanda Thompson was named to the second team.

Bruins defense fails to protect lead in overtime defeat to Red Wings

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Steve Yzerman, who missed a penalty shot in the first period, scored on his own rebound 1:50 into overtime as the Detroit Red Wings overcame a 5-2 deficit for a 6-5 win yesterday night over the Boston Bruins.

Yzerman's 15-foot backhander from the left was stopped by goalie Blaine Lacher. But Yzerman followed up with a forehand that slipped between the left post and Lacher's right arm for his fifth goal of the season.

The Bruins led 5-2 midway through the second period, but Detroit tied the game as it took the last 14 shots of the period and scored on three of them.

The Red Wings took the only four shots of overtime.

Boston couldn't capitalize on a double-minor penalty to Detroit's Paul Coffey with 12:40 left in the third period. It took just one shot on goal before Shawn McEachern's penalty 2:48 later evened the sides.

And after Bob Errey was sent off for boarding with 3:14 left in the third, the Bruins managed just two shots as they remained scoreless on eight power plays in the game. Detroit entered the game ranked third in the NHL in penalty killing.

The Bruins went ahead 5-2 at 9:35 of the second period on Dave Reid's short-handed goal, their fourth straight goal in a span of 6:09. But Mathieu Dandenault's first NHL goal, on a power play, cut it to 5-3 at 10:19.

Boston still held a 22-11 lead in shots with six minutes left in the period. Then Detroit grabbed control and tied the game on goals by Doug Brown at 18:10 and Darren McCarty 38 seconds later. Boston's Ray Bourque and Detroit's Nicklas Lidstrom had traded first-period goals. The Red Wings had a chance to go ahead 12:02 into the game when Yzerman was awarded a penalty shot after Alexei Kasatonov fell on the puck in Boston's crease. But Yzerman shot the puck directly into Lacher's pads.

Coffey did put Detroit ahead 2-1 at 1:22 of the second, then Steve Leach, Steve Heinze and Ted Donato scored in a span of 2:06 before Reid finished the four-goal rally.

* * *

SENATORS 5, WHALERS 0

HARTFORD, Conn. — Ottawa rookie forward Daniel Alfredsson posted his first NHL hat trick and Don Beaupre stopped 41 shots for his 17th career shutout yesterday night as the surprising Senators defeated slumping Hartford 5-0.

Alfredsson opened the game's scoring at 3:56 of the first period, connected again at 8:51 of the second period and completed his three-goal game at 7:40 of the third period.

Martin Straka and Radek Bonk also scored for the Senators (6-5), who moved over .500 for the first time this deep in a season since joining the league in 1992-93.

Beaupre stopped 21 shots in the opening period to frustrate the Whalers (4-5-1), who were shut out for the second straight game and third time in five games. It was also the second time in franchise annals that Hartford has been blanked in consecutive games. The Whalers have managed a league-low 20 goals in 10 games and have not scored since Nelson Emerson connected at 2:27 of the third period in a 4-1 loss to Montreal on Oct. 27.

The Whalers, who opened the season at 4-0, continued to struggle offensively. They are winless in their last six (0-5-1) dating back to Oct. 20, a stretch of games where Hartford has been outscored 21-5.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

ished out the pre-conference tournament slate with eight goals apiece, while Butler added seven assists, Miller two.

Miller recorded five game-winning goals on the year, while Butler netted two for the Minutemen.

A stellar performer in the nets this season, Gruber posted a goals against average of 1.34 for the year, allowed just 26 goals in 20 games, and posted 3.5 shutouts and 96 saves.

UMass ended the last 10 games of the season with an 8-1- 1 record. They will take that momentum into today's match against Xavier. The Musketeers finished the regular season with an 8-9-2 mark, 6-3-2 in the A-10.

Maurice Schilten was the team's leading scorer this season with nine goals, and 13 assists. Vladimir Ciric was a perfect compliment to the goal scoring with 14 goals, and one assist on the year to finish two points behind Schilten for the team lead.

In the second game of the day at 1:30 p.m., the Hokies of Virginia Tech will be taking on the undefeated Rhode Island Rams, who finished the season with 16 wins, two ties and a No. 14 National ranking.

With it's 2-0 defeat of Duquesne last Friday, the Hokies finished it's Atlantic-10 record at 6- 3- 2 tied with Xavier for third place in the conference standings. Because of the Virginia Tech loss to Xavier during the season, Vt. becomes the fourth seed in the tournament.

Matt Whalen was the only Virginia Tech player to be named to the A-10 All-Conference team. He finished the season with seven goals and six assists. He will be one of the big threats on the Hokies side, along with Stanislav Licul, the leader in points on the team, and Chris Chladek who finished with eight goals and four assists.

Rhode Island's undefeated regular season means nothing now, as far as this tournament is concerned. The Rams had four players which made the Atlantic-10 All-Conference team, and one on the second team.

Mike Bradley, Paul Dos Santos, and Andrew Williams along with goalie Anthony Latronica gained All-Conference first team honors, while Mike McDermott was elected to the second team.

The Minutemen can clinch a birth in a NCAA play-in game by winning the Atlantic 10 Tournament Championship this weekend.

■ football

continued from page 10

ence. I don't know why they are 2-6."

Minutemen Notes: Redshirt freshman Matt Jordan was named the Yankee Conference Rookie of the Week for his six carry, 174-yard performance against Lehigh.

Jordan also set a school record for highest average per carry (29 yards) in the contest. The offensive line consisting of Dan Markowski, Mark Zych, Matt Alegi, Ron Felice, and Mark Shalala, has done some of its finest work over the last three weeks.

UMass has amassed 1118 rushing yards and the quarterback has only been sacked once. Fullback Rene Ingoglia has 15 touchdowns so far this season gaining his 11th UMass record for touchdowns in a season. Cornerback Brecon Parker is fourth on the UMass all-time interception list with 13 career picks.

The game can be heard on 91.1 WMUA FM Radio with Greg Corey on play-by-play and Dan Welch providing color commentary. Kick-off is 12:30 p.m.

Equestrian's in action

The UMass Equestrian team will compete tomorrow, Nov. 4, at the Hadley Farm. The show will begin at 9 a.m. rain or shine, admission is free. UMass will be hosting the Intercollegiate Horse Show. Smith College and Mount Holyoke College, as well as other area universities, will also compete.

THANG VUVC COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts defense looks to keep pressure on the Black Bear offense in hopes of extending their winning streak to four as they travel to Orono and play Yankee Conference rival Maine.

The Bluewall

Crosswalk Balk
Monday, Nov. 6
9:00pm - 1:00am

DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday, Nov. 9th
9:30pm - 1:00am

WILDCAT O'HALLORAN
BLUES BAND
MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM

"Last Chance To Dance"
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

AMC THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 8
Call Theatre For Showtimes
TO DIE FOR POWDER* PG-13
FAIR GAME* R
ASSASSINS R
THREE WISHES PG
HAMPSHIRE 8
Call Theatre For Showtimes
NOW AND THEN PG-13
GET SHORTY R
SEVEN R
GOLDENEYE* PG
HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS* R
COPYCAT* R

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am

Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu-Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply - EAT IN ONLY

Who would have thought that in one tiny box you'd read something that would change your entire outlook on life.

GLB ISSUES
Expand your horizons

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Ka: Chi restaurant now delivering to Sam Friday and Saturday. 586-2774.

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services (1-800-263-6495 ext F50017.

Obnoxious Audio is here! If you need car audio or alarms call us! We have the lowest prices anywhere carrying high and low end brands. 549-0880

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Chevy Blazer Good condition New engine. $2700 obo. 549-0835

EMPLOYMENT

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 10. $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-8288

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING

$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ + free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii!) Seasonal/permanent, no experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext C1040

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call (800-709-8142 (PIN 3172)

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-8pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri: 413 586-8635. ABT Associates Telephone Research Center. Mt Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal full time employment available at national parks, forests, & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call (1-206-545-4804 Ext N50012

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $75-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011

We want you! Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $7500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location, your profit $32,400 first year! 941-768-9001

FOR RENT

Mon St. 4 bdrm. house on bus route. Starts 1/1/96. Call 253-0280

FOR SALE

Brother correctronic 140 typewriter. 5 thousand character storage memory. Almost new! Best offer. Call 546-7904

Car radio. Clarion 5750, detach face, tape, tuner, cd control. $bill in box, was $250, asking $150. Jay 756-8634

Used Stereo Equipment. Large selection, priced to sell. Complete racks systems and seperate components. Speakers 8" to 8 tall. Receivers/amps. 20 to 200 watts. Guitar amps, much more. Call days/evenings 256-0941

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8931

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar lessons. Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-4183

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-6087

LOST

I have lost a small black organizer with hole punch written on the front. If anyone finds it please call Tammy at 546-7088

MUSICIANS

Ivory ticklers original/cover blanc sleek talented soprano, keyboardist. Blues, R&B, funk, etc. Call Jay 256-8834 or Greg 256-8906

PERSONALS

Jill L I am a pumkin from a BIG RED STATE. You will meet me soon. I hope you can't wait! (Mr. Your Big

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7947

ROOMMATE WANTED

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, hair-an Reiser 586-7164

Foreign students: DV1 greencard program available! 1-800-660-2162

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Unity at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-3500

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Sublet Spring. Furnished 2 bed apt. On bus rt. Call 253-7687

TRAVEL

Free Travel! Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group=Travel free. Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Winter Break Special: Kissington wens $269. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Wanted!!! Individuals, student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS. Call inter-campus programs 1-800-327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

And she said to him as she went out the door that she was finally doing what she wanted to do all her life ... She was going to write for the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Dreams can come true.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

Top Ten reasons to work for the Collegian:

10) It's more fun than a talking dolphin.
9) Because that crazy guy in the cat mask loves our staff so much.
8) Working for the Collegian is secretly the initiation test for joining the Illuminatae.
7) You too can turn the drunken crazy antics of your friends into a comic strip.
6) Still plenty of O. J. editorials to be written.
5) It's better than working in Whitmore.
4) Receive fair warning by seeing DC menu one day in advance.
3) It's the better than watching Baywatch.
2) The quote of the day.
1) Writing top ten lists.

Stop by the Collegian offices today!

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = Payment

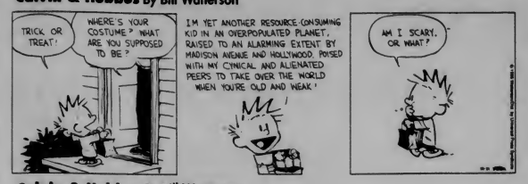
Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



TRICK OR TREAT!
WHERE'S YOUR COSTUME? WHAT ARE YOU SUPPOSED TO BE?
I'M YET ANOTHER RESOURCE-CONSUMING KID IN AN OVERPOPULATED PLANET. RAISED TO AN ALARMING EXTENT BY MADISON AVENUE AND HOLLYWOOD. POISED WITH MY CYNICAL AND ALIENATED PEERS TO TAKE OVER THE WORLD WHEN YOU'RE OLD AND WEAK.
AM I SCARY, OR WHAT?

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Kroay

Generation X By Chris Lehman

EVERY CITIZEN OF YOUR COUNTRY GETS TO BE PRESIDENT?
YES. THERE IS A... RE-VO-LU-TION MONTHLY, AND A CITIZEN IS CHOSEN.
I WAS CHOSEN, BUT I WAS ALREADY COMMITTED TO STUDY IN LOUSY @!% AMERICA!
BUT YOU'RE NOT BITTER...? OF COURSE NOT.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

CHECK IF A HALLOWEEN PARTY, EH BRUNO?
WELL, IM...ACTUALLY I DON'T REMEMBER MUCH OF IT.
WELL, NOW THAT IT'S MORNING DO YOU STILL RESPECT ME?
I DON'T KNOW, IT'S HARD NOT TO RESPECT A HUNG-OVER CATHOLIC IN AN ALB SUIT.
HEY, AT LEAST I CAN LAUGH AT MYSELF.
AND GOD KNOWS, THE REST OF US DO ALL THE TIME.

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

WELL? JUDGING? YA KNOW HOW I BROKE UP WITH MY GIRLFRIEND AND TOLD YOU THAT I WAS ATTRACTED TO YOU... AND THAT I SAID YOU WERE NICE SMART AND PRETTY...?
WELL, I JUST WANTED YOU TO KNOW THAT I'M NOT IN LOVE WITH YOU AND I DON'T WANT TO SLEEP WITH YOU...
JUSTIN?

One Less Keg By Gleo

Sarah birthday this summer. Kicked the keg with about 12 fresh disciples by the way
Then off to see about a lost steed + his belly. Swim
The next day, hurting. Working the plant K.C. burning specs. Marcus enemy icon among us watching.
Running into the forest. Drowning. Needs Planet Lust - MEIA

GeoFrey By Embryo

GEOF LOST HIS PHONE PRIVELEGES FOR THE DAY!
OH REALLY, YOU SAY? WHEN I WAS GOING TO CLASS YESTERDAY, I BLAH, BLAH, BLAH, BLAH, BLAH, BLAH, BYE! SAME, NO WAY

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

LONG GONE AT 25?
C'MON! WRITE, YOU STUPID PEN! AAARGHH!
FOR A YOUNG GUY, YOU SURE DON'T TALK LIKE ONE.
THEY JUST DON'T MAKE PENS LIKE THEY USED TO!

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I heard that the Walt Disney Corporation is suing the Serbian government for using a picture of Mickey Mouse on one of their recruitment posters.

I also heard that a small Christian group in Northampton, Massachusetts is suing the Serbian government for using a photo of Jesus Christ on a different recruitment poster.

Where'd they get the photo?

I'll bet Disney wins big. They have tough attorneys.

I don't think the Christians have a chance to win.

There's no precedent.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Close to Home By John McPherson

"The video is due back at 7 p.m. tomorrow. After that it will begin to emit a hideous stench. Enjoy the movie!"

Buttah By Darling & the buttah community

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Scary Thoughts That Keep You Awake at Night

10. If you write top ten lists, some people will take them seriously enough to hunt you down, vandalize your door, call you and complain about them, or even send a letter to the Collegian saying that you "attack them."
9. Not even Oscar Meyer could tell you what's in a hot dog.
8. Cheers is off the air, but 90210 continues to run.
7. Millions and millions of computers are running Windows '95.
6. The Red Sox made it to the play-offs.
5. "Dog" backwards is "God."
4. Nicole Cournoyer mentioned the word "buttworms" (if that even is a word) six times in her column Wednesday.
3. Two words: President Quayle.
2. We pay for DC food.
1. People think I'm joking when I say "Baywatch sucks."

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Allison Connolly
Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician.....Jeffrey DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Marianne Haner
Bill Darby

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Veggie Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Szachuan Beef
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Szechuan Tofu

Saturday

LUNCH
Omlet
Jumbo Waffles/Syrup
BASICS LUNCH
Jumbo Waffles/Syrup
Polynesian Vegetables

DINNER
Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Buttermilk Pancakes
BASICS DINNER
Black Eyed Peas
Stuffed Shells in Sauce

Sunday

LUNCH
Scrambled Eggs
French Toast
BASICS LUNCH
French Toast
Roman Rice and Beans

DINNER
Turkey Divan
Southern Fried Steak
BASICS DINNER
Turkey Divan
Sauteed Tofu

Quote of the Day

So long, and thanks for all the fish.

–Douglas Adams

Scheduling Change

The UMass Men's Basketball exbition scheduled for Nov. 7 p.m. against Spartak of Moscow, Russia,

Sports

UMass No. 2 seed in A-10 tourney

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

This is what you prepare for all season long. The regular season means nothing now, expect for the fact that the teams that are here had a good one. The Massachusetts men's soccer team is traveling to Rhode Island this weekend to play in the Atlantic-10 championship in an attempt to gain an NCAA tournament birth.

Today at 11 a.m. the No. 2 seeded Minutemen will take on No. 3 Xavier in the first game of the tournament. The second game of the day is No. 1 Rhode Island against No. 4 Virginia Tech. The winner of today's semifinal games will play in the championship on Sunday at 1 p.m.

The Minutemen closed out their season on Sunday with a 3-2 win over Temple to finish at 14-4-2 for the year, 8-2-1 in the Atlantic-10 which enabled them to be seeded second in the tourney.

Senior Brad Miller, junior Dave Siljanovski, and sophomore Mike Butler were selected to the All-Atlantic-10 first team, and senior goal keeper Eric Gruber received second-team All-Atlantic-10 honors when the conference announced its postseason awards at its annual banquet yesterday.

Siljanovski, the Minutemen's leading scorer this year with 12 goals, 16 assists for 40 points, has set two UMass records in 1995. He set a new single season assist record at 16, as well as the new UMass mark for career assists at 23. He has netted three-game winners this season, and the award is Siljanovski's second All-Atlantic 10 first team selection.

Butler and Miller were the team's second and third leading scorers during regular season play. The two finals at 1:30 p.m., following the 11 a.m. match-up between Temple and Xavier.

"I was telling [GW coach] Shannon Higgins-Cirovski all A-10 roads lead through GW or UMass, and here we go. Here it is," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "They are one tough team, well coached. They've got a really good squad of players. I like their team very much and I think they're going to give us, like usual, a typical GW-UMass battle."

The Minutewomen enter the tourney as the No. 2 seed in the East behind the No. 1 seeded Temple Owls. Temple handed UMass its first-ever A-10 loss on Oct. 27, 1-0. Xavier captured the No. 2 seed in the West behind the No. 1 ranked Colonials.

The Minutewomen beat GW 1-0 in their first home game of the year (Sept. 8). In that game, Rachel LeDuc netted the game-winner for UMass off an assist by Julie Magid. The semi-final match-up should be a good one, and just as exciting as the last two championship matches and the game earlier this year.

"We've been fortunate. We've been on the winning half so far," Rudy said. "There's been three one-goal games. They're a very good side. I respect them a lot."

The Colonial Women are led by sophomore Chemar Smith, the 1994 Atlantic 10 Rookie of Year, who has eight goals and five assists for 21 points on the year. Tanya Vogel (seven goals and four assists for 18 points), Amanda Simmons (six goals for 12 points) and Kristin Davidson (three goals, three assists for nine points) are also threats to score.

GW keeper Danielle Dourney was outstanding in the A-10 final last year and has been solid again this year. She has 51 saves and a 1.42 goals-against-average.

Temple (9-5-2, 4-1-1 in the A-10) and Xavier (10-7-2, 3- 1-1) didn't meet during the regular season. The Owls have been led offensively by Kim Fitzgerald, who has 13 goals and six assists for a team-leading 32 points.

Winsome Fritz (99 saves, 1.26 GAA) should get the start in goal for the Owls.

"Temple is on a roll," Rudy said. "They've won five or six in a row and they beat us. They've been scoring some goals."

Xavier is led by Amanda Gruber (12 goals, five assists for 29 points) and Ann Marie Hubbard (120 saves, 1.52 GAA).

"Xavier's had its best year in a while," Rudy said. "They have some attacking people who I respect very much, that I think are quite good."

Also a threat to score for the Musketeers is Susie Welch (four goals, seven assists for 15 points) and Colleen Savage (four goals, three assists for 11 points).

"I feel like this is the best A-10 tournament so far that we've had," Rudy said. "As long as we're playing in the A- 10's, for us, the road as always

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior Erin Lynch was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Year for the second straight year at ceremonies last evening. UMass plays George Washington in the opening round of the A-10 Tournament today at Garber Field starting at 1:30 p.m.

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts hockey team returned from its hiatus two years ago, it started its season against Merrimack. The Warriors defeated Massachusetts 8-2. The teams have met four more times with the Hockey East veterans defeating the newcomers winning all four games.

But going into this weekend's home-and-home battle, the Minutemen think that things will be different.

Coming off of a 6-3 win over Army in the season opener last Friday night, this year's Massachusetts team is confident that it can make an impact in Hockey East, and for the Minutemen conference play starts tonight against Merrimack at the William D. Mullins Center.

Merrimack has not had as strong a start to its season however. The Warriors enter the game with a record of 1-2- 1 (0-2-1 in Hockey East), after suffering losses to Providence and Northeastern. Merrimack's only win came in a non-league battle with McGill University in Montreal.

Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen hopes to catch Merrimack stuck in its downslide.

"I was saying before that having four games under our belt would really help them coming into our building," Mallen said, "But momentum has a lot to do with it. They might be questioning themselves coming in. They want to break out against someone and we have to make sure that they don't break out against us.

"This would be a big win for us, giving us five points in the league in the first weekend of play," Mallen said. "One of my sub-goals is to beat everyone in this league at least once."

The Warriors, who made waves in the Hockey East postseason making it to the quarterfinals, where they put a scare into eventual national champion Boston University, only losing by one goal.

The Warriors return a talented unit for the 1995-96 season, starting from the net out. Junior goaltender Martin Legault had an impressive 3.39 goals against average last year, and is widely considered one of the best goalies in the conference.

Joe Mallen said that his players have a lot of respect for the Gloucester, ONT native.

"Martin Legault has definitely part of the difference of why we haven't been able to beat them," Mallen said. "He's very quick and very smart. A lot of our players feel he is one of the best goalies in the league. We have to find a way to beat him if we're going to beat Merrimack."

On defense, the first thing you notice is Merrimack's size. Dan McKenna (6-foot-8, 225 pounds), John Jakopin (6-foot- 5, 225 pounds) and freshman Darrel Scoville (6-foot-3, 195 pounds) make up one of the conference's most formidable units.

"They have a real good set of defensemen," Mallen said. "McKenna and Jackopin are two of the biggest defensemen in the league."

On offense, sophomore Martin Larouche has been the Warriors' top sniper so far this year with three goals and one assist.

The Volpe Complex, Merrimack's home arena has a smaller ice surface than that at the Mullins Center, Mallen said that the difference could hinder the Warriors.

"I think that they like to play in the small rink with a conservative style of play," Mallen said. "I think they're going to have trouble here."

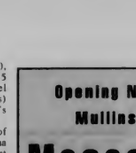
Mallen said that for the home opener, he will use a similar line-up to the one he used against Army including sophomore goalie Brian Regan.

One positive that came from Army was the school record five powerplay goals. Mallen hopes that the production can be repeated.

"One thing we really emphasized is puck movement and passing and it really paid off against Army," Mallen said. "I'm anxious to see how it's going to pay off against Hockey East opponents. If we can, I think we'll be effective."

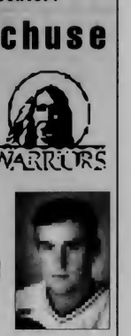
Opening Night at the Mullins Center:

Massachuse



WARRIORS

UMass



Tonight • 7 p.m.

UMass hopes to finish season on a high note

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The 1995 season has been a disappointing one for the Massachusetts field hockey team, but this weekend, the squad has a chance to finish its season on high note, as it heads to Philadelphia for the Atlantic 10 tournament.

"Everyone is looking forward to the tournament and a chance to end the season on a positive note," said Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly. "We want to go into the Spring and to next year with a good level of confidence."

The Minutewomen enter the tournament as the No. 2 seed and will face off against No. 3 Rhode Island on Saturday, while top seeded St. Joseph's will battle No. 4 Temple.

Originally it appeared that Massachusetts would face host Temple, whom was expected to be the No. 3 seed, but URI's late season victory over the Owls vaulted the Rams into the No. 3 spot.

The Minutewomen enter the contest never having been beaten by Rhode Island, leading the all-time series 18-0. But Rhode Island has other ideas for this year. In addition to chasing their first ever Atlantic 10 tournament victory, the Rams would like to beat Donnelly who coached at URI for two years.

"One of the kids on the team said that if they saw us again they would kill us," said Donnelly, who refused to reveal the name of the player.

Rhode Island enters the game coming off a blowout victory over Providence.

"Rhode Island is playing very well right now. They're a very good team. They're coming off a big win," Donnelly said. "I don't think we're going to have any trouble getting up for this."

It's going to be a matter of which team can keep their focus. I'm confident about us. If we come out and play well, we'll be fine. If we come out and have a lapse, we're going to be in big trouble."

The Temple/St. Joseph's match up will be a spirited one, as the two schools will slug it out for Philadelphia bragging rights. Despite the fact that they are only the No. 4 seed, the defending champion Owls

Turn to page 6

Maine next up for football

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team looks to keep its winning streak alive tomorrow, as they head north to face the Maine Black Bears in a Yankee Conference Match-up.

The Minutemen (5-3) are riding a three game winning streak, due largely to a couple of factors.

The first factor is the UMass running game. It has been phenomenal the last three weeks with all-time UMass rushing leader senior Rene Ingoglia, junior Frank Alessio, and redshirt freshman Matt Jordan accumulating mass quantities of yards.

Most notably last week, the Minutemen ground attack broke a school rushing record for a single game, amassing 515 yards rushing. Alessio contributed 206, while 174 came from Jordan.

"The ground game is the basis of our offense," said UMass coach Mike Hodges. "And they gain 515 yards in conditions like that."

The muddy conditions like that is the second factor to the Minutemen success. UMass has excelled in sloppy field conditions so far this season. While the fans and the laundry staff have not been as happy about the mud bowls, the Minutemen have thrived the past three weeks.

They have outscored their opponents by a combined margin of 97-58, including a 33-9 win at Buffalo, a 20-9 win over William & Mary and last week's 44-36 win over Lehigh.

"I hope it doesn't rain, because I don't want people to think we're winning just because of the weather," Hodges said. "I'm sick of answering those questions. I hope we get a nice day."

Matt Jordan

The Black Bears come into tomorrow's match-up with a 2- 6 record. Maine has gone two consecutive games without scoring a single point, receiving spankings from both New Hampshire (21-0) and Delaware (61-0).

Maine tailback Andre Pam has been the key to the Black Bear offense, rushing for 818 yards and four touchdowns this season. He is also a dangerous return man, averaging 21.4 yards per kick return, and returned a kick-off 94 yards for a touchdown in a game against Div. II Lockhaven.

Quarterback John Tennet has completed 68 of 139 passes for 645 yards this season for Maine, but freshman Mickey Fein (13 for 34, 89 yards) is expected to start tomorrow.

"Maine is very physical, very big. They are a very capable team. They are third in the conference in rushing, and they use two quarterbacks," Hodges said. "They are a tough team, like all the teams in the conference."

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

Hockey craze; Classy Braves; Williams plays

Around the Horn with Matt Vautour

If you listen to outsiders talk about the young Division I hockey program that is growing at the University of Massachusetts, they overflow with excitement.

"Wow, with that building in the Northeast, they can't help but be good," they say with increasing optimism.

But on campus, many students have yet to find excitement in UMass hockey.

Perhaps the fact that the team struggled during its first season in Division I kept away some fans, but the Minutemen are much improved from last year and can contend in every game they're in.

The time for a "UMass hockey atmosphere" to emerge is now.

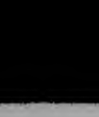
Watching the Boston University-Vermont battle last weekend in Burlington, Vt., it was thrilling

Turn to HORN, page 6

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 43 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, November 6, 1995



LeDuc leads UMass to A-10 Championship

Senior Rachel LeDuc was named the Most Outstanding Player for leading the women's soccer team to the A-10 tourney title (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

Students protest corporations

As a form of protest, several students removed credit card applications from campus and mailed them back to corporations (See story, page 3).

Jazz superstar in Noho

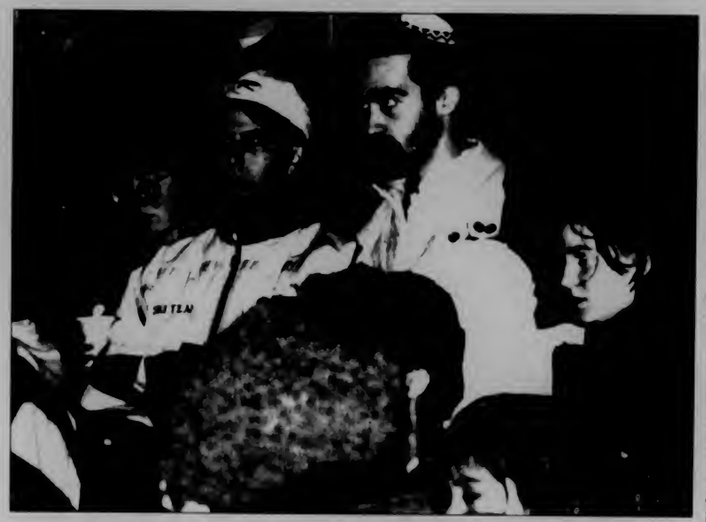
Joshua Redman plays the Iron Horse tonight. Hear why many describe him as the most talented young jazz artist anywhere (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

The sun will be out today with increasing clouds later this afternoon. Expect light winds today, with highs in the mid 50s. Tuesday will be warmer, with a high near 55 and light rain this afternoon.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 37	HIGH: 56 LOW: 35	HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin killed at rally



EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN

UMass students paid their respects to assassinated Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin by holding a candle-lit vigil at Hillel house last night.

■ Leader assassinated at gathering, Israel is in mourning for Rabin

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was shot to death Saturday night, moments after telling cheering thousands "people really want peace." Rabin, a war hero who became a peacemaker, died on the operating table, and police said an Israeli who was described by friends as a right-winger confessed to firing the fatal shots.

The assassination — the first of an Israeli leader since the founding of the state in 1948 — stunned the nation. World leaders from President Clinton to Yasser Arafat reacted with sorrow and outrage, declaring that the peace process would continue. Israeli children began their school day Sunday by standing in silent mourning.

Rabin, 73, had descended from a city hall balcony and was about to get into his black Cadillac limousine when the gunman fired three bullets from close range, hitting him in the back and stomach. As crowd members surged toward the shooting scene, Rabin's car raced to Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital. Rabin arrived unconscious, without pulse or blood pressure.

Israel TV showed the gunman, identified by police sources as Yigal Amir, 27, pinned against a wall by dozens of police. The sources said Amir was seized with pistol in hand, had confessed to shooting Rabin and told investigators that he didn't regret it. In recent weeks, Rabin had repeatedly voiced concern about growing political violence in Israel and accused the right-wing opposition — which believes he is betraying Jews by handing land back to the Arabs — of inciting explosive rage against him. The rally was designed to show that despite noisy anti-Rabin protests, many Israelis support the peace moves of Rabin, who shared the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize with his foreign minister and PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Like Anwar Sadat, the Egyptian leader shot to death in 1981, Rabin died at the hands of radical countrymen opposed to peace efforts. His policies, especially his autonomy agreements with the Palestinians, have deeply divided Israel.

Right-wing demonstrators routinely denounced Rabin as a "murderer" and "traitor." At a recent rally, protesters held up posters of Rabin in a Nazi uniform.

Right-wing extremists who gathered briefly at the hospital condemned Rabin, even while he was fighting for his life. "Rabin is a murderer!" they shouted.

But hundreds of others waiting outside the hospital burst into tears when Rabin's top aide, Eitan Haber, announced that Rabin had died.

At the site of the shooting, the Kings of Israel Square in Tel Aviv, young Israelis sat on the ground, weeping. Some lit candles, while others sang the "Peace Song," which the crowd had sung at the rally.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, who had stood alongside Rabin at the rally, later noted that even the often shy and withdrawn Rabin had joined in song. "It was a happy day in his life, probably the happiest day in his life," Peres said.

Government officials said there might be some delays in implementing the West Bank autonomy agreement with the Palestinians as Israel deals with its domestic problems.

However, Peres, 73, named as caretaker prime minister early Sunday, told the nation he would continue on Rabin's path. "There is nothing else we can do, as comrades, as friends but to continue along a great road paved by a great leader," Peres said, fighting back tears.

Peres could either form a new government, or serve out the government's term until elections scheduled in October 1996. A state funeral was scheduled for Monday in Jerusalem. According to Jewish tradition, burial should take place by the sunset of the day following the death, but the funeral was delayed until 2 p.m. on Monday to allow world leaders to attend.

Leaders from around the world, including Clinton, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany and Prime Minister John Major of Britain, said they would attend.

Many will be watching to see how many Arab leaders take part. King Hussein of Jordan told Army Radio he will attend. It would be his first visit to Jerusalem since Israel captured its eastern portion from Jordan in a 1967 war. It also would defy opposition by Islamic radicals to visiting "Israeli-occupied Jerusalem" before Israel settles Palestinian claims to East Jerusalem.

Army Radio also reported that President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, Sadat's successor and a mediator in the peace talks, would attend.

Turn to ASSASSINATION, page 2

■ Students gather at Hillel sponsored vigil to remember Prime Minister

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Correspondent

Last night, amidst the brisk, cold November wind, bundled up in layers of clothing, stood a group of students, with lit candles in hand, who came together at Hillel House to mourn the loss of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, assasinated Saturday evening.

Rabin was allegedly shot by a 27 year-old Israeli law student, while leaving a pro-peace celebration in the Kings of Israel Square.

About 40 University of Massachusetts students gathered for a short candlelight vigil held last night and voiced their shock, sadness and concerns over the assassination.

People felt great disappointment that a member of the Jewish community could commit such an act against another member.

> "It is sad to think that the leader, whatever one thinks of his political views... was cut down by assassination, that is not the way we resolve things in the Jewish world,"
> – Rabbi Saul Perlmutter

"It is sad to think that the leader, whatever one thinks of his political views... was cut down by assassination, that is not the way we resolve things in the Jewish world," said Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, addressing the group.

While some students were shocked that Rabin was killed by a fellow Jew, others were not as stunned, given the fact that a number of Jews had felt betrayed by Rabin when he gave over Jewish land in the West Bank to the Palestinians in an attempt to build peace with the Arabs.

"There are people who opposed him; he had been receiving death threats in the past," said Marc Asso, a vice- president in Hillel. "It saddens me to see that a few would kill another Jew because of a political disagreement, and even more that a Jew would kill another Jew because he fought for peace."

This is the first political assassination Israel has ever experienced in its 48 year history.

"Today we come together to mourn the death of a great man, who fought his whole entire life for peace," said Hillel President Jaime Resnick. "But we also come together to work within the Jewish community, and to work within ourselves. Before we can have peace within the Middle East and peace around the world, we need to come together as one."

Many students compared the devastating sense of loss felt in Israel after Rabin's assassination to the mood of the country after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"What John F. Kennedy meant to Americans is probably similar to what Yitzhak Rabin meant to the people of Israel," said Alan Weinfield, past president of Hillel.

Others were reminded of what happened to Anwar Sadat, who had been instrumental in the Camp David Accords, slain 14 years ago because he was seen by some as a traitor to his people.

"Yitzhak Rabin was a man of courage. He didn't necessarily take positions that brought him popularity, but they were ones for which he was willing to give his life for," Rabbi Saul Perlmutter said.

Perlmutter also spoke of how Rabin had changed over the years, from military general to negotiator of peace. "His overriding values [were] security for Israel, and at one time in his life he felt that the way to get security was by military power... but what we can learn from the lessons of his life is that we don't resolve conflicts by violence, but through talking, can peace begin to be acquired," he said.

Students quietly reflected on this, as they stood in a circle outside Hillel. Songs of peace and brotherhood were sung in Hebrew, and the Mourner's Kaddish — the Jewish prayer for the dead — was recited. One by one, students placed their candles in the middle of the circle, remembering the courageous achievements one man had made, praying for peace within the Jewish community, the Middle East and within the world.

Gatherers were encouraged to come inside for further discussion of the assassination and plans for future events by Hillel. People are invited to attend another vigil tonight at the Jewish Community of Amherst, located on 740 Main St at 7:30 p.m.

■ World leaders vow to continue Rabin's peace plan

By Dirk Beveridge
Associated Press

LONDON — The most fitting tribute to Yitzhak Rabin would be to continue his quest for peace in the Middle East, world leaders said Sunday as they mourned the slain Israeli prime minister.

Rabin, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1994 for making peace with Palestinians, was shot to death Saturday night by a right-wing Israeli after speaking at a peace rally in Tel Aviv.

Yitzhak Rabin himself always emphasized that the opponents of the peace process should never be allowed to stop the process with violence, no matter how loathsome," said Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson. "In our dejection, this is the message we must carry with us."

Pope John Paul II expressed hope that "this serious and sad event will not irreparably disturb the search for peace in the Middle East, but on the contrary will be a new stimulus."

The pope ended his regular Sunday remarks from his window overlooking St. Peter's Square with the words: "Peace, Shalom."

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak mourned Rabin as man who fell from "treacherous bullets at the hands of extremists who are enemies of peace."

But hard-line opponents of Rabin called his death by gunfire a fitting end for the old Israeli war hero. The Libyan government news agency Jana described Rabin as a terrorist whose "hands were covered in the blood of the martyrs."

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani called the assassination "God's warning to humanity."

"According to a principle of belief, we believe that whoever unsheathes the sword of tyranny will be killed by the same sword," Rafsanjani said, according to Iranian radio.

Condolences flooded into Israel from all parts of the world, from presidents and monarchs alike.

Rabin "was aware of the danger to his life," said German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. "But for him it was important that every chance was used to finally bring peace for the people of the region that was affected by so much suffering."

President Julio Maria Sanguinetti of Uruguay decreed two days of national mourning for Rabin, calling him "a great statesman, a courageous military man and a dedicated democrat."

Russian President Boris Yeltsin, recovering from heart troubles in a Moscow hospital, called the assassination: "an attempt to rip apart the movement toward peace in the Middle East, and push the Middle East into an abyss of blood and suffering."

French President Jacques Chirac took a hopeful note in a telegram to Israeli President Ezer Weizman: "I am sure that his sacrifice will not have been in vain and that his work will be carried on successfully by those who have the heavy task of leading your country towards peace in a reconciled Middle East."

South African President Nelson Mandela hailed Rabin as "a true peacemaker who has fallen at the hands of forces of blind bigotry" and offered to do what he could to assist the Middle East peace process.

"This criminal act, which we condemn in the strongest terms, can only have been carried out by those who have no interest in the genuine welfare of the Israeli and Palestinian peoples," Mandela said.

Asian reaction was more muted, but echoed the need to continue the peace process.

"The Middle East peace process must not falter now," said Philippine President Fidel Ramos.

"I sincerely hope that the prime minister's strong will toward peace will be taken over by the Israeli people," said Japanese Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama.

COURTESY OF ANNA FEDER

Sidekicks...

Members of the Jim Rose Circus Sideshow entertain Amherst residents at Pearl Street last week.

■ assassination

continued from page 1

Egyptian officials in Cairo said they couldn't immediately confirm that.

On Sunday, Rabin was to lie in state outside the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

"Peace must be and peace will be Prime Minister Rabin's lasting legacy," Clinton said in Washington.

Arafat, the PLO chief, said he was shocked "by this awful, terrible crime." He said he hoped that "all of us, Israelis and Palestinians, will have the ability to overcome this tragedy against the peace process."

Peres, the driving force behind the peace agreements with the Palestinians, has been more dovish than Rabin, his long-time political rival. The two had put their rivalries aside over the past three years and worked as a team.

The Rabin shooting is expected to trigger a crackdown on far-right extremists. Security forces say they number about 200 to 300.

In recent weeks, Rabin's security had been tightened because of extreme right-wing rhetoric vowing an all-out effort to stop Israel from handing the West Bank to Arafat's government.

But Rabin had refused heavier security, fearing he would be isolated, according to Ehud Sprinzak, a professor of political science at Hebrew University.

"For 27 years, I was a military man. I fought all the time. There was no chance for peace. I believe that now there is a chance for peace and we must take advantage of it," Rabin said at the peace rally Saturday. "This government decided to give peace a chance."

He was about to get into his car when the gunman fired. Noam Kedem, a 26-year-old lawyer from Tel Aviv, said he heard two or three shots and "I saw Rabin holding his stomach. I don't know exactly where he was shot, but he was holding his whole body and then he fell on the ground." He said security men hovered over him and then two more shots were fired.

The suspect, Amir, was quickly caught. Israeli radio and TV reports said he was a law student from Herzliya, near Tel Aviv, who had been involved in right-wing causes, including setting up illegal settlements in the West Bank.

A previously unknown Jewish extremist group, identified only as "Ine," had claimed responsibility in an announcement given to Israeli police reporters.

Group cleans almost 6 tons of garbage

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

A group of Five-College students and local citizens braved the cold weather on Saturday to clean a section of Cushman Brook in Amherst.

Thirty people, led by a team of Water Watch volunteers, removed approximately 12,000 pounds of glass and debris from an old farmer's dump near Puffer's Pond. Members of the group also worked to remove fallen trees that were restricting the water flow.

The Saturday clean up was the third of its kind in the Amherst/Northampton area, the fourth in western Massachusetts, and was the biggest success to date, according to coordinator Iai Sood.

"We collected two tons of garbage each time out before," he said. "This time we were closer to six."

The garbage consisted mostly of glass, metal and rubber. The glass was mainly concentrated in one area, with broken shards buried several inches into the top soil.

"When we arrived at the site, the amount of trash didn't appear that bad," said Water Watch member Craig Nelson. "It wasn't until we took a closer look in the water and on the banks, then we saw all the glass."

The group had to rake through the dirt to find all the trash, place it in bags and haul out refuse which weighed close to 150 pounds per bag. Most volunteers said they realized early on that the project would not be finished in one day.

"We hope to come back in the spring to finish cleaning the Cushman site," said clean-up coordinator Jeremy Mailloux.

Cleaning will become easier after the spring rains expose more of the garbage, according to coordinator Jessyca Harris. The group removed trees from the water to help the flow of the brook.

"The trees in the water narrowed the brook," Mailloux said. "This left potential for erosion on the opposite bank."

The group used a chainsaw and pick-axes to cut through the lumber and dirt damming the water.

The Water Watch Program is an organization started by MASSPIRG, and is funded by an Americorps grant. The Americorps Program was intended to be a "domestic Peacecorps," having students perform community service in exchange for educational grants.

Locally, the program has centered itself in Boston, Worcester, Hartford, and in Amherst. MASSPIRG is running a Water Watch program in Springfield, and combined, the Western Massachusetts Water Watch groups have collected sixteen tons of garbage from different sites thus far.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Nov. 6

Meeting — UMass Update is holding its news meeting at 7 p.m. at UVC-TV 19, located behind the Hatch. All those interested in reporting, writing and technical crew are welcome to attend. Any questions, call UVC-19 News Department at 545-1336

Meeting — "Identifying and Expressing Emotions." REFLECT is a support group free of charge and open to any Five-College student coping with the serious illness of a friend or family member. Meetings are Mondays and Tuesdays in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall, 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Meeting — "Does Overeating Control Your Life?" Overeaters Anonymous is offering free workshops to those who think they may have an eating problem. Mondays and Tuesdays, Campus Center, 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Discussion — "Cops, Gangs, and Youth in Western Mass." A panel discussion led by a group of Massachusetts youth and facilitated by RAIL, on the increased repression of young people by police. Campus Center 174-176, 6:30 p.m.

Discussion — "Learning Across the Razor Wire: Education in Prisons." A panel discussion led by members of UMass Prison Education Project: Ray Jones (Legal Studies), Renee Heberler (Women's Studies) and Wesley Blixt (Legal Studies). Campus Center 168, 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 7

Discussion — "The Death Penalty," Panel with David House and Buzz Eisenberg of Massachusetts Citizens Against the Death Penalty. Campus Center 174-176, 6:30, p.m.

Discussion — "Criticism and Self-Criticism: How a Socialist Society Deals with its Enemies." Allyn Rickett, arrested as a U.S. spy in China in 1951, discusses his experience of re-education. Campus Center 168, 8 p.m.

Music — "Spotlight on Viola and Piano." A faculty recital featuring Michelle LaCourse, viola, and Nadine Shank, piano. Benzamson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Performance — "The Akwesasne Mohawk Singers and Dancers." A demonstration of traditional Iroquois songs and dances. Augusta Savage Gallery, 7 p.m.

Art — Mount Holyoke College professor of art Robert Herbert on "Millet's Rural Workers." Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Meeting — The Hillel Council meets at Hillel House at 388 N. Pleasant St at 6:15 p.m.

Notices

Testing — This semester the University will administer R1 Basic Math Skills on Tuesday, Nov. 7 at Marcus Hall 131, 6:30 to 8:00 p.m. Students wishing to take the Exemption Test should bring an ID and a number two pencil. The use of a calculator is optional.

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177-178. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 408E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Writing — The Hampshire College AIDS Action Collective is running a "Safer Sex" erotica contest. They are accepting poetry and prose. Submissions are due Nov. 9, and can be sent via Five-College mail to Hampshire College Resource Center. Winners will be awarded prizes and will be published in the magazine. Please include a mailing address.

Community — The HCAC Head Start Program is accepting application for its free pre-school program for immediate placement in both classroom and Home Base, to qualify for classroom placement a child must be 4 years old by Sept. 1, 1995. To qualify for Home Base a child must be 3 years old by Sept. 1, 1995. To obtain a pre-registration form or for additional information, call 582-4206

Theater — The University of Massachusetts theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545-3490 or 545-6818.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 5-1506.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696-7752.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Uiama at 256-8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building. $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Mon.-Fri.

The Good News Is This Is A Great Year For College Graduates!

Change Lanes NEW ROUTE OPENED 10 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS 30 No Limits TO ONE WAY 20 CONSULT MAPS

The Fall Recruiting Season is in High Gear!

Here are some of the firms coming to campus in November to recruit seniors:

Kemper Masterson -
Validation/Control Engineers
(CHE, CSE, ECE, EE, ME, MFGE)

Milwaukee Electric Tool Corp. -
Sales Support Representative (Any)

State Street Bank -
Business Analyst; Sr. Business
(Bus, Econ, Math, Stat, IE)

PC's Compleat -
Account Representative/Sales
(All)

Contact the Employment Options Office at 545-2224 for more information!
If you don't see what you want today, just wait. Many exciting employers will be here next spring!

ASK US ABOUT ELECTRONIC RESUME REFERRAL FOR ONE OF A KIND JOBS IN MANY FIELDS INCLUDING THOSE FOR LIBERAL ARTS GRADS!

TIP: Plan to attend the Campus-wide Career Fair, February 14 in the Campus Center

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents

A Spectacular Sports Extra

The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview

Coming to a newstand near you December 6, 1995

LOOK FOR IT!

Group replaces ads with radical flyers

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

A group of students took part in a "guerilla action" Thursday night, in order to "remove private interests from a public space."

Spokesman for the anonymous group, Kenneth Miller of the Radical Student Union, said the University of Massachusetts should prohibit big corporations from promoting their products on state-run campuses.

"This is a school where corporations shouldn't be," Miller said.

The group was composed of students representing a diversity of organizations, each bringing those agendas to action that night.

The students, numbering between 10 and 15, went to campus buildings such as Herter and School Of Management and took down all credit card advertisements from the classroom bulletin boards. They replaced the ads with student flyers for Prisoner Awareness Week and their Tabula Rasa agenda.

The advertisements were mailed back to their respective credit card companies. The group stamped the return mail with their own message, "Private interests out of public space." What couldn't be mailed was put into a shopping carriage and marched to the Chancellor David K. Scott's office Friday morning. However, the Chancellor was out of the country for the week.

Miller was also outspoken on the exploitation of third world countries. He said students should be active here in the United States because they are protected by the laws, whereas those living in Chile, for example, cannot even photocopy flyers without a license.

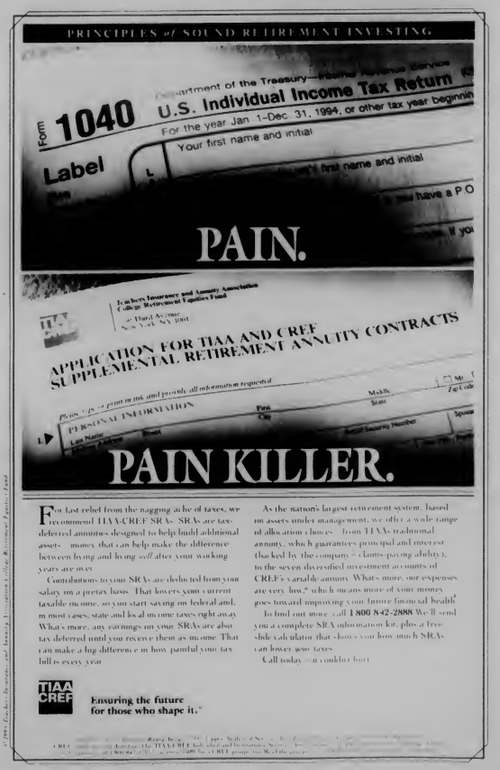
"As radicals, we know the third world is being exploited," Miller said. "What rights we do have we should exercise. If we don't exercise them, they will be taken away. The bulletin boards are an example of that."

The group hopes to stage similar demonstrations in the future.

"It makes people feel empowered so they come out and do it," Miller said. "This is an education in protecting our rights, the most important class you can take this semester."

DAYSHON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Students replace credit card applications with Prisoner Awareness Week posters on Thursday evening.



PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING
Form 1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
For the year Jan 1-Dec. 31, 1994, or other tax year beginnin
Label
Your first name and initial
PAIN.
APPLICATION FOR TIAA AND CREF SUPPLEMENTAL RETIREMENT ANNUITY CONTRACTS
PERSONAL INFORMATION
PAIN KILLER.
TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

Durfee Gardens receive award

By Amy Roth
Collegian Correspondent

The American Society of Landscape Architects recently selected Durfee Gardens for its 1995 Honor Award, the society's highest award for landscape design, given annually to the most significant new landscape in the country.

Durfee Gardens can be spotted from afar by its 18-foot tall fluorescent pink trellises. The gardens were designed to demonstrate remnants of the agricultural college which originated in the 1860s, in which Durfee Conservatory was included.

The gardens have gone through, and continue to go through a series of renovations. The first stage involved making a new sidewalk on North Side and Stockbridge Rd., the location of the gardens.

Five interlocking garden spaces were also constructed as a part of this stage. These spaces include a turf garden and perennial beds, an enclosed ancient grove of beech, sweet gum and ginkgo trees, a new court-like entry to the conservatory, a series of paths between espaliered apple trees, and a terrace nestled between two large trees, overlooking the perennials and the turf garden.

"Being selected for this design award is a great honor," said Dean Cardasis, chief designer of the project, and associate professor of landscape architecture. "It means we've successfully competed with some of the largest and best established corporate offices in the world, and provided our campus with one of the most important new landscapes in the country."

Several undergraduate and graduate students participated in the renovations, Cardasis said, including the Stockbridge Landscaping Contracting Company, which helped to build the new entrance. Summer internships are available for Stockbridge students who want to work on the gardens, he added.

Cardasis said that student help is welcome since the gardens require constant maintenance.

"Like a child, [the garden] always needs care," he said. "You can't care for it here and there, or just drop it all together. It needs constant attention."

The value of the gardens also extends beyond their historical purpose, according to Cardasis.

"[The gardens] were designed to provide us with a place to sit and read a book or stroll and catch some rays, to just enjoy being outdoors, and for special events and occasions — weddings, recitals and receptions," he said.

Bulger looks for UMass presidency, five senators back successor for seat

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Five state senators who failed in their bid to unseat Senate President William Bulger last year have decided to back Sen. Thomas Birmingham as Bulger's potential successor. That makes the Chelsea Democrat the most likely heir if Bulger — as expected — steps down to head the University of Massachusetts.

"It's over," said one of the "Keating Five," so-called because of their leader, Sen. William Keating (D-Sharon). "There's not even going to be a contest. This is going to be a slam dunk for Birmingham."

The other person who had been hoping to succeed Bulger, Senate Majority Leader Louis Bertonazzi (D-Milford), indicated Saturday that he had lost the fight and was prepared to line up behind Birmingham.

"I'm still waiting to hear back from some people... Whatever action I take will be in the best interest of the Senate, but I really can't comment," Bertonazzi said.

Senate sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity for fear of retribution, said the tally currently stands at 18-11 in favor of Birmingham. They expected at least two more senators to leave Bertonazzi's camp now that the Keating Five have made their pick.

A senator needs 21 votes — a majority of the 40-member body — to become president. Bulger, who has held the job for an unprecedented 17 years, is not expected to vote on his successor, dropping the number of votes needed to 20.

The Senate president has great impact on the state's residents, because the president controls the flow of legislation through the chamber. His view on a project can be the difference between whether it gets funded or dies in committee.

Who supports the president also is important, because both the Senate president and the speaker of the House control everything from a legislator's committee assignments to his or her office assignment in the Statehouse. In the past, Bulger's opponents have been relegated to the sub-basement or the attic.

Bulger reportedly met with Birmingham and Bertonazzi Thursday night and told them they were free to pursue the votes to succeed him. Bulger, 61, is one of the finalists to be the next UMass president. A presidential search committee could vote as early as next Friday to recommend his appointment.

Bulger's go-ahead touched off a series of phones calls between Birmingham and Bertonazzi and their supporters. Both men had about a dozen supporters each. Then, on Friday, Keating met with his group and they decided to back Birmingham, the sources said. Joining Keating in the bloc are Sens. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy); Lois G. Pines (D-Newton); Warren Tolman (D-Watertown); and Dianne Wilkerson (D-Boston). Also, Sen. Mark Montigny, (D-New Bedford), reportedly agreed to vote with the Keating Five.

Last year the group and 12 political supporters ran for the Senate on the promise that they would vote to oust Bulger as president, complaining that he was autocratic. Keating and the other four incumbents won re-election, but the 12 newcomers all lost.

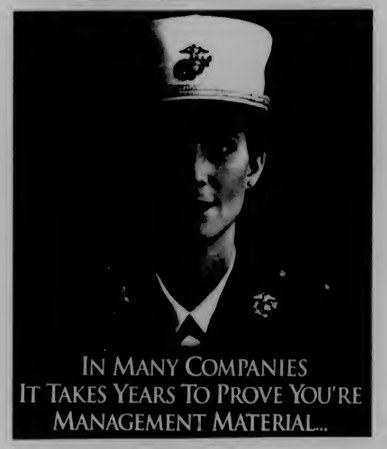
The Senate, however, did enact some of their recommended reforms, including televised sessions, an end to lame-duck sessions — which last year produced a legislative pay raise — and an eight-year term limit for the Senate president.

If Birmingham succeeds Bulger, it would cap a swift rise to power.

Marines

The Few. The Proud. The marines.

MARINE OFFICER



IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU'RE MANAGEMENT MATERIAL...

Summer Training Opportunities Available.
Underclassmen Welcome!

If you are interested in becoming a Marine officer or want more information, see CAPT Peters at the Newman Center from 10 to 2 on the 8th of November, or call 1-800-255-USMC.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Garley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sabin Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Ruzemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connecticut News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Thanksgiving, UMass style

Thanksgiving is coming up later on this month. And in the spirit of the holiday, the University has decided to make international and out-of-state students homeless for four days.

Yup, you read it right. In the usual manner, the University has announced that all the residence halls on campus will shut down for four days. The change this year is that the University is not offering alternate housing. In the past, the University allowed international students and those who live more than 250 miles from UMass to stay in the Campus Center Hotel for free. Of course, students had to apply for these spaces and most students either went home or went home with a roommate.

Politically, what the University is effectively saying to international students is that Thanksgiving is our holiday and you will suffer the consequences.

Marni E. Helfner

This whole situation stinks like the Campus Pond. As a resident assistant, I was stuck with the job of having to tell my international students they were out of luck and had to make other arrangements for the four days. The hurt and confusion several students have experienced has come out of the way in which the decision was made and communicated to students.

The University's response to the complaints was that the cost for putting up these students was approximately $50,000 and the general feeling of the "department heads" was why use $50,000 for only some students, when it could be used for something else that would help all students.

On three different levels, politically, professionally and personally, these actions are very disturbing. Politically, what the University is effectively telling international students is that Thanksgiving is our holiday and you will suffer the consequences. Americans, and their ways, will push you out of the way once again. We will be as unaccommodating to you as possible, but you'll need to find a place to stay for four days, and you'll need to pay for it out of your own pocket. (Never mind the fact international students are rarely allowed to work while they're here.) Nationalism, American pride, blah, blah, blah, blah.

What it boils down to is we're telling international students we don't care about them or value their input or concerns — only ourselves.

Professionally, the decision has left students with little or no time to find an appropriate place to stay. By announcing it to the residence life staff on Oct. 19 and the rest of campus on Nov. 1, the University has left less than a month for students to either find someone to go home with or scrape the cash together to get a hotel room. The University distributed papers to everyone who lives in the residence halls saying students had to find their own place to stay. Listed on the back is a list of local motels and hotels — the cheapest is $39 a night, and most more than $45. This means that the student is minimally putting out $156 for the room, plus tax, plus food (because the dining halls are closed), plus whatever it takes to go from place to place (buses don't run very often during holidays). Most students will pay $200-$300 to stay in Amherst over Thanksgiving.

What else is the University implying? To out-of-state students, who pay up to $17,000 a year to go to school here, their money is wanted so long as it is paying the salaries of University employees, but don't ask us to provide you with housing 3,000 miles from home. If Thanksgiving is supposed to be a holiday about being with one's family, loving thy neighbor and helping those less fortunate than oneself, why is the University kicking out students who are so far from their homes and families? Oh, that's right, we want your money for tuition, fees and housing, but don't ask us to do anything remotely close to human decency. For independent students, some GLBT students, and students with bad familial relations, their room is their home — kick them out, and let them feel a little more alone, unwanted and estranged.

On a personal level, I was affected by all these things. I got stuck telling residents there would be no place for them for Thanksgiving. The only part of my family I have contact with is 2,500 miles away in Wyoming. I do not have the money to get a hotel room. Resident assistants are paid $26.88 a week (most of us use this to eat) and with less than a month to scrape about $200 together, I had to scrounge for a place to stay.

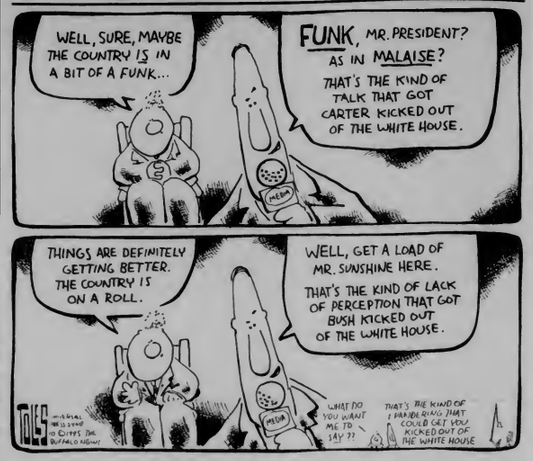
I put the word out to everyone I knew that I needed a free place to stay or I was homeless and living on a couch in the Campus Center for four days. Lucky for me, people came out of the woodwork to offer me a place to stay or some sort of accommodation. "You can stay here Thursday and Friday." "You can dogsit for me while I'm away." "My partner and I have a huge house. We're taking in GLBT students who don't have a place to stay for Thanksgiving." and "Come home with me and hang with my family," were all things people offered to me.

What could have the University and Housing services done differently to make sure this confusion and hurt didn't occur? One, don't take away the free housing — students rely on a system that seems to fail them more and more regularly. Two, if you're not going to offer the free housing, spell it out to students as soon as possible — over the summer or before students even leave for the summer. Merely excluding the Thanksgiving housing from the Housing Contract does not mean people will know about it. You must sign a contract in order to get regular housing. Who isn't going to sign it? Three, tell students how that $50,000 is going to help students. (And I don't mean a raise for University Administrators.). Where is it going, and is $50,000 really that much money to spend on making students happy? Four, and most importantly, before you make a decision, consider the effects it will have on students and their views of the University. Consider the human side of things and how people will deal with your decision.

I got lucky this time. I got angry, and I got a place to stay. Some, and most students in the same position, may not be so lucky. Now, they know the true meaning of Thanksgiving.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial



WELL, SURE, MAYBE THE COUNTRY IS IN A BIT OF A FUNK...
FUNK, MR. PRESIDENT? AS IN MALAISE?
THAT'S THE KIND OF TALK THAT GOT CARTER KICKED OUT OF THE WHITE HOUSE.
THINGS ARE DEFINITELY GETTING BETTER. THE COUNTRY IS ON A ROLL.
WELL, GET A LOAD OF MR. SUNSHINE HERE.
THAT'S THE KIND OF LACK OF PERCEPTION THAT GOT BUSH KICKED OUT OF THE WHITE HOUSE.
WHAT DO YOU WANT ME TO SAY??
THAT'S THE KIND OF PANDERING THAT COULD GET YOU KICKED OUT OF THE WHITE HOUSE
TOLES

The liberal double-standard

Matthew Pugh

Over the years, the liberal left has been ill-turned by the increasing productivity of the conservative right. As the past has shown, liberal ideas have had a tendency to bomb miserably. In the wake of their own disasters, liberals have chosen to tie the conservative party to the whipping post of ugly and false cliches. Liberals are so frightened by the awesome effectiveness of the conservative party that they continually attempt to damage the reputation of the right by any means.

Certainly the left will use no substantial or tangible evidence to do so (Hence, the bed wetting whine of emotion and childish name calling.). Conservatives are labeled as racists, bigots, homophobes, fascists and so on.

According to the left, many of these notions (preconceived of course) about the right are derived from talk radio. President Clinton himself stated that talk radio had a propensity to "spread hate" therefore causing violence. This conclusion was drawn with regards to the Oklahoma City bombing. Talk radio should "tone down" its speech, cries the left. (Obviously they meant conservative talk radio and speech.). What liberals have failed to do, among mounds of other things, is realize they are the party guilty of "hate speech." Perhaps they are the ones who need to "tone down" their speech, especially that in the media. Here are some irrefutable examples of liberal hate speech most of which is vented towards the conservative party.

• "[Ollie North] is banking on the fact that he can raise enough money from the extreme right wing, the extra-chromosome right wing." — The Washington Times.

• "What they want to do is make war on the kids of this country... I do not think the American people expect or support these radical right wing measures..." — Bill Clinton in The Washington Times.

• "What they are trying to do is literally take away meals from kids... [Republicans are] trying to run over kids." — Leon Panetta, White House chief of staff in USA Today.

• "[Newt Gingrich] is one of the most dangerous figures to emerge in American politics during our lifetime... He calls himself a revolutionary, but he promotes the policies of a terrorist..." — Rep. Martin Frost (D-Texas) Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee chairman, in a fund raising letter.

• "House Republicans are preparing to win committee approval for legislation that would imperil mothers, babies, and hungry school-age children." — New York Times editorial

• "I hope [Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas's] wife feeds him lots of eggs and butter and he dies early like black men do, of heart disease... He is absolutely reprehensible." — Julianne Malveaux, Pacifica talk radio host, on PBS "To the Contrary."

• On CNN's "Capital Gang," liberal commentator Juan Williams said those in the militia were "angry white men... sort of in their natural state. This is the essence of the angry white man..."

• On C-SPAN's "Journalist Roundtable," National Public Radio's reporter Sunni Khalid accused Mr. Newt Gingrich of "lynching people."

All of these examples of liberal hate speech were taken from the Limbaugh Institute for Advanced Conservative Studies. These are just a few examples of liberal hate speech in the media. America has been so blatantly misinformed about the ideas and principles behind the conservative party. It is imperative for all other conservative party members and followers to stand up and speak out against the hateful lies, spewing from the mouth of the liberal left.

The idea that conservatives are hate-mongers, baby-killers, racists, bigots or any other popular left cliche is absurd. As far as the left's futile battle to end conservative "hate speech" is concerned, perhaps the right express an opinion towards the left with the popular cliche, "people who live in glass houses, should not throw stones."

Matthew Pugh is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Participants make rally successful

To the Editor:

I would like to send out a huge thank you to all who attended and supported the Financial Aid Rally that took place on Oct. 31 in Boston. It was an enormous success. An expected crowd of 700 students state-wide soon turned into a mass of approximately 1,500. Students gathered in front of Government Center to listen to speakers and watch guerilla theater.

The group of over 30 colleges state-wide then marched through Boston towards the Republican headquarters on State Street. There, the marchers rallied for the cause and staged a sit-in which blocked all traffic and attracted an attentive crowd.

The rally was staged to show the student opposition to the federal budget cuts of over $10 billion approved last Thursday. Although the cuts to financial aid were dropped to $6 billion, it is still a huge blow to education, considering over six million students depend on this aid to attend college and only one percent of the entire federal budget is rationed to education.

Some students were dressed in black, and fake coffins were carried around to commemorate this death of education. The event was well covered by the media and the rally was quite effective in getting the student voice heard.

Once again, I thank everyone for helping us make the event such a success.

Stacey Shackford
Butterfield

The diminishment of morals

To the Editor:

Henry David Thoreau, the wise observer of natural and human affairs, once wrote, "After the first blush of sin comes its indifference." That is, what first shocks our morals quickly becomes tolerated. This insight is highly relevant to the state of television and movies today. In short, we have grown accustomed to garbage.

If one had access to a time machine and transposed your typical citizen from say, 1960, to the average 1995 living room, he or she would think they were in a combination x-rated movie theater and a para-military programming center. The sad facts are that graphic sexual scenes and horrific slayings no longer disgust us; in fact, they are a growth industry. And we can't blame the former Communists or the youth for this one.

The result is a widespread desensitization to violence. Murder on the screen has become the apple pie of the so- called entertainment industry. All manners of psychological and emotional malady are played out in the daytime talk shows. Have we so abandoned our moral bearings?

Some will argue that to clean up such fare is censorship. One fears the specter of some ethical thought police monitoring everything. But when our young people are exposed to 18,000 acts of violence on TV by the time they reach 18, haven't we failed to let them savor the fleeting innocence of youth? When sexual union has become yet another illicit affair, hasn't it grown debased?

Others claim that such shows merely reflect what is occurring in society. Yes, murder and mayhem and affairs do happen. But by feeding the citizenry a steady stream of them, and often corrupting the youth in the process, our better instincts — our capacity to share and heal love — falter. And thus to nations decline.

R. Jay Allain
Springfield

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

Nicknames make for multiple identities

Tim White

I love nicknames.

If I know that someone has a nickname, I will call them by that so much, I have been known to forget their real name.

There are some good nicknames out there. Mine is pretty simple, people call me "Whitey" a lot — simply because of my last name. I am actually the third in a generation of "Whitey's." Hence the reason some people call me "Little Whitey" or "Whitey jr." Man, I hate that.

We call one of my friends "Marcy." He's a guy. The reason we call him that is because his real name is Marc, with a "c" not a "k." I made a simple joke about that once and it has stuck for four years. Poor kid.

On the flip side, I have a friend we call "Chuck." She's a woman. I'm really not sure why we did that to her.

There's "Munch," an abbreviated version of her ridiculously long last name. "Pooh-bear" marks another friend of mine — it's really only a nickname we use to taunt him, for obvious reasons.

One of my housemates goes by several nicknames, but the most popular is "B.K." because of his infatuation with fast- food. That nickname will change if he, for example, leaves the door unlocked, then it changes to "locksmith" for a few days, or "Sylvania" because he has a habit of keeping the lights on.

One of my friend's girlfriend's nickname is "Digger" because she used to work for a funeral home. That just sort of speaks for itself.

I work with a guy we coined "Sergeant," mainly because of his manner with other people and his presence in a room. He's a bouncer though, so the nickname is effective.

There's a buddy of mine who's a cop, everyone calls him "McGruff the Crime Dog" or "Gruff" for short ... I don't know if people really know his first name.

Another friend of mine I call "E.T." because her toes are longer than her fingers. She hates it when I call her that in front of her boyfriend.

Most of us in the family give my little sister a different nickname. My oldest brother calls her "Phil," my other brother calls her whatever he feels like (like "Stinky" or "Nerdling") and I call her "Kid." In 10 years we'll probably be wondering why she has split personalities.

My brother's friends have some real whoppers. Here are some of my favorites: Scrambler, Fetus, G-Money, Wheat Bread, Warper, Boomer, Corn, Meat, Yoda, Pipes, Mugsy, Trike, Flymgy and Guppy. Sounds like a circus freak show.

It seems in their generation, "Spider" was a popular one — they have two friends with that nickname. For that reason, they identify them by adding their first name to the end: there's "Spider Mike" and "Spider Steve." Doesn't that kind of defeat the purpose?

Another acquaintance of theirs is "Cosmo." You know what the funny thing behind that is? It's his real name. That is exactly how his birth certificate reads. When you have a name like "Cosmo," a nickname would just be insulting.

If someone doesn't already have a nickname, I give them one depending on the circumstance. Using the word "rock" is extremely common with me... be it "rock-star" or "rocker" or "hardrocker" or "pumprocker" or "freerock," I use it all. If someone is sick, I'll call them "scurvy" or "jungle-rot." If someone is asking too many questions, they get labelled "Harry Crumb," "Magnum, P.I." or "Colombo." Someone who answers all those questions is "professor" or "Cliff Claven."

The reason I love nicknames so much is because they give people a personality. Given names are good: Dave, Jennifer, Herb, Elizabeth, John, Mel, Pat, Frank... but when you call someone "Pickle-breath" or "Caffeine," you pretty much know where they're coming from.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Elastica connects with crowd

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

ELASTICA
Mikara's
Nov. 4

COURTESY JURGEN TELLER

Elastica played at Mikara's in Springfield on Saturday.

SPRINGFIELD — Taking the stage amidst flashing strobe lights and a thick screen of smoke, Britain's answer to power pop took the stage at Mikara's Saturday night.

Although the crowd had to wait an extra half hour before the band began with "Line Up," most people will agree that it was well worth the wait. Clad in black, lead singer and ex-Suede member Justine Frischmann led the quartet into a slew of songs off their self-titled debut continuously keeping up the energy and frenzy of the concert.

Citing influences by Blondie, the Fall, Buzzcocks and the Clash, and fresh off the Lollapolloza tour, Elastica proved they were more than just a pretty pop punk band riding on the success of their countrymen Blur and Oasis.

"This is a song about doing it in the back of a car," said Frischmann before cranking into the well popular "Car Song." Before that they had played "Annie" which Frischmann dedicated to now ex-bassist Annie Holland.

In between songs she paused to comment on how much the landscape reminded her of England, though the crowd shared a different opinion to her inquiry. Backed up by guitarist-singer Donna Matthews, songs like "2:1" and "Smile" flowed from the instruments and straight into the audiences ears with plucky riffs, a driving bass and throbbing percussions.

According to Elastica, "Smile" is about lying at home waiting for your boyfriend to come back and wondering whether or not he's okay. It's smiling when he comes into the door and you wanted to smack and kiss him at the same time. "2:1" is about being brave when you're really not.

Tracks that really caught the crowd's attention was "Stutter" a fast moving song with a hooky bass, punk rock guitars and a tongue twisting chorus that had everyone moving (the song was first released by Geffen as a four- song maxi-single this past September).

The band also played two new songs, one that was inspired by an Old English Christmas carol "Ding-Dong Merry On High." Often compared to their English forefathers (The Clash, Wire and even Suede), the band has proven that they have a catchy techno-laced sound that grabs you and holds your attention.

It was their last song, "Connection," that lauded the most screams and whistles. As soon as the opening guitar riffs hailed its arrival, people were already pushing forward trying to get closer to the charismatic band.

After five minutes of stomping, screaming and clapping the more than patient crowd was rewarded with two encores which included "Blue" a song that was created by taking bits and pieces of words from magazines.

Saturday's show proved that Elastica has what it takes to be more than just a flash in the pan. In a long line of one- hit-wonders and British invasions, it's nice to see that some long-lasting talent is here to stay.

Spencer adds flavor to Boss Hog sound

Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

BOSS HOG
Boss Hog
Geffen

COURTESY DGC

Boss Hog's self titled album.

Mix Jon Spencer's bluesy garage punk sound with Christina Martinez's eclectic vocal range, and you might get an idea of who Boss Hog are and what they sound like. After all, it was Martinez and Spencer who led one of the most influential New York art rock outfits of the late eighties, Pussy Galore.

In 1989, Boss Hog was formed as a spur of the moment thing and at their first show at CBGB's Martinez sang completely in nude. Their early work was filled with lots of noise along the lines of Pussy Galore but now, several years later and a couple changes in there lineup, Boss Hog are back with their major label debut and their most accessible release to date.

Opening the album is "Winn Coma," with Spencer's mean guitar hooks and Martinez's aggressive vocals. On "Sick," Martinez sounds even more pissed off, singing "Sick of old school sick of new, sick of things I used to do." Meanwhile, Spencer sings "I idolize you" in his '70s-style Mick Jagger tone, Martinez sings back to him, "Yes, yes you too" in a fifties-school girl tone.

Then Martinez and Spencer decide to get mushy on "I Idolize You" which was done originally by Ike and Tina Turner. While Martinez sings back to him, "Yes, yes you too" in a fifties-school girl tone.

On the contrary, "Strawberry" is an all out garage rock explosion which uses some interesting sound effects that Spencer can incorporate so well into his songs as fans of the blues explosion already know.

As a whole, the Boss Hog record is a diverse one. In addition to Spencer and Martinez, drummer Hollis Queens and bassist Jens Jurgensen make for an appropriate rhythm section. Although the record has no exact highlights, it flows as a whole and is extremely creative in the art rock vain. Although Spencer's bassy guitar and overall coolness is all over this record, Martinez is still mostly upfront, making the album a perfect showcase for her singing and lyrical abilities. B

"Believe" is the Jon Spencer Blues Explosion revisited with Spencer singing "Ah Yeah" over one of the most bluesy guitar licks of all time.

Future jazz legend at Iron Horse

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Correspondent

A young and upcoming name in the world of jazz will be appearing tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

Joshua Redman will be bringing his widely acclaimed acoustic quartet, featuring the bare essentials in a jazz combo; bass, drums, keys and horn, Redman, a widely respected but relatively new figure in jazz is slated to give an exciting concert, encompassing both original tunes and well-known jazz standards.

Redman exploded on to the jazz scene in 1991, winning the Thelonius Monk Institute of Jazz Saxophone Competition. Two years later, he released his self-titled debut album. Following positive reviews and embracing various music critics, the album immediately sold 30,000 copies within four months of its release.

The sudden popularity hoisted Redman's album up to the No. 3 spot on Billboard's jazz charts.

Redman followed this successful debut with his second album, Wish, in 1993. This album featured several live tracks at the Blue Note in New York, probably the most widely recognized jazz club in the world. These live tracks all owe the listener to hear Redman fulfilling his dreams of playing in company with several of this idols; alongside the musician are Pat Metheny on guitar, Billy Higgins on drums and bassist Charlie Hadan.

COURTESY TOM TAVEE

Joshua Redmen is playing at the Iron Horse tonight.

Both albums won Redman countless awards and honors, including two Jazz Times reader polls, 1993 Rolling Stone Hot Jazz Artists and Critics Poll, Downbeat Critics Polls for No. 1 Jazz album and No. 1 Jazz musician Readers Poll for No. 1 jazz album and No. 1 Jazz musician among others.

Besides the live recordings on Wish, Redman has made it a point to play with as many trailblazers on the jazz music scene, learning and progressing through preforming with them. He has played sidemen gigs with Dave Brubeck, Chick Corea, Larry Goldings, Herbie Handcock, BB King, Christian McBride and a wide variety of other; almost too many to count.

Redman's wide array of musical prowess allows him to hold his own when playing with such jazz gurus and one listen to his improvisations will prove why.

All of Redman's feelings goes into his horn and the music that comes out is truly jazz at its finest. At a young age, Redman has already established himself as a notable jazz figure in high regard, not only in the public eye, but in the eyes of his music making peers.

As Charles Hadan put it, "He's discovered his soul a lot more quickly than most musicians do."

Joshua Redman performs at the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m. Call the club for more details.

Amherst College's Macbeth impresses

By Suzanne Gallant
Collegian Correspondent

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH KING OF SCOTLAND
Amherst College
Nov. 4

No final consensus has ever been reached on the exact theme of Macbeth — it is just too complex. Yet no production can be considered more than adequate without a substantial attempt to find the theme.

The Amherst College production took a step in the right direction by emphasizing the imagery of the play. References to darkness and blood occur throughout Macbeth; the set and lighting of this production seemed to have been designed with this in mind.

The role of Macbeth, played by Michael Medori, certainly filled that requirement. Medori spoke Shakespeare's language with ease and gave no hint of his ambitions until the appropriate time. The qualities that make Macbeth a "good" man, also bring about his downfall. Medori realizes this in his portrayal of Macbeth as intelligent, courageous, and affectionate towards his wife.

It is the latter characteristic that makes the role of Lady Macbeth so crucial. In this production, she is played by Paula Christensen. The physical size of Lady Macbeth is extremely important. Christensen is a frail, small person and the strength of her performance lies in her ability to dominate her husband spiritually. She does this in a soft, quiet voice and is even more effective for it.

However, one of the production's major flaws was the weakness of the supporting characters. In the scene in which Macbeth is visited by apparitions, and thus appears to go insane, there is little or no reaction from the other characters. A usually powerful scene became a comedy for the audience. Actually, there were several moments where this happened.

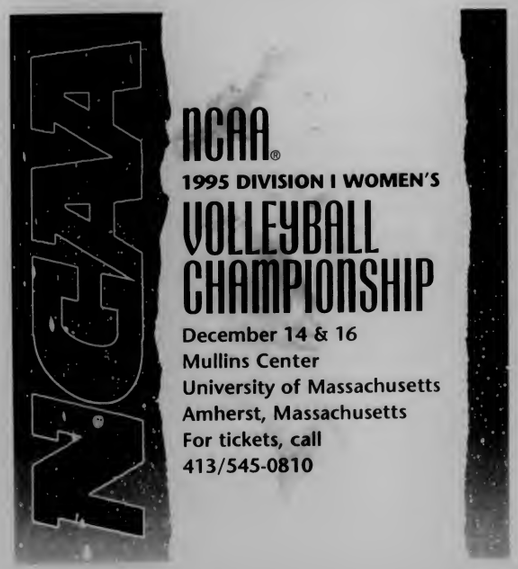
The pace of the play was adequate, although scenes between Malcolm and Macduff lagged, and the lines were not spoken with any particular characterization. The costumes were at best ineffectual and at times, silly. Although traditional Shakespearean costume is not a prerequisite for a successful production, modern or symbolic clothing should never distract the audience from the action of the play. Hecate drew laughs with her silver pants and plastic coat.

Despite these production flaws, Medori and Christensen shone through with performances that saved the play. A highlight of the evening was the combat scene between Macbeth and Macduff, played by Andrew McCain. Shakespeare understood the need for a dramatic ending; this production certainly needed one.

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu® knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass. (413) 665-8723
The New Club Castaway
From Amherst Take Rt. 116 North to Rt's 5 & 10, turn Left, Go 2 Miles South to Castaway Lounge
Proudly Presents
Female Amateur Dance Contest
Monday, November 6, 1995
Entertainment Starting at 2pm
Special Rates For:
Bachelor Parties • Anniversary Parties • Private Parties
Introducing the New Private Table Dancing
Over 30 Dancers Appearing Weekly
Entertainment 2pm - 1am Tues - sat
Dancing Entertainers Always Welcome

The New Club Castaway



NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

TOC LOUNGE
Philadelphia at Dallas
Tonight at 9pm
50¢ Pizza Slices at Halftime
FREE POPCORN
Catch All Your Sports At The Top!
Lounge Hours:
Mon-Sat: 4:30pm - 12:30am
11th Floor Campus Center
Monday Night Football

■ football

continued from page 12

self up. The snap and hold were perfect, and Binder split the uprights from 35- yards to give Maine the victory.

"The hold was good and I had the wind," Binder said. "The field conditions were great. The crew did a great job getting the field ready for this game."

"It's part of the game, everybody gets the same chance," Hodges said. "We blew ours and they didn't. They deserved to win and we didn't."

Unlike the Minutemen's prior three–game win streak, Maine entered the contest without scoring a single point in either of its' previous two games including last Saturday when Delaware shellacked them 61–0.

"I was concerned about last week, whether or not it was going to carry on," Maine coach Jack Cosgrove said. "Obviously we were able to flush the thing and I couldn't be prouder of the way we did it. It was 60 minutes of us playing as hard as we could. The offense and defense complemented each other well."

Maine jumped out in front fiist. Pam capped off a 74–yard drive with a one–yard touchdown leap with 3:56 remaining in the first quarter.

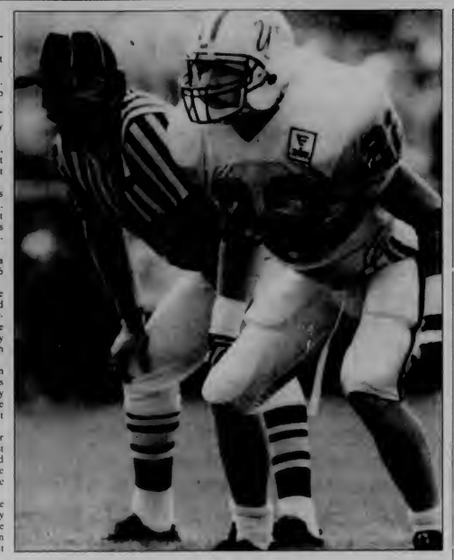
Ingoglia then began to swap touchdowns with the Black Bears. The Walter Payton Award candidate scored all three Minutemen touchdowns on the day, passing former BU running back Paul Lewis (322 points) as the all–time Yankee Conference record for points by non–kickers (326 career). Ingoglia finished the day with 125–yards rushing.

The Minutemen entered the game last in the nation in the passing. The inclement weather of the past weeks has kept the UMass offense on the ground. On this day however, Catterton displayed the ability to throw the football, silencing all critics who believed his arm didn't work.

Catterton attempted 10 passes, completing only five for 58 yards. While not exactly an air show, it was a vast improvement. He also had a nice 20–yard throw intended for freshman Kerry Taylor. The ball went in and out of the tight end's hands, and was intercepted by the Maine defense.

"We got some yardage through the air today and we have got to make the plays," Hodges said. "Nobody can afford to turn the ball over and we did. We have got to get some things straightened out. We have an opportunity to finish 7–4 and we are going to get that done."

The Minutemen will travel to Boston Saturday, to face the Boston University Terriers at Nickerson field. Kick–off is scheduled for 1 p.m.



UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Justin Reimer and the Minutemen dropped to 5–4 on the season after their overtime loss to Maine Saturday, 24–21.

Kansas City, Oakland claim wins

Chiefs 24, Redskins 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Chiefs picked a good day to have an off game.

For one, they were home against Washington, a team winless on the road. For another, Redskins' quarterback Gus Frerotte had his worst day of the season as the Chiefs came off their bye week with a 24-3 victory that kept them atop the AFC with an 8-1 record. "We're pleased with this victory, but we know it wasn't pretty," wide receiver Lake Dawson said.

The Chiefs, who fretted about losing their momentum after taking their bye week, weren't as sharp as they had been while winning seven of their first eight. They had more penalty yards (72-49) and fumbles (2-0) than the Redskins, and Steve Bono, who had been averaging almost 220 yards, hit 21 of 37 for 201.

"The problem was we just never could put the game on ice in the second half," guard Dave Szott said. "Our timing just wasn't what it had been. I hate bye weeks."

Bono's day included a 19-yard scoring pass to Willie Davis after Marcus Allen's 1-yard TD run as the Chiefs opened a 17-3 halftime lead. Lin Elliot had a 38-yard field goal at the end of the first half. The Chiefs went up 17-3 at halftime but could not put away the injury-weakened Redskins (3-7) until Kimble Anders broke loose on a career-long 40-yard touchdown run with 2:26 left.

Frerotte, without his top two receivers, hit only 11 of 34 for 140 yards. He was pulled for Heath Shuler after misfiring on four straight passes with the Redskins behind 17-3 early in the fourth quarter.

"He was frustrated by the rush, and a lot of guys weren't getting open," said Washington coach Norv Turneraid. "When his frustration level rose, he started missing some guys that were open as it went on."

"A few I missed, a few were dropped," said Frerotte, who came in as the second-leading passer in the NFL with 240 yards a game. "We just couldn't get that big play to get us over the hump." After taking their own bye week, the Redskins return to play Seattle on Nov. 19. Turner was uncertain about his starter. Bono said the offense sputtered at times. "Obviously, there were too many misses," he said. "But I thought the timing was pretty good."

With the help of what amounted to a 45-yard penalty against the Redskins, the Chiefs scored on their opening drive for the first time this season. After Washington failed to move on its first possession, Matt Turk's punt died at the Chiefs 5.

But the Redskins had to kick again when called for an ineligible man downfield. This time, Vanover returned it 35 yards to the 50. Bono hit Keith Cash for 16 yards and Allen went up the middle for 10 as the Chiefs marched 49 yards in nine plays. On fourth and goal from the one, Allen dived across for his 101st rushing TD. "It's good to have time off," said Chiefs' center Tim Grunhard. "But when you're on a roll like we were you hate to take it. When you sit out a week, the edge falls off a little bit. But starting with a touchdown in the first quarter gave the guys a lift."

The Chiefs, 10 of 12 on fourth downs this season, faced a fourth-and-7 midway through the second quarter from the Redskins 34. Bono connected with Dawson for 12 yards to the 22. Three plays later Davis caught Bono's pass in the end zone for a 14-0 lead. When the Redskins got the ball on the Chiefs' 45 with 9:57 to play, Frerotte threw four incomplete passes and was replaced on the next series by Shuler, who lost his job to Frerotte after getting hurt in the season opener.

The Chiefs held Washington to 79 yards rushing.

The Redskins played without injured receivers Henry Ellard and Michael Westbrook. In addition, guard Tre Johnson, who came back after missing five of the last seven games, went out in the second half with a strained knee.

Tackle Joe Phillips, thriving in the Chiefs' new attack defense, pressured Frerotte into an incompletion on a third down play after the Redskins had driven to the Kansas City 12 in the second quarter. Eddie Murray then kicked a 29-yard field goal.

Raiders 20, Bengals 17

CINCINNATI — The Oakland Raiders weren't brilliant or flashy, just brutally effective.

The Raiders scrapped their high-tech passing game in favor of something more suited to the weather Sunday, and showed they can still win with brute force. Harvey Williams rushed for 134 yards and a touchdown in a conservative offense, and Oakland's punishing defense took it from there for a 20-17 victory. Living up to their reputation for smash-mouth football, the Raiders (7-2) dominated both of the Bengals' lines, got in a few scraps and kept Cincinnati out of the end zone until the closing seconds.

Minutemen fail to score in sudden death overtime

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

ORONO, ME — When the final horn soundcd, the scoreboard displayed 21s on each side, one under Maine and the other under visitor. The score was knotted, and if this was just about any other regular season college football game in the country, it would have been over.

Their records would have three digits, and neither team would be able to brag or boast about a victory.

But it wasn't. It was a Yankee Conference matchup between Massachusetts and Maine. If the score is tied after regulation in YanCon play, a sudden death overtime session takes place. There's a coin toss, the ball is spotted at the 25– yard line going in. First team to score wins.

On Saturday afternoon, after a 60–minute battle, each team's respective captains walked to the middle of the field to meet the referees. The only difference between the overtime coin toss and the pregame coin flip is the fact that the captain's uniforms are dirtied up by then. Other than that, this was a new game. The 21–21 score may as well have been 0–0, and the flipping of the coin has a large effect on the outcome.

The coin was flipped by the referee, and the Black Bears won the toss. They chose to defend the south goal, and have last ups. In other words, if UMass scored on the next drive from 25 yards out, Maine would get a chance, as well. If UMass didn't score and Maine got into the endzone, Maine would get the victory.

It was Massachusetts' ball at the Maine 25–yard line. Catterton handed it off to Rene Ingoglia, who was nailed by tackle Marc MacKissock. The ball was sprung loose, and defensive end Todd Williamson recovered.

The Black Bears ran the ball on the next three plays, but could not get the first down. Yet, they were within field goal range on the Massachusetts 18–yard line.

Sophomore placekicker Chris Binder booted a 35–yard field goal through the uprights and the Black Bears edged the Minutemen 24–21, just minutes after Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges and staff tried to ice him by calling timeout.

"It wasn't quite cold enough to do that, but it was getting close," Hodges said. "You gotta' do it. That's what the book says to do. I really don't know how much of an effect it has."

"I was getting mad. I was cold out there. I wanted to get the game over with and go into the lockeroom," Binder said when asked if the timeout bothered him.

Although Ingoglia's name is mentioned first because of his costly turnover, he had his typical outstanding effort otherwise. Ingoglia carried the ball 32 times for 125 yards and scored three touchdowns.

In the process, he stuffed two more records in his holster. With his first touchdown of the day, he set a school record for touchdowns in a season. With the fourth quarter one– yard touchdown, his third on the afternoon, Ingoglia became the Yankee Conference's all–time leading scorer (326 points).

But to know Rene, you know he's not a happy guy after the loss on Saturday. Tell him he set those records and he'll counter with the fact that the Minutemen failed to get the win. All those records do not mean a thing unless you win, Ingoglia has said many times over the course of this season.

"I'm sure if you ask him, that's exactly what he'll tell you. All of the statistics don't mean anything unless you win," Hodges said.

The sudden death overtime period makes things interesting. Just ask those who saw last year's New Hampshire–Boston University game, where the Wildcats edged the Terriers 52–51 in a thrilling double–overtime playoff clash. Instead of ending the game at a standstill, it produces a winner. The chances are there, and it's all up to the teams to seize their opportunities. Maine did just that against UMass.

"It's part of the game," Hodges said. "Everybody gets the same chance. We blew ours, they didn't. They deserved to win and we don't."

Do you like to write?
Do you like to see your name in print?
Do you like to meet interesting people and talk to them?

Well, then write for the News Dept.!
Contact Chris Conner
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2–27
Three credits

Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27–January 27
Up to six credits

January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico

To learn more about these programs, visit our table in the Campus Center Concourse on Tuesday, November 7, 10:30am–2:30pm,

or call 617 287-7915.

Division of Continuing Education
This advertisement appears at no expense to the Commonwealth
UMass Boston

The Bluewall
Crosswalk Balk
Monday, Nov. 6
9:00pm - 1:00am
DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday, Nov. 9th
9:30pm - 1:00am
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN
BLUES BAND
MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM
"Last Chance To Dance"
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

"I HATE MONDAYS" SPECIAL
Bring in this ad to receive
$4off HAIRCUTS
(REGULARLY $14-17) ON MONDAYS DURING NOVEMBER ONLY!
256-0438
103 N. Pleasant
AMHERST
(next to Bart's)
HAIR EAST

■ field hockey

continued from page12

"Streya played out of her mind," Donnelly said. "She just rifled two beautiful goals. She played a great game."

After intermission it was Reiner again for the Rams, that provided the equalizer, as she converted a penalty corner rebound to knot the score at 2–2.

Rhode Island looked to be in perfect position to get the game–winner in overtime as its forwards snuck behind the Massachusetts defense and appeared to have a 3–on–0 on UMass goalie Stacy Walker, but senior Andrea Cabral sprinted back to break up the play.

That play turned the momentum back in the Minutewomen's favor as their offense began dominating and attacking the URI goal until the stroke was awarded and revoked.

Massachusetts finishes its season at 7–13.

Conference Awards: In recognition of her team's perfect record in the conference, St. Joseph's coach Michele Finnegan was awarded the Atlantic 10 coach of the year award.

While many people expected a Hawk to capture the Player of the Year honors, Gorman, who is second in the nation in save percentage, brought home the trophy. The announcement of the winner of the Rookie of the Year award was one of the few bright spots for Massachusetts all weekend, as Greenfield native Kate Putnam was the first Minutewoman since Rothenberger (1993) to be named the A–10's top newcomer.

"That was awesome," Donnelly said of Putnam's award. "She certainly was the premier freshman in the conference."

Rothenberger was Massachusetts only member of the All– Conference team, as this year there was only a first team and no honorable mention, which is a change from years past. Both Rothenberger and Volla were named to the conference's all tournament team.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 12

many injuries there were some obstacles this year and they handled them well."

On Friday, the Minutemen advanced to yesterday's championship game with a 3–1 semifinal victory over Xavier.

Sophomore forward Mike Butler picked up the hat trick as he led the Minutemen with all three goals to defeat the Musketeers. Butler set new Atlantic 10 Championship records in three categories, goals (three), points (six) and shots (seven).

Action in the first half was dominated by UMass. Butler netted his first tally of the day while in a crowd in front of the net, off a short kick from freshman forward Jake Brodsky. Butler's second goal of the first half came as the first team All–Atlantic 10 pick took over possession on an open field cross from junior midfielder Joe Jacobson. He drove from the left side alone against Xavier goalie Greg Kleiman and fired the ball into the right hand side of the net.

Xavier came out in the second half and netted the first goal of the half to pull within one. The Musketeers' Jeremy Fultz scored on a one–on–one cross from the left side. Butler scored the last goal of the match on a cross pass from the right side from freshman Paul Corcoran who had just entered the game.

The Minutemen will likely end a spectacular season at 15– 5–2 with the somewhat slim hopes of obtaining an NCAA tournament birth.

Leigh Torbin contributed to this story.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect.
You dial 1 800 CALL ATT.
Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.*
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice."

AT&T
Your True Choice

■ volleyball

continued from page 9

you're simply not going to get the job done."

On the ensuing serve, Pearce set up Nash who slammed down one of her 15 kills. Senior Beth Cabral, who along with Cass Anderson was playing in her last regular season home game at the Cage, then came in to serve. Cabral needless to say, "got the job done."

A Nolan spike and then a Nolan "touch" made it 10–6. Then, it was Virginia Tech calling time out.

"Beth served great and played great defense, as well. She did a great job. Both her and Cass contributed for us."

Unlike Kenny's time out, the Hokies' time out did nothing. UMass scored the next three points to come within a point. Six straight points in rally scoring is truly amazing, but the Minutewomen did it.

The scores of the first four games were 12–10 (VT), 12– 12, 13–12 (VT) and 13–13. After a couple of outstanding volleys, which included an outstanding dig by Rivera, the score stood at 14–14. But UMass was able to pull out the next two points and win the game and match.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 9

"We had some great services from the flanks today, some very nice goals today," said Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy. "On defense, [Xavier] had a three–on–two break and by the time it finished, it was three against six. Those six were in the penalty area and that was the key today.

"It looks like it coming together, doesn't it?"

If yesterday is an indication of how UMass will play in the NCAA tournament, the Minutewomen certainly are headed in the right direction.

Today as we walked home from church our son Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of action smurf figurines and made a key contact for a job gutting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Willomina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're sadistic & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that paper the children read, the one we use to wrap our fish."
Collegian
"Fish wrapping good!!!"

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/ Special Handling
212(e)/Waivers
Outstanding Professor/ Researcher
National Interest/ Extraordinary Ability
Reliefs/ Pardons
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five College Students/Faculty
1145 Main Street, 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103, 413-731-4370
45 Old Ferry Road, Northampton, MA 01060, 413-586-3033

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore goalkeeper Brian Regan posted both Hockey East victories over Merrimack this weekend in UMass' first- ever HE sweep.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

seconds into the second. Less than two minutes later Merrimack goalie Eric Thibeault could not hold on to a John Jacques blast from the right face-off circle to tie the game.

"We felt that we had the momentum," Manganaro said. "Because everytime they scored, we would come back and we would score."

The Quincy native proved his point valid as with the score 3-3 midway through the third period, Warrior defensemen John Jakopin fired from the right point that Regan saved but could not corral the rebound. Eric Weichselbaumer deposited the puck in the empty side of the net for the lead.

Just 27 seconds later, Manganaro tied the game at four by netting his own rebound after making a quick shift around a Warrior defensemen. That left the game tied, sending it to overtime and Campanale's winner.

"I told our guys in the locker room that sweeping any team in Hockey East is a very tough chore," said Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen. "I thought Merrimack played very well [Saturday] but our guys fought back from a two-goal deficit and our guys were fresher in the end."

Friday night in the Mullins Center, it was Manganaro wearing the cape for the Minutemen. He took a no-look backhand feed from Mike Evans and roofed the puck from the top of the crease for the game-winner.

Merrimack got on the board just 17 seconds into the contest as sophomore Casey Kesselring swatted in a backhander from 12 feet to open the scoring before half of the 2,888 in attendance had found their seats.

The Warrior lead would be short-lived as after the ensuing face-off, UMass controlled in the offensive zone. Norris sent a pass back to the point where Brad Norton unloaded a blast towards the Merrimack net. Junior forward Rob Bonneau was in front of Warrior netminder Martin Legault and deflected the shot into the far corner knotting the game.

Less than four minutes later Bonneau struck again. As the puck was cleared from the UMass defensive end there was a race for the puck between two Merrimack defenders and Campanale. The Braintree native dove to the ice and knocked it to a streaking Bonneau who went in all alone on Legault.

As Bonneau broke down the slot, he let go a hard wrist shot which beat Legault high to the glove side to give UMass a 2-1 lead. Gerry Cahill would add another goal at the 14:16 mark to send UMass into the first intermission with a two goal advantage.

"That first period was not Merrimack hockey," said Warrior coach Ron Anderson. "We played our typical style in the second and third periods, but we didn't play how we are capable in the first."

Merrimack came out to start the second period with an intensity rarely seen in the first, as the Warriors finished their checks and scored early on a Gaetan Poirier redirection in front of Regan.

But it was Regan who kept the Minutemen with a one goal margin entering the third period as he denied Rob Beck on a breakaway, then a few minutes later again as Beck was left alone on top of Regan's crease.

Merrimack finally tied the game on a Steve McKenna screen shot from the point before Manganaro's heroics.

When asked if a repeat performance was possible against this coming weekend's opponent UMass Lowell, Manganaro liked his team's chances.

"Damn right we can," he said. "There's no reason why we can't. As soon as you do something like this, you realize that you anything possible. It's expected of you."

Ice hockey builds on experience

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

NORTH ANDOVER, Mass. — There are only three Division I hockey teams who are both unbeaten and untied after playing at least three games this year.

One is defending national champion Boston University at 4-0-0, and another is 1994 national champion Lake Superior State (6-0-0). Either the Lakers or Terriers have played in each of the last five national championship games, winning three.

While BU and Lake State were expected to be perfect, the third team is somewhat of a surprise. Massachusetts, coming off of a 6-28-2 campaign last season, is now an unblemished 3-0-0 on the heels of its weekend sweep of Hockey East foe Merrimack.

When Dean Campanale put a rebound upstairs and past Merrimack goaltender Eric Thibeault at the 2:06 mark of overtime Saturday night, the Minutemen had swept a Hockey East opponent for the first time ever.

"This is unbelievable," senior Sal Manganaro said. "This is an unbelievable accomplishment. One of the hardest things to do in [Hockey East] is sweep a team back-to-back."

"Sweeping any team in Hockey East is a very tough chore," coach Joe Mallen said. "Merrimack really played well tonight, but our guys fought back."

UMass is a revitalized team, producing exceptional results with the same talent as in 1994-95. Mallen has yet to play a freshman this season, the wins coming from improved play by upperclassmen. With renewed confidence and added experience, the 1995-96 Minutemen are the antithesis of last year's edition.

Each of the team's three wins have been accomplished by means unfathomable for last year's team.

In their season-opening win at Army, the Minutemen dominated special teams play. After scoring a total of 20 power play goals in 36 games last season, UMass tallied five against the Cadets, as UMass breezed to a 6-3 victory.

Friday night, the Minutemen held a 3-1 lead after the first period and saw it whittled away by Merrimack, until Steve McKenna tied things at 3-3 at 17:12 of the third.

Last year, in the final two games of the regular season, the Minutemen held third period leads at Northeastern's Matthews Arena, which they could not hold. The Huskies knotted the game and then pulled away from a deflated UMass team on each occasion.

McKenna's 55-foot slapshot would have been a shot right through the heart of last year's Minutemen. Instead, a more experienced and composed UMass team rallied as senior Mike Evans feed senior Sal Manganaro, on the doorstep, for the game-winner with 54.4 seconds to play and Brian Regan turned back some quality Merrimack scoring bids.

Saturday UMass was colder than Merrimack's Volpe Complex early on and was down 2-0, just 5:40 into the game, as the Warriors' Casey Kesselring demonstrated just why he was a member of the 1995 Hockey East All-Rookie team with a dazzling goal and spectacular assist.

On countless occasions in 1994-95, the Minutemen folded after falling behind early, seldom threatening to get back into the game. The team was just 3-17-1 when trailing after the first period and two-down was more than enough to daze UMass.

The Minutemen rattled off three second period goals Saturday night and even after falling behind 4-3 7:35 into the third, they came back. Just 27 seconds later Manganaro tied things up on an excellent individual effort, and Campanale won it in overtime.

In its Hockey East playoff win at Boston College, UMass came from behind four times in a game that turned the program completely around. The experience from winning that game in particular, and others like it, notably Army and Notre Dame, carried UMass this weekend.

"I thought UMass played very well," said Merrimack coach Ron Anderson. "There's no substitute for experience and what they went through last year is paying dividends."

Ineptitude on the power play caused UMass to lose many a game last year. UMass seldom held leads and was not a good come-from-behind team. In just three games, UMass has already overcome three of its largest stumbling blocks from last season, and still has 31 regular season games to get even better.

Pats back on winning track, defeat Jets

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — While the New England Patriots might have found the missing piece in their attack, the New York Jets lost what could be the link to their offensive future.

The Patriots, with a veritable explosion of points, beat the punchless New York Jets 20-7 Sunday. The Patriots, averaging 14.8 points a game, rode the running of rookie Curtis Martin past the Jets, who are scoring 13.7 a week.

Martin, a third-round draft choice from Pittsburgh, carried 34 times for 170 yards and two touchdowns, his third game with at least 100 yards on the ground. Martin got 112 in the first half. "A lot of games, I started out good and didn't end up with a lot," said Martin, apparently the answer to New England's recent rushing woes. "There were others where I did not start so good and have had my best days.

"They knew what plays we were going to run and our line still got the holes open. It's more yards than I've ever rushed for in the pros."

Of course, he's only been in the NFL for nine games.

Our back is more experienced and he understands the plays better," coach Bill Parcells said of Martin, who also had a 22-yard reception. "They were bringing a lot of guys at us." The Patriots did the same to Glenn Foley, New York's second-year quarterback who saw his first extended action when he replaced Bubby Brister in the second quarter. The pass rush got to Foley late in the game, with Aaron Jones' hit dislocating Foley's right shoulder on the Jets' final offensive play.

Foley will be lost for the rest of the season.

"He got a chance and did some good things," said rookie receiver Wayne Chrebet. "Losing him really puts a damper on things." Coach Rich Kotite said after the game that a healthy Foley probably would have been the team's starter.

Foley finished 16-for-29 for 128 yards and guided the Jets (2-8) on a 99-yard touchdown drive in the second half.

Whatever offense New England (3-6) manufactured last year was produced by Drew Bledsoe. Should Martin provide a solid running game, the Patriots might be able to duplicate last season's surge to the playoffs, when they won their final seven games to finish 10-6.

"It's a win and it keeps our hopes alive," Bledsoe said. "But in order for it to mean anything, we've got to win a bunch in a row."

New England took a 3-0 lead on Matt Bahr's 41-yard field goal on the game's first series. After that, the Patriots would move the ball on Martin's runs and occasional passes by Bledsoe, who was 13-for-27 for 173 yards. But not until late in the second period did they score again, on Martin's 2-yard dive at the end of a 59-yard drive on which Martin had a 29-yard run. Martin broke a 49-yard run near the end of the half, the longest rushing play for New England this year. That set up Bahr's 29-yard field goal for a 13-0 lead.

Martin's 9-yard TD run capped a 63-yard drive in the third quarter, making it 20-0.

"I watched last week's films over and over," Martin said of seeing the Jets hold Indianapolis' Marshall Faulk to 30 yards rushing. "I said I did not want to let that happen to me." Seven plays into the second quarter, he'd surpassed Faulk's total.

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Collegian Classifieds They Really Work!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW ENDS THIS THURSDAY / 2 GREAT FILMS
Daily at 7:00 only "A WONDERFUL SURPRISE!" — Daily at 9:05 only Back by popular demand
"A WONDERFUL SURPRISE!" JANE AUSTEN'S PERSUASION
THE POSTMAN (IL POSTINO)
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Center 584-8435

Prepare yourself for a world that needs you.
•Master of Divinity
•Master of Arts in Old Testament
•Master of Arts in New Testament
•Master of Arts in Church History
•Master of Arts in Theology
•Master of Arts in Christian Education
•Master of Arts in Counseling
•Master of Arts in World Missions and Evangelism
•Master of Arts in Religion
•Master of Theology (Th.M.)
•Doctor of Ministry
For more information, call 800-428-7329
SOUTH HAMILTON BOSTON CHARLOTTE
Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary
130 essex street SOUTH HAMILTON, MA 01982

Decide for Yourself!
If your dream is to become a medical doctor, don't let someone else decide you can't do it. Decide for yourself! Call us today to find out what your options are at the UAG.
800-531-5494
Universidad Autónoma de Guadalajara
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store Hampshire Mall

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

VOLUNTEERS FOR ISRAEL
ISRAEL FOR WINTER & SUMMER VACATION
Join your fellow students for a 2 or 3 week adventure. Live and work with Israelis at an IDF army base.
EXPLORE ISRAEL FROM THE INSIDE OUT!
From $699*
*Plus $100 application fee. Program includes round trip airfare from JFK New York, room and kosher board, tour and lectures.
CALL TODAY FOR THE EXPERIENCE OF A LIFETIME! (212) 643-6363
* Ask about "ISRAEL ADVENTURE" featuring a week long tour!*
Volunteers for Israel • 330 West 42 nd Street, stn 1618 New York, NY 10036
Phone (212) 643-4848 • Fax (212) 643-4855

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Erin Lynch (right) scored the game-winning goal and was named to the All-Tournament team in yesterday's A-10 Championship game.

UM reaching peak at right time

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

When the 1995 women's soccer Atlantic 10 Champions had their picture taken with the trophy signifying their accomplishment, every player in front of the camera had contributed to getting the team to that moment.

It was those 20 Massachusetts Minutewomen who had put forth a complete effort in defending their crown as victors of their conference tournament. In a season filled with bad bounces and missed opportunities, it seems the whole package is coming together for UMass.

It was not the No. 3 ranked UConn Lady Huskies keeper that drowned UMass hopes of an upset on a rain-soaked Saturday — it was a puddle that stopped what on any other day was a goal by freshman Karin Johnson. With what was the most freakiest of goals that led to the loss to Temple last Friday, which cost them the No. 1 eastern seed in the A-10s, the Minutewomen could have been completely frustrated with their luck.

UMass bounced back with a 2-0 victory two days later against Cornell in its regular season finale. The Big Red had been causing a stir in the Northeast region and an upset of the Minutewomen could have put them in the NCAA tournament. UMass denied Cornell of any such opportunity.

Next up was the A-10s and a date in the semis with George Washington. The last two years the UMass-GW game was the Championship matchup, but because UMass was the No. 2 seed out of the East, it forced an earlier confrontation of the perennial conference powers.

The UMass defense put the clamps on 1994 Newcomer of the Year Chemar Smith and the rest of the Colonial attack. Senior forward Rachel LeDuc scored as many goals in the game as GW had shots on net (two) and Minutewomen keeper Danielle Dion made both saves. In the semi-final 2-0 victory, UMass played what arguably was its best 90 minutes of the season.

The finals brought A-10 newcomer Xavier onto the stage for the closing stanza, and it would be one that left a lasting impression on all that attended as UMass left nothing to argue about.

After the first five minutes of play, which was mostly fought at midfield, UMass defender Erica Iverson sent halfback Sandy Shimogaki on a run down the right flank for the first real offensive pressure of the match. The ball hardly left UMass offensive zone the rest of the half. Totals shots in the first half: UMass 18, Xavier 0.

In recent games, an abundance of Minutewomen shots didn't necessarily lead to a high-scoring output, but on this day, UMass connected with its passes and buried its glorious scoring chances.

It all began with what has been a potent offensive weapon for UMass all year, the corner kick. A-10 Player of the Year Erin Lynch headed in a second cross attempt for the early lead and the Minutewomen never looked back. After all was said and done, six goals were on their side of the scoreboard and nothing on the other, all due to a total team effort.

"We are really starting to come on now," said the Most Outstanding Player of the Tournament, Rachel LeDuc. "We had a lot of picture-perfect balls today and the first three goals were just picture-perfect. All around this was a pretty game."

All season the strength of the team had been the defense. Lynch along with Nikki Ahrenholz, Erica Iverson and Amanda Thompson, had stifled opposing offensives holding them to just over a half a goal per contest. They also have provided an offensive spark giving the forwards many quality scoring chances, and now they are starting to hit paydirt with their shots.

A perfect example of this was UMass's second goal of yesterday's game. With the penalty area clogged with UMass and Xavier players, the ball was fed out to Iverson some 45 yards from goal. She made a quick move to get a clear left-footed cross to the far side. Amy Powell made a well timed run and met the ball with her left foot before it ever touched the ground. The Xavier keeper never had time to react on the one-time shot.

"Anytime I make a cut to my right or my left," Iverson said, "I can look up and see either LeDuc, Powell or Myers coming in there. They have always been there. I know that one of them is going to connect, it is just a matter whether it's on net or not. I was really happy to see Amy put it home."

Of the six UMass goals on the day, at least four were highlight material. Both players and coach agreed that this is some of their best soccer of the year.

"We are really playing well right now. We are peaking at the right time," Lynch said. "We played well defensively and the offense came through today."

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN page 7

■ womens soccer

continued from page 10

scored her second goal of the day after Lynch headed it to Myers who in turn headed it to LeDuc, who then knocked it in with her head.

Myers scored from about 23 yards out at the 79:36 mark (assisted by Tina Lightning) and Hackathorn scored at the 87:34 mark off an assist from LeDuc.

"[Sandy Shimogaki] did a really great job. In creating space for other people to get forward, I thought she was big- time with that. She did a great job," said Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy.

UMass' defense was as usual, superb, holding the Musketeers to just two shots on the afternoon, both coming in the second half. The Minutewomen, on the other hand, pounded out 31 shots. UMass also held the edge in corner kicks, as the Minutewomen had seven while Xavier failed to muster one.

"I would say the last two weeks the secret to our success has been defense," Rudy said. "We have defended so well as a team, and the nice part about that, is that is team-related and its unselfish."

Sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Dion made two saves to help the Minutewomen post their 10th shutout.

"I felt UMass played extremely well," Xavier coach Ron Quinn. "UMass controlled the game, and therefore, they created opportunities and finished. They have an outstanding defense."

The Minutewomen improved to 13-3-2 and now await the NCAA tourney pairings, which will occur today at 11 a.m. With its victory yesterday, the Minutewomen have a good chance at hosting a game.

"We have a much better chance of hosting a [NCAA] game," Lynch said. "It would be great for us and our fans would be here [at Garber]. But if not, we're ready to play wherever. We're peaking right now. This is the best we've played and we're looking forward to the first game."

Tournament notes: Lynch, Iverson, Myers and LeDuc were all named to the All-Tournament team, as was Xavier's Ann Marie Hubbard, Holly Grow and Amanda Gruber, along with GW's Maggie Miller, Kristin Robertson and Jane Anderson. Dominique Woyton and Kim Fitzgerald of Temple rounded out the All-tourney selections.

Volleyball falls to GW, beats Virginia Tech

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Although the Massachusetts volleyball team's nine-game wining streak came to an end this past weekend, the intense, aggressive play that carried it through that streak did not.

The Minutewomen (21-10, 12-5 in the Atlantic 10) split their two-game homestand by losing to George Washington, 3-2, on Friday and defeating Virginia Tech, 3-2, on Saturday. All three teams are in contention to finish in the top four spots in the A-10, which would mean an appearance in the A-10 championships to be held at the University of Massachusetts.

UMass was inches away from beating the Colonials (21-5, 12-2) but came just as close to losing to the Hokies (17-10, 9-6).

George Washington 3, Massachusetts 2

On one hand, the Minutewomen were man-handled by the Colonials earlier this season, 3-0. On the other hand, however, this was UMass' match to lose. Not only were the Minutewomen up two games to one on the defending A-10 champs, but they were actually leading game four, 8-1.

But the Minutewomen seemed to get relaxed, as they usually do with a big lead, and GW reeled off the next nine points to go on and beat UMass, 15-9, 14-16, 15-8, 12-15, 10-15.

The Colonials were led by Svetlana Vtyurina, who led the nation going into the match with a 7.2 kills per game average. Vtyurina, although occasionally stopped by UMass, had another great match, totalling 41 kills. The senior is closing in on the all-time NCAA career kills record, and should easily reach the mark by season's end.

"She's something," Kenny said. "When you have an All- American on the other side of the net, it makes things difficult, no question But I'm happy with the way we played. We had a good week of practice and we worked hard."

Meanwhile, junior Giza Rivera tied a UMass record with 24 kills on the evening. The outside hitter also registered 13 digs in the losing effort.

The Minutewomen never led in the fifth game, which is played with rally scoring, meaning a point is scored on every serve regardless of who is serving. The worst it got was 9-3, but UMass came within three points at 13-10, only to fall short in the end.

Sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan earned 17 kills and 12 digs, while junior outside hitter Dionne Nash recorded 10 kills and 14 digs. Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky continued her consistent play, leading the team in digs with 17.

"I think we were up and down tonight," said sophomore defensive specialist Maria Dueño. "We need to be more consistent. We had that fourth game but we got relaxed and stopped talking. But I think we did a good job in some areas. We're digging a lot of balls, for instance. We just have to step it up and forget about this one."

UMass 3, Virginia Tech 2

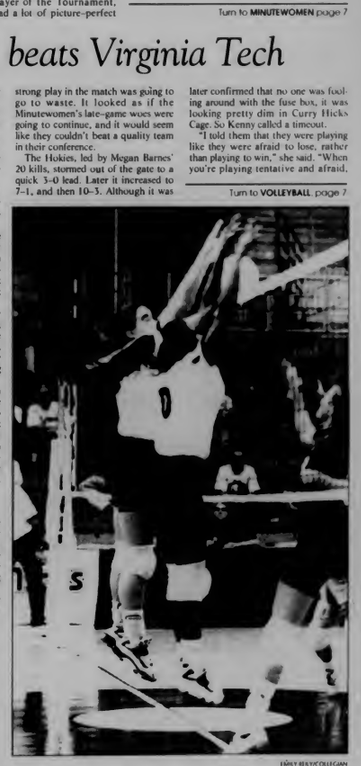
Led by a solid backcourt defense and a record-setting performance by Rivera, UMass won only its second fifth- game of the season to take the match. The win could propel the Minutewomen into their remaining three games and into the postseason.

For most of the rally-scoring game five, it seemed as if all of UMass' strong play in the match was going to go to waste. It looked as if the Minutewomen's late-game woes were going to continue, and it would seem like they couldn't beat a quality team in their conference.

The Hokies, led by Megan Barnes' 20 kills, stormed out of the gate to a quick 3-0 lead. Later it increased to 7-1, and then 10-3. Although it was later confirmed that no one was fooling around with the fuse box, it was looking pretty dim in Curry Hicks Cage. So Kenny called a timeout.

"I told them that they were playing like they were afraid to lose, rather than playing to win," she said. "When you're playing tentative and afraid,

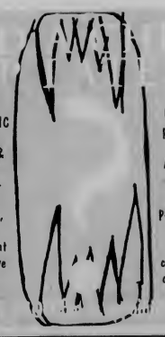
Turn to VOLLEYBALL page 7



EMILY BERYK/COLLEGIAN

The women's volleyball team split two A-10 matches this weekend, defeating Virginia Tech but falling to George Washington.

The UMASS DENTAL CLINIC offers: Experienced & Caring Staff Cleanings, X-rays, Exams, Consultations, Restoration. 10% discount on preventative services for



Umass students paying the basic health fee. Additional 10% discount on all services when paid the same day as visit. Cash, credit cards or personal checks welcome.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine selection of new and used cars & trucks.
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check.
PAIGE'S Amherst CHEVROLET Geo
DICKINSON ST. • BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST. • 253-3444 • PARTS LINE 253-5928

EDS CHALLENGE TEAMS
Now that you've accepted the Challenge, we want to wish you GOOD LUCK!
See you in Texas.
For more information, please mail requests to: EDS Campus Relations, 5400 Legacy Dr., H4-GB-36, Plano, Tx 75024, or visit our homepage at http://www.eds.com.
EDS is an equal opportunity employer. m/f/d/v. EDS is a registered mark of Electronic Data Systems Corporation.

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE
MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:15pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:45pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:15pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:15pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:15pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Chevy Blazer Good condition New engine $1,000 obo 549-0835

EMPLOYMENT

Cash part time business No selling $1,500 - 10K $37,000.00 Call 941-766-8013

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 16 $1,000 obo Anne 545-5823 256-8289

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING

$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ • Free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii!) • Seasonal/permanent, no experience nec. Salary Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext.C1040

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call (800) 709-6120 (PIN 2172).

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to contact data on a variety of topics. Currently we are selling Consumer Computer products. Flexible work hours. Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday, Morning, and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week which at $5.25/hr with paid training increases up to $7.00/hr. Work in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon.-Fri. 413-586-8635. ABT Associates Telephone Research Center Mt Farms Mall, Rt 9 Hadley, MA 01035 An equal opportunity employer.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal, full-time employment available at national parks, forests & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 ext N502-2.

Wa want you! Unique liquor related product. Retails for $700. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $37,400 first year! 941-766-9001

$35,000/yr income potential Reading books. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext. B-1732 for details.

FOR RENT

Main Str 4 bdrm house on bus route. Starts 1/1/96 Call 253-0780

FOR SALE

Brother correctronic 140 typewriter 5 thousand character storage memory. Almost new! Best offer. Call 546-3904

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

PERSONALS

Joe 1 year already! If we made it this far, we can keep going. Love always, Toast!

Robbin Have a happy Monday. Don't forget to relax. Pooh

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Spring semester roommate wanted M/F On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art Robert 546-1794

Foreign Students ON 1 green card program available 1-800-660-7167

Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15-$30 Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-2771

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

"Free Travel! Spring Break '96" Sun Splash Tours Reliable spring break company. Organize group/Travel free. Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

FREE TRIPS AND CASH

Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 spring break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Winter Break Special! Killington week $289. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Wanted!!! individuals, student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS Call inter campus programs 1-800-327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

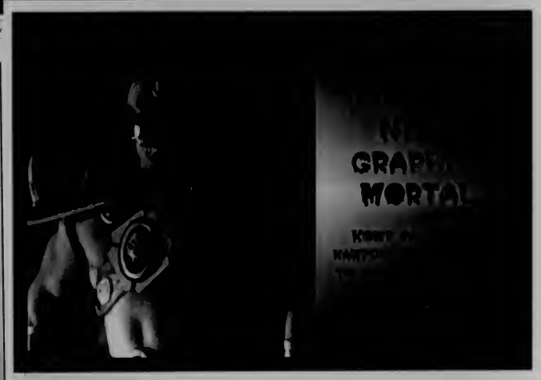
Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian

Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard

Contact Wendy Darling

113 Campus Center 545-3500



YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 – Feb 19) You are a person deeply torn between love and lust. Figure it out before it's too late and you become another statistic or worse — married life is a highway, ride it all night long.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22 – Jan 19) Indecisive yet methodical, you have to work it to be on top (in all aspects of your life baby!). Don't back down, but don't forget logic. It could be in your head, but that's doubtful.

PISCES (Feb 19 – Mar 20) When you swim with the big fish remember that sometimes people don't choose the Ziploc bag and the piranhas get loose. Watch your back in and everything will be juice.

ARIES (Mar 21 – Apr 19) Young and impetuous you have to learn to tone it down. However, because you are strong and ingenious you will ignore this and still what ever you damn well please. Bravo, because life isn't run by horoscopes.

TAURUS (Apr 20 – May 20) Ever wonder why you're such a mar..f a bull? Maybe it describes your head or maybe you method of presenting the truth. Either way, if you stick to the facts, has sound ever better.

GEMINI (May 21 – Jun 22) ... go to an educational experience although you won't realize it until you get there. What are you waiting for– hurry up and get married!

CANCER (Jun 23 – Jul 22) You dear Cancerian are a comic freak but every once in a while it's nice to hand over the reins to someone else. To yield to a better is not a sign of weakness but the ability to tell when you're over your head.

LEO (Jul 23– Aug. 22) Did you know that your best bet for a good relationship is that with a Ram? Seek out a person under the sun and be sure they're wearing red. Roar, Simba. Mufasa is listening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) You are a neat freak and a constant worrier. Usually very decisive, how can you make a decision if you can't decide what stance to take? Can you really afford to lose the love of your life? Oh, and go easy on the cash. Money only grows on trees on your home planet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) Your love planet is Venus, but that doesn't matter because this isn't about love, but life. Be yourself and save the false greetings for someone willing to get snowed. Wear something sexy and get arrested for indecent exposure.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 – Nov 21) So what went wrong? You made a decision and now you're totally suffering from its consequences. Never despair, as long as you stand by your choice nothing can go wrong. Arrest a Libra.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 –Dec 21) You are used to getting your way and liking it. People are in awe of your imposing self and bow to your superior knowledge. However, watch out because "my how the mighty have fallen" could apply to you — overconfident. Remember the little people.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Deferred to
8 Adjective for a brat
15 Late British acting peer, without peer
16 Estrogen is one
17 17th cen. Spanish painter Bartolome
18 Widen
19 Knife or grass part
20 Antiquated
22 Unburden
23 Brit. dance org.
24 Sound from the campanile
25 Scotch or lodgepole
26 DDE's command
27 Angel-hair
28 Chased by a dog, perhaps
29 Waitperson, usually
31 Pat lightly
33 Saharalike
35 Error
36 Quietude
38 Volcanic National Park
42 Honeydew
43 Recorded
46 Scot's uncle
47 Finished
48 Special performances
49 Twit, to a Brit
50 Rule, for short
51 Salon equipment
52 In plein view
54 Mideast gulf or sea
56 County in Ireland
58 Striped
59 Manage
60 Took up residence
61 Snuggled

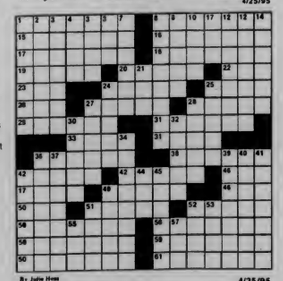
DOWN

1 Latino males
2 Howl like a wolf
3 Balcony with a view
4 Roman poet
5 Upset
6 "Electric" fish
7 Followers of hippo and astro
8 Various varnishes
9 Small lakes
10 Historic Paris airport
11 Philanthropist Hogg of Texas
12 Rigs, in Britain
13 Diesels
14 Willed one's property
21 Cereal grain
24 City of Light
25 Goes to private high school
27 Evita
28 Threesome
30 Fog or smoke
32 Everything, in Essen
34 Held in custody
36 Daydream
37 Posh
39 Dakar's country
40 Arabian political division
41 Exasperated
42 Lessons from Aesop
44 Bock or stout
45 Forgiveness
48 Shred
51 Clock face
52 Wallet stuffers
53 Green, in heraldry
55 Wager
57 Poetic unseal

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

M	I	L	O		S	C	E	N	E		T	B	A	R
O	D	O	R		C	A	R	E	S		E	L	S	E
B	L	U	E	B	O	N	N	E	T		R	U	I	N
			D	W	A	R	D		D	I	M	M	E	S	T
			K	E	Y			M	A	S	S
A	M	B	L	E	D		S	I	P	A	S		T	E	E
B	A	L	E	R		S	O	U	T	H		R	E	B
O	N	U	S		F	A	B	L	E		A	E	R	O
U	S	E		G	A	G	E	L		D	R	A	I	N
T	E	C		A	L	A	I	R		L	A	C	K	E	Y
		H	A	I	L				T	E	N
O	V	E	R	T	I	P		H	A	C	K	E	D
V	I	T	E	D		B	L	U	E	P	E	N	C	I	L
A	L	S	O		L	E	A	S	E		O	H	N	O
L	E	E	R		E	A	R	I	E	D		B	O	S	S

4/25/95



By Julie Hom
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

4/25/95

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Garfield By Jim Davis

Garfield By Jim Davis

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

Foulmouth vs. toilet...
I hate waiting for this #$%@ thing to get warm.
Now I can just rest and take a nice warm shower.
DA WOOOSH
Sooo.. HE WANTS TO PLAY!
AAARGHH! THAT'S TOO @#$%&*! HOT!

Lost Horizons By Doug Cellineri

JUST GIMME A SECOND, HERE, BUDDY.
C'MON! C'MON!!
THE PROBLEM WITH COMPUTER GENERATIONS IS, THEY OUTMATCH THE HUMAN ONES.
MMARRGH!
THIS IS MUCH FASTER THAN THE OLD WAY, DON'T YOU AGREE?
MANAGER TO REGISTER 4/1: WHAT THE @#$%! IS WRONG WITH THIS THING?

Munch Monster U By Mike McCormic

Another Blue Sneaker Day on Campus
CAMPUS CENTER
Man, it is too wet out there! Do you think we've had enough rain yet to make up for the summers drought?
Hell, considering that our potable reservoir is outside....
Taking his pet fish for a walk. I'd say we've had plenty and then some!

GeoFrey By Embryo

LOOK HERE, FATTY. I DIDN'T CLIMB UP THIS HILL FOR A LOUSY PIECE OF PAVEMENT!!!
GIVE ME SOME REAL FOOD! PANT, PANT!!
SQUIRRELS OF THE 70'S

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Bubblegum By Nate Cozzolino

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I have some problems but they're not my problems. They're my parents' problems.

When I was a little kid they exaggerated about how great life would be.

Nowadays, I exaggerate too.

When people ask me on the street, "How're you doin?" I say, "Good."

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Who's the wiseguy down in X-ray?"

Today as we walked home from church our son Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of action smart figurines and made a buy contact for a job getting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Willemina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're sadistic & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, poor probably right Walter. It must have been that paper the children read, the one we use to wrap our fish."

Collegian
"Fish wrapping gazette"

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor.....Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician.....Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....David Burgeron
Jeff Hodge

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Chicken Cacciatore
Italian Sausage Grinder
BASICS LUNCH
Chicken Cacciatore
Flat Bread Sandwich

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Quarter Pound Burger
BASICS DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Oatburgers

Tuesday

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie/Gravy
Macaroni & Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Baked Ham
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Cauliflower & Eggplant

Wednesday

LUNCH
Beef Stew / Biscuit
Chicken Pucks
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Chicken Pucks

DINNER
Hot & Spicy Chicken
Baked Ziti
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
More Baked Ziti

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Ways to Make Yourself Appear More "Manly"

10. Put out cigarettes on your forehead (Camel straights of course...)
9. After sex, remove condom with razor blade... blindfolded.
8. Catch all of your meals.
7. Start hangin' with Chancellor Scott and his "posse."
6. Turn to the dark side of the force.
5. Pierce your torso.
4. Breakfast? Two live squirrels.
3. Brush your teeth with an SOS pad.
2. Drink grain alcohol like water.
1. Two words: Steel briefs.

Quote of the Day

"I don't want to buy or sell, or process anything. I don't want to buy anything sold or processed, I don't want to sell anything bought or processed, I don't want to process anything sold, bought or proccessed... I don't know Mr. Court – I just want to be with your daughter.

–John Cusack as Lloyd Dobbler in Say Anything

"

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- The men's water polo team won the Eastern Championships for the third straight year to advance to the NCAA Championships. The Minutemen place sixth in the NCAAs in 1993 and eighth in 1994. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The men's and women's swimming teams were in action this weekend, see tomorrow's Collegian for results.
- The volleyball team split its weekend matches, losing to George Washington while beating Virginia Tech.

UMass soccer teams split A–10 Championships

Minutewomen drill Xavier to capture third tourney title

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's soccer team turned in perhaps its best performance of the season, as it captured its third Atlantic 10 Tournament Championship in as many years.

After defeating rival George Washington 2–0 in the semi- finals on Friday, the Minutewomen drilled the Xavier Musketeers 6–0 in yesterday's Championship game at Richard F. Garber Field. Xavier defeated Temple 2–0 in the other semi–final on Friday.

WOMEN'S SOCCER A-10 TOURNAMENT
SEMIFINALS
Xavier 2, Temple 0
UMass 2, George Washington 0
CHAMPIONSHIP
UMass 6, Xavier 0

"This is the best the entire team has played together, defensively and offensively, especially offensively," Erin Lynch said.

The tournament belonged to the University of Massachusetts forward Rachel LeDuc. The senior was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player for her four–goal, one–assist performance. With her nine points on the weekend, she broke the UMass career point record of 92, previously held by Hermann Trophy award winner April Kater, who was in attendance to see her record broken. LeDuc has 93 career points.

"[The record's] surprising, it's exciting, but when it comes down to it, it's really not important. As long as we win, it doesn't really matter," LeDuc said.

The Longmeadow native also tied the single–season goals record of 17, held by Natalie Prosser (1979). She now has 44 points on the season, which is a UMass record for most points in a single season. The previous record (17) was also held by Prosser (1979).

Lynch broke open the scoring for the Minutewomen at the 16:35 mark when she headed in a ball off assists from Sandy Shimogaki and Rebecca Myers.

UMass would score two more times in the first half as Amy Powell one–timed a beautiful serve from Erica Iverson at the 31:27 mark and LeDuc knocked a high header past Xavier keeper Ann Marie Hubbard, assisted by Iverson and Myers.

The Minutewomen kept it going in the second half, as LeDuc, Myers and Polly Hackathorn all scored. LeDuc

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER page9

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rachel LeDuc (6) battles for the ball with Xavier's Susie Welch (7) as Amy Powell (14) backs up the play.

Men's soccer falls to URI in A-10's final match

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

With a win in the semifinal game on Friday, the Massachusetts men's soccer team was hoping to capture the Atlantic 10 championship yesterday in Kingston, R.I.

MEN'S SOCCER A-10 TOURNAMENT
SEMIFINALS
UMass 3, Xavier 1
Rhode Island 4, Virginia Tech 0
CHAMPIONSHIP
Rhode Island 5, UMass 2

However, the Minutemen were defeated by the Rhode Island Rams, who won their first ever Atlantic 10 men's soccer Championship by the score of 5–2, in front of a crowd of 1,832.

Championship Most Outstanding Player Andrew Williams scored the first of his two goals on the day at 52:03 to put the Rams on the scoreboard first. Three minutes and 45 seconds later, Williams assisted on Chris Giblin's goal as the Rams led 2–0.

After trailing 3–0, Lee Marlow got the Minutemen on the board at 65:03, with an assist from Mike Butler. But Andrew Williams striked again as he tallied his second unassisted goal of the game, putting it out of reach at 4–1.

UMass' Paul Corcoran scored from Dave Siljanovski with less than 15 minutes to go and Brian Tucker scored from Jeff Smith for the Rams to reach the final of 5–2.

"It's disappointing," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "We went in thinking we could win and we didn't do it. In the second half we made some mistakes that they capitalized on. We controlled the first half, but they had the wind at their back in the second half and won.

"At halftime we thought that we were in the game and could win it. We controlled the play and we stopped their three frontrunners."

Rhode Island outshot the Minutemen 19–5, with goalie Anthony Latronica making one save, while UMass goalie Eric Gruber made nine.

UMass had three players on the All–Championship team with Mike Butler, Joe Jacobson and Dave Siljanovski.

With the win, the Rams will advance to the play–in of the NCAA tournament, facing Northeast Conference champion St. Francis (NY) on Saturday.

The loss left a bittersweet taste in the mouths of the Minutemen, their seniors in particular who had brought the program out of the rubble and into the A–10 limelight.

"We had a great year, but second at the tourney is still disappointing," Koch said. "Our seniors have all done a great job all year long and I'm proud of them. With

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

UM is a sweeping success

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

NORTH ANDOVER, Mass — Last year when Hockey East teams looked on the schedule and saw a weekend series with UMass, they had visions of brooms dancing in their heads.

Massachusetts	4
Merrimack	3

In more than half of the home–and–home series last year, the Minutemen were swept by their conference counterparts. But after this weekend, things should be different this season.

UMass sophomore forward Dean Campanale lifted his second goal of the night at 2:06 of overtime, to finish a weekend sweep of Merrimack, 5–4. It was UMass' first overtime game in a Hockey East contest. The win kept the Minutemen's record perfect at 3–0–0 while Merrimack hasn't won in five games in the conference, with a 0–4–1 mark.

Massachusetts	5
Merrimack	4

See Related Story Page 8

"It's an unbelievable feeling," UMass forward Sal Manganaro said of the weekend's events. "It's our first sweep ever in Hockey East. It's an unbelievable accomplishment."

UMass fell behind early as Merrimack's Eric Krauss and Casey Kesselring beat Minutemen goalie Brian Regan for a 2–0 Merrimack lead after one period.

The second period was a different story as on a 5–on–3 UMass advantage, Tom Perry and Sal Manganaro set up a wide open Warren Norris to cut the deficit to one, 12

Turn to Hoskey, page 8

COLLEGIAN FILE

Rob Bonneau (18) and his Minutemen teammates completed its first–ever Hockey East sweep this weekend, defeating Merrimack twice.

Field hockey loses in semifinals

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts field hockey team, the Atlantic 10 tournament reflected its entire season. The Minutewomen couldn't catch a break as they were eliminated in the first round 3–2 by Rhode Island in overtime on Saturday.

With 6:25 remaining in regulation, Massachusetts was awarded a penalty stroke penalizing Rhode Island goalie Kellie Gorman for lying on top of the ball.

Gorman, the 1995 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, made no argument and set up to face the stroke. Kyle Rothenberger, who has been almost automatic throughout her career on strokes, was all set to shoot when a whistle blew. The official changed the call, instead giving Massachusetts a penalty corner.

The Minutewomen didn't score on the opportunity and although they were surging before the stoppage in play, they appeared confused afterward, the wind completely out of their sails. A visibly upset Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly refused to make any comment about the role the officials call had in the game.

Rhode Island's game–winner was also a strange one. Less than two minutes into sudden death overtime, Mary McCloskey scored to give URI the 3–2 victory, but Massachusetts still looked confused. Several players claimed to have heard a whistle blow and stopped, giving McCloskey and easy shot on goal.

Rhode Island	3
Massachusetts	2

"The players told me that they stopped because they heard the whistle," Donnelly said. "We looked very passive and that would explain it."

Lost in the defeat was the tremendous performance by senior captain Streya Volla, who played one of the best games of her career against the Rams. She put Massachusetts ahead early in the contest, as she dived toward the mouth of the goal to redirect Courtney MacLean's centering pass past Gorman, just 3:14 into the contest.

After Dorien Reiner knotted the score at 1–1, it was Volla again, who stepped up blasting the ball off of what appeared to be a botched penalty corner past Gorman to put UMass ahead 2–1, with just over 10 minutes remaining in the first half.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

Football falls in overtime to Maine

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

ORONO, Maine — Winners of three straight football games, a running game which is second in the nation, and a winless conference opponent — things looked good for the Massachusetts Minutemen.

Things aren't always what they appear.

The Massachusetts football team (5–4) took its winning momentum north to face the Maine Black Bears (3–6). A 24– 21 Maine overtime win in front of 2,139 shivering fans, sent the Minutemen south with a bad taste in its mouth.

At the end of regulation, the score was tied 21–21. Yankee Conference overtime rules states each team has an equal opportunity to score from the 25–yard line. Maine won the coin toss and decided to give UMass the first crack at the end zone.

First and ten at the 25, Sophomore quarterback Anthony Catterton hands senior Rene Ingoglia the ball.

Maine	24
Massachusetts	21

See Related Story Page 8

Ingoglia, the all–time UMass rushing leader and all–time Yankee Conference scoring leader, the man you want to give the ball to in any situation, fumbled. Maine defensive end Todd Williamson recovered the ball.

"In all of the points in the game, we needed this one," Ingoglia said. "I've got to hold on to the ball."

"I have no idea what happened, he ran it up the middle," said UMass coach Mike Hodges. "It's a play we've run a thousand times, and I don't know why he dropped it. People may look at that like it lost the football game, but we had plenty of opportunities to win."

Then it was the Black Bears turn. Maine also looked to the run and it's key running back Andre Pam. On first, second, and third down, Pam attempted to jam the ball up the middle to gain as many yards as possible. A solid UMass defensive effort brought fourth down. Maine found itself on the 18–yard line and the field goal unit came out on the field to attempt the game winning field goal.

Maine kicker Chris Binder set him-

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 44 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, November 7, 1995

They're Back!
Donta Bright and the Men's Basketball team opens up the exhibition season tonight at 7 p.m. in the Mullins Center as they face Dinamo of Russia.

State budget may come up short
A recent report states that the Massachusetts' could come up $3.6 billion short for its state budget by 2002 (See story, page 3).

"Doe a deer a ..."
Former member of X, John Doe brings his solo act to the Iron Horse tonight (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
Today will be cloudy and breezy with rain in the afternoon. There will be morning showers likely on Wednesday, giving way to a mixture of sun and clouds.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 40	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35

UMass professor wins prestigious poetry award

EMILY BEELY/ COLLEGIAN

UMass Professor James Tate was recently awarded the Tanning Prize, which recognizes mastery in poets.

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Professor James Tate has once again been recognized for his poetry. A former Pultzer Prize winner, Tate has received the nationally prestigious Tanning Prize for his book, Worshipful Company of Fletchers. The prize has been awarded in recognition of Tate's outstanding and proven mastery in the art of poetry.

The award, worth $100,000, is the largest annual literary prize given in the United States. It was established two years ago by painter Dorothea Tanning, who donated $2 million to the Academy of Arts and Letters for the creation of such a prize.

"I didn't have a thought about ever winning it," Tate said. "I was completely taken aback and honored, but also shocked."

But Tate modestly stated his life is "not all about prizes, it's about poetry. I love poetry and I'm dedicated to it." He said it took him almost two years to write the prize–winning book of poems.

"Once I got started writing, it didn't take me that long," Tate said. "When I finish a book, I tend not to write anything for a year. I find that I need to renew myself and point myself in some other direction and try to hope it's new, then I start writing again. You practically have to start at the beginning and learn how to write again."

Tate said he enjoyed writing the book, a labor of love.

"It's a serious book. I'm sure there's plenty of laughs in there too, so all I can say is that I had a great amount of fun writing it, but that doesn't take away from its seriousness."

Tate makes references to several Amherst landmarks and moments, where he has spent most of his career in the last 24 years. He is originally from Missouri, and attended Kansas State College and the University of Iowa. He has taught at the University of California at Berkeley and at Columbia University.

When asked which of his books was his favorite, Tate said it is a difficult question for most poets to answer.

"I think that's another thing that writers can't be trusted on," Tate said. "It seems that I had the most fun writing it, that I was making the boldest, most surprising moves for me, but I trust someone else who's read all of my work to see what they would have to say. I know that I felt fully mature poetic powers in me and was undeniably happy to be writing."

Tate teaches a graduate poetry workshop at the university. Students bring their new poems to class, where their work is critiqued by Tate and their classmates. Tate said he sees a lot of talent in his class.

Tate is excited about the genres of poetry currently on the literary scene. He is a fan of much of it, sharing long–term friendships with several poets.

"There's a large, healthy and diverse scene out there in the world of poetry. Across the board, I'm happy about that. I like poetry from all different elements of style. There are some good formalists, some radicals, some middle–of–the– road people, just like there always are."

Tate dubs his work as "nouveau middle–of–the–road."

"I'm described often as having surrealistic elements in my poetry, but what does that mean these days when you turn on the television and half the things you look at, especially commercials, are all so–called surrealistic. That takes the sting out of that word."

However, the poet does not agree with this label for his work.

"It used to mean something that I don't really think it does any longer. It's a pretty inept way to describe my poetry but I think when critics don't know what else to say, they will cling to some easy tag like that."

Tate writes about the young hopes of a child in the disillusioned eyes of an adult in the namesake poem, "Worshipful Company of Fletchers."

"I had meant to comfort him,/but the feral child was now/ mewling, and this annoyed me./"I doubt you have what it takes———/discipline, fastidiousness,/honesty, devotion——— to serve/as a manservant. a butler,/to a gentleman of rank and high–calling."

The Worshipful Company of Fletchers is not the last for Tate. He is currently in the midst of a second book.

"This is a lifetime proposition, it doesn't just stop," he said.

Amherst residents mourn Rabin

300 people gather in remembrance of slain Prime Minister

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Correspondent

Last night, at the Jewish Community of Amherst on Main Street, a memorial service and vigil was held for Prime Minister of Israel, Yitzhak Rabin, assassinated last Saturday evening by a Jewish Israeli law student. About 300 community members, synagogue leaders and students joined together to honor and remember the man and his accomplishments as well as to reflect on their own feelings about his death.

"Our tears run deep and bitter. The murder of Yitzhak Rabin represents a loss to the world of a hero of war and a hero of peace," Rabbi Sheila Peltz Weinberg said.

Some members wept, while others sat, silently nodding, listening to Rabbi Weinberg speak of the great courage possessed by Rabin.

Rabbi Weinberg emphasized the incredible strength and dedication it took for Rabin, who had once been a warrior, to sit down and make peace with his enemy. His goals for security for Israel had not changed, but his means to this goal had. She stressed the difficulty he experienced diplomatically. "Who can forget the extraordinary ceremony at the White House lawn on Sept. 13, 1993 when Mr. Rabin reluctantly extended his hand to Yasser Arafat, the man who for decades had been the master mind behind the attacks on the men, women and children of Israel," she said.

Joshua Walker, a University of Massachusetts student, agreed, "He fought for the lives of the Jewish people and the lives for the Palestinians. He didn't want the Palestinians to die any more than he wanted Jews to die. Ultimately, he risked his life for it.," he said.

Haim Gunner, an Amherst resident, spoke of how such violence within the Jewish culture can not and should not be tolerated. He told a story of how, as a child, he had never seen his father as shocked as the night he saw one synagogue member raise his hand against another member in disagreement. According to Gunner, it is troubling to see such violence within the Jewish community, and the assassination of Rabin by another Jew "should sharpen the recognition that we have to learn how to communicate with each other and that we have to make safeguards against such violence within the community."

According to Joshua Walker, "It was bound to happen. It's shocking that someone would actually do that, but the world is such a violent place and people have such strong ideas that it has led them to kill. He [the assassin] said he did it to stop the peace process, but throughout history that has never worked, so in his full quest he failed."

A Mourner's Kaddish, -the Jewish prayer for the dead, was recited at the service for Rabin, and tears were shed as people sang Shir LaShalom, the last song he sang at the pro- peace rally before he was shot. The title is translated, "Sing Only a Song for Peace."

Mourners filed out of the synagogue singing only one word, "Shalom" — meaning peace in Hebrew — as they gathered outside, in a circle, each holding one, white candle. After the singing subsided, individuals placed their candles in the center of the circle. They stood solemnly for a moment, staring into the bright center of the circle, remembering and grieving for a man who had given his life in the name of peace.

If interested in future discussion of the assassination, please attend a discussion hosted by the Office of Jewish Affairs: "Personal Reactions to the Assassination of Yitzhak Rabin," on Wednesday, November 8. This event will be held at the Campus Center Rm. 917, 12:00–1:30 p.m..

Turn to Rabin page 2

Rabin laid to rest; assassin confesses

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL (AP) – The coffin was carried about 200 yards to the gravesite in a pine glade. A blue-and-white flag with the Star of David was removed from the casket, which was then lowered into the grave.

Members of the burial society scooped earth into containers and covered the casket.

A rabbi intoned the prayer, "God, Full of Mercy."

The mourners sat in rows of white chairs on Mount Herzl, where Rabin was buried among the nation's past leaders and military heroes. Many of the foreign visitors wore black skullcaps, others wore blue baseball caps.

Other dignitaries who attended were Prime Ministers Viktor Chernomyrdin of Russia and John Major of Britain, Prince Charles and Presidents Jacques Chirac of France and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany.

The funeral began with a two-minute siren that wailed throughout the country in tribute to the man who led Israel in war as chief of staff, then led it to peace with the Palestine Liberation Organization and Jordan.

Life in Israel came to a standstill at the sound of the siren.

Drivers stopped their cars, got out and stood in silence.

Rabin's casket had been brought from the bier where it had lain in state for 24 hours outside the parliament building. Eight army generals and police chiefs loaded the casket on an army truck covered with black wood. The vehicle drove slowly through the downtown streets, which were cloned to normal traffic, to the Mount Herzl cemetery, named for Theodor Herzl, the founder of Zionism and visionary of the modern Israeli state.

Israelis mobbed the cortege route to say farewell, including hospital patients who ran toward the street in their robes.

One million people in this nation of 5 million had filed past the late prime minister's coffin, which lay in state outside the Knesset — children on parents' shoulders, soldiers, Israeli Arabs in flowing headdresses. Many sobbed. Dozens fainted.

Turn to Rabin page 2

REBECCA PETERSON/ COLLEGIAN

A candle–lit memorial was set up outside the Student Union steps today, honoring the memory of slain Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

UM Art Dept. to offer workshops for children

By Jaime Chavkin
Collegian Correspondent

The art education program of the art department at the University of Massachusetts is once again offering art workshops on campus for children Nov. 1 through Dec. 13.

Taught at the Fine Arts Center and Hampden classrooms, the Art Extra workshops are specifically designed for children and young adults in grades one through 12 and are taught by teams of UMass students preparing to become art teachers.

"There are three teams of two teachers each that instruct the workshops," said program supervisor Martha Taunton. "It is a required course for art teacher certification, and the state requires a certain amount of classroom time for the teachers to become certified."

The workshop offered for grades one to four is called "Young Artists: Fantasy Art" in which children will be creating hand puppets. In addition, they will gain experience in drawing and painting and with mixed–media creations.

"The workshops have expanded this year to six weeks instead of four weeks," Taunton said. "With [the workshops] being six weeks, my students will be able to do more teaching.

"My students wanted to increase the age range of students taking the workshops. Last year, we had children in grades one through seven and this year we have expanded to grade 11."

The four workshops offered for students in grades five to 12 are: "Body in Motion: Human Figure Design," which focuses on drawing, painting and sculpting the fig-

Turn to WORKSHOP, page2

Residents vote today on controversial domestic proposal

By Patrick Cleary
Collegian Correspondent

Today Northampton residents will vote on the Domestic Partnership Ordinance, a controversial piece of legislation which was passed by the Northampton City Council last June.

Proposed to recognize the diversity of the population of Northampton and to "support all of its families and... further its commitment to nondiscrimination," the ordinance allows persons in domestic partnerships to register at the office of the City Clerk and obtain a certificate attesting to their status.

A "domestic partnership," as defined by the ordinance, is formed by two unmarried persons at least 18 years of age who are "in a relationship of mutual support, caring and commitment."

They cannot be related by blood closer than would bar marriage in Massachusetts, must be each other's sole partner and "consider themselves a family." Upon registration, domestic partners are entitled to three basic rights.

Ordinance ensures three rights

First, a domestic partner would have the same visitation rights as a spouse or a parent at any public health care facility owned, operated or controlled by the City of Northampton.

A domestic partner would also have a right to visit his partner at any correctional facilities owned, operated, or controlled by the City of Northampton.

Finally, a domestic partner would have the ability to have access to the school records of a child of a domestic partner, or to remove the children of a domestic partner from school in case of illness or family emergency. This would require a signed note by the partner who is the parent or legal guardian of the child.

The city council passed the ordinance unanimously last June, but was suspended following a petition begun by Northampton for Traditional Values, a group of citizens opposed to the ordinance.

Ordinance faces opposition

"The city council passed the DPO [Domestic Partnership Ordinance] without thinking it through," states Reverend Donald R. LaPointe of the Sacred Heart in Northampton.

"They wanted [those opposed to the ordinance] to back off, saying we couldn't possibly win," says LaPointe. "So the area churches called for someone to take the ball and run with it, and Northampton for Traditional Values was formed.

"We oppose this ordinance on moral, ethical, legal and sociological grounds," continues LaPointe. "By passing the DPO, the City of Northampton is saying that any two people can live together and be called a couple. It deteriorates the meaning of family."

Stacy Roth, a volunteer coordinator and campaigner for the Northampton Domestic Partnership Coalition, has a different view.

"The DPO says a lot of things. It sends a profound message of recognition that the city values all families, and all of its citizens," says Roth. "[In passing the DPO] we are saying that we in this city are willing to take care of and care for one another."

Roth sees efforts to block the DPO as a reaction of fear.

"People are afraid of the unknown," she contends, "They fear any changes being made to the status quo."

Because the ordinance does not make distinctions between same–sex and opposite–sex partnerships, Roth also notes that "other issues have to do with homophobia. I don't think that these issues are new, it's just that they are becoming more visible with this ordinance."

"The homosexual issue was not brought up by Northampton for Traditional Values, it was brought up by the city council," counters LaPointe.

Ordinance said to skirt the law

"This is not an issue of homosexuality. This ordinance is a violation of the law," LaPointe argues. "The law states that two people coming together [in marriage] need to receive a license certifying

Turn to PROPOSAL, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Nov. 7

Meeting — The Hillel Council meets at Hillel House at 388 N. Pleasant St at 6:15 p.m..

Meeting — "Identifying and Expressing Emotions." REFLECT is a support group free of charge and open to any Five-College student coping with the serious illness of a friend or family member. Meetings are on Monday and Tuesday in the Psychological Services Center in Tobin Hall from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m..

Meeting — "Does Overeating Control Your Life?" Overeaters Anonymous is offering free workshops to those who think they may have an eating problem. Mondays and Tuesdays, Campus Center, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m..

Meeting — The Mortar Board National Honor Society will be at the Immanuel Lutheran Church assisting Cub Scouts in supporting a stronger local chapter.

Discussion — "The Death Penalty." Panel with David Hoose and Buzz Eisenberg of Massachusetts Citizens Against the Death Penalty. Campus Center 174-176, 6:30 p.m..

Discussion — "Criticism and Self-Criticism: How a Socialist Society Deals with its Enemies." Allyn Rickett, arrested a U.S. spy in China in 1951, discusses his experience of re-education. Campus Center 168, 8 p.m..

Music — "Spotlight on Viola and Piano." A faculty recital featuring Michelle LaCourse, viola, and Nadine Shank, piano. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m..

Performance — "The Akwesasne Mohawk Singers and Dancers." A demonstration of traditional Iroquois songs and dances. Augusta Savage Gallery, 7 p.m..

Art — Mount Holyoke College professor of art Robert Herbert on "Millet's Rural Workers." Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Wednesday, Nov. 8

Debate — "Are All Prisoners Political Prisoners?" Campus Center 901, 6:30 p.m..

Speaker — Ramona Africa: As MOVE member who survived the Philadelphia police bombing in 1985, after which she spent eight years in prison. She will discuss the case of Mumia-Abu Jamal, and social control. Campus Center 174-176, 8 p.m..

Music — 25th Anniversary of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center celebration. Harp and Jeff Martell, street musicians, on the Campus Center Concourse on Wednesdays.

Discussion — The Office of Jewish Affairs will host a discussion entitled "Personal Reactions to the Assassination of Yitzhak Rabin." Campus Center 917, 12 to 1:30 p.m..

Meeting — The Malcolm X Cultural Center is having an AI ANA Students Focus meeting for students wanting to enhance their college careers. 8 p.m..

Film — Franz Kafka's "The Trial" by Orson Welles presented by the University Film Society. Foreign Language Resource Center, Herter Hall, 7 p.m..

Notices

Testing — This semester the University will administer RI Basic Math Skills on Tuesday, Nov. 7 at Marcus Hall 131, 6:30 p.m. Students wishing to take the Exemption Test should bring an I.D. and a number two pencil. The use of a calculator is optional.

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177-178. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 408E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Writing — The Hampshire College AIDS Action Collective is running a "Safer Sex" erotica contest. They are accepting poetry and prose. Submissions are due Nov. 9, and can be sent via Five-College mail to Hampshire College Resource Center. Winners will be awarded prizes and will be published in the magazine. Please include a mailing address.

Community — The HCAC Head Start Program is accepting application for its free pre-school program for immediate placement in both classroom and Home Base. to qualify for classroom placement a child must be 4 years old by Sept. 1, 1995. To qualify for Home Base a child must be 3 years old by Sept 1, 1995. To obtain a pre-registration form or for additional information, call 582-4206.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545-3490

HAMPDEN GALLERY EDUCATIONAL SERIES:

CULTURAL & POLITICAL PERSPECTIVES IN THE ARTS

WED. NOV 8, 7:30 - 8:30PM

"WHAT HAPPENED IN BEIJING?

AN ARTS PERSPECTIVE ON THE UNITED NATIONS FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN"

A LECTURE BY MARTHA RICHARDS,

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, THE FUND FOR WOMEN ARTISTS & PAST MANAGING DIRECTOR, STAGEWRITE, BROOKLYN CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS, NEW YORK. SHE HAS TAUGHT ARTS MANAGEMENT AT MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE AND LECTURES FREQUENTLY ON ARTS ISSUES.

THURS. NOV 9, 7:30 - 9:30PM

"RADICAL ROOTS, SOCIALIST VISIONS

SONGS AND STORIES OF JEWISH RADICALISM"

A MULTI-MEDIA PRESENTATION BY JOEL SAXE,

A DOCUMENTARY FILMMAKER WITH AWARD-WINNING WORKS RELATED TO JEWISH ELDERS & CULTURAL DIVERSITY. HE TEACHES VIDEO PROD. AT GREENFIELD COMM. COLLEGE & IS WRITING HIS DISSERTATION, AN ETHNOGRAPHY OF YIDDISH CULTURE ON S. MIAMI BEACH.

LOCATION: HAMPDEN GALLERY, HAMPDEN COMMONS, SOUTHWEST RESIDENTIAL AREA, UMASS CAMPUS. FREE & OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

HAMPDEN GALLERY'S FINE ARTS CENTER PROGRAM. FUNDED IN PART BY GRANTS FROM THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL AND THE UMASS CULTURAL ENRICHMENT FUND. FOR PUBLIC & POLITICAL PERSPECTIVES IN THE ARTS WAS MADE POSSIBLE BY A GRANT FROM THE STUDENT AFFAIRS CULTURAL ENRICHMENT FUND

Rabin

continued from page 1

As world leaders converged on Israel to shore up Rabin's legacy of peace, his killer confessed in a Tel Aviv court.

Appearing at his arraignment handcuffed and unshaven, 27-year-old Israeli law student Yigal Amir said he killed Rabin at a peace rally Saturday night because he wanted "to give our country to the Arabs." Amir, who has ties to Jewish extremists, was caught with the gun in his hand.

"I did this to stop the peace process," he told Magistrate Dan Arbel in a calm, even tone. "We need to be cold-hearted."

The magistrate ordered Amir held for 15 more days.

His older brother, Hagai, was arrested Sunday, charged with failure to prevent a crime and ordered held for a week. Israel radio said he apparently told the court he knew of his brother's intentions.

Israel has no history of political assassination, and the fact that a Jew could have taken the life of the prime minister has shocked the nation to its foundations.

One woman passed out paper doves of peace. Others left photographs of Rabin and signs reading "Why?" and "Rest in Peace."

"It warms my heart to see that we have the partnership of such a large part of the people," Mrs. Rabin said on Israel radio, her voice breaking with emotion. "But our pain will remain with us and the gap that was created is huge and is felt in the home ... every day, all day, and it is terrible."

Mrs. Rabin said that when she heard the gunshots that killed her husband, his bodyguards told her it was a toy pistol. "And it took a long time before we got to the hospital and understood the gravity of the situation," she said.

For Mrs. Rabin, the murder of the prime minister meant the loss of a man under whose military command she served, then married more than four decades ago.

For the nation of Israel, it meant the loss of a military hero who fought in the 1948 siege of Jerusalem in an elite unit, then was chief of staff when Israel defeated three Arab armies in six days in June 1967.

A shy, reticent man, he was thrust into the prime minister's job by the resignation of Golda Meir in 1974, and in a second term that began in 1992, made peace with the PLO. For that bold step, he won the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize, sharing it with Peres and PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Arafat did not come to Jerusalem for the funeral, citing the complicated security operation Israel would have to mount if he were there. His presence likely would have set off protests in Israel, and he has not visited the disputed city since Palestinian self-rule began 18 months ago because of the sensitive sovereignty issue.

Arafat watched the funeral on television from his office in Gaza City.

In an interview with CNN, the Palestinian leader mourned the loss of the man he called his partner in peace: "I am very sad for this awful event which had happened there in Israel, where I lost one of the most important, courageous men in Israel.

propsals

continued from page 1

their health. The DPO sidesteps that law, and allows anyone to register without that safeguard."

LaPointe says that under the DPO, a young woman could register a relationship with a man without having to undergo any tests to determine if there were any health risks. If the woman were later to find out that she had acquired a sexually-transmitted disease and became sterile due to it, she could then sue the city of Northampton.

"Without this ordinance, this couple would have to get a license to marry, and the woman would find out that her partner had this disease before anything happened," states LaPointe.

Roth disagrees with this assumption. "Domestic Partnership is not marriage, and is not intended as a substitute for marriage. It gives people, those who cannot or choose not to marry as well as those who would benefit from such a partnership the opportunity to register that relationship."

Priest sees hidden agenda

The DPO can work for people who are not romantically involved, states Roth. She gives, as an example, two single mothers who reside in the same house.

"They have no other system of support than one another," says Roth. "If the ordinance passes, they then have the option to register their partnership. If anything should happen to one of them, say one gets into an accident, the other would be able to visit her in the hospital, and take care of both their children's school needs."

LaPointe scoffs at this example. "They would be able to do those things anyway," he says. "Grandparents take their grandchildren out of school all the time. It just requires a note."

This raises an interesting point. As there are no city-run hospitals or correctional facilities in Northampton, what benefits do the citizens of Northampton receive by voting for the DPO?

"It is just the beginning, since success of this ordinance doesn't gain anything for anybody," says LaPointe. "There is a hidden agenda here, or else the city council would not have rushed the ordinance through so quickly. I see it as a stepping stone, a precedent to set for future legislation. Why else would everyone fight so hard to keep it?"

Roth states, "The city council was careful not to overstep the bounds of what it could do within the narrow boundaries of city government. While this is a modest ordinance, it was written to include everyone, and to recognize the diversity of Northampton."

workshop

continued from page 2

ure: "Sensational Silkscreening," examining the use of this medium for printing on paper and tee-shirts; "Video Production," in which students will create short video productions in small groups; and "Tie Dye Textiles," which allows students to experiment in creating panels for room screens and design tee-shirts.

Approximately 30 students are currently enrolled for the workshops held on Wednesdays from 5:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m., many of whom took the workshops last semester. The cost of the class is $30 to cover the expense of the materials used.

At the conclusion of the workshops in December, there will be an exhibition and reception held at the Fine Arts Center for the students' families. It will display what the students were taught as well as their creations from class.

Four killed in restaurant shooting

By Jan Cienski
Associated Press

BOSTON — Four men eating lunch in a restaurant were killed and another was wounded Monday after two men with whom they argued shot them as they sat in a booth amid about 50 other diners, police said.

Two plainclothes police officers from the nearby community of Everett who happened to be eating lunch at the restaurant chased the suspects and arrested them at gunpoint in the parking lot. The manner of the shooting led to speculation that it was an organized crime "hit." But Police Commissioner Paul Evans discounted that suspicion.

"If it was a hit, it was a very sloppy hit in broad daylight in a very crowded restaurant," said Evans.

Police said the gunmen fired at least 13 shots inside the building, the 99 Restaurant & Pubs in Boston's Charlestown section, at around 1:20 p.m., sending patrons scrambling for cover. "I heard, 'Pop, pop, pop.' I hit the deck," said Bill Sewall, a 57-year-old customer. "I ran out the front door and I'm still shaking."

A witness who spoke on condition of anonymity said she saw two men come inside the restaurant with guns, then heard shots and someone screaming that his brother-in-law had been hit.

She said she looked around and saw two people lying unmoving on the floor.

"I scooted out the door; I was petrified," she said.

The commissioner said the exact motive for the shooting could not be immediately determined.

Patrolmen Robert Hall and Paul Durant, both two-year veterans of the Everett police force, were having lunch at the restaurant in their civilian clothes after making an appearance earlier at Cambridge District Court. They made the arrests.

Hall, of Everett, and Durant, of Melrose, attended the police academy and joined the force together, train new recruits and share second base duties on the department softball team, said their patrol captain, Richard Basteri.

"We're very, very proud," Everett Chief James Bonnell said. The suspects were identified as Damien Clemente, 20, of Medford, and Vincent John Perez, 27, of Boston. They were to be charged in Charlestown District Court on Tuesday with four counts each of homicide and several weapons charges. Clemente's light green Cadillac was towed from the restaurant lot by police.

The victims, all males, were not immediately identified while police tried to notify their relatives.

The Charlestown section of the city, scene of many violent incidents in the past, is known for a so-called Code of Silence that has long kept residents from speaking to police about crimes they witness.

Those who were in the restaurant at the time of the shooting came from Charlestown and elsewhere.

They said a hush came over the room when the shots rang out. A moment later, they said, people started running and screaming. "I ran in the back and hid," said Lisa Giordano, a bartender. "It just happened so fast."

Steve Maurer was in the bar when he heard what sounded like a balloon popping.

"I looked over to see if there was a party going on," he said. "Then I heard another shot and saw smoke and realized it wasn't a party."

Maurer said he heard other patrons yelling "Get down! Get down!" He said he ran through the kitchen and hid behind a row of cars outside.

Boston Police spokesman Lt. Robert O'Toole said two people were taken into custody, but he would not comment on a possible motive. The bodies of the four victims remained in the restaurant three hours after the shooting as authorities gathered evidence. Massachusetts General Hospital reported that another person injured in the shooting was in serious condition after being operated on for a single gunshot wound to the abdomen, close to the heart.

Some residents said the incident called to mind Charlestown's reputation for violence.

"It's to the point where you don't want to buy the newspaper any more, you don't want to watch the news," said Terry Titcomb, a neighborhood activist whose son was shot and killed a year ago. Several residents said they resented being equated with the shootings.

"It's never the good stuff, just the bad. It's a few people who give (Charlestown) a bad name," said Anne McCarron, 63, a native Charlestown resident. "Ninety-five percent of the people in Charlestown are warm, great people."

The 99 Restaurant & Pubs in Charlestown is one of a chain of casual eateries. Charlestown is a blue-collar neighborhood on the city's north side.

State budget may come up short

Report claims Republican's proposal will send state into debt

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts could come up $3.6 billion short for its state budget by 2002, partly because the proposed Republican congressional budget will force states to pick up federal programs, a report says.

Cities, towns and government authorities also will be hard hit, and unemployment will rise, according to the report by the Commonwealth Center for Fiscal Policy, a liberal think tank.

For Massachusetts, the proposed federal cuts would come when the state faces large spending commitments on education, increasing debt service and cuts in state taxes.

"Revenues and spending are on a collision course and little is being done to prevent a crash," the report said.

However Robert Bliss, fiscal spokesman for Gov. William F. Weld, told The Boston Globe the report is a worst-case scenario.

He said it does not take into account positive trends, and what he said was the administration's ability to cut taxes and balance budgets.

The center figures state revenues in 2002 will be $1.9 billion less than now because of cuts in federal spending, and cuts in the state's capital gains, bank and estate taxes.

That same year, the state will have $1.7 billion in commitments under the Education Reform Act of 1993, and to service the debt on capital projects.

"This $3.6 billion gap cannot be filled by natural revenue growth, since it is unlikely that revenue growth will greatly exceed the natural growth in the cost of providing services," the report said.

"It can only be filled by some combination of reneging on spending commitments for infrastructure improvements and education, making drastic cuts in other services, and-or increasing state taxes," it said.

The center said the sales tax would have to be doubled to 10 percent to make up the entire difference, and not cut spending.

It also said the drop in government spending would hurt the state's economy, and that a national study predicted the unemployment rate in Massachusetts in 10 years would be 3.8 percentage points higher than it would have been.

Federal cuts could total $2.2 billion for cities, towns and governmental authorities and commissions during the next seven years, a 20 percent reduction, the center said.

It also said cities and towns could be hurt even more because the state would be likely to cut back on local aid and the communities' taxing powers are limited by Proposition 2 1/2.

Federal cuts would hurt low income families the most with reductions in Medicaid and government services, while wealthy residents and big businesses would benefit from the tax policies, the center said.

The center was created by the Tax Equity Alliance for Massachusetts and is financed by the Ford Foundation, the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation and the Boston Foundation.

"If you take the worst possible assumptions and assume that all the fiscal acuity this administration has shown since 1991 suddenly vanishes, then I suppose you could come up with this sort of scenario," Bliss told the Globe.

He said the Weld administration has increased the state's rainy day fund and will continue to limit debt service increases to 1 to 2 percent a year.

The state's ability to control rising Medicaid spending will help, he said.

Teacher, wife caught in sex scandal

By Michael Raphoek
Associated Press

ABINGTON, Pa. — It started out as afternoon homework sessions at the fifth-grade teacher's house, where one pupil says if he got a question right, he got to kiss the teacher's wife.

It degenerated into overnight parties filled with beer, marijuana and sex with the teacher's wife as he watched or, at least once, joined in, prosecutors say.

Seven students, aged 13 to 17, have come forward to say they drank beer and smoked marijuana that David Miller and his wife, Maryanne, gave them at their house. Two boys say they had sex with Mrs. Miller, one once and the other more than 60 times in the past year.

The Millers were ordered Tuesday to stand trial on a laundry list of criminal charges, including involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, statutory sexual assault, criminal conspiracy and intimidation of witnesses.

They have denied the charges, although police say Mrs. Miller confessed to giving the youths beer and marijuana and having sex with one boy with her husband sometimes joining them.

Miller's attorney, Roger B. Reynolds Jr., said the confession was coerced. Plus, he said, the teen-agers had tried marijuana and beer before they met the Millers.

"We're not dealing with the Hardy Boys here," he said. Mrs. Miller echoed that Wednesday, in a brief interview at the couple's home in Abington, a suburb just north of Philadelphia. Standing in the doorway, a wilted Halloween pumpkin carved to a frown on the porch, she acknowledged that a few of the charges were true.

"Some of them," she said. "But it's not like we lured them in or anything."

In court papers, Miller only admits to giving the youngsters occasional sips of beer.

According to police and prosecutors, the outgoing, popular couple gained the trust of parents by inviting the teen-age boys and girls into their home to study and do homework.

Miller had worked with kids for years, coordinating the before — and after — school program at a YMCA before landing his teaching job 2 1/2 years ago. At Highland Elementary School, he coached a team in an academic competition to a Southeastern Pennsylvania championship. He headed up a Boy Scout troop.

"He seemed to present a picture of a very bright, dedicated teacher," said Abington School District Superintendent James McCafferty.

The picture began to change near the end of August. Police responded to a disturbance call at the Millers' home and found a 13-year-old boy drunk on their porch.

The teen-ager then regaled officers with stories of a year of partying at the Millers. The couple was arrested Oct. 3.

SEX

is...natural ..fun ...best when you can come .. to the:

NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS

nov 8
nov 15
dec 6
dec 13

Mary Lyon
Coolidge
Dickinson
Patterson

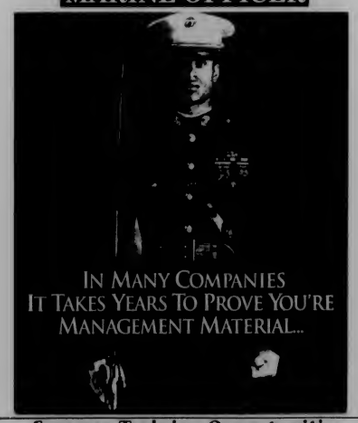
8 PM

For more information, call the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

Marines

The Few. The Proud. The marines.

MARINE OFFICER



IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU'RE MANAGEMENT MATERIAL...

Summer Training Opportunities Available.
Underclassmen Welcome!

If you are interested in becoming a Marine officer or want more information, see CAPT Peters at the Newman Center from 10 to 2 on the 8th of November, or call 1-800-255-USMC.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog · (413) 545-0107
e-mail: continued@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

the BLUEWALL presents

DISCO

Every Thursday

Boogie Down All Night Long

FREE ADMISSION

9:30 pm - 1:00 am

Music From ABBA to SHABBA & More

With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media

"You Want It, We've Got It"

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Tim White Interim Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Conley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Heman Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The loss of a great leader

Saturday evening, moments after a pro-peace rally in Tel Aviv, Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was shot and killed in cold blood.

Like my parent's generation who remember where they were when Kennedy was shot, my generation who remember where they were when the Challenger blew up, and my brother's generation when the O.J. Simpson verdict was announced, Jews across the world will remember where they were when Rabin was shot.

I don't watch much television, but I do try to listen to the radio as often as possible, and on Saturday I was listening while I was straightening my room. I was making my bed, when the announcer said, "This just came over the wire, but Israel's Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin has been shot. He is currently being taken to the hospital."

I felt a bit stunned, but no one had said dead. I thought for sure that it was a minor gunshot, and there was nothing to worry about. I woke up Sunday morning, opened my door to go to the bathroom, and looked down at my Sunday Boston Globe. My eyes immediately caught the words "Rabin shot dead" — in my early morning stupor, I was stunned and speechless.

So taken aback, I sat down on the floor and started to read the article. As I quickly scanned the article, I became sad and angry, and had all the emotions one feels with a death. Why did this happen at such an important time in Jewish- Palestinian relations? How could one Jew kill another Jew in the name of political justice?

Perhaps this struck me so closely because of my Judaism. Most American Jews want to visit Israel sometime during their lifetime — the idea of a Jewish homeland gives the feeling of safety. All Jews automatically have citizenship in Israel, and the common belief is that if the U.S. ever got too bad in terms of anti-Semitism, Jews could depart for Israel and be accepted there.

I had the dream I would someday travel to Israel and see people living together in peace — all citizens of Israel. I had hoped I could see Rabin speak on Israeli ground.

Marni E. Helfner

I too have this dream and belief. Except I wanted to be there when Rabin was. Rabin was a man who encouraged peace, and this was reassuring in a time when most diaspora Jews are starting to realize that Israel is also the holy land for Muslims, Christians and Palestinians, too.

I had the dream I would someday travel to Israel and see people living together in peace — all citizens of Israel. I had hoped I could see Rabin speak on Israeli ground. This soft, gentle, man, the leader of a new Israel, was a leader that could change the way the middle east and the way it was viewed by the world.

I'm not saying Rabin was perfect. Far from it. He was a soldier, a negotiator, a politician, who advocated war. But he will always be remembered for his most recent efforts with Yasser Arafat and Shimon Peres, including the Nobel Peace Prize they received in 1994.

Rabin's death at close range will have terrifying after shocks. The crack down on the Israeli right will be sharp and fast. The peace process I have waited so long for will come screeching to a halt. The way in which Jews and Israelis were beginning to live their lives without fear will stop.

So what more can be said about a leader who will be forgotten by most Americans within two months? Rabin will be missed. His life will be remembered but his legacy, unfortunately, may not.

As I sit here writing this, tears stream down my face for a man I never met, yet did more for my people than I will ever fathom. As millions of Jews across the world recite the mourner's kaddish, the death one man has left our lives changed for ever.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Taking things for granted

To the Editor:

It was a typical Friday afternoon. We were all doing the morning reports for the nights' parties. To tell you the truth, I was really looking forward to going out and doing the UMass routine, getting drunk, stumbling home, and waking up at noon the next day.

Little did I know that this night would be anything but normal. Around 7:30, one of my housemates asked if I wanted to go to the gym and I agreed. I wanted to keep it to a short workout in order to still go out.

After our workout we decided to stop by the wonderful establishment of Big Y and pick up some snacks. On our journey over I noticed that my friend was headed into the supermarket while I was engaging in a conversation with a middle aged woman.

How did this conversation start? I simply said hello and she began to ramble. She had just received her eviction notice for Dec. 31 from the Boulder apartments. The landlord had complained of noise and damage to the apartment, both of which this woman denied. The rent was raised by over $150 and this woman didn't know what to do. She was injured in 1980 and was unable to work, was recently divorced, was barely getting by financially, and most importantly she had two children. One of these children was beside her on the park bench, asleep and shivering. They didn't even have a ride home that evening and couldn't afford a taxi.

As an elementary education and psychology major, I am very driven to help people and this situation struck me hard. With much experience with children, I love the fact that they are so innocent and eager to learn. They have so much life ahead of them and so much potential. Yet, in today's world, situations such as the one above are all too commonplace. I couldn't look at the little girl on the park bench, all curled up and scared, without having my heart accelerate and race with emotion.

Why am I writing this? I just wanted to stop anyone who may read this and have them think about how lucky we really are. So many of us worry about trivial things such as grades and in my case, girls, that the real suffering is overlooked.

All I ask is that we all take just a little time out to reach out to someone, whether it be volunteering time or merely talking to those in need. Visit a homeless shelter and open your eyes to the reality. Don't get me wrong, I love to party just like everyone and I have strong aspirations of my own and by no means am I advocating against these ideas.

All I'm trying to say is take a look around and be thankful you have what you have and help somebody who doesn't. Even the simple actions do so much. I'll leave you with a final vision. Picture your little brother or sister or favorite toddler laying on a park bench with so much doubt and fear. Need I say more.

Peter Cookson
Amherst

Cartoon doesn't present paper's views

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to a recent letter to the editor on Nov. 1, submitted by Project FLATBOY, which in turn was in response to "what appears to be an editorial stance against the Project FLATBOY by the Collegian staff."

Supposedly this attack "began with the cartoon Buttah." As the creator of Buttah, I would like to say that I do not represent the Collegian staff nor the opinion of the staff in any way, shape or form, since I am not even a member of the staff. Also, the cartoon in question was not directly meant to be an attack against the band Project FLATBOY. The cartoon Buttah is, in its own way, a commentary on life within the Butterfield dormitory. The cartoon which featured Project FLATBOY was about the Butterfield Columbus Day Clean-Up, an actual event in which we were forced to remove dozens of FLATBOY stickers from window, doors, mirrors and furniture.

Personally, and I believe most of Butterfield would agree, I felt like my home was desecrated when I awoke the morning after Octoberfest to see the entire inside of Butterfield stickered. It is even more disturbing when one takes into consideration the fact that Butterfield was recently renovated and the residents are being carefully monitored and trusted to keep the dorm clean and treat it respectably. After all the efforts the community has taken thus far to kept the place in order, this stickering was like a stab in the back.

Project FLATBOY seems to feel that they are the victims of some horrible unfair attack based only on misinformed judgment and bias. Rather, I think that the negative connotation the word "FLATBOY" brings to mind for many people has to do with their destructive advertising techniques. No, I have never seen them perform nor heard them play, but even if I was to do so, the negative feeling I have towards Project FLATBOY because of their means of advertising would far overshadow any opinions I might form upon hearing their music, even if I absolutely loved it.

Darling, creator of Buttah
Central

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to work the system.

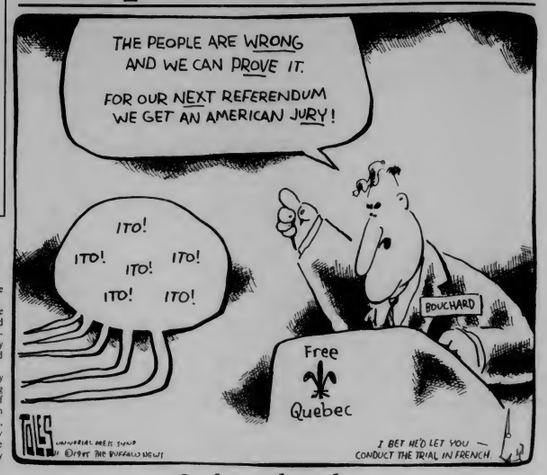
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.



Safe and sexless

Mark McGrath
Collegian Columnist

To screw or not to screw? That is the question. For me it's really not a question at all. I am a member of a minority group on campus and in society. I am a virgin.

You may not hear that statement very often, because in this day and age to be a virgin is to be a type of outcast. It doesn't seem normal. I'm not saying society looks down on virgins. It's just that everyone wants to be cool, and being sexually active has somehow become synonymous with being cool.

That, I believe, is a result of the barrage of sexually explicit advertisements we face every day in magazines, newspapers and television. Take a look at the average beer commercial. Advertisers don't just sell their product anymore. In addition to beer they're also selling sex. In a society where the primary means of getting attention is through sex, it's no wonder someone who doesn't fit the mold feels like an outsider.

I remember when a friend told me that I had a big "V" stamped across my forehead, and until I had sex, I wasn't going to get rid of it. It was then that I started to feel pressure to be like him and my other friends. I knew I didn't feel comfortable with the label, but I also knew I wasn't quite ready to get rid of it.

At that point, I probably would have had sex with anyone available just to get the weight off my shoulders, but luckily, I was able to get the chance. By the time I started getting opportunities, I realized I wasn't quite ready for it. Needless to say, because of bad timing and good luck, I never was able to do what I wanted so much and so little to do.

Since then, I have become more comfortable with my status. Now, I'm fully able to handle the digs I'll occasionally get from the "sex machines" who live around me. In fact I can turn the situation around and can get a few shots in for myself.

Contrary to what many would have you believe, there are many advantages to being a virgin. First, knowing that you haven't had sex is a good way of being sure you don't have any children floating around out there. It also minimizes your chances of contracting a number of sexually transmitted diseases. Everyone has heard the only really safe way of preventing these things from happening is through abstinence, but how many actually heed that advice?

One time, a woman I worked with found out I was a virgin and had a good laugh at my expense. Meanwhile, she had two young children at home with no father in sight and a job working a cash register trying to support them. Although I didn't offer a response to her comments, I knew who deserved to be laughed at.

Having your virginity is actually something to be proud of. Once lost, it can never be regained. To retain it is a difficult choice to make. It's more a matter of delaying gratification than anything else.

I know eventually I will meet someone who I will be absolutely crazy about, and when the time is right, I'll be able to show her just how important she is to me. She'll know I'll have waited my whole life to find someone as special as her. Then, I will be glad that I never lost it in a drunken fling with someone I'd never see again.

Until then, I may have a big "V" stamped on my forehead, but I'm not going to try and hide it. It's nothing to be ashamed of. In fact, I'm glad it's still there, because it means I still have something of value worth saving.

I haven't lost my virginity to someone who doesn't deserve it, and I haven't lost it because society tells me that to keep it isn't cool. Therefore, while I may have a "V" stamped on my forehead, the "V" stands for victory, something I can be proud of.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Multiculturalism is here to stay

Hernán Rozanberg
Collegian Columnist

United States citizens, generally known as "Americans" to most, are by and large the most lethargic, apathetic and ignorant of peoples when it comes time to question the status quo and think for themselves. Regrets go to that small percentage of people who do not fall into this category — but the point stands strong nonetheless.

Never is this more clear than in the example of political discourse. Barely half the population votes in general elections, not even considering the percentage of those who even know who is running and what is his or her platform.

But let me not digress, for the point of this piece is to specifically target the lethargy, apathy and ignorance of UMass students regarding current critical issues on this campus. One such issue is multiculturalism; what it means, who does it include, where does it apply, when was it conceived and how has it been used by different people.

Most likely no one even recalls the Multicultural Affairs double-spread issue of Oct. 25, when this debate was put on the table. Professors, students and University staff all took the time to give insightful and contrasting analyses of this controversial theme. If one takes into consideration the most debated issues of this campus, I do not think it too far- fetched to say multiculturalism ranks as one of the top items.

The articles in those two pages stand now as priceless evidence that the debate on this issue is far from over, and that further dialogue is desperately needed if things are to be at least attempted to be worked out. But what has happened? Not one letter has been received in response to any single article in the page: there were in total 12 articles, and there are over 25,000 students at the University. If this is not a sad, real demonstration of lethargy, apathy and ignorance, some one please tell me what is.

"As members of a society engaged in a social compact, we have to find ways to reconcile very deep divisions in our community," wrote Ricardo Townes. "The challenge for the communities of the University ... is not to sort and hierarchize, but to connect and transcend," said Chancellor Scott.

"Multiculturalism is an elite Eurocentric term contrived to provide an alternate focus on a waiting list in order to keep such élites from addressing the issues of classism and racism," added Joyce W. Vincent. "At best the debate ... is largely irrelevant. At worst it is the discourse of fools, charlatans or both ... Besides, the entire discussion is at least a century and a half too late. By now, the issues are moot, the decisions long since taken and the case (and the American mind) closed," points out Michael Thelwell.

Are these few quotes, in and of themselves, not enough for a reaction, people? Hello? Are you all good ol' plain vidual will say, "I offered to help, but my involvement is not wanted." Illusionary! Not wanted? You cannot begin to think that while your ancestors enslaved, tortured, raped, killed or exiled your neighbor's ancestors, that this will not be remembered. But the white individual replies once again: "I didn't do it, and you cannot hold me personally responsible for it."

This much I can agree with. However, this doesn't excuse you not going to your community to bring the debate and make each other understand what wrongs were done in the past. White people first need to look inward to find some truth, while people of color take their time to build up and strengthen their own communities by themselves. Direct help this time will need to come when the latter ask for it, not when the former impose it. It will have to be on ALANA terms this time, and this is what white people (even those with honest and positive intentions) still fail to comprehend.

So then, what is multiculturalism? I don't know, but at least I am doing something to try to understand what it is, and how it is that it does affect everybody in one way or another. I suggest that people get a copy of those two pages that were published on Oct. 25, and rethink if it's really true that they have nothing to do with multiculturalism.

Hernán Rozemberg is the Collegian's Multicultural Affairs Editor.

Women's Issues

Tuesday, November 7, 1995

"WE ARE ALL QUITE ALIKE"

Panel discusses budget cuts

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Budget cuts and tuition hikes have negatively effected the accessibility of the University of Massachusetts to older women, working class and minority students, said panelists who participated in last Thursday's discussion titled "Cutting the University: What Ended Up in the Wastebin."

Carol Wallace, director of the Everywoman's Center, spoke about the effect of these financial decisions on low income women who return to school after years of not being in school.

"Higher education has been increasingly used by low income women as the means to improve their lives and the lives of their families ... Access to higher education is the key for women to achieve self-sufficiency," she said.

Between 1972 and 1988 the Everywoman's Center had a program called the Women's Admission and General Educational Support Program (WAGES) for re-entry women.

This program helped low income women get a quality education. It provided academic support and advocacy for child care, financial aid and other resources. The university eliminated the WAGES Program because of budget cuts, Wallace said.

Since then the university has seen a decline in the number of low income women attendants.

The Everywoman's Center continues to receive requests for information about the services at UMass from low- income women. These women are referred to other private colleges in the area that have programs for them, Wallace said.

"Here at the public institution of higher education there is nothing. Basicly, public higher education in Massachusetts has really closed its doors to the 50 percent of single mothers who are living below the poverty line," she said.

Kathy Whipple, a re-entry woman who is graduating this year, described the difficulties of going to school and raising a family at the same time.

"I'm caught in the middle all the time. I wish I could enjoy [school] more," she said.

Arlene Avakian, an associate professor of women's studies at UMass, asked the audience to break through the smog and look at the possibilities.

"Sometimes when you're in something, you can't see what else can be. You think this is the way things are; this is the way they've always been," she said.

As an example of what could be, Avakian described an live-in academic program that took place during intersession in Mackimmie Residence Hall in the '70s.

The program was representative of several ideas, said Avakian.

It showed the university had money to hire staff, students did not have to work, tuition was reasonable so they could afford the extra money to take classes in January, she said.

She also said students and staff lived together and as a result a connection was made between living and learning that doesn't exist today.

When Henry Koffler became chancellor in 1979 budget cuts were becoming a popular way to deal with financial problems. He ended the program, Avakian said.

"Higher education has been increasingly used by low income women as the means to improve their lives and the lives of their families ... Access to higher education is the key for women to achieve self-sufficiency."

"The enrichment of student life was cut back to where it is now. I think it changed the nature of the campus enormously. It changed the nature of how we think about education and what education is all about. I think that that is a great loss," she said.

Karen Lederer, an advisor in the Women's Studies Department who graduated from UMass in 1981, spoke about the importance of programs that combine living and learning skills.

Lederer participated in the Inquiry Program during her first two years here. The program was similar to the one described by Avakian.

The program provided Lederer with advising, referrals, intellectual guidance and the stimulation she needed to graduate, she said.

"The program gave me the intellectual tools to analyze and understand my position in the larger society. That was the power of living-learning programs. They intertwined the personal with critical thinking skills," she said.

The Inquiry Program still exists, but due to budget cuts it has no staff or students, Lederer said.

Budget cuts and tuition hikes have made it much more difficult for members of the working class, non-traditional students and welfare recipients to attend UMass.

Programs, like Inquiry, are the type of programs students on welfare and returning women need to make it easier, Lederer said.

Panelists urged students to demand better programs and resources that would make it easier for them to get an education.

"I think students can be a very powerful force," said Avakian. For example, a few years ago students succeeded in stopping a tuition raise, she said.

JEFF DUCHARME/COLLEGIAN

Arlene Avakian and Ann Ferguson of the Woman's Studies Department discuss the effects of budget cuts on low income women.

WOMEN making WAVES

Program helps woman's business

A new pilot program started in October at Northeastern University in Boston, called Women and Enterprise, has begun in order to help women of color learn how to manage and develop a successful business.

The program, two years in the making now, has been strengthened by substantial input from women business owners. It also enables women to gain an equal share of economic power.

Women and Enterprise is primarily for would-be and current women business owners and is one of the more comprehensive and affordable programs in the Boston area.

"Our programs respond to the new face of entrepreneurship: women, often home-based, often with no employees. Many want women counselors, mentors, instructors so they won't be ashamed of their gaps in business knowledge and skills or embarrassed if they leave a session to rush home to care for their kids," said Andrea Silbert, the group's full-time chief executive and confounder.

There are currently 7.7 million female-owned firms operating in the United States today and the start-up rate for women's enterprises is twice that of men's.

Five Boston women receive awards

Five city employees who have demonstrated leadership, initiative and dedication in serving the public, have been named to receive this years Henry Shattuck Public Service Awards.

The Shattuck Awards, first presented in 1985, are given annually by the Boston Municipal Research Bureau. The awards are named for Henry L. Shattuck, a lawyer, business man, state representative and city councilor who strove to ensure that public funds were accounted for and officials were held accountable for their actions.

The awards were presented on Oct. 25 to:

- Deborah Goddard, project director of Hope 6, a program to renovate public housing.
- Barbara Hamilton, executive assistant in the Parks and Recreation Department.
- Patricia McMahon, executive director of the Mayor's Youth Council.
- Marianne Regan, an executive assistant in the Office of Budget Management.
- Gladys Rodriguez, an emergency medical technician in the Department of Health and Hospitals.

If men lived in a woman's world

In an editorial in the Boston Globe Oct. 19, free-lance writer Linda Weltner wrote a column about what it would be like if men would spend one day in women's shoes.

Weltner said:

- Every time you read a paper or watch TV to find out what world leaders are doing, you see the names and faces of women.
- When you go to church, the top religious leaders—popes, bishops, ministers and rabbis—are women.

"I'd love to see men spend even one day in such a world, or just long enough for them to understand why I had to speak out even though The Times, which owns this newspaper, is on the hand that feeds me. I may not have power. I still have my voice," said Weltner.

"Every human being is your counterpart.
Every other human being possesses and embodies aspects of yourself: your dreams, your sorrows, your hope.
Therefore we are all quite alike; indeed at the core we all one, all lost — and found — in the same mysterious enterprise that is life.
Hold this in your heart as you go about your day, and the world will cease to be inhabited by strangers, and the burden of life itself will no longer be a process of loneliness."

—Daphne Rose Kingma

The true realistic woman of today

Oprah Winfrey, Hillary Clinton and Connie Chung.

These are all examples of the role models that the media has presented women today with. Television, magazines, tabloids (if you read them, I of course do not) all present the ideal women, the picture of perfection. She is beautiful, glamorous, thin, wealthy, and has a powerful man to match.

The question I have been considering lately, however, is why does society seem to focus more on the women's image than her actual accomplishments? How many times have we heard about Oprah's diets, Hillary's hairstyles ... Connie where are you?

The modern day women is supposed to be able to juggle a career, family and still remain fit, but are these ideals realistic?

"The question I have been considering lately however, is why does society seem to focus more on the women's image than her actual accomplishments?

How many times have we heard about Oprah's diets, Hillary's hairstyles...Connie where are you?

The modern day women is supposed to be able to juggle a career, and still remain fit, but are these ideals realistic?"

Do women today really need to know that people like Nikki Taylor can have twins and still fit into a size zero? I would have to say no to that question. What women today need are realistic role models that are not put on a pedestal by society or the media.

Average, everyday women who are just like the rest of us. People who wake up in the morning without their own personal chef or hairstylist. That lends me to the point of this whole editorial.

About a month ago I was on my way to Boston with my boyfriend and two friends. We had been seated on the train for about ten minutes when a few innocent looking individuals boarded the train. None of us took much notice to these people, mostly because we were too enthralled with the prospect of how much we were going to drink that night.

As the train began moving one of my friends pointed out a gathering of teens at one of the train stops.

She asked "why would anyone hang out at a train stop?" Well then that is when one of the innocent looking individuals piped up. She began talking about where she hung out when she was a kid and how some of the places were a lot weirder than train stations.

I was pretty surprised that this complete stranger would even take the time to talk to us. I am not very fond of talking to random people on trains so I kind of hung back and just took everything in.

After awhile of reminiscing about her childhood one of my friends asked her where she was coming from. The woman who looked as though she might have just jumped off a Harley or out of a barroom began to tell us. (I wasn't paying attention remember) about how she had just returned from a rock climbing group.

She seemed as though she was just waiting to tell someone, anyone who would listen all about her adventures and her new found freedom. She was a 40 year-old woman who had just begun to live. As she sat there talking to a group a perfect strangers with her fingers full of climbing tape and shoes strapped to her back, she seemed invigorated.

She told us of her first climbing experience and how she never thought for a minute she would make it, but once she did she has never turned back. Instead of sitting in the house struggling with Cindy Crawford's workout video, she was out there doing it herself.

When she reached her stop she made one final attempt to reassure us youngsters that it's never too late, and judging from her whole disposition, I could tell it never is.

To me she was an inspiration. A modern day role model from someone who wasn't glamorous or even successful, but was out there doing what she wanted, pushing the limits in her own life. She was a women living her lifeto the fullest. Not to say that for a few minutes I wouldn't want to be Cher in my 40s, but I think the healthy approach the woman we met on the train held was realistic.

Michelle Hillman is a Collegian Staff Member

Dr. Love discusses breast cancer issues

Lectures on the risks, preventions, treatments & outcomes

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Dr. Susan Love, author of Dr. Susan Love's Breast Book, spoke about "Breast Cancer: Risks, Prevention, Treatment and Outcome" to a full audience in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College last Friday night.

While the cause of Breast Cancer is unknown, clues to its cause do exist, Love said.

"All cancer is genetic. It's all screwed up genes. Sometimes you inherit the screwed up genes. Sometimes you inherit normal genes and something comes along in the environment that screws up the gene," she said.

Researchers are trying to find the answers to two key questions, "What are the screwed up genes and what is screwing them up?" Love said.

Most inherited cancers work by what is called the Two Hit Theory. If a woman inherits the BRCA1 (Breast Cancer 1) gene, she has an 80 percent chance of getting something else from the environment that will activate the second mutation necessary to develop cancer, Love said.

A blood test to check for the BRCA1 gene will be available within a year, but Love warned women against getting tested until safeguards are in place. "If you get tested (now) for it, you probably will never get health insurance in this country again," she said.

It is a common misconception that younger women are more at risk than older women, said Love. It is the other way around. Women over 50 are the ones who should be getting mamagrams.

Mamagrams are less accurate in women under 35 because young breast tissue and cancer tissue are both white. Doctors can't tell the difference between the different tissues. It is only when women are older that their breasts begin to change and the breast tissue becomes grey that doctors can detect cancer.

The other major factor in the development of breast cancer is hormones, said Love. Women who menstruate early and go through menopause late are at a higher risk for cancer. Women who go through menopause early and do not take hormone replacements can reduce their risk of getting cancer.

Turn to LOVE, page 7

The Collegian's Women's Issues Editors, Aimee Schwartz and Laura Schmidt, cordially invited all those interested in writing for women's issues to stop by the newsroom anytime or call 545-1762.

Any and all ideas are welcome, including stories, features, poetry and editorials.

We look forward to meeting you!
The Collegian is located at 113 Campus Center Basement

Arts & Living

Highlights from Noho Film Fest

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON FILM FESTIVAL
Northampton
Nov. 3–5

Various movie screens around Northampton displayed the work of both national and local independent filmmakers at the first annual Northampton Film Festival this past weekend.

The fact that festival organizers Howard Polonski and Dee DeGeiso are calling it "first annual," coupled with the favorable turnout is indicative of good things to come in the future.

The festival opened Friday night with a reception at the Words & Pictures Museum. A buffet adorned with popular dishes from local restaurants was provided for the filmmakers who mingled with the most devoted of movie buffs.

Following the reception, the Academy of Music hosted a presentation by Frederick Marx, one of the creators of Hoop Dreams. Marx told the story of how he and the other Hoop Dreams collaborators, Steve James and Peter Gilbert started the project on a $2,500 budget, with the intention of making it a half–hour educational documentary for PBS.

Marx explained that with all of the juicy footage they were blessed with on a matter of weeks, they did not want to stop shooting. Given their financial situation they couldn't stop shooting — their costs were taken care of while filming, but once they finished they would need outside funding. Fortunately for audiences who so extensively enjoyed Hoop Dreams, they didn't stop for over five years, and the documentary followed the stories of hoop dreamers William Gates and Arthur Agee throughout their high school careers.

Marx did wind up filming an educational movie for PBS in the middle of making Hoop Dreams, called Higher Goals — an Emmy nominated film for children about staying in school and putting professional basketball aspirations in perspective. Higher Goals was screened, along with out– takes from Hoop Dreams, all tied together by Marx's speech.

On Saturday morning, a seminar on legal and business issues in film production and distribution was presented by the Massachusetts Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts. The rest of Saturday's program was comprised of film screenings, including David Sutherland's Out of Sight — the story of a blind cowgirl, who is an independent woman breaking stereotypes of being blind or female.

Vince Fago, animator of one of the first feature–length animated films, Mr. Bug Goes to Town, spoke and presented the film on Saturday night. Fago explained how the early animation was done, and spoke about his career, which includes animation of Betty Boop and Popeye.

Don Was' documentary about Beach Boy Brian Wilson, I Just Wasn't Made for These Times, was also presented on Saturday night. The moving story about Wilson's life juxtaposed his battles in drug abuse and troubled relationships with his sixties–icon fame and successful career as a songwriter.

On Sunday morning, Spoleto hosted a brunch with special guest Ken Burns. Burns, the award–winning documentary filmmaker of The Civil War and the PBS series, Baseball, held a question and answer session about his career and his documentaries.

Sunday's selection of films included those by invited filmmakers. Buddy Squires' documentary, Listening to Children: A Moral Journey with Robert Coles, described social psychologist Coles' case studies of children and the environments they grow up in.

With such a wide variety of films featured and excellent presentations by distinguished guests, the first annual Film Festival will no doubt become a welcome addition to the Fall festivities in Northampton for years to come.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Michelle LaCourse performs tonight at Bezanson

Viola enthusiasts in for a special treat

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Viola enthusiasts, take note: a special concert of works for the viola will be performed tonight at Bezanson Hall. The concert begins at 8 p.m. and features Michelle LaCourse and pianist Nadine Shank.

The program will include works by contemporary composers, rather than the traditionally oriented musical fare. Shostakovich's "Sonata" and Hindemith's "Solo Sonata, Op.1 25, No.1" will be included in tonight's concert, along with Persichetti's "Infanta Marina."

Both LaCourse and Shank are members of the University of Massachusetts–Amherst's Department of Music and Dance Faculty. Shank has accompanied many musicians, ranging from clarinetists to violinists.

LaCourse attended the prestigious Interlochen Arts Academy as well as Northwestern University and the Peabody Conservatory of Music. She has performed extensively as a soloist and chamber musician throughout the United States and Europe. Venues include the Kennedy Center (Washington D.C), Kanimermusiksaal in Berlin, the Musikverein (Vienna) and the Royal Palace in Monaco.

Previously, LaCourse has been a faculty member the Temple University, Swarthmore College, the Baltimore School for the Arts and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Tickets to the concert are $2.50 for students, children and senior citizens and $5 for general public. UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the door on the evening of the concert. Please call 545–2511 for more information.

Mohawk singers set to perform

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The Awesasne Mohawk Singers

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Augusta Savage Gallery will continue its 25th Anniversary celebration with a special performance by The Akwesasne Mohawk Singers tonight at 7 p.m..

The Akwesasne (pronounced Aqua–zahss–nee) are among the foremost performers of Native American traditions in North America today. Their stories and myths tell the origin of the Iroquots, the unity of the people, female life forms and the exploits of the animals.

The Singers perform in ribbon shirts, sashes and jewelry and will often appear in full Mohawk dress. They use the water drum, cowhorn rattles and other traditional instruments to accompany their performances. Wampum belts and other cultural artifacts are used to help the audience understand the Mohawk culture.

Dances performed by the Akwesasne include stomp, round, women's and couples' dances, all performed to the accompanying songs. All of the social dances can be performed for both native and non–native audiences. However, ceremonial songs are only sung within the native community.

Currently residing on ancestral land along the St. Lawrence River where upstate New York meets southern Ontario and Quebec, the group has entertained and delighted audiences in such varied locations as the Carnegie Hall, the Smithsonian Festival of American Folklife as well as the Canadian Museum of Civilization.

The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House in the Central Residential Area. The performance is free and open to the public. For more information, call 545– 5177.

John Doe to do his thing at the Iron Horse

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

The Iron Horse Music Hall continues its string of top notch shows with a performance by the John Doe Thing tonight.

A legend of sorts, John Doe took part in arguably Los Angeles' greatest punk export, X. Fronting a scene in the mid to late '70s with bands like the Germs, the Weirdos and the Motels, X defined the Do–it–Yourself ideology with a highly evolved sound (ranging from rockabilly, country and good ol' rock and roll) that did without the punk rock shtick of staying "indie."

While the current punk phenomenon has had little trickling down effect on the band, X is still going on strong in '95. Bassist/vocalist Doe has even seen some recognized influence from fellow L.A. scenesters like the Minutemen, Red Hot Chili Peppers and Jane's Addiction.

On hiatus from X, Doe's first solo outing, Meet John Doe (Geffen) released in 1990, was a roots rock album that contained strong material yet considered a debacle by many.

The follow–up and latest record, Kissingsohard (Forward), continues the showcase of Doe's songwriting prowess and poetic sophistication, yet makes itself quite clear that the John Doe Thing is indeed a band. With Smokey Hormel (The Blasters) on guitar, Brad Houser (Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians) on bass and Joey Waronker (Beck and Walt Mink) in support, Kissingsohard covers Doe's country folk and hard rock sides on a more band oriented level, rather than having it be a singer/songwriter showcase.

With over 15 years of road experience and a new band in tow, John Doe should have no trouble turning in a solid performance without regurgitating his glorious past.

COURTESY VIGGO MORTENSEN

John Doe brings solo act to Iron Horse tonight

The John Doe Thing plays the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight. Show starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance and are available at the Northampton Box Office. Call the club for more information.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

COLLEGE INTERNSHIP
FOR URBAN MUSIC

Learn about the music business before you graduate.

As one of the nation's most dynamic distributor's of urban music, BMG Distribution (RCA, Arista Records, Jive) is experiencing remarkable growth. This is why we are seeking full-time college students to join our nationwide alternative Marketing program before they graduate.

We are a company that reaches out to get the best involved students in its business before they graduate. That's the whole thinking behind BMG Distribution's nationwide alternative Marketing program. BMG Music makes sure the doors remain open once inside.

This two-year internship involves creating retail promotions for Urban Music throughout Boston. We're seeking a dynamic, full-time college Sophomore or Junior who know they want a career in the music industry and know what are the hottest trends in music today...from Rap and Hip Hop to R&B. You must also have a car and receive a BA at time of graduation.

This position features 20 hour work weeks, $5.00 hourly pay rates, $220 monthly expense reimbursement and the opportunity to demonstrate what you can do. For immediate consideration, send your resume to: BMG Music, Debra Bloom, 1540 Broadway, 38th Fl., NY, NY 10036, or Fax: 212-930-4862. We are an equal opportunity employer.

BMG ENTERTAINMENT

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

Lark Quartet entertained Bowker

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

THE LARK QUARTET
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 5

Bowker Auditorium came alive Sunday evening as a capacity audience united in welcoming the Lark Quartet back to the University of Massachusetts.

The Lark Quartet was invited to help the Fine Arts Center celebrate their 25th anniversary. The highlight of the event was the world premiere of a FAC commissioned piece by Bulgarian prodigy Penka Kouneva.

The piece, entitled "String Quartet," consisted of three movements, each representing a different mood and feeling. The first movement, "Fiddlers," was a mixture of fast– moving and turbulent themes, but also included an element of softer, more sonorous elements. The second, "Nestinarki," was a powerful and vivid movement based on an ancient rite in South–Eastern Europe in which men and women dance barefoot over burning embers. The pitch increased to quite literally the breaking point, climaxing in dramatic style as a string broke. The final movement, "Incantation," was based around a single melodic drone; this movement has its origins in ancient folk practices and was an eclectic mix of old and new.

The quartet not only interpreted contemporary works, but also performed Borodin's "String Quartet No. 2 in D," a more classical piece. Frederick Tillis, FAC director, also premiered a piece, "Spiritual Fantasy No. 12." This song was used as the platform–piece for the start of the concert, introducing each musician's talents and allowing the audience to experience a whole range of musical expertise.

The music was of the highest calibre and the performers proved themselves a part of the new breed, traversing old distinctions that have previously placed barriers between old and new. Quartets such as the Lark will ensure chamber music has a safe transit into the 21st century, rather than relegation into the trash–can of history, and it for that we doubly applaud them.

Counting your pennies at Pearl St.

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Correspondent

Here they come, just in time to provide you with that hardcore–punk mix you've all been craving. Pennywise storm Northampton's Pearl Street tonight with The Joykiller and The Marshes. Pennywise play high–tempo, fast paced South California Punk that we've all come to know and love.

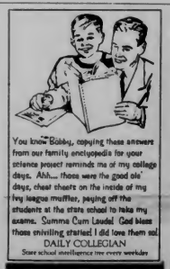
Pennywise, who started their career in the mid–'80s, were quickly embraced by the skate and snowboarding communities. The band first received recognition when their songs made frequent appearances on skate boarding and surfing videos. Coming off harder and faster then most of the more pop–influenced punk, their third album, Unknown Road, was Epitaph's best–selling album until The Offspring and Rancid exploded.

Continuing their recipe for success Pennywise's fourth and most recent album About Time was the first album on an independent label to debut in the Billboards' Top 100. Furthermore on the fourth album, Pennywise began to shed some of the Bad Religion comparisons that have dogged them throughout most of their career. Pennywise's urgent, energetic music combined with Jim's unique vocals separate them from the rest of the bands that simply copy Green Day and the Descendants.

Despite Pennywise's success, they have stayed true to their roots. They still play all–ages shows, their t–shirts are reasonably priced and most importantly they're still there for the kids. Not only are Fletcher, Jim, Jason and Byron often seen talking to kids before and after the shows (occasionally sneaking some in) they are inside protecting the kids from bouncers as they play. Pennywise are some of the most sincere, approachable and nice people ever. They also encourage kids to interview them for 'zines.

Epitaph labelmates, The Joykiller, who feature Jack Grisham the ex–lead singer of punk legends T.S.O.L. and The Marshes open the show.

Pennywise, The Joykiller and The Marshes perform an all– ages show at Pearl Street tonight at 7:30 p.m.. Tickets are available at the Northampton Box Office. Call Pearl Street at 584–7771 for more information.



You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my fey league mudflap, jeaping off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laudel. God bless those enlisting stories! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
Store school intelligence tire every weekday

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, as a covered benefit if you are a student plan member
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS
4. We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you, free postage for normal delivery
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

University Health Services
549-2671 X244

Grifting like the wind

COURTESY DANIEL BALL

Sub Pop recording artists, The Grifters will share the stage with Red Red Meat and Rex tonight at the Iron Horse. Show is all ages and doors open at 10 p.m.. Call the club for more details.

Browns move to Baltimore in 96

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Eleven years of broken promises and near misses ended today when Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell said he's moving the franchise to Baltimore next season.

The Browns, who joined the NFL in 1950, plan to play at Memorial Stadium for two years starting in 1996 before moving to a new stadium next to Oriole Park in downtown Baltimore.

"The Browns are indeed coming to Baltimore!" Maryland Gov. Parris Glendening said holding up a document during a news conference on the site of the new 70,000–seat stadium. "I have a signed contract right here."

Modell, who on Sunday missed a Browns' home game for the first time in 35 years, said the Baltimore deal was too good to pass up. He acknowledged the decision was not easy.

"This has been a very, very tough road for my family and me," Modell said. "I leave my heart and part of my soul in Cleveland. But frankly, it came down to a simple proposition: I had no choice."

There are still several things that must occur before the Baltimore Browns become reality. NFL owners must approve the move, and several of Modell's peers said they would vote against it. Meanwhile, hours before the news conference, the city of Cleveland asked a county judge to block any such agreement. Such a move would be a violation of the team's lease with the city. Cleveland argued in a lawsuit filed in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court.

Maryland Stadium Authority head John Moag was also at the news conference. Moag and Modell hammered out the deal nearly two weeks earlier, according to a report in The (Baltimore) Sun. Baltimore has fought desperately for a NFL franchise since the Colts left in 1984.

St. Louis Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill took a tour of the city in 1987, then decided to move his team to Phoenix. Baltimore also courted owners of the Los Angeles Rams, Oakland Raiders, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Cincinnati Bengals with no success.

Baltimore also had a shot at landing an expansion team in 1993, but the NFL decided upon Jacksonville and Charlotte.

New TV package

NEW YORK — Baseball announced its new national television package today, a five–year deal that returns all postseason games to nationwide TV and guarantees each major league team more than $50 million.

The deals with NBC, Fox, ESPN and Liberty Media give teams about 85 percent of the national broadcasting revenue that was generated from 1990–93 under contracts with CBS and ESPN.

They replace The Baseball Network, a joint venture among the teams, ABC and NBC, and a deal with ESPN. Teams estimate they will receive slightly more than $7 million in national broadcasting money this year.

And they ensure all postseason games will be available to fans nationwide, scrapping the regionalized broadcasts that were heavily criticized last month.

NBC and ABC angrily pulled out of TBN last June. At the time, NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol said his network wouldn't televise baseball again until the next millennium, adding that baseball owners had dealt with his network and ABC unfairly. Baseball owners agreed to those deals in the spring of 1993 because they felt they would have a difficult time getting up–front fees following poor ratings under the CBS deal, which caused that network about $500 million in losses over four years.

But Fox's December 1993 deal with the NFL changed the marketplace. Acting commissioner Bud Selig waited until ABC's and NBC's exclusive negotiating period expired, hired veteran negotiator Barry Frank and then let Frank shape the deals during the past month.

Under the deals, Fox gets the World Series in 1996, 1998 and 2000, the All–Star game in 1997 and 1999, half the league championship series each year, shares the first round of the playoffs with NBC and ESPN and an exclusive Saturday game of the week during the season.

NBC gets the World Series in 1997 and 1999, the All–Star game in 1996, 1998 and 2000 and half the league championship series. ESPN continues it Wednesday night doubleheaders and exclusive Sunday night games, extending its deal one year through 2000. Liberty Media gets two nonexclusive games each week starting in 1997.

Strickland arrested

NEW YORK — Rod Strickland, the star guard of the Portland Trail Blazers, was arrested Monday for allegedly giving his former girlfriend a black eye last month at her Bronx home.

Accompanied by his attorney, Strickland surrendered at a police station where the ex–girlfriend, Judith Cruz, had filed a criminal complaint, police said.

Strickland, who used to play for the New York Knicks, was charged with misdemeanor assault and released, said detective Julio Martinez, a police spokesman. The player was ordered to return to Bronx Criminal Court. The date wasn't immediately available. Cruz told police that during an argument Strickland, 29, punched her in the face, bruising left her eye and temple, Martinez said. She made the complaint Oct. 2.

Strickland, whose team plays the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday, is starting his third year in Portland, where he has become one of the league's top point guards.

He has led the team in assists every year since joining the Blazers in 1992 and his scoring has increased the last three years. He averaged a career–high 18.9 points a game in 1994–95 with 8.8 assists.

Strickland was the focal point of many offseason trade rumors because of a feud with coach P.J. Carlesimo.

Strickland was a first–round draft pick of the Knicks in 1988. After two seasons in New York he was traded to San Antonio. He left the Spurs to sign a free agent contract with Portland.

■ basketball

continued from page10

to make their respective choices.

Mike Babul averaged 22.6 points per game his junior season, and at 6–foot–6, he will likely see the bulk of his time at small forward.

He lists his strengths as hitting the outside shot and beating his defender off the dribble, but he'd hopes to get a bit bigger.

"I'd like to put on some more muscle to help prepare myself for playing at the college level," he said.

Massachusetts has also received a verbal commitment from Winston Smith, who at 6–foot–5 can play small forward and off guard. The pair will be counted on to replace graduating seniors Dunta Bright and Dana Dingle.

Babul said that he and his brother both made their decisions early to avoid the pressures of deciding during their senior season.

"We wanted to get it out of the way," he said. "After a while all the coaches calling all the time gets to be a pain."

Babul said that his primary reason for choosing Massachusetts was that everyone made him feel at ease and that he could contribute to the team.

"I felt really comfortable with the players and coaches," he said. "I feel I have a great opportunity to do something there."

■ Love

continued from page 5

cer.

Prevention

Exercise, diet and living choices have a lot to do with the prevention of cancer, said Love.

"It's been shown that if you exercise more than three times a week, you reduce the risk of Breast Cancer by 30 percent," she said.

Originally, doctors thought having a diet low in fat reduced a woman's risk of Breast Cancer. It may not be fat, said Love. According to a study of Japanese women, it may be the presence of soy protein that reduces the risk of Breast Cancer.

Too much alcohol can increase a woman's risk of Breast Cancer. Love suggests no more than three drinks a week.

Avoiding extra radiation and carsinigents will lower a woman's risk of Breast Cancer, said Love.

Some women choose to have their breast removed to avoid Breast Cancer. This is not a good option, said Love.

Doctors "can't tell where the breast tissue is because it is emersed in fat. It's hard to tell where the breast tissue begins and ends. We never get all of the breast tissue out when we do a mastectomy. Removing 95 percent of the tissue does not remove 95 percent of the risk. Whatever breast tissue you have is acted on by whatever the carsinigents are that cause cancer. So you can have your breast removed and still end up getting Breast Cancer," she said.

Love does not suggest strictly following these prevention tips. "Live life a little bit," she said, "Eighty percent of Breast Cancer patients did everything right and still got it."

Treatment

By the time a woman can feel a lump in her breast, the cancer has been there for eight to ten years. This is why the old method of rushing to surgery to remove the cancer before it spreads does not work.

A diagnosis of Breast Cancer is not an emergency. Women have time to decide what course of action is best for them. Love encouraged women with Breast Cancer to communicate with their doctors and to ask questions.

The treatment for Breast Cancer is determined by the advancement of it in the body. Breast conservation is now the preferred treatment for Breast Cancer, said Love. If a breast does need to be removed, reconstructive surgery can be done directly after the mastectomy during the same surgical procedure.

Outcome

Sometimes patients receive treatments, do well and then ten years later the cancer comes back. "What were those cells doing for ten years? What caused them to be dormant for that time? What caused them to be active again? Love asked these questions and then added, "The future is not in killing the cells, it is in controlling them."

Advances in the treatment of Breast Cancer have improved the quality of women's lives, but a lot more research needs to be done before a cure is found, said Love.

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2–27
Three credits

Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27–January 27
Up to six credits

January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico

To learn more about these programs, visit our table in the Campus Center Concourse on Tuesday, November 7, 10:30am–2:30pm,

or call 617 287-7915.

Division of Continuing Education

UMass Boston

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED.
CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

Voted BEST in the Valley
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR ROUND

Auto Glass Center
America's Choice
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
75 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-2880

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Miscellaneous
Announcements	Motorcycles
Apartment For Rent	Personals
Auto For Sale	Room For Rent
Employment	Room Wanted
Entertainment	Roommate Wanted
For Sale	Services
Found (2 days Free)	Summer Sublet
Happy Birthday	To Sublet
Houses For Rent	Travel
Instruction	Transportation
Lost	Wanted to Rent
Musicians	Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to send wishes to all of its new sisters with November birthdays: Amy S. Melissa T. Kim and Amy D.!

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Chevy Blazer Good condition. New engine. $2200 obo. 549-0805.

'86 SUBARU 4 wheel drive, power windows. Brand new brakes, water pump and muffler. $1,750 or b.o. Call 367-9109.

87 Plymouth Reliant Replaced engine, new brakes, needs some work. $1900 or b/o. Bill 548-0833

EMPLOYMENT

Cash part time business No selling. Earn $2,500 - mo $37,000.00 Call 941-766-9001

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 10. $'OO Ca. Anne 545-5803. 256-6269

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ + free travel. Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii! Seasonal/permanent, no experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext.C1040

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-709-8142. (PIN 3172)

Interesting part-time receptionist assignments to edit text data on a variety research topics. Assaultery no selling involved. Computer typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-8pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.75/h with paid training and earn up to $7.80/h. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri. 413-586-8635. ABT Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mt Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

Looking for Adventure Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expenses paid travel. Fax resume to (617) 236-4113. Ann Tricia or call (800) 783-4237 x 336.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal, full-time employment available at national parks, forests, & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 ext N5001

We want you! Unique liquor related product. Retails for $280. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit = $37,400 first year! 941-766-9001

$35,000/yr income potential. Reading books. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext. R-1720 for details.

FOR RENT

Main St. 4 bdrm house on bus route. Starts 11/1/95. Call 253-0280.

Brother correctronic 140 typewriter. 5 thousand character storage memory. Almost new! Best offer. Call 545-3904.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263.

PERSONALS

Robbit Have a happy Tuesday. Pooh-
Marla Shake Your Rumpa!!

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Spring semester roommate wanted. M/F. On bus route. Close to campus. Call 549-8513.

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 546-1754.

Foreign Students ON-1 greencard program available 1-800-880-7167.

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-2771.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

TRAVEL

"Free Travel! Spring Break '96" Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group/Travel free. Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710.

Winter Break Special! Ellington week $288 interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED

Really want a guinea pig from a good home. Please call 253-1978.

Wanted!!! individuals, student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS. Call inter-campus programs 1-800-327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Wanted 100 students to lose 8-100 pounds. Call (303) 572-7975.

Opinionated? People tell you to mind your own business? Can't help but have a view about everything?

Then come submit your thoughts to the Editorial/Opinion Desk

Contact Carl Sahn 113 Campus Center 545-3500

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

edited by Trude Michael Jaffe

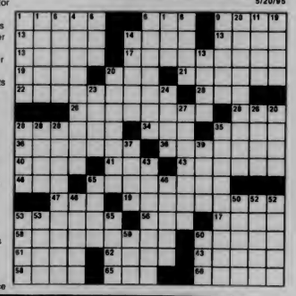
ACROSS
1 — Flow, Scotland
6 Snakelike swimmer
9 Sporting event
13 Put a — stop
14 Mk. enclosure
15 Dirty Harry, to Eastwood
16 Family of violin makers
17 Soon
19 Ger. car
20 Churn
21 Darrow defendant
22 Cook's mitt
25 Oklahoma native
26 Follower of a Swiss theologian
28 D.C. body
31 Poplars
34 Bio. or chem.
35 Victim
36 Hangouts for family skeletons?
38 Like the Monitor
40 Spouse
41 Dawn goddess
43 Morning prayer
44 Decrease
45 Hidden danger
47 Part of IOU
49 Type of fishnets
53 Actress Talia and others
56 Left eyes, in prescrips.
57 Centennial st.
58 Heavenly
60 Picabo Street
61 Exploits
62 Away from the wind
63 Do a hitch
64 Tailor's tuck
65 Turf
66 See 31 Across

DOWN
1 Scalawag
2 Brief appearance
3 Separate
4 Smearcase
5 Cuckoo
6 Lobe ornaments
7 Opp. of WNW
8 Minus
9 Whether —
10 Mixture
11 Palindromic magazine
12 Wellington adversary and family
14 Mining nails
18 Concern for Clinton: Abbr.
20 — of paris
23 Author Jewett's middle name
24 Costa —
27 Atmospheric phenomenon
29 Perceived
30 Nicknames for Pollier and Greenstreet
31 Zenith
32 Large piece of cheese
33 Literary hack's effort
35 Cooking dregs: Var.
37 Sudsy stuff
39 Bull or buck
42 Billed and cooed
45 Golf gadgets
46 N.J. town on the Hudson
48 Take by force
50 Bete —
51 Student, in Sedan
52 Roses, another way
53 Slight sudden shower
54 "For — jolly..."
55 R.R. stops
59 Workers' org.
60 Fast flier

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	A	L	F		P	E	T	A	L		A	V	O	W
E	M	I	R		R	E	A	D	E		P	A	G	E
A	U	D	I	T	O	R	I	U	M		E	U	R	E
P	R	O	D	I	G	Y		E	M	E	N	D	E	D
			G	A	R			O	R	N	E
T	E	H	E	R	A	N		E	N	D	I	V	E	S
A	L	I		A	M	E	N	T		A	N	I	M	A
L	I	P	S		S	I	E	N	A		E	L	M	O
I	T	E	R		S	C	U	T	E		S	L	Y	N
S	T	O	R	A	G	E		S	A	M	E	S	E
			D	I	V	A			E	R	A
C	A	R	P	E	T	S		G	N	A	R	L	E	D
A	L	O	P		O	P	E	R	A	H	O	U	S	E
D	I	M	E		R	E	M	I	T		O	L	P	E
I	T	E	R		S	C	U	T	E		N	U	Y	S

5/20/95



Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 – Feb. 19) You are a person deeply torn between love and lust. Figure it out before it's too late and you become another statistic or worse — married. Life is a highway, ride it all night long.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) Indecisive yet methodical, you have to work it to be on top [in all aspects of your life baby]. Don't back down, but don't forget how it could be in your head, but that's doubtful.

PISCES (Feb. 19 –Mar. 20) When you swim with the big fish remember that sometimes people don't choose the Ziploc bag and the piranhas get loose. Watch your dorsal fin and everything will be quick.

ARIES (Mar. 21 – Apr. 19) Strong and impetuous, you have to learn to tone it down. However, because you are strong and impetuous you will ignore this and do what ever you damn well please. Bravo, because life isn't run by horoscopes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 – May 20) Ever wonder why you're sign is that of a bull? Maybe it describes your head or maybe you method of preserving the truth. Either way, if you stick to the facts, lies sound even better.

GEMINI (May 21 – Jun. 22) You will go to an educational experience although you won't realize it until you get there. What are you waiting for– hurry up and get married!

CANCER (Jun. 21 – Jul. 22) You dear crustacean are a control freak, but every once in a while it's nice to hand over the reins to someone else. To yield to a better is not a sign of weakness but the ability to tell when you've over your head.

LEO (Jul. 23– Aug. 22) Did you know that your best bet for a good relationship is that with a Ram? Seek out a person under the sun and be sure they're wearing red. Roar. Simba. Mufasa is listening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) You are a neat freak and a constant worrier. Usually very decisive, how can you make a decision if you don't decide what stance to take? Can you really afford to lose the love of your life? Oh, and go easy on the cash. Money only grows on trees on your home planet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) Your love planet is Venus, but that doesn't matter because this isn't about love, but life. Be yourself and save the false pretenses for someone willing to get snowed. Wear something sexy and get arrested for indecent exposure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) So what went wrong? You made a decision and now you're totally suffering from its consequences. Never despair, as long as you stand by your choice nothing can go wrong. Arrest a Libra.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 –Dec. 21) You are used to getting your way and liking it. People are in awe of your imposing self and bow to your superior knowledge. However watch out because "my how the mighty have fallen" could apply to you — over confident. Remember the little people.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

- OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
- FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
- INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
- PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

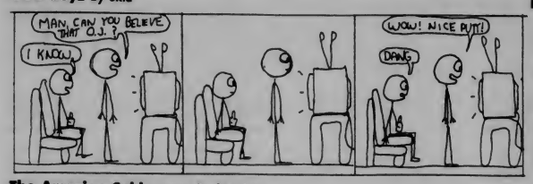
Shop Reg. #RS1212

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

308 Boyz By Skid



Lost Horizons By Douglas Celleneri

YOU USED TO DATE AN OLD PERSON?
NO...NO...SHE WAS A GIRL I DATED A LONG TIME AGO.
A LONG TIME AGO? YOU'RE ONLY 25.
YEA, BUT MY GOOD TOE DAYS ARE LONG GONE.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

MMMMM, THIS JACUZZI IS HEAVEN. CAN'T WAIT TILL PETER GETS BACK!
IF I KEEP MJ WAITING TOO LONG SHE'LL GET SUSPICIOUS!
SO I'VE ONLY GOT MINUTES TO RESCUE SANDRA STEWART!

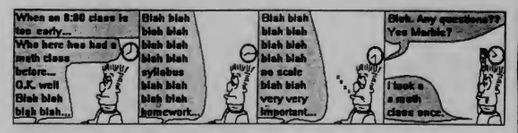
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

HIYA JANE... I'VE BEEN WAITIN' FOR YA!
BRING YOUR CUTE LITTLE SELF OVER HERE AND...
SHOW ME WHAT YOU GOT!
HMM?
DRAMA?! WHY DID I TELL YOU ABOUT YOU SMILING ME UP TO!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Random Acts By Jeffery Durand



When an 8:30 class is too early... Who here has had a math class before... O.K. well Blah blah blah blah...
Blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah homework...
Blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah so scalc blah blah very very important...
Blah. Any questions?? Yes Merkle?
I took a math class once.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Celleneri

THE CATAGORY IS POLITICS — WHAT DO THE NAMES, MONDALE, FERRARO AND BENTSEN ALL HAVE IN COMMON?
UM... I'D GUESS FAILURE TO MOTIVATE THE PEOPLE, REVIVE A DEAD POLITICAL PARTY, INSPIRE HOPE AND LAUGHING BY PARTICIPATED IN SOME OF THE GREATEST DEFEATS IN ELECTION HISTORY! HA, HA! HA! HA!
INSECTS, WEEDS AND REPUBLICANS SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH
SOCIALIST. GIMME A HEDGE

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Remember how your second grade teacher seemed smarter to you than your first grade teacher?

And how proud you were because you were smarter too!

And when you first sat there in your high school on opening day the teachers seemed like geniuses.

Well, I had a second grade teacher who later became my high school teacher, and she was smarter... no kidding!

How did she get smarter?

You think that's weird?

My dumb parents are getting smarter!

But this is not a Star Trek movie.... no, ... I've been watching my dog and he's not getting smarter.... he's still eating food off the floor.

I stopped that years ago!

Close to Home By John McPherson

Fortunately, Ken was wearing his artificial tear-away legs.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacLean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... Kathryn Gracia
..... Marc Dionne
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Mac & Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Tri Bean Cass.
Mac & Cheese

DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Baked Ham
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Cauliflower Cass.

Wednesday

LUNCH
Beef Stew
Chick. Cutlet Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Skillet
Chick. Cutlet Sand.

DINNER
Chicken Wings
Baked Ziti
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
Baked Ziti

Thursday

LUNCH
Pizza
Reuben Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Pizza
Vegan Burger

DINNER
Roast Beef
Fired Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Carrot Onion Schine
Fried Shrimp

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that You Have Bad Hygiene

10. When you actually do shower, you lose anywhere between 5 and 10 pounds.
9. Your roommate keeps offering you soap.
8. The last time you went to the beach? An environmental disaster rivaled only by the Valdez oil spill.
7. Your nick name is "pig pen."
6. Your breath can liquify tempered steel.
5. You've noticed that flies tend to keep their distance from you.
4. People often use the word "moss" when describing your hair.
3. You're still wondering what those rolls of white paper in the bathroom are for.
2. About once a week you brush your tooth.
1. Not even dogs will sniff your ass.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Herron • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Learn About Ways to Study or Visit in Israel

Hebrew University
An Official Representative from Hebrew U. will share about its programs.

- Volunteers for Israel
- Project Otzma
- Livnot U'lehibanot
- Kibbutz Programs

Hear about these programs from past participants!

Wednesday, November 8
7:00 pm
Hillel House
N. Pleasant St. Amherst

Sponsored By Interfaith Pilgrimage & UMASS Hillel

Surviving the Holidays:

Two support Groups Offered by the Mental Health Division of the University Health Services.

Eating, Body Image, and the Holidays
This is a 4 session group meets
Mondays 12:30 - 2:00 PM
November 13, 20, 27 & December 4
Meetings will be held in the Campus Center.
Family problems, numerous food centered events, expectations to "look good" and feel joyful all contribute to the pressures many feel at this time of year. If you find that negative feelings about food and body image intensify around the holidays, this as a group where you can share your concerns and learn some coping strategies.

Which Home For The Holidays?
This 4 session support group meets
Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 PM
November 15, 29 & December 6, 13
This group for students from divorced of separated families will examine coping strategies to deal with the particular stresses that occur at the holidays when families are no longer together. Attendance at all 4 sessions is expected.

Preregistration required for both groups.
To resister call 545-2337
8:00AM - 5:00 PM, Monday - Friday

LOOKING TO BUY OR SELL?
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK
113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
545-3500

Quote of the Day

"Never play leap frog with a unicorn"

–Unknown

Sports

Men's water polo wins third Eastern Championship

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Tournament MVP, Luis Limardo scored 10 goals in three games to lead the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team to their third straight Eastern Championship.

"This is a significant accomplishment," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth who earned his second Coach of the Year Award in three years. "One [championship] is great. Two means you're good. Three means ... hey, these kids have done something. For the seniors, and the kids that have been in the program, this is a tremendous accomplishment."

Limardo, the team's scoring leader for most of the season and multiple career record holder, was quick to pass around the accolades.

"You win the MVP because you have a great team," said senior co-captain Limardo. "This was a great year for us; we played harder than we've ever played before."

Along with Limardo, seniors Alex Mujica, co-captain John Luviano, and freshman Brian Stahl earned All-Tournament first team honors. Junior Ron Gonen made the third team.

With the victory in the Eastern Championships, the Minutemen will head to Palo Alto, CA with the fourth seed in the NCAA tournament hosted by Stanford on Dec. 1-3.

The Minutemen jumped all over Richmond in their first round match, winning a 16-5 decision over the sixth seed.

Limardo scored five goals in the tournament opener, but Stahl stole the show with a spectacular seven point (1 goal, 2 two-point goals, and 2 assists) effort. Mujica made seven saves in the first half, while Paul Engin staved off a second half barrage making 14 saves.

After its first round defeat of Richmond, UMass geared up for its biggest contest of the season, a second round showdown with Navy.

"This was probably as complete a game as I've seen UMass play in quite a while," Yarworth said. "We dominated right from the start."

The Minutemen scored the only goal of the first quarter, and by the end of the third quarter were up, 7-1. The Midshipmen managed to record three scores in the final period to one UMass tally, but Mujica stifled the Navy offense recording nine saves on 13 shots while posting two shutout quarters.

"Alex was a vacuum in the net the whole tournament," Yarworth said.

"I think Alex is the key to this team. If you talk to the coaches and the players, he should be the MVP," Limardo said.

Massachusetts' biggest moral victory of the season propelled them to a championship match-up with Queens College, a re-match of the North Division final.

Massachusetts jumped on top of Queens early, scoring four unanswered goals in the first period. The top two teams from the north battled for three quarters after that, but Queens couldn't mount a serious threat as the Minutemen coasted to a 12-7 victory and their third Eastern Championship in as many years.

Limardo and freshman Gabriel Marrero scored two goals apiece; Stahl recorded four points with a two-point goal and two assists while leading the Minutemen in scoring during the three-game tournament with 14 points.

Gonen handed out three of his team-leading eight tournament assists in the final.

Luviano scored a modest seven points (three goals, four assists) in the tournament, but led this team through the championships with his aggressiveness and tenacity while playing through a serious shoulder injury.

"He's gone from a no-play freshman to First Team All-East performer," raved an enthusiastic Yarworth. "He's a leader, someone everyone respects. He's tough, fast, physical. He knows the game. You need that kind of player on a team."

Amidst all the highly publicized, successful Division 1A programs at UMass like basketball, field hockey and soccer, and the press that college football gets now-a-days, Yarworth has quietly built one of the strongest, most consistent men's water polo teams in the country.

The Minutemen have won three straight Eastern Water Polo Association Championships, earning three consecutive NCAA tournament bids along with Yarworth's two Coach of the Year awards in relative anonymity.

Seniors Limardo, Luviano, Mujica and Frankie Mariani are leaving, but not before they lead a run toward the NCAA championship, and not before they are paid what is due them: three years worth of respect and acknowledgement for being one of the most successful organizations on campus.

"These guys do it with a lot of spirit, intensity and desire," Yarworth said.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Goalie Alex Mujica led the Massachusetts men's water polo team to its third Eastern Championship victory.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Senior Rachel LeDuc and the Massachusetts women's soccer team face the Harford Hawks in the first round of the NCAA Championships.

UMass makes NCAA's

Minutewomen will battle Hartford in first round match-up at Garber

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

It was selection Monday for the 180 Division I women's soccer teams across the country. Only 24 teams would be selected to take part in the NCAA Championships that will begin this weekend and the Massachusetts Minutewomen will be a part of the post-season festivities for the 12th time in 13 years.

UMass (13-3-2) will host a first round match-up at Garber Field against the University of Hartford Hawks (15-3-2) this Saturday Nov. 11 at 1 p.m..

"We worked really hard because we wanted the first NCAA game to be at home, that's our goal," sophomore defender Erica Iverson said after UMass' Atlantic 10 tournament victory over Xavier. The 6-0 drubbing of the Musketeers on Sunday solidified the first round date in the tournament to be held in Amherst.

"I'm just happy to be playing anybody at this point," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "I'm really excited that we are going to hold the game here."

These two teams have already tangled once this season, as they played to a scoreless tie at Hartford's Al-Marzook Field on Oct. 11th. This time there will be a winner, and which ever team emerges victorious will battle Connecticut in the Northeast Regional semifinals.

The Minutewomen and the Hawks had many common opponents over the course of the season. Each team played UConn, with Hartford battling to a 2-2 tie, while UMass fell 2-0 to the No. 1 seed in the Northeast.

"We worked really hard because we wanted the first NCAA game to be at home, that's our goal," sophomore defender Erica Iverson said.

Other common opponents included Dartmouth, George Washington, Cornell and Yale. UMass swept those four opponents and beat GW twice, while Hartford lost to Dartmouth in their encounter with the Big Green.

The difference in playing home or away however, probably came down to the opponents the two teams did not have in common. UMass downed tournament entry Texas A&M while Hartford fell to two California teams that got left out of the field, UC-Irvine and San Diego.

"It could have gone either way, it was a toss up," Hartford coach Austin Daniels said of who should have received the home field. "You could have flipped a coin to determine who got home field, we are that close. Of course we would of rather been home."

Playing Hartford at home has not been an advantage in recent history for UMass as the last three time the two have met on the campus at Amherst, the Minutewomen have failed to come away with a "W."

"We have had some success up there, but this is the NCAA tournament now," Daniels said of playing at UMass. "Although, we do feel comfortable playing on that field. We have had success there."

Both coaches look for another battle between the two regional powers.

"It's going to be a typical Hartford-UMass game," Rudy said. "I don't think there are going to be any surprises in this match."

"It going to be like Groundhog Day," Daniels said. "It's going to be the same thing all over again. It's going to be very exciting as always."

Minutewomen take Vermont

Women's swimming opens season by drilling Catamounts

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

In the first meet of the season, the Massachusetts Women's swimming team came away victorious this past Saturday with a win over Vermont.

The Minutewomen defeated the Catamounts of the Green Mountain State, by a score of 140-85.

Head coach for UMass Bob Newcomb was pleased with the team's performance in this, the first meet of the year.

"We had some very good races," said Newcomb. "All and all it was a good first meet. It also gave us a chance to find out the things we need to work on."

There was definitely some highlights in this past meet according to Newcomb. Junior Barbara Hickey swam strong in the 1000 yard freestyle to win the event in a time of 10:39.22.

"She swam that event seven seconds faster than her time last year, period," said Newcomb. "She is going to be a pretty big factor all year long."

Sophomore Irina Kossenko finished first in the 200 meter butterfly with a time of 2:13.41, and was a strong contributor in the Minutewomen victory.

"Her whole attitude is great this year, and the results are here so far," said Newcomb. "She is going to be a key in the program for us this year."

Sophomore Sarah Baker, who is one of UMass' strongest swimmers also swam well in the meet.

"I think she surprised herself how fast she swam this week," Newcomb said. "She's right there with the best of them."

The Minutewomen swam a strong meet, however Newcomb touched on a few keys that the swimmers need to do to prepare themselves for future contests.

"We had some very good races. All and all it was a good first meet. It also gave us a chance to find out the things we need to work on."
— Bob Newcomb

"The score was a little bit lopsided," Newcomb said. "We had some opportunities, but overall we finished well. We had three relay races where we won, but two of them were disqualified on because of false starts. Its nice to see that we're aggressive at the start, but we can't afford to have that continue in future meets."

Throughout the first meet, Newcomb felt his team was well prepared, but needs to work on staying relaxed before the race.

"I know it was the first meet, and it will take the swimmers a little time to get used to the format," said Newcomb. "It's a different environment, and the swimmers need to relax and concentrate on their individual races."

Angelique Rodriguez captured both the three meter and one meter diving events with scores of 209.50 and 224.35, respectively.

Krystin Carpenter also dove well this past weekend claiming second in the three meter behind her teammate, and third in the one meter.

"I was impressed with her improvement this year," said Newcomb. "She is going to help us out a lot this year."

The Minutewomen had a variety of swimmers who performed well this past weekend, helping out in the overall team victory.

"Jodi Walters, who has a great attitude, swam really fast for us, and Kerrin McCarthy went a little faster than she did at this time last year," said Newcomb.

"It's nice to win meets throughout the season, but we use these duel meets to prepare for the championship meets throughout the year," said Newcomb.

The Minutewomen will be back in action this Saturday at home, in Boyden Gymnasium, to take on Northeastern in the first meet at 1 p.m., with the Men to follow at 4 p.m..

UMass signs Babul

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

With his two current small forwards expected to graduate after this season, Massachusetts men's basketball coach John Calipari didn't have to look far to find one replacement.

Massachusetts received its third verbal commitment of the year from North Attleborough native Mike Babul on Sunday and it was officially announced at a press conference yesterday.

Babul was an interesting recruit because his brother Jon, although not quite as talented as Mike, was also a highly sought after player. Jon announced that he would attend Georgia Tech at the same press conference. Many people thought that the two players would be a "package deal" and attend the same school, but in the end the two decided to go in separate directions.

"It will be a little weird," said Mike Babul, "because we've been together our whole lives. We thought we'd look at schools together, and if we found one we both liked, we'd do it, but if we both liked different ones, we'd go in different directions."

He added that the two would begin a friendly rivalry when they attend this year's UMass-Georgia Tech matchup on Dec. 22 at the Meadowlands.

Both players turned down North Carolina and Clemson

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

MASSACHUSETTS
VS. DINAMO

Marcus Camby

7 P.M. • THE MULLINS CENTER

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 45 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, November 8, 1995

yeP! they're here ...
The local UMass pleasing, hippy, jam band takes on the Iron Horse tonight (See Arts & Living, page 6).

The cost of education...
Students voice their views on the availability of Financial Aid at UMass. (See Campus Perspectives, page 3)

Minutewomen in action tonight...
Senior Octavia Thomas and the women's basketball team return to action tonight in an exhibition game against Ska Samara. (See Sports, Page 12.

Extended Forecast
Bundle up boys and girls because the cold weather will continue. Today should be clearer than yesterday's wet mess, but the mercury will remain low heading into the weekend.

Sunday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 45 LOW: 32

Police trying to pinpoint motives behind shootings

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — What the police have is a brazen shooting in a crowded restaurant, four dead bodies and a father, a son, and a friend in custody. What they're trying to figure out is why.

A muddled Mafia picture — caused by the imprisonment or disappearance of some top crime figures in Boston — may or may not have led to the gunfire.

But "it probably was a personal beef, not necessarily an organized crime hit," Sgt. Thomas J. Foley, a member of the state police's organized crime unit, speculated Tuesday.

Damien Clemente 20, of Medford and Vincent John Perez, 27, of Boston, pleaded innocent Tuesday to murder and assault and weapons charges, a day after allegedly walking into the 99 Restaurant & Pubs in the city's Charlestown section and firing at least 13 shots on the five men dining in the first booth on the right.

As their pleas were being entered, Anthony P. Clemente Sr., father of Damien who had shown up for his son's arraignment, was arrested inside the courthouse. He also was being held on murder and other charges.

"We are saying in fact he is one of the shooters," said Boston Police Commissioner Paul Evans.

Four men died in the booth: Robert Luisi, his son, Roman, his cousin, Anthony Sarro, and a friend, Anthony Pelosi. Sarro's brother, Richard, staggered outside with a bullet in his stomach.

He was listed in fair condition Tuesday after undergoing surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital.

The shootings prompted initial responses to violence that has plagued the Charlestown section of the city. But local and county authorities — who provided little information on the shooting and did not identify the dead men throughout the day of the crime — emphasized late Tuesday afternoon that the case had no apparent connection with the people of Charlestown.

Robert Luisi was reportedly a longtime mob associate who had aligned with a faction led by jailed New England mob boss Francis "Cadillac Frank" Salemme.

The Boston Globe, citing sources, said Luisi had been helping Salemme's brother, John, collect mob debts while Francis Salemme has been in prison awaiting trial on federal racketeering charges.

But experts say that, despite a "power vacuum" that has opened up within the New England Mafia in recent years, it is unlikely Monday's shooting was a "hit."

"It's just not the way to do things," said Foley, who stressed he is not involved in the investigation.

"Typically, hits aren't done by that. They're going to be done at night in a less conspicuous setting, not with 50 witnesses standing there," he said.

Evans said the exact motive for the shooting was not known, but that "it appears to be some type of problem between two groups."

Still, police were concerned about revenge.

"Is there a concern about possible retaliation? Absolutely," said Evans.

Experts say the New England Mafia has been on the ropes since reputed chieftain Raymond L.S. Patriarca died in 1984, and that the arrest of Salemme and indictment and disappearance of another reputed organized crime leader, James "Whitey" Bulger, has heightened the disarray.

It's "a little bit like when the cat's away, the mice are now descending on the piece of cheese," said Edith Flynn, professor of criminal justice at Northeastern University. "Everybody is taking a nibble and trying to run with it."

But, "they don't have any experienced hands at the helm to direct them and to keep the lid on and to enforce discipline," she said. "What the young bucks don't realize is that any illegal enterprise needs tough internal discipline and enforcement."

Clemente and Perez were arrested seconds after running from the restaurant by two off-duty police officers who had stopped there for lunch after taking care of some court business.

Judge Peter Agnes Jr. sent Perez to Bridgewater State Hospital for 20 days of mental testing after a psychiatrist testified at the arraignment that Perez had seemed depressed and confused during an interview.

Perez, a clerk in a city tow lot whose father manages an Italian restaurant and has served as a political appointee, had a history of substance abuse and had been treated for depression, his attorney, Philip Tracy Jr. said.

"He feels very despondent for the pain that his family is going through now," Tracy said.

Newman Center stocking up

Thanksgiving food drive begins; people encouraged to donate

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

The seasonal window display at the Newman Center features instant brown rice, grape jelly, macaroni and bean soup and oat bran muffin mix.

These are not the average Thanksgiving dinner items, but appropriate donations for the annual food drive.

All non-perishable food items are welcome until Nov. 18 and may be dropped off in designated barrels in the main hallway outside the chapel.

Last November, the Newman Center food drive provided Thanksgiving food baskets, as well as staple foods, for more than 40 needy families.

Newman Student Association (NSA) President Meg Donnelly expects they will be able to do even more this year.

"We've got a room full of food already," Donnelly said. "It seems like the Center has been picking up this year, at least the NSA has."

Also, the Newman Center has added a priest, a nun and a development director since last year.

"We've almost doubled our staff," Donnelly said.

The Newman Center gets the names of the families from the Amherst Survival Center.

NSA members and the Newman community will be delivering the food baskets Nov. 19. Area CCD students are helping to put together the baskets.

In addition providing needy families with food, Donnelly said the food drive is intended to raise awareness within the community.

"There really is a poor community [in the area] and it tends to be overlooked," Donnelly said.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Smokin' Pot...
Kavita Mehta, a freshman excercise science major, shapes a pot on a spinner at the Student Union Craft Center yesterday afternoon.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Looney Tunes...
The UMass Minuteman Hoop Band performs at the start of the men's basketball season, last night at the Mullin's Center. See related story on page 12

UM HomeSharing program offers profitable exchanges

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The HomeSharing Program at the University of Massachusetts offers a profitable exchange for students and homeowners who have compatible needs and services.

"It's a good way to take care of two needs at once," intern Allison Cervini said.

HomeSharing is an alternative housing program which matches homeowners with renters looking to exchange a service for rent. The program began as a private non-profit organization and is now a division of the Commuter Services Housing Resource Center.

Program Coordinator Eric Bruinooge said there are many homeowners seeking child care and elderly companionship services.

Bruinooge described elderly care as an ideal situation for students looking for a quiet place to live.

"Most elderly are only looking for companionship and an overnight presence," Bruinooge said. "We have people who have stayed for years. They become part of the family and stay in touch afterwards."

Cervini said there is a great demand for child care, appealing most to students.

"People looking for child care see UMass as a good resource," Cervini said.

Bruinooge also described the program as "very flexible." Renters are not required to stay in the home for a certain amount of time, as do binding leases. However, most homeowners want stability and request renters who will agree to stay for at least a six month period. But "for the right person, people will compromise."

Homeowners fill out the same application as renters. The questions are basic, but ask the pertinent questions to ensure a compatible match. There is a $25 application fee and a matching fee once the applicant is placed. But Bruinooge said the program "pays for itself." Fees may also be waived if the applicant can document low income.

There is currently a great demand for single females to be matched with homeowners, Cervini said. There is no prior experience required in order to apply. Bruinooge said the majority of his applicants are non-traditional, continuing education and graduate students. However, applicants need not be students. Bruinooge is reaching out to area women's groups such as women's crisis centers, the Everywoman's Center and several shelters.

"We have a lot of situations open all over the Valley for women with cars," Bruinooge said. "Situations with developmental disabilities are more often open to men."

Applicants are placed in homes in all surrounding towns, including Northampton, Leveritt, Hadley and Southampton.

Renters providing services usually work 15 hours a week in exchange for room and kitchen privileges. However, Bruinooge explained that

Turn to HOMES, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Nov. 8

Debate — "Are All Prisoners Political Prisoners?" Campus Center 901, 6:30 p.m..

Speaker — Ramona Africa: A MOVE member who survived the Philadelphia police bombing in 1985, after which she spent eight years in prison. She will discuss the case of Mumia-Abu Jamal, and social control. Campus Center 174-176, 8 p.m..

Music — 25th Anniversary of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center celebration. Harp and Jeff Martell, street musicians, on the Campus Center Concourse on Wednesdays.

Discussion — The Office of Jewish Affairs will host a discussion entitled "Personal Reactions to the Assassination of Yitzhak Rabin." Campus Center 917, 12 to 1:30 p.m..

Meeting — The Malcolm X Cultural Center is having an ALANA Students Focus meeting for students wanting to enhance their college careers. 8 p.m..

Film — Franz Kafka's "The Trial" by Orson Welles presented by the University Film Society. Foreign Language Resource Center, Herter Hall, 7 p.m..

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits began Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177-178. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions Should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Writing — The Hampshire College AIDS Action Collective is running a "Safer Sex" erotica contest. They are accepting poetry and prose. Submissions are due Nov. 9, and can be sent via Five-College mail to Hampshire College Resource Center. Winners will be awarded prizes and will be published in the magazine. Please include a mailing address.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545-3490 or 545-6818.

News Meeting

There will be a meeting for all news associates, staff writers, and correspondents on Thursday, November 9, 1995 at 6:30 p.m.

All news associates, staff writers and correspondents are expected to attend.

If you have a conflict you must contact Chris Conner as soon as possible.

Campus Police Log

Animal complaint

Nov. 5

There was a complaint about a cat kept in a building by Durfee Gardens to take care of mice problems.

Motor vehicle theft

Nov. 6

A vehicle, reported stolen from Parking Lot 13, was recovered by the Ludlow Police Department. The owner was notified.

Vandalism

Nov. 3

A trash barrel was thrown through the window of a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

There was a gas cap stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

An individual reported damage to his vehicle in Parking Lot 13.

Nov. 4

Items affixed to a door in Grayson Residence Hall were destroyed.

There was damage to a vehicle in Parking Lot 11.

Posters on the 6th floor of Coolidge Residence Hall were burned.

There was a window smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

Nov. 5

The sinks on the fourth floor of Patterson Residence Hall were intentionally plugged, causing flooding throughout the fourth floor and the elevator. Housing was called in.

There was a windshield smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 13.

Staff in Pierpont and Cance Residence Halls reported there was graffiti in the lobbies and in the stairwells.

The hood of a vehicle in Parking Lot 32 was smashed.

Several vehicles in Parking Lot 22 were hit with paint balls.

Mailboxes were broken into in John Adams Residence Hall.

Liquor law violations

Nov. 3

Brian R. Franciose, 21, of Town House Apartments, Amherst was arrested on a warrant.

Traffic stop

Nov. 4

Kostas M. Kofitsas, 17, of 4098 Baker St., West Roxbury, was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol, operating an unsafe motor vehicle with an equipment violation and driving without license in possession.

Medical emergency

Nov. 4

An individual in Johnson Residence Hall had complications with a recent injury and was sent to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Nov. 6

An individual, who passed out in the women's bathroom in Herter Hall, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Annoying behavior

Nov. 4

There was a prank call on the 911 line at the Mullins Center.

Nov. 5

Two individuals refused to leave Moore Residence Hall.

There were unruly individuals attempting to enter James Residence. They were gone when the police arrived.

Individuals broke some glass in the hallway of Van Meter Residence Hall. Housing staff was called to clean up debris.

Larceny

Nov. 4

There was a credit card stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.

Nov. 5

There was clothing stolen from the laundry room in Lewis Residence Hall.

Assist agency

Nov. 4

Individual were extricated from an elevator in John Adams Residence Hall on Nov. 4 and 5.

Intoxicated person

Nov. 5

An individual on Eastman Ln. was placed in protective custody near Dwight Residence Hall.

Fire alarm

Nov. 5

A bulletin board in Moore Residence Hall was set on fire.

A stove fire was extinguished in the resident director's apartment in Knowlton Residence Hall.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Nov. 5

There were speakers and CDs stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 11.

Accident

Nov. 5

There was a report that a parked vehicle was struck by another vehicle on University Dr.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian...
...For all your informational needs

Mumia Abu-Jamal says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Cumberland Farms®
GRAND OPENING
Riverside Park Plaza
N. Amherst, MA
OVER $150 IN STORE CERTIFICATES
Join the Celebration
November 8-20
Fun, Food, Balloons
and Give-A-Ways.
ENTER OUR FREE DRAWING FOR STORE CERTIFICATES
NO PURCHASE NECESSARY
GREAT MONEY SAVING SPECIALS
LAYS POTATO CHIPS SAVE 90¢ 49¢ 6 OZ.
2 LITER COKE 99¢ PLUS DEP.
SNAPPLE 32 OUNCE SAVE $1.59 BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
BEN & JERRY'S ICE CREAM PINT SAVE $1.00 $1.99
12 OUNCE COFFEE OR CAPPUCCINO SAVE 54¢ 25¢
FREE SAMPLES WHILE SUPPLY LASTS!
Spree Sprint® instant foncard®
Available in $5, $10, $20 & $50 Values.
See Store For Details
Items and Prices Effective thru November 20, 1995. We Reserve the Right to Limit Quantities.
OPEN 24 HOURS

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!
The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Presents
A Spectacular Sports Extra
The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview
Coming to a newstand near you
December 6, 1995
LOOK FOR IT!

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Bob Dobbs • Photos by Rick Stedman

Do you think UMass provides sufficient financial aid to students?

"No. For example, they prefer to give the money to Coach Cal instead of the students who need it. There are too many sins in the system. The rich get richer and the poor get poorer."

JOSH PENDERGAST, SENIOR
sports management, Abington

"I've got my own scholarship, so I'm not really involved. But I do think there have been problems from the reactions of my friends."

JAY SALUS, SENIOR
HRTA, Swampscott

"No. People who are financially held back have not been able to go to school because of their financial situations."

JESSE ALVAREZ-SUGLIA, JUNIOR
HRTA, Fort Lee, N.J.

"Hell no because I've been here for three years with a very good GPA, good enough to earn a scholarship, but I didn't get enough money until this year."

RAFIQUE EDWARDS, SENIOR sociology, Boston

"No, not at all, because I'm having financial aid problems right now. The Bursar's Office people act like they're too busy to help you, and all they can say is that you owe money. But they can't tell you where the money came from. The school is supposed to have all that money, but where is it going?"

SANDI CARTY, SOPHOMORE
International Relations and Education, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"No. I don't get financial aid but I have a friend with financial aid and they lied to her. They said they'd give her a certain amount and she didn't get it."

ERIN MADDEN, SENIOR education, Pepperill

Accused EMT murderer fears for his own life

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The man accused of killing an Attleboro emergency medical technician with a crossbow testified Tuesday he feared he was going to be "maimed or killed" when the victim and another man approached him.

Donald S. Graham, 56, of Woonsocket, R.I., is charged with shooting 42-year-old Michael Blodgett on Feb. 20, 1994, as Blodgett and his passenger walked toward him in the breakdown lane of Interstate 95 after a driving dispute.

"They made two attempts — serious attempts — to injure me by having a car wreck on the highway. I didn't need a crystal ball to know these men were coming down to hurt me," Graham said.

Prosecutors say Graham was a self-appointed highway vigilante who decided to tail and harass Blodgett at high speeds after Blodgett flashed his high beams at a third car. They say Graham was the aggressor in the chase, and could have backed off any time.

Graham admitted to making errors in judgment after deciding he wanted to "give [Blodgett] a taste of his own medicine."

"I made a few mistakes in judgment here. I felt compassion for a driver who was being harassed," he said. "[Blodgett] leaned out the window and gave me a one-finger salute. I should have taken that as a warning. I had a chance to break it off and I didn't."

He said Blodgett twice slammed on his brakes, causing Graham to come within inches of rear-ending him. He also said Blodgett and his passenger threw a bag and a drink out their car windows, although neither object hit his car.

"I'd been hyperventilating between the two panic stops," Graham said. "I'll call it a close encounter with death."

By the time Blodgett pulled over in the breakdown lane and Graham pulled over some distance behind him, Graham said he was afraid to pass Blodgett for fear he had a weapon or might try to run him off the road.

"I was going to wait while they cooled off. I knew they were furious," he said. But Blodgett, carrying a flashlight, and his passenger Robert Astin immediately began walking back toward Graham's car, so he got the crossbow out of the trunk and loaded it, he said.

"I spoke first. I called, 'Hold it. Hold it. Stop right there,'" Graham said. "[Blodgett] erupted. He started screaming obscenities at me and swears. I was backpedaling."

Blodgett and Astin continued to advance, and Astin circled around behind him, Graham said.

"At this point, Mr. Blodgett was about an arm's length away from me, shining a light in my eyes. I alerted him. As I did, the crossbow discharged," Graham said.

He and his wife, Sandra, did not think Blodgett was badly injured, they both testified, because Blodgett walked back to his own car. The Grahams drove home and Sandra testified she went upstairs to brush her teeth, thinking they would then drive to the police station. But police arrived first.

"The situation turned out very badly. I was disgusted with myself. I never intended to hurt anybody," Graham said.

Six hours after the shooting, Blodgett died of cardiac arrest triggered by massive loss of blood.

Blodgett's older brother, Edwin Blodgett Jr., said outside the courtroom in New Bedford Superior Court on Tuesday that his brother never would have physically attacked Graham.

"This is what my brother stood for," he said, holding up numerous citations Blodgett received for his lifesaving work as an EMT. "Mike wasn't violent. He wouldn't hurt anyone. His whole being was to help people."

He accused Graham of lying to avoid prison.

"I think the guy's fighting for his life. It's all fabricated after the fact. There are so many inconsistencies," he said.

Closing arguments were planned for Wednesday morning.

■ homes

continued from page 1

each situation is different and many of the rules are left up to the discretion of the parties involved.

Brutnooge said he holds a meeting with the renters and the homeowners to sort out all of the details, such as the phone bill and food costs, before the renters move in.

The program also offers a mediation service in the event of a dispute or conflict.

"Disputes are rare, but the service is there," Bruinooge said. "This is the key because it puts people at ease. People could potentially take advantage of each other. We want them to know they are not alone."

If you are interested in the HomeSharing Program, contact Commuter Services in Rm. 428 Student Union.

News Meeting

There will be a meeting for all news associates, staff writers, and correspondents on Thursday, November 9, 1995 at 6:30 p.m.

All news associates, staff writers and correspondents are expected to attend.

UMass Division of Continuing Education
· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996
· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Golden Key National Honor Society
ATTENTION
Golden Key National Honor Society Members
You are invited to attend the 1995 Induction Ceremony.
When: Sunday, November 12, 1995
Time: 1:30 p.m.
Where: Student Union Ballroom
The initiates would be pleased to have you share in their accomplishment.
We look forward to seeing you there.

Magic Lantern
40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
FALL SEASON - ALL NEW SHOW
AMATEUR NIGHT
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM
featuring ...TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place
& runner-up prizes
Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275
Free Admission With This Ad
ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rt. 9 South to Rt. 181 West to Rt. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right
BOSTON RD. • Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:
Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events Comm. this Friday
Ping-Pong & Pool Tournament with the movie "SPECIES" in the Bluewall Cafe
November 10, 1995, 8 pm
FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.
Sign up 545-3600

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Tim White Interim Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Magerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connecticut Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Living with two Satans

Most of the time, things really do sound better on paper. Usually I'm on the receiving end of this disappointing realization. It felt pretty good to use this rule of thumb to my advantage for once. I managed to unload the two biggest headaches I've had. The funny thing was people wanted them, bad. It's funny that my torture could bring someone else so much joy.

For two years, three semesters, I lived with what I considered to be Satan's pets. They were constantly loud, dirty, hungry and did I mention loud? They cleverly disguised themselves as two exotic looking birds when I met them. Two birds, how much hassle could that be?

I tried hard to make them like me. I wanted to prove that just because I had gone through seven pets in four years of college, I was prepared to be a caretaker.

Tara Ruelle

I begged my roommate Joanne to bring these beautiful birds with us when we moved off campus. She assured me they were annoying, but I wasn't having it. They didn't make a sound the whole two hour drive to school. How could these quiet, graceful creatures do anything but fill my days with song, I imagined?

The honeymoon was short-lived. Somehow I forgot birds wake up well before your average human. I was awakened every morning at dusk by the shrill chirps of my two lovable pets. I also forgot I can barely take care of myself, much less two figures that hiss at me when I approach them. I thought they'd be low maintenance.

I tried hard to make them like me. I wanted to prove that just because I had gone through seven pets in four years of college, I was prepared to be a caretaker. They would not respond to my gestures of kindness. I thought they would like to fly freely in the confines of my apartment. I thought they could fly, they're birds darn it. I used to open their door, and watch them flounder and eventually drop like rocks to the floor, but at that point they would hiss at me again.

My roommate noticed my effort but suggested I clean their cage if I wanted to make nice with them. It all sounded so easy, put some old Collegians to good use at the bottom of their cage, give them some food and new water. I didn't quite understand why they treated their water dish as a toilet bowl. I tried to clean and fill their water dish, but found out that bird turds, when immersed in water for several days, could induce me to vomit.

Food was also a huge factor. I hardly ever eat at home, so who would have thought someone else would want to snack in my living room. I did realize before too long that when they screeched incessantly for more than ten minutes, they wanted me to feed them. This was perfectly fine until that seemingly never ending supply of seeds ran out. I was so desperate one afternoon that I figured I'd put the two beasts to good use. I let them roam on the floor, and they proceeded to eat all of the remnants of edible matter off of my rug. My roommate came home, looked on the floor, and said "Tara, why are the birds walking on the floor?"

"I don't know Joanne, but they're quiet," I replied sternly.

At that point, I decided it was time they go. I actively pursued asking random friends if they wanted these incredibly exciting birds. Unfortunately, my friends aren't as dumb as they look. The next approach I took was to ask my roommate if she wouldn't mind terribly if I just released them out the window. She didn't respond as well as I'd hoped.

Alas, I decided to use one of my few privileges as a staff member of the Collegian — free Classifieds. I thought about the wording of the ad, carefully. How could make these feathered judices sound appealing to the unsuspecting reader? Well, apparently I have used the art of deception well. Three men came to pick these beasts up the first day the ad appeared. I handed over my flying devils to the men and laughed heartily as they walked out the door. The birds didn't make a sound.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

A government smoke screen

One of the things I picked up in my travels of Europe this summer was cigarettes. Prior to my trip, I couldn't even inhale a cigarette without coughing, but now nothing's more enjoyable than a long pull off a Camel after a big slug of keg beer.

My transition to a smoker was very natural and I feel good about it.

I still remember my first cigarette. It was in some smoky Parisian cafe near the Bastille. I was debating Dostoyevsky with some quasi-intellectual, bespectacled German. He was a chain smoker and offered me one of his Italian cigarettes each time he fired up a new one of his own. Finally, I said "What the hell?" and things have never been the same.

The latest anti–tobacco legislation is deja vu of 50 years ago when the government criminalized marijuana, citing studies and surveys that are now beyond laughable.

Jeremy Hurewitz

The most interesting aspect of the situation has been my friends' reactions to my new fondness for tobacco. The reactions have ranged from hysterical laughter and curiosity to puzzlement and scorn.

Their reactions amuse me, but remind me how uptight we are in America.

In America, every tight–assed, fiber–eating health nut wants to criminalize tobacco and convert us to their cult in which they all live to be 100, eat rice cakes and excrete pebbles with smiles of excitement long absent from their gaunt, sagging cheeks.

No thanks. Mississippi Fred McDowell once said, "If the river was whiskey, I'd dive right in." That's basically the way I want to live my life.

Don't point your finger or shake your head at me. Who do you get your facts from? The government? Do you really trust the government and all its surveys?

The latest anti–tobacco legislation is deja vu of 50 years ago when the government criminalized marijuana, citing studies and surveys that are now beyond laughable. In reality, they were just fabrications created by the timber industry, which felt threatened by hemp's wide–ranging possibilities. So once again, the government played whore to big businesses and big money, and another of our personal liberties went down the drain.

I'm not saying tobacco is not bad for you. That would be stupid. I'm saying two things: think for yourselves and don't tell me what to do.

Smokers are getting screwed in this country because our politicians are trying to be all things to all people. With one hand they slap the wrist of the dirty smoker and with the other they reach deeper into the pockets of the tobacco industry. And we stand for it.

If we told some cantankerous Frenchman that his government was putting forth some of the legislation that our government is getting away with, he would organize a revolution that would make their bloodshed in the 18th century seem like a walk in the park.

So smokers, smoke your cigarette with style and have a beer. Uncle Sam is knocking down the hall but he hasn't gotten to you yet. If he's looking for me I'll be drinking whiskey, smoking cigarettes and stroking my shotgun waiting for him.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Questioning government aid

To the Editor:

We would just like to ask some questions.

First, to all the students (and non–students) who are rallying against the proposed student aid cuts: Do you believe that the government owes you a college education? If so, why?

From the time we were five, the government has supplied us all with an opportunity to obtain a high school diploma, which most of us took for granted. This country is trillions of dollars in debt and going deeper every day. Where will it all end? When will we even start to pay off our debt?

How many of us are aware that a huge percentage of all revenues collected by the federal government every year goes to make interest payments on our national debt– not principal, interest!

Next, why do so many of us still believe that at the age of adulthood the government should continue to hold our hand, support us through yet another portion of our lives? People founded this great nation in order to be free from a government which was over–controlling. They fought and died to obtain freedom.

Now, we stand more than 200 years later, moving toward something that our ancestors fought bitterly against: government control. The writers of this letter are not rich; both of us are paying for our education, and one of us chose to join the military as a way to earn a college education. Yes, we said earn. We do not believe anyone owes us anything we did not work to earn.

This concept seems foreign to many on this campus. It makes us shake our heads in disgust when we hear students complain about how tough it is to make it to class on time or even that they have two tests in only one week. What do they expect? The reason a college education is so valuable a tool in obtaining a job is employers expect that a student has worked hard to graduate.

Sadly, it seems to us that instead of "worked hard," a better description of many a UMass graduate's experiences might be "coast".

Tom Ribero
Bill Berghauer
Sylvan

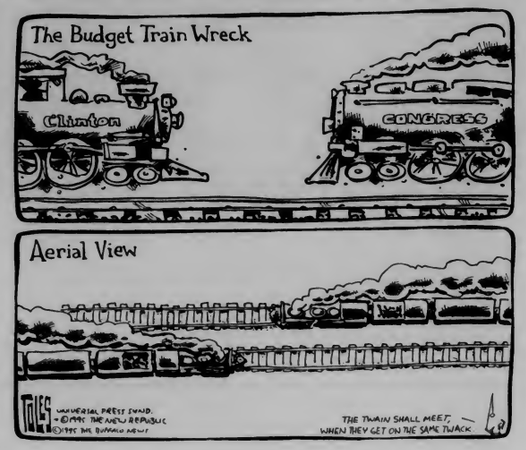
Paper not reporting important news

To the Editor:

It was a disappointment to see in Saturday's Boston Globe a front page article on the University. At issue was the creation of a new code of conduct David Scott, the chancellor, wishes to impose on the individuals of this campus. While the code itself was frightening, what was far worse was that the Collegian had mentioned nothing of it in the days preceding.

It seems to me that something this proximal, so close to home, should have been covered days before the Globe journalists had reported on it. Please, for many people on this campus, you are the only journalists easily and affordably accessible. We need this sort of thing covered.

Michael Charles Medeiros
Amherst



A serious reading problem

Tara MK Connelly

"Tara?"

"Yes, Mom?"

"I just got a call from some magazine company."

"Oh really."

"Yes, and you know what sweetheart?"

"Nope, what?"

"It says here that you owe them $600."

"Is that right?"

"Yes, that's right."

"For magazines?"

"Yes, honey, and Tara, you don't have $600 and especially not for magazines. Plus, you're running out of space in your room — dear, the cat was lost in there for three days."

Damn.

Hello, my name is Tara and I am addicted to magazines. Any magazine– all magazines. It's sick, it's sordid. I'm a candidate for Jerry Springer's freak show of losers. But like those naughty grown–ups, I just can't resist the taste of 8x10 glossy paper.

It's the sheen of the cover, the striking colors, the catchy headlines like "Flawless Skin," "Interview with the Next Bond" and "See how you can catch rainbow trout in Maine" that suck me in. Let me tell you that if I have $5 I will buy two magazines. I will not eat lunch, I will not pass Go, I will just buy a magazine — any magazine.

I've gotten Interview, US, Entertainment Weekly, Elle, Allure, Elle Decor, Spin, Rolling Stone, Cooking Light, Home, Outside, Metropolitan, Writers, US News, Financial World, Woman's Day, Better Homes and Gardens, Premiere Glamour, Mademoiselle, Seventeen, Cosmopolitan, People Weekly, Gun and Ammo, Bazaar, Vogue etc. etc. etc, all at the same time.

The postal workers love me. I am the main reason why the United Sates Postal system exists. I am Publisher's Clearing Houses' numero uno customer. Telemarketers pin my name next to their computer. Representatives fight for me come bonus time. In the dorms, I would have so many magazines that they'd reserve special areas for me to pick them up. That list doesn't even include catalogues. I have never, ever not gotten mail.

But that brings me up to the $600 question, what the hell is my problem? I guess it all narrows down to the fact I love to read anything and everything, and I just don't have the time for it anymore. In order to sate that hunger for words, I buy a magazine.

When I'm depressed I buy a magazine.

When I'm upset I buy a magazine.

When I'm happy I buy a magazine.

There is just no limit as how much a magazine can help me get over whatever emotional problem I think I have. They make me feel good. It's like opening a gift every time I buy a new one. A whole unexplored package of goodies, all for me and in full color.

I have a system of reading them.

First, I have to be the first one to touch it (bear with me here). I can't read a copy that has been thumbed through. I can't read a copy a friend has thumbed through. I have to open it first. Got it?

Secondly, I don't touch the perfume flaps. Big no no. The smells make me nauseous, and I get dizzy and have to lie down, no joke. I once had a guy flip through my Allure and he opened every damn perfume ad. I had to have him scotch tape them shut before I took it back. I think he's reported me to mental health services.

Thirdly, I read them by skimming the whole thing first. No opening up in the middle, no reading an article and flipping to its continuation. Then, I go and read the whole thing thoroughly. Everything. And if I begin an article that continues, I look up the page it goes on to and open right up to it. I don't dally. I don't scan on my way. I fly express.

Fourth, and for those who still have managed to read this far, I have to read in direct light. I can't read in the shade, I can't read in dim light, and I can't read if there is a glare on the page. I've tried. It doesn't work, I get a headache and have to lie down.

Now normally I am a very easy going person who can accept change and realize sometimes you've got to break the rules. I am open to new ideas and I love a challenge ... just don't touch my magazines. Oh, and the $600 bill? Turns out they had me down for several subscriptions for the next 10 years. I cancelled.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

PC campus hinders free expression

Evan Young

Has anyone out there in campus–land noticed that if someone has an opinion, an idea, a thought or anything else that proves they have a capacity for free thought, they are immediately disagreed with and deemed offensive to society in some way or another?

Cut down all the trees. Slay every last furry woodland owl, and dump as much raw sewage and heavy metals as possible right into the Indian Ocean.

Whoops! I just pissed off the environmentalists.

Don't keep guys out of the military, put them on the front lines. Put the convicted criminals right next to them. Don't we want these people out of society?

Uh–oh. There I go again, offending the homosexuals and the freedom fighters.

Women must always look beautiful for men, they must do all the cooking and cleaning for them, and have it all done by the time the men come home from work. They must also raise the kids, and wear bikinis all day.

Blacks belong in the ghettos, drinking 40's and doing drugs. White men rule all.

Screw the Indians. Lets not feel sorry for completely wiping them out because we had the guns. America belongs to us now. Here you go Sitting Bull, here's a bottle of Jim Beam to drown out your sorrows.

There go the women, the African–Americans and the Native–Americans.

How can I say these godawful things, you may be asking yourself.

It's very easy. I enjoy watching other people squirm uncomfortably when the idiotic PC ideas that abound here at UMass are trampled upon. If you say something negative or write something that questions the liberal ideals of our campus and put it in this newspaper, the reactions can be quite entertaining. It's amazing how so many people can immediately misunderstand a point of view other than their own.

Do I really believe in any of the stuff I just said? Of course I don't. Hate is not an opinion, and I hope no one else believes any of that stuff either.

I do believe in other things. First, I believe that you probably wouldn't still be reading this if I hadn't caught your attention by saying ridiculous things. Writing on these pages, one quickly learns that no one really cares what you write unless it has the ability to piss someone off.

Second, I believe I have certain ideals, beliefs and opinions I hold to be true. Everyone else has different ideals, beliefs and opinions that are different from mine that they hold to be true. The problem around here is if you voice any of them, people instantly get nasty.

As an example, in one of my discussions last week someone said something they thought had value. Instead of providing a decent argument in response, some girl in the corner got a bitchy attitude. This act effectively shut everyone up. Kudos to her! She single–handedly annoyed everyone, and ruined a perfectly good argument. Who wants to talk when no one really listens? Boy, it sure is valuable to know that whenever you say something, nobody will listen, but someone will get pissed.

As a solution to this problem, I have decided to say nothing from now on. Nothing at all. I will just shut up, not voice my opinions, not assert my beliefs and rid my mind of all free thought. If someone tries to argue with my nothing, I will simply yell at them; that seems to be the way around here. It is better to say nothing than to not be liberal, right?

So here goes nothing.

Nothing is pretty interesting, isn't it? Boy, this nothingness sure does stimulate the mind!

Of course, someone is probably out there saying, "What an idiot. He thinks he's being funny. He's woefully misinformed about his own opinions."

But, I guess that's the best argument nothing can buy.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Multicultural Affairs

Wednesday, November 8, 1995

Beyond The White Line: Verses Of The Oppressed

Gringo
por Juan José Chacón

gringo,
¿Qué pasaría si tu fueras yo y yo fuera tú
Si yo dejara a mis hijos matar a los tuyos
En las noches tranquilas bombardear tus ciudades,
Las verdaderas mías, transformar en mentiras tuyas?

En tus cabellos rubios, el fuego de mi pueblo
En tus ojos azules, hacer volar mis misiles
Y, gringo,
¿Qué harías si yo te dijiera
"No English in this country"?
¿Qué me dirías ante una 187,
Cómo reaccionarías, si después de matarte,
Ni siquiera te entierro?

¿Qué diría tu familia cuando te llevo prisionero,
Y a quién le gustaría presenciar la tortura?
Y es que eres gringo
Alfombras rojas haces de la sangre de mi gente,
Y nunca entiendes que es lo que se siente,
Por que eres gringo, y escupes tu poder materialista
En mis pómulos indígenas,
Por que buscas mi compañía planeando mi agonía

Jamás te das cuenta de que eres gringo,
Tal vez no en tus facciones, pero sí en tus pensamientos
Y, tratando de ayudar, destruyes la comunidad

Déjame tranquilo, no seas un gringo desgraciado
Déjame ser — moriré defendiéndome, lucharé incansable
Y al final de la tarde, después de quemarte,
Sonreiré con mis hijos y mi esposa, mis padres,
Y mis hermanos

Pero aún así, diré una plegaria al Dios de los Dioses,
Padre de las montañas, Madre de las Madres
Por tí, gringo, por que gracias a tí soy yo
Soy yo no como tú
Con tu ejemplo, nunca me convertiré desgraciado
Si yo fuera gringo hoy mataría
A los verdaderos americanos
En ellos vertía la mirada tranquila y la sonrisa sincera

Gringo deja de ser gringo
Gringo acaba con lo que tienes de gringo
Trata de sentirte por un día not an american.
Sino un americano
Y date cuenta que Lincoln no escribió poemas como
Martí
Que Sandino mató a más de un marino,
Y que ahora mismo, al decir esto que digo
Me odias por ser yo sincero
Sólo el Solitario
Yo no hablo inglés sabiéndolo y no quiero
Maldito Gringo American Yankee Green Beret asesino

Sin Título
por Mercedes Betanco

¿Qué hora es?
Creo que ya me he olvidado
¿Hoy o ayer?
Tal vez mañana — no lo sé
Ahora solo pienso en mi
Y trato de descifrar esta ardiente ansiedad que
Llena cada parte de mi ser
Tal como el sol penetra a la fertil tierra
Y solo encuentro mas preguntas e incertidumbres.

Me pregunto que hora es
Y me doy cuenta que el tiempo
Sigue su camino sin importarle
Que yo me quedo atras.

Hay, este tiempo cruel que
No me deja en paz.
Viene
Y sigue
Y fue
Y dejo de ser — pero aún me agovia

Otra vez veo los ojos de
Ese niño ambriento al
Que le falta el pan
Que a mi me sobra hoy.

Una vez mas quiero gritar
Y correr
Y escribir
Y regarle a esos ojos
Que me perdonen por la indiferencia.

Quiero saberlo todo —
pero me aterra la verdad.

¿Qué hora es?
¿Será que ya vivi?

Que esto es todo.
Que lo que se dice mi realidad es la
Verdad.
Sera que mi destino es
Caminar en esta tarde bonita con las mariposas
Y con las flores silvestres.
¿Sin pensar en el fusil o en el engaño?

Sin pensar en el dolor
de mi padre al saberse extranjero.
¿Será que este deber que agovia mis
días es solo
La idea romántica de libros de historia vivida?

¿Y que hora es? ¡Me tengo que ir!

Ya el sol vino y la luna se fue.
Pero hoy el rocío de la mañana
Me besó los ojos y me dió esperanzas
Hoy sé que la inocencia pasó de mi
Hoy sé que la verdad no es una
Hoy sé que vivo, que pienso, que
lucho, que busco
Y que vibro con una mirada, con una trajedia
Con tus manos y con el canto de mi alma.

Hoy no importa la hora.
Hoy solo importa mi marcha
Por esta selva humana que se llama vida.

The Scar
By Carlos Castillo

Mary inspects racks, smiling
Always shoot in the neck never in the sleeve!

She performs
Thousands of caesareans a year
Raising coats
From cardboard wombs
That chatter across
Steel rollers in a G. Fox warehouse
Teaching amateur workwomen
To fire pistols
Between a GED and PHD
With plastic wire
To wool
For seventeen quarters an hour.

Always shoot in the neck never in the sleeve!

One Christmas
When the sale
Painted her sons coat red,
Snubbed steel marksmen
Emptied a screaming chamber
And Michael
From his mother
A second time.

After work
While bathing
She traces
A pink skin street
Down her brown belly
Back to the rows
Of unidentified men
With ticketed toes.

Mary inspects racks
Hoping to find all the right prices,
Relieved when she does
She smiles
That scar of a smile
That's been sowed by blades and bullets and says

Good people, no one is going to get fired today!

Latino Loneliness
By Daniel Rivera

Sitting. Listening, not participating
In the tambora and guevira sounds of my peers stories.
Knowing that I have never, and may never travel
The same gates, ports of entry and departure,
Of piers of immigration.
There is an eerie silence that covers
My own stories of childhood rebellion
In a poverty–stricken, urban renewed likeness of Santo Domingo, or Rio Piedras, called Lawrence, or Springfield.

Even though you understand that
You have a different story to tell,
One of acculturation and not assimilation.
A different Caribbean understanding!
The likeness is remarkable — same brown skin,
Same depressed discourse,
Same Mother and Father mannerisms.
Same bendiciones at bed time,
But different dialect–filled dreams.

A childhood remembered with Latin American nuances and not Caucasian cartoons,
Or cereal box premios.
A juventud of strict national understanding
Backed by historical context
And not confused Public Enemy, minority, separatism
Fed by historical misrepresentation and exclusion.
So the conversation continues with words
I may not understand and laughter that incites
The sorrow of not knowing.

Knowing that visits can never mirror
Their real–time experiences of Latin distinction,
It all makes me want to run and take a Spanish class,
Learn of Latin American heroes and heroines
And give Verde Patria penance.

So I continue to enjoy the discussion
Of where we are going, and where
We have been unsure as to which we, I, may belong to.
For Latino loneliness manifests itself most often
When you are surrounded by other Latinos.

The Others
By Joyce White–Deer Vincent

When the others came, they said they came to save us.
To teach us the truth.
We were patient, we listened.
We remembered all that was said

We still remember, as we watched confused, it was they
Who forgot, not us.

When they took our homelands, our children, our future
And locked them behind a fence, hidden from the world.
We remembered "Thou Shalt Not Steal"

When they seduced our sisters, before their wives arrived
We came to remember "Thou Shalt Not Covet Thy Neighbor's Wife"
(Their offspring lying in limbo still)

When they separated church from state
And rose it above creation, we remembered "Thou Shalt Not Have Any Other God Before Me"

When they unleashed the atomic bomb
Upon the face of Mother Earth, we remembered "Thou Shalt Not Tempt The Lord, Thy God"

When they built and built and built
Day after day without end, we remembered "Thou Shalt Remember The Sabbath Day And Keep It Holy"

When it was said that the only good Indian,
(A name meaning God–like)
Was a dead Indian, we remembered "Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor"

Well, howdy neighbor ..
I'm taking back what is rightfully mine:
My life, my reality
I'm returning to my Creator, praying that I will forget
The lies, the pain, and the smell of death in my brain

I do not feel too friendly right now.
As I heal sisters' wounds,
Patch up my brothers who were stabbed in the back

Come 'round tomorrow, maybe tomorrow
We can talk "membering"
Maybe tomorrow when you've learned to remember
And I've learned to forget ...

Multiculturalism
By Chinedu Dean Ogbuike

Multiculturalism means many cultures
Coming together as one to form beautiful pictures
Of diversity, love, hope, and unity
Which can be seen inside and outside their community.

Multiculturalism is a gathering of all races
In which people come from all different places
In the country and world to form a bond of peace
That will continue grow stronger and never cease.

Multiculturalism focuses on cultures sharing
Their beliefs, knowledge, and values while preparing Themselves against those trying to separate
Them from their people because they hate

Seeing many "minority" cultures coming together as one
Because they know that no harm can be done
To people who are united but divided we may fall
But as many cultures working together we stand tall.

Multiculturalism from the dictionary means reflecting
Or relating to diverse cultures but I am saying
That it means unity and love between many races
Who don't judge other people by the color of their faces.

El Atardecer de Bogotá
por Cristina Basto

Imágenes difusas que se unen
Y fluctuan en la tarde dorada
Melodía humana que adorna la ciudad
Con impulsos que dan forma a la montaña.
Escenario de contrastes y deseos ocultos,
Dónde el sol se desborda y esparce sus rayos escendidos.
Mientras el cielo se iñe de rojo
Y el día agoniza lentamente,
Los espectadores caminan indiferentes.
Ya es tarde, quizá sean las seis cuando los árboles
Conceden la última pieza al viento.
Un silencio estrepitoso invade las calles
Por que otro día ha muerto.
Del suceso hay nueve millones de testigos
Y tres cómplices: dos almas que se abrazan y la luna.

My First Love
By Moïse Tirado

I could cry but ... no
I want to yell out your name
But from my throat comes the silence of the dead,
Whose life you have bore witness to
The distress of the children whose cries have shadowed
Your soul and whose voices have sang sweet tunes,
Straight into your heart
Oh! The sounds that come out
Send shivers down my spine

Too scared to hear my own voice,
Too frightened to let the stars burst out of me
Too disturbed by the rumbling sounds of long–suppressed
Feelings coming from deep inside my soul
I listened to your street music, yes, your street music
I listened to the birds serenading you with heavenly sounds
Rising up into your sky, while you sat,
Your breasts stretching out to the north wind
Your legs open wide to the windward passage
I listen to the rhythms that come from your rivers,
The water flowing from the letters of your name:
haiti, Haiti, HAITI, H A I T I, H A I T I

Never ending, I want to sing to you, dance for you
I want to yell out your name, but your smile freezes the Sounds from my mind
Your smile bright and hot as the Caribbean sun,
Burns me inside out, my heart pounds like African drums,
Giving the signal to attack, my hands go up ready to break
The chains around your sweet, tender neck

Ready to bear witness to your uncommon beauty and your Strength, my eyes fix upon you like wild fire;
I consume you — slowly, then quickly
I inhale you, drink you dry
From my nose, my ears, my lips,
The letters of your name tumble, dance and spread out
Before me — haiti, Haiti, HAITI, H A I T I, H A I T I
To the ancient African rhythms, they sway intertwining
Spelling I LOVE YOU — mwen rinmin–w

Trocadero
By Pierre Arthur Elysée

It's Sunday afternoon,
With a nice view extended to the horizon
Oh! The sun is about to disappear
Through the Eiffel Tower, I am looking
— No, I am contemplating, the beauty of nature
Progressively, the sun turns orange,
As does the color of the cloud around it
Slowly, it is disappearing ...

The smooth clarity of the light emitted by the moon
The stars give the park a divine aspect
The decor offered by the shadows of the statues
The trees and the flowers
Seem to shelter the life of its spectators,
To the point that an atmosphere of peace
And serenity exist among the people lying of the grass

The air is pleasant to breathe, it is fresh
Freshness coming from the falling water,
Where many are cooling down their bodies
And looking up at the sky:
A sign of blessing and happiness

With the calm wind comes a sweet melody,
Encircled by tourists, the drummers
Are exposing their talents
Far from their countries, ignoring
Their problems and differences.
For a moment, parents and kids, alongside strangers,
All dance to the rhythm of the drums

The drummers pass their hats around
One group of tourists leaves, yet another arrives,
With sad regrets I have to leave too,
But the animation continues ...
Trocadero, my favorite place in Paris.

Editor's Note

The Multicultural Affairs Desk has as its focus to give ALANA students a chance to voice their ideas and opinions on various issues. This includes the permission of submissions in languages other than English. However, if any one is interested in a copy or an English version of any printed material on this page, please come down to the Collegian office or contact the editor at 545–1851. Constructive criticism or suggestions will be gladly accepted.

Arts & Living

New Trek books aim for the stars

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

"Star Trek" fans brace yourself for the newest onslaught of books based on "Star Trek," "Star Trek: The Next Generation," "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" and "Star Trek: Voyager" series.

JOHN GREGGORY BETANCOURT
Star Trek: Voyager Incident At Arbuk
Pocket Books

In the fifth installment of "Star Trek's" newest series, Captain Janeway and crew answer a shuttle's distress call in the largely inhabited Arbuck system.

There, the U.S.S. Voyager discovers a weapon a thousand times more powerful than anything the ship has ever been put up against. Meanwhile, on the shuttle, the crew discovers an unconscious alien and no information on the weapon it is carrying.

To add to the drama is an armada of mysterious warships that are attacking the Voyager for the unknown weapon. With warp power off line, the crew must somehow save themselves, the alien and the new superweapon from falling into the hands of an unknown assailant.

DIANE CAREY
Star Trek: Deep Space Nine Station Rage
Pocket Books

Thirteen is the mystical number of this "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" novel. Commander Sisko finds a tomb of Cardassian soldiers on board DS9. Chaos ensues when the Commander tries to find a way to return the bodies and find out why they were hidden on the space station.

However the "bodies" literally have a life of their own as they begin to pulsate with life, bent on exacting revenge for their wrongful and unknown deaths. Despite diplomatic overtures, the soldiers are hell bent on ruining the station and taking it away from its new occupants.

Sisko must find a way to keep them from destroying the station and regain control while an old enemy plots to destroy the soldiers at any cost — including that of the entire space station.

KIJ JOHNSON & GREG COX
Star Trek: The Next Generation Dragon's Honor
Pocket Books

Already a Sturgeon Award winning author, Kij Johnson teams up with Greg Cox to write her very first "Star Trek" novel. In it, the Federation is invaded by a powerful alien race and it is up to Captain Jean-Luc Picard to create a peace treaty with a bordering plant to keep a rein on the invaders before the situation gets out of hand.

Meanwhile the Enterprise, under the control of Commander Data, must confront an entire fleet of a 100 warships. Don't miss this newest installment available in January 1996.

PETER DAVID
The Captain's Daughter
Pocket Books

Recall the flavor of the original series with No. 76 starring Captain Sulu. From the well-known "Trek" author Peter David, this novel picks up on the short life of Captain Sulu's daughter.

In Demora, Sulu's daughter is a promising young Starfleet officer, suddenly attacks her commanding officer who in turn kills her in self-defense. Now in The Captain's Daughter, Sulu's investigating his daughter's bizarre death and finding out there is an old enemy awaiting him, eager to destroy Sulu's reputation and life. Available in hardcover this coming December.

yeP! to celebrate new release

By Aaron Brandes
Collegian Staff

Tonight that the Iron Horse will be shaking with some of the most original sounds that have vibrated off their walls since the club's reopening. yeP! is back.

The talented musicians that make up yeP! are destined for fame and stardom. Originally from Amherst, the band's reputation is spreading all over Massachusetts.

yeP!'s new release is ambitious and tackles any kind of variety of musical genre one could name. Their talent however, lies within the confines of the live performance.

yeP!'s off-beat musical style carries on in their stage antics. They dress like a crew of hippie lounge-singer grunge pirates from Mars, [which] makes the audience dance with plastic alligators and sprays silly string all over the crowd. Not to mention hurling rubber bats and spiders at the audience with their teeth, using large video monitors to display tripped-out psychedelic graphics and creeping stealthily through the audience during particularly bizarre jams.

COURTESY LISA POLLACK

Local band yeP! will perform tonight at the Iron Horse.

Guest appearances seem to be common place among yeP!'s previous shows. Jon Fishman (Phish), Big Joe Moore, Jonathan Mover and others have shared the electrified stage with the band. Fans will bring goggles, waffle irons or anything else that's suitable for weirdness and prepare themselves to just go nuts.

yeP! will play tonight at the Iron Horse at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the box office. For more information, please call the Iron Horse.

Cult alien show returns to television

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES —If you're harboring a vague, unreasonable mistrust of anyone with a crooked pinkie, blame "The Invaders."

The TV series aired briefly in the late 1960s, introducing us to architect David Vincent (Roy Thinnes) and his obsessive, lonely quest to expose a plot by humanoid-appearing aliens to conquer Earth.

Their occasional odd glow or trick digit were among the few giveaways. In Europe, the series became a cult favorite with its treatment of that abiding science fiction theme, aliens among us. It's been rerun on French, English and German TV and was even feted in a Paris celebration.

But in its homeland, the series from producer Quinn Martin (of "The Fugitive" and "The F.B.I." fame) vanished after a 1967-68 run on ABC.

"As the drama slipped into the netherworld of fuzzy TV memories (excepting a brief cable run), all but the most avid fans were doomed to wonder about the roots of their finger-phobia. Until now.

"The Invaders" is back as a miniseries on Fox Broadcasting Co., the network that has developed an adolescent's passion for sci-fi in the wake of its success with "The X-Files."

Thinnes reprises his role as Vincent in the two-parter starring Scott Bakula, Elizabeth Pena, Richard Thomas, DeLane Matthews and Richard Belzer (airing 8-10 p.m. EST Sunday, Nov. 12, and Tuesday, Nov. 14).

Bakula plays Nolan Wood, an ex-con whose life has been shattered, unknowingly, by alien meddling. David Vincent, on the hunt after all these decades, eventually appears to alert him to the truth.

For their part, the indulgent army of cigarette-smoking, meat-eating aliens have become fonder of Earth:

Turn to CULT ALIEN SHOW, page 7

Negron defines new character role on hit sitcom

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The curious thing about Taylor Negron, the newest cast member of NBC's "Hope & Gloria," is not that so few people know his name, but that everybody seems to know his work.

You've seen him in any number of TV shows and movies, playing everything from the blond, psychopathic gunman Milo in The Last Boy Scout to the pizza guy in Fast Times at Ridgemont High.

"I definitely paid my dues," says Negron, an actor-playwright-comedian who now plays Hope's boss, Gwillem Blatt, a tall, wiry dark-haired fellow in Armanis with big brown eyes, prominent brows and cheekbones of a Latin cast.

"I think I've always been lucky to work all the time," Negron says. "I've done one or two movies a year for 12 years." And TV?

"Everything. You just block it out because there were so many of them."

A regular on the short-lived "Frannie's Turn" and a guest on "Dave's World," "Seinfeld," "Civil Wars" and "Anything But Love," he's also known as the "spokesman and priest-king" of cable's E! Entertainment.

On "Hope & Gloria," which airs at 8:30 p.m. EST Sunday nights, he plays a comic foil to Hope's sweet, good-hearted optimist.

"When they added Gwillem's character, they added real tension, because he's a boss in the great tradition of Theodore J. Mooney from 'Here's Lucy,'" Negron said.

"Our show reminds me of 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show.' You have Hope, played by Cynthia Stevenson so well. She's this really happy preppie girl and I get to be this New Age Mr. Grant. He's a big fish in a small pond, a boy wonder who now has to be a man wonder.

"There he is, this guy who'd like to be a programming executive at MTV and he's doing a morning show with Alan Thicke in Pittsburgh — and he isn't going to let anybody forget it."

Negron calls Gwillem a perfect character for the '90s.

"Men are redefining their roles, because a lot of roles were demolished by the women's movement," he said. "Men just don't KNOW any more. ...

"The relationship between men and women is totally different. There's a whole new arena. Who has the power? It changes every paragraph."

Negron is above all, an Angeleno, sharing an Angeleno's conviction about his hometown. "It's the center of the world right now," he said. "Most of the television imagery that goes around the world comes out of Los Angeles.

"I make fun of it, affectionately, because these are my people. I come from there," he said, lapsing into his standup routine: "I remember when the palm trees were short and Tomorrowland was modern."

Negron's most recent non-TV project was "Gangster Planet," a four-character domestic comedy set during the Los Angeles riots.

"The play was a direct response to the rage of the Los Angeles riots, which were really frightening and scary," he said. "I just happened to be stuck in the house with my parents, and we got into this terrible fight."

Although the evening inspired the play and Negron played the lead, "Gangster Planet" wasn't about him or his family.

"Standup comedy keeps you in a kind of constant analysis," he said. "I don't have a shrink, but I feel like I'm in therapy all the time with my writing. I have to write through these feelings of my rage, my complete anger, or my happiness. And then, somehow, the joke bubbles up."

Faced with the prospect of a steady job in a long-running TV comedy, Negron is sanguine about the future.

"Life is work. I don't think anybody is ever excused from it," he said. "Everybody in America has this self-entitlement thing, as in 'I don't want to work.' Everybody says, 'I want to be in a television series.'

"Try doing 25 movies, being an extra in 10 movies and being on the road for 10 years," he said. "Then get back to me."

LATINO SUPPORT GROUP

This group will deal with issues of identity facing Latinos as living or attending college in the mainland USA. Living in a culture where Latinos are viewed as a "minority" will be discussed in the context of how it affects Latinos self perception.

This will be a drop-in group held every week.

UMASS Campus Center
(Check schedule board for room number)
Wednesdays beginning November 8
and running until April.
3:30 - 5:00 PM

ANYONE WHO IDENTIFIES AS:
- Latino/ born in Mexico, South/Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or the Dominican Republic.
- is first generation (meaning born here is the USA from Latino parent(s)
- is of Latino heritage

IS WELCOME TO ATTEND.

Please call 545-2337 to register.
The group will be conducted in English or Spanish depending on membership.

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 1pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday; (413) 586-6635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt Associates Inc.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
Music From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

Steve Madden.
(Low from New York)

Downtown Amherst

Surviving the Holidays:
Two support Groups Offered by the Mental Health Division of the University Health Services.

Eating, Body Image, and the Holidays
This is a 4 session group meets
Mondays 12:30 - 2:00 PM
November 13, 20, 27 & December 4
Meetings will be held in the Campus Center.
Family problems, numerous food centered events, expectations to "look good" and feel joyful all contribute to the pressures many feel at this time of year. If you find that negative feelings about food and body image intensify around the holidays, this os a group where you can share your concerns and learn some coping strategies.

Which Home For The Holidays?
This 4 session support group meets
Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 PM
November 15, 29 & December 6, 13
This group for students from divorced of separated families will examine coping strategies to deal with the particular stresses that occur at the holidays when families are no longer together. Attendance at all 4 sessions is expected.

Preregistration required for both groups.
To register call 545-2337
8:00AM - 5:00 PM, Monday - Friday

Bono and Gingrich cooperating

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — While Republican moralists and candidates denounce smutty entertainment and its greedy promoters, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and freshman Rep. Sonny Bono are quietly cultivating Hollywood types by promising to help their bottom line.

"The Republican Party and the industry have not had very good communication with each other," says Bono. "Ever."

The pop singer-turned-politician brought that concern to Gingrich early this year. The speaker responded by authorizing an entertainment task force and naming Bono its chairman. Then he summoned industry executives to Capitol Hill.

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, has been around Washington since the Johnson administration. "This is the first time a speaker of the House has ever asked me to ... bring in movie industry people to talk about how he can help them," he says.

What Gingrich and Bono have recognized is that trade, technology and copyright issues transcend ideology. Even liberal executives who contribute big bucks to Democrats are trying to maximize corporate profits.

The two Republicans leading this outreach effort do not quite fit their party's culturally conservative mold.

Bono is a product of Hollywood, Cher's long-haired hippie ex-husband and duet partner. Gingrich, like Bono, has been divorced. Gingrich is uneasy about a Democrat's plan to police porn on the Internet. But an early version of a novel he co-write opened with "a pouting sex kitten ... sitting athwart" the hero's chest.

One measure of the chasm between the GOP and the entertainment world is campaign contributions from the film, recording, TV and cable industries.

In the 1993-94 election cycle, according to Common Cause, industry donors of $20,000 or more contributed $1.8 million to Democratic commitees for party-building activities; GOP committees got $181,000. The breakdown in the first six months of 1995 for contributions above $10,000 was $720,000 to the Democrats and $140,000 to the Republicans.

Political developments this year have not exactly complemented the Gingrich-Bono bridge-building project.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the leading GOP presidential candidate, lambasted the entertainment industry last spring for "mainstreaming deviancy" in a cold quest for profits. At least four other presidential candidates joined the chorus of excoriation.

Meanwhile, former education secretary William Bennett was having a well publicized showdown with Time Warner over gangsta rap. More recently he has taken on trash TV.

Bennett had Democratic partners in both ventures, and President Clinton years ago criticized violence and other aspects of popular culture. Still, Hollywood generally has found Democrats more compatible with its needs and world-view.

Bono had to overcome fears of confrontation when he scheduled a Sept. 9 meeting for industry heavy hitters at Beverly Hills town hall. He managed to attract about two dozen of the entertainment elite. He brought with him six House members including Majority Whip Tom DeLay of Texas and Andrea Seastrand, a California freshman elected with the support of the religious right.

"The trepidations they had were how are we going to relate to the Republican Party," Bono said. "The point was to tell them we were going to work with them and not just criticize them ... Our optimum goal is they should help write their own legislation."

Hilary Rosen, president of the Recording Industry Association of America, said she went because Congress plays an important role in "the business of the business." If members show interest, she said, "it's certainly in our interest to be willing to talk to them about it."

Rosen said some people "challenged the task force on the overall agenda of the Republican leadership." The political brouhaha over content and industry responsibility was also discussed briefly.

The GOP House members "made it clear that they were not interested in government regulating content and I made it clear that I thought that was the right position," Rosen said.

In a recent interview, Bono said he wishes prominent Republicans would call a cease-fire in the culture war.

"They're their own people. If they say things and take positions, I hope they stop, but if they do, they'll have to represent themselves as individuals," Bono said. "As a party we don't want to condemn (entertainment executives) and say you better straighten out your act. We'd rather have them participate in solutions."

■ Cult Alien Show

continued from page 6

Increasing pollution assures them more of the carbon monoxide-laden air that they breathe.

They've also gotten better at disguising some of the physical ticks that could unmask them.

Although Thinnes doesn't headline the miniseries, he's glad to see the premise gain new life; the TV series, he says, came to an unfair and untimely end.

"We were planning to go on for another season," he recalls. They were writing new episodes when, suddenly, the show was canceled. Quinn had a falling out with ABC and they canceled a lot of things. All political.

"So the show just came to a crashing halt."

"At the time, I thought it should have gone on," he says.

"It had respectable ratings. It wasn't a runaway hit, but it was catching on. It had a strong, very responsive audience. ... Science fiction audiences are faithful, as you know by 'Star Trek' and 'Dark Shadows.'"

Thinnes still is recognized for his "Invaders" role by American fans. But he saw real devotion abroad.

"Three years ago, there was a 25th anniversary celebration in Paris," he said, with special theater screenings and the release of "Invaders" episodes on videocassette.

"The audience, a jampacked audience in one of those old movie palaces, knew all the dialogue like with The Rocky Horror Picture Show," Thinnes said in an evident tone of delight.

"He noted that the series attracted first-rate guest stars, including Gene Hackman, Sally Kellerman and British actor Michael Rennie, star of the sci-fi film classic The Day the Earth Stood Still (1951).

Thinnes went on to other projects, including "Falcon Crest" and the soap opera "One Life to Live," after "Invaders" was pulled.

He tried to revive the sci-fi drama, coming close to a TV movie with ABC that fell apart after the network was purchased by Capital Cities Inc. But the timing now is clearly right. Fox realizes sci-fi "is a gold mine" that can attract more than hard-core fans, Thinnes said.

"There's an aspect of science fiction that plays to the paranoia we all have about authorities, government, politicians. Those who might not be believers about the science fiction aspect like the intrigue," he said.

Fox isn't alone in milking the genre; there's a surge in the number of sci-fi movie projects being developed, Bakula said. "Many people are attributing a lot of this to 'The X-Files,' which is interesting because often the movies lead television but in this, television is leading the movies," he said.

"The 'Invaders' miniseries, filmed in the Los Angeles area and surrounding desert, might just spawn a franchise of TV movies, Thinnes said.

"I think it has a future," he said.

New electronic magazine to be distributed over world–wide web

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Kinsley, former editor of The New Republic and co-host of CNN's "Crossfire," has been hired by Microsoft Corp. to start a new online magazine of commentary on politics, news and culture.

The electronic magazine will be distributed over the Internet's World Wide Web and on the Microsoft Network, an on-line service the software maker began in August, The New York Times and The Washington Post reported today.

"The idea is to create some serious journalism on the Web for people who are not Web fanatics," Kinsley said.

Kinsley, 44, will end his six-year stint on "Crossfire" at the end of this month. He also held discussions with Time Warner Inc.

Russell Siegelman, a Microsoft vice president, told the Post that the magazine would be launched by early next year.

■ football

continued from page 12

Bengals, two too many to give them a shot on anything but a high draft choice. All this leads to is a expansion team that is two games out of first place and hasn't won in three of the last four weeks.

Speaking of expansion teams that are only two games out of first place, how about the Carolina Panthers? With their fourth straight win, over San Francisco no less, the first year franchise is turning a few heads. Given the fact that they could feasibly beat the Rams, Cardinals, (Did I just say that after my prediction earlier this year?) Saints, Niners (They did it once, why can't they do it again?) and the Redskins, they could have a 9–7 record which is sometimes good enough for a wild–card.

Atlanta holds a one game lead over St. Louis and San Fran, as has been the most consistent team in the division all year. Jeff George has the intensity the Falcons need to get them a berth in the playoffs and if June Jones is smart he will do what it takes to resign him before the off–season. The only chance the Rams have of making the playoffs is if Vince Ferrigamo comes out of retirement.

George Seifert has got to be shaking his head over the fact that there is a possibility his team might have to start Cary Conklin against Dallas. Until someone is capable at QB to get Jerry Rice and John Taylor the ball, the Niners are not nearly the same team.

Between the NFC Central and the AFC East only one team can truly be counted out of playoff contention. That being the 2–8 Jets. I realize I have included both the New England Patriots and Detroit Lions who stand at 3–6 entering this weekend.

The Patriots at some point, maybe too late but nonetheless, will find their offensive game and run through everyone in their path. Drew Bledsoe hasn't come close to his performance of last year and the defense just keeps getting better. Lions owner William Clay Ford says he would probably fire coach Wayne Fontes at season's end if the Lions somehow is capable at QB to get Jerry Rice and John Taylor the ball, the Niners are not nearly the same team. Fontes job is on the line, the Lions have a much louder roar.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

■ college hockey

continued from page 12

opponents of the Lake Superior State Lakers, winners of three national championships since 1988, the frigid town is something to skip altogether.

This year has been no exception as Lake State is a perfect 6–0 thus far, including a big 4–1 win at Michigan State. The Lakers have scored four or more goals in five of their six games as the Ship's Horn, fired after Lake State goals, has kept area residents up late on game nights at Abel Arena.

Senior winger Sean Tallaire has been making the legendary horn sound more than anyone else this season, leading Lake State with six goals and five assists. The Winnipeg native was named the CCHA's Offensive Player of the Week for his six–point effort in this past weekend's sweep of St. Lawrence, and moved into 10th place on the school's all–time scoring chart.

The Lakers, who are off to their best start since opening the 1968–69 season at 16–0, will face their toughest challenge of the season as they face upstarts Western Michigan and Bowling Green this weekend at Abel.

Western Michigan checks into Friday's game at 6–2 coming off of a home–and–home sweep of Notre Dame. Earlier this year, the Broncos knocked off the mighty Wolverines in Michigan's Yost Arena and likely will not back down from the defending CCHA Champions.

Coach Bill Wilkinson's team features the CCHA's top three scorers in the surprising Justin Cardwell (9–6–15), the prolific Jeremy Brown (5–10–15) and defenseman Steve Duke (1–12–13), an early All–America candidate. At this juncture, Cardwell has equalled his output from 33 games last season.

In addition, Marc Magliarditi has excelled between the pipes during his freshman season, posting a solid 2.57 GAA with a .917 save percentage. Magliarditi was named CCHA defensive Player of the Week for stopping 83 of 88 shots October 20 and 21.

Even stronger in the Lake Superior net though, has been Sophomore sensation John Grahme who has posted a 5–0 record to accompany a microscopic 1.07 GAA and astounding .960 save percentage.

Bowling Green has been no slouch in the early–going either. The Falcons are 6–1, the sole loss coming Saturday on the road at non–conference foe Clarkson.

An interesting match–up should be the Laker penalty killing, second in the CCHA at .889 percent, going up against the Broncos' second–ranked power play at 27.6 percent and the Falcons' third–ranked power play at 26.6 percent.

The winner of this tussle will likely emerge victorious.

• Maine's Barry Clukey has left the team indefinitely after an argument with Black Bear coach Shawn Walsh.

Clukey, a junior from just down I–95 in Waterville, had reportedly been upset after being benched for the entire NCAA Championship run last year and it has been speculated that the anger carried over to this season.

Walsh and Clukey had a heated exchange on the bench during the third period of Maine's 4–4 tie with New Hampshire Friday night, and did not play afterwards.

After taking a penalty shot in the post–game shootout, Clukey left the team, reportedly for good.

Happier news out of Alfond though is the steady play of freshman defenseman Brett Clark, who received this week's Hockey East Rookie of the Week honor. Clark tallied three assists in his first league games this weekend and his improved defensive work enabled the Black Bears to restrain a high–flying UNH attack and hang onto a pair of ties.

• The ECAC will look to improve on its image of being the "Easily Crushed Athletic Conference" as its season kicks off this weekend.

Last season, the ECAC's sole NCAA entrants were a slumping RPI team and an overated Clarkson team, both of which were dismissed in the first round. The ECAC has not had a Final Four representative since 1991, the only conference not to do so.

The Vermont Catamounts have an excellent shot of silencing the anti–ECAC taunts both this year and next.

Picked first in the conference's pre–season coaches' poll, UVM has not disappointed, winning its season opener 7–4 over UNH and sweeping a series on the road against Miami of Ohio. The Catamounts, currently ranked sixth nationally, have only fallen to Boston University this season. That was a narrow 5–4 defeat at the hands of an emotionally charged– up BU team in its first action since Travis Roy's tragic paralysis.

Martin St. Louis and Eric Perrin pack the best 1–2 offensive punch around. The two juniors from Laval, Quebec are each considered Hobey Baker candidates after exceptional seasons last year in which they tied for the ECAC scoring lead and were selected first–team All–ECAC.

Junior All–America goaltender Tim Thomas comes off a fantastic season in which he led the ECAC with a 2.68 GAA and was second with a .915 save percentage, just .003 behind RPI's Mike Tamburro.

The knock on Vermont last year was a lack of offensive depth and defense, which kept them out of the NCAA's. The offense is deeper with J.C. Reid stepping forward to lead the team thus far with five goals.

Defensively senior Steve McKell will lead a solid but thin corps, with only seven skating defensemen. With McKell as the Catamounts' only major loss, expect a solid national– caliber club this year, and a Final Four contender the next.

Harvard looked sharp in trouncing Brown 7–2 Saturday night at the Bears' Meehan Auditorium, in the first conference game of the year.

With a pair of goals Saturday night from ECAC Rookie of the Week Craig Adams and a goal and two assists from fellow freshman Craig MacDonald, Harvard has a solid young core to build on. In addition, freshman Michael Bent, out of Nobles, is expected to contribute this year.

Tripp Tracy should be his usual stellar self in the Crimson goal and lead the team in its quest for the ECAC title and an NCAA birth. Harvard won the conference's last national title in 1989.

Colgate figured to be amongst the league leaders after being picked second in the preseason coaches' poll, just behind UVM, but has sputtered against strong Hockey East competition thus far. Colgate fell to both Maine and UNH, with their only wins coming over Canadian schools Waterloo and Ottawa.

Big guns Mike Harder, Chris DeProfio and Earl Cronan will have to step up their play for Colgate to go far. Friday's game against Harvard will be a good indication of just where the Red Raiders stand in the conference.

• BU, still left with a lump in its heart after the Travis Roy incident, got an emotional lift with 12 minutes to play in the Terriers' 10–2 thumping of Northeastern Saturday night.

J.P. McKersie entered the BU net for the first time since the 1994 NCAA Final against Lake Superior.

McKersie was riding his bike home from work one night last summer and was struck by a car. McKersie was sent into a coma and doctors feared brain damage. Weeks after the crash McKersie still could not walk, but Saturday night he was able to make five saves against the Huskies.

The ovation McKersie received as he skated to the net, by many accounts drowned out the ovation that resounded through Walter Brown Arena two long weeks prior, as the National Championship banner was raised.

Through both McKersie and Roy, in addition to Chris O'Sullivan's neck injury two seasons ago, the Terriers and their fans are receiving a heavy dose of human–interest stories that overshadow hockey.

While they do serve as a valuable and constant reminder that there are bigger things than winning games, stories such as these are three too many if you ask the Terrier faithful.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 → 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

The Body Shops Wellness Seminars
Wednesday, Nov. 8th* - Breaking the Myths about Fat.
This seminar looks at the latest in the no-fat food craze.
Room 17 Boyden Building at 7:00 PM.
Wednesday Nov. 15.* Free-weights. Put your mind and your muscle together and learn how to lift free-weights.
Boyden Body Shop at 7:00 PM.
Free to Body Shop Members
$5.00 for Non Members
For more information call 545-0884

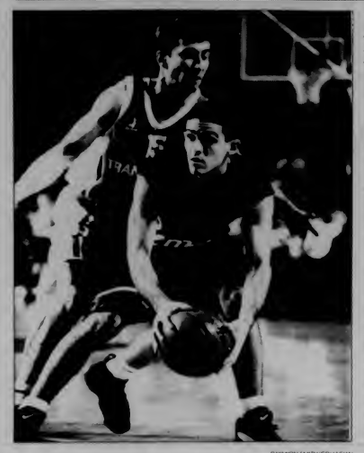
WEDNESDAY BUD LITE RAFFLE NITE
16oz. Cup Bud Light 99¢
JAMES WESTVIEW CAFE
Busch Bott. 99¢
Hats, T-Shirts, Mike's Money
Special Prize:
The Bruins at The Fleet Center

The Bluewall
DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday, Nov. 9th
9:30pm - 1:00am
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM
"Last Chance To Dance" with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior guard Edgar Padilla played well in his first exibition action dishing out 10 assists and making four steals in helping UMass to a 105–75 victory last night.

■ hoops

continued from page 12

Three points would be as close as Dinamo would get, as the Minutemen pulled away going on a 20–5 run to make it 52–32. Camby scored seven straight points in the run, including one basket where he stole the ball and then layed it in at the other end. Padilla had two treys in the run.

The Minutemen were dominant underneath, scoring 75 points in the paint compared to Dinamo's 27. UMass also had 19 points off of fast breaks, while Dinamo had nine.

Andrei Olbrekht led Dinamo with 25 points while Guerassimov finished with 15. Vadim Diatchkov had nine assists. Tyrone Weeks showed little effects from foot surgery, finishing the night with six points.

Camby was his usual self. Along with his 24 points (11–for–18 from the field), the junior center rejected four shots and grabbed 10 boards. But he too, like Calipari, wasn't happy about the team's performance.

"If we can't play defense against these guys, what are we going to do against Kentucky?" Camby said. "We have three weeks to prepare. With a lot of hard work, if we work hard in practice, we'll be alright."

The Minutemen open up their season Nov. 28 when they will battle Kentucky at the Great Eight Tournament.

Meadowlands makes pact with Devils

By Jeffery Gold
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — After threats to move and months of negotiations, the Devils made it official Tuesday — they are staying in New Jersey for at least 12 more years.

The NHL team signed a lease to remain at the Meadowlands Arena, ending a contentious stretch during which the Devils won their first Stanley Cup and the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority sued to keep them from going to Nashville, Tenn. The agreement isn't nearly as lucrative as what Nashville was offering, conceded team owner John McMullen, who credited Devils fans and Gov. Christie Whitman's special envoy to the talks — husband John Whitman — with convincing him to stay.

The deal requires no taxpayer expense, the governor said, as in the move of the Cleveland Browns to Baltimore.

It allows the Devils to quit the state immediately, however, if New Jersey starts building a "major league facility," such as a baseball stadium, without a team signed for it.

Addressing persistent rumors the New York Yankees might be lured across the river, McMullen said, "I'm going to do everything I can, within the agreement, to keep the Yankees from coming to New Jersey."

Changing the arena's name, once a proposal, is now part of the authority's mandate, although it is not clear when the rights to the name will be sold to a sponsor. The arena now honors Brendan Byrne, who helped create the Meadowlands complex while governor from 1974-82.

The Whitmans attended Tuesday's announcement, along with NHL commissioner Gary Bettman, McMullen and authority president Robert Mulcahy III.

McMullen said he was greatly influenced to stay after the Stanley Cup victory rally in June at the Meadowlands.

"This doesn't provide me any livelihood, but it does provide a great deal of satisfaction and fun," he said. "I can break even."

Nevertheless, the new agreement guarantees $3.2 million in annual revenue to the team and forgives a $1.65 million loan. Also, McMullen is about to obtain a $25 million private loan to consolidate losses incurred since the team moved to New Jersey from Denver in 1982, which he said was necessary for him to stay. Those terms were part of a tentative pact announced July 13, which had also anticipated the installation of 14 new luxury suites and 1,600 luxury club seats at the arena.

The construction, however, is no longer part of the deal, although the authority hopes to install club seats within five years.

Mulcahy said it may not be profitable or possible for the authority to build suites, and initial plans for the club seats were not acceptable to the authority.

However, the guaranteed revenue to the Devils rises to $5.2 million after five years, when the sports authority hopes to be getting revenue from the club seats and other improvements. The tentative agreement did not anticipate the increased guarantee, but Gov. Whitman said she was confident the authority's plans to generate additional revenue, including a sale of rights to the arena's name, would be able to meet the terms, thus keeping taxpayers from picking up any shortfall.

The authority, an independent state agency, operates the Meadowlands sports complex, which includes Giants Stadium, used by the Giants and Jets; the arena, used by the Devils and Nets; and the Meadowlands Racetrack, a harness and thoroughbred course. Under the new lease:

• The Devils must continue to use New Jersey in their name.

• The sports authority no longer gets any fee from the Devils if they win the Stanley Cup again. Last season's victory cost the team $200,000.

• The authority will improve the arena's acoustics and aesthetics, refurbish all seats over three years and build an entertainment-conference room for the Devils in the arena.

• The press box will be moved higher, adding 100 seats in a prime location.

• Litigation between the authority and Devils will be dropped.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian...
...For all your informational needs

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $140 $280
PARIS $175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
Roundtrip
TOKYO $859
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

The Hottest Thing In Outdoor Footwear
NIKE!!!
NIKE Day Sat., Nov. 11th
All Nikes $5 OFF
A NOUS DEUX SENTIERS.
draw for a free pair
Nike rep present
the Mountain Goat
177 Main Street, Northampton • 586-0803 • Open 7 Days
Outdoor Clothing • Footwear • Travel Gear

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Rental Weekend Spocial
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED.
CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!
From the UMass Recycling Program
It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00
Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.
All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.
Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

DID YOU FORGET TO RESERVE YOUR ROOM?
DID YOU HAVE PROBLEMS USING THE VOICE RESPONSE SYSTEM?
IF SO, COME SEE US IN 235 WHITMORE ON WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8TH. THIS IS YOUR LAST CHANCE TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR THE SPRING 1996 SEMESTER.
IF YOU WANT TO RESERVE A DIFFERENT ROOM IN YOUR BUILDING CONTACT YOUR CLUSTER OFFICE WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15TH DURING ANNOUNCED HOURS. THANK YOU.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to send wishes to all of its new sisters with November birthdays. Amy S. Melissa T., Kim L., and Amy D.!

U MASS HOCKEY
Undefeated U Mass Minutemen take on U Lowell Friday night @ the Mullins Center! Students, pick up your free tickets today @ Hicks Cage & go check out your new starting team!

University Productions & concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 6:00 in room 162. Come get involved.

AUTO FOR SALE

Convertible '85 Dodge 600. Beautiful rust-free car. $2,700 obo. 549-9240. Brian.

1995 Chevy S Blazer Good condition. New engine. $2,700 obo. 549-0835.

'86 SUBARU
4 wheel drive, power windows. Brand new brakes, water pump and muffler. $1350 or b.o. Call 582-9105.

EMPLOYMENT

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring mgrs. for summer positions in Boston, Hartford, and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $4000 $10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 800-589-9939

Cash part time business No selling turn $2500 into $32,000.00 Call 941-766-9001

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16 Jan 10 $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-6099

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ + free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent, no experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext C1040.

If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-209-8142 (PIN 2172).

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-8pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 8am-5pm Mon-Fri, 413-586-8635. ABT Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mt Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

Looking for Adventure Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Fax resume to (617) 236-4113. Ann Tricia or call (800) 783-4237 x 334.

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal, full time employment available at national parks, forests, & wildlife preserves. Benifits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 ext N50017

We want you! Unique liquor related product. Retails for $20! Investment required $2500. Follow our plan and if any 2 sales per day/ each location your prof. $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

FOR SALE

Brother correctronic 140 typewriter. 5 thousand character storage memory. Almost new! Best offer. Call 546-3904.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263.

LOST

British passport It was left in a black backpack in Gelanos on Sat night. I desperately need it to go home at Xmas. If found call Sara 546-3405.

PERSONALS

Rabbit Have a happy Wednesday. Posh

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 548-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail 11/96 One room in large 3 bedroom w/ yard $275+ But kne extras! Leda 665-3572

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 548-1794.

Foreign Students DV 1 greencard program available 1-800-880-7167.

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union. 545-2771.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

TRAVEL

Free Travel! Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group/Travel free. Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710.

Spring break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht. One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-763-4001. See us on the Net http://www.shadow.net/~ezsail/.

Winter Break Special. Killington week $268. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3637.

WANTED

Really want a guinea pig from a good home. Please call 253-1979.

Wanted!!! Individuals, student organizations promote spring break. Earn money and FREE TRIPS. Call inter-campus programs 1-800-327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Wanted 100 students to lose 8-100 pounds. Call (303) 577-7975.

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES(March 21–April 19): Good news arrives about family related issues. Chin up. Be careful in matters of money or business. Consumerism is a key.

TAURUS(April 20–May 20): Take advantage of financial opportunities, they could be lucrative. Make the most of fresh starts and make wise decisions involving employment. Don't trade your love for ambition or you get washed away.

GEMINI(May 21–June 20): Do something spontaneous today. It will prove stimulating and get you back on track. There is nothing out of the realm of possibility if you believe it can happen. Don't forget to call mom, she misses you.

CANCER(June 21–July 22): It's going to be one of those days. Don't leave the house unless entirely necessary until after 1 p.m. Tread carefully and be cautious with decision making.

LEO(July 23–Aug. 22): The new arrangements in your life kick off to a promising start. Take advantage of opportunities but don't work too hard. Call someone you haven't talked to recently. True friends will always be there for you.

VIRGO(Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Do a good deed today, it will boost your spirits as well as someone else's. Feed the duck. Accept a friend's invitation to share laughter, fun and great food. Sometimes the road less traveled is less traveled for a damn good reason.

LIBRA(Sept. 23–Aug. 22): Tread carefully around sensitive issues with people you care about. Don't try to change them. Work within the scope of their personality to make things work.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Perform random acts of kindess and they will be returned tenfold. Don't stand up in a canoe. Look both ways and always smile at strangers.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22–Dec. 21): A logical problem can be solved if you take a calm clear-headed approach. Devote more time to community or church activities. A business offer requires some soul searching.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Go for the gold today. It's one of those days that things are going right, because you're good enough, you're smart enough and doggone it people like you.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Your recent success will likely continue, but be careful to avoid any more unnecessary embarassing situations. Appeasement is a good thing. Wear baggy clothing.

PISCES(Feb. 19–March 20): A good day to see a cheesy movie, because the weather is cold. Stay up late and have long conversations with good buddies. Buy a box of tissues for that friend with a cold.

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!
When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
edited by Trude Michael Jaffe

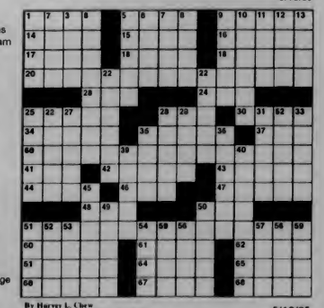
ACROSS
1 Feigned
5 Cabel
9 Receipt
14 Skirt for "Swan Lake"
15 Spacewoman Sally
16 Winged
17 Iron and Stone
18 So be it
19 Upright
20 Opie meets the Mouth that Roared?
23 Hose problem
24 Norma or Charlotte
25 Embroidery loop
28 Palindromic Turkish title
30 Musical sound
34 Tell missile
35 Refuse
37 River island
38 Wynonna's mom meets Taxi man?
41 Judge Lance
42 Airs
43 Oblivion
44 Penny
46 Lair
47 Goose genus
48 Japan or Siam add-on
50 In the past
51 The Duke meets Las Vegas star?
60 — of information
61 Merit
62 Treaty
63 Callas
64 Capital of 9 Down
65 Goddess of Discord
66 French port
67 Bishoprics
68 Sprint

DOWN
1 Sheriff's badge
2 "Les Misérables" author
3 "...— o'clock scholar"
4 Button or shitake
5 Crustacean
6 Popular bean in Peru?
7 River to the Baltic
8 Minister to
9 Site of 64 Across
10 Storage place for linen
11 Steak order
12 Type type, for short
13 Comes before mell
21 Bamboozle
22 Famous 1929 event
25 What followed 22 Down
26 Incensed
27 Sing like Bing
28 Actress Eve
29 Zeus and Mars
31 Ovens
32 Ornamental recess
33 The clear sky
35 Sand hill
36 Stored fodder
39 Herod's dominion
40 Celebrated
45 Sampras' racket
49 Popular type of shirt
50 Old Delhi coins
51 Door part
52 Sharif
53 Take on
54 Certain votes
55 Neck section
56 Pennsylvania port
57 Home of ancient Irish kings
58 He gave Britain the "fit"
59 Nibble on tidbits

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	T	R	I	P		G	A	T	E			H	A	L
A	R	E	N	A		O	S	H	A		L	A	L	O
C	U	T	C	L	A	S	S	E	S		O	T	T	O
K	E	E	L		S	P	U	R	T		S	C	A	M
				W	H	E	R	E		L	E	H	R	B
N	I	C	E	R		L	E	I	S	U	R	E
A	S	H	L	E	Y		S	N	A	G		T	B	S
G	L	O	S	S	O				V	A	N	M	A	N
S	A	P		T	R	E	S		E	N	C	A	S	E
	A		S	I	L	E	N	T	S		D	O	N	E
O	U	T	R	E		P	R	I	M	A
A	R	I	A		A	R	I	S	E		A	S	T	A
T	A	C	T		G	I	V	E	N		T	H	E	A
E	L	K	E		I	S	E	R			V	E	R	D
S	S	S			T	E	R	A			A	M	A	S

5/18/95



By Harvey L. Chen
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

5/18/95

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Garfield By Jim Davis

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'VE DECIDED TO BE MORE OF A HANDS-ON MANAGER.
MOVE THE MOUSE UP UP OVER MORE NOW CLICK IT!! CLICK IT!!
NO!!! YOU FOOL!!!
THIS HAS "LONG DAY" WRITTEN ALL OVER IT

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY STEWARDESS, BABY, I NEED MYSELF ANOTHER BEER, I AIN'T COCKED ENOUGH TO... WHERE YA' GOIN'?
EXCUSE ME MAM, DO YOU HAVE A NON-SMOKING SECTION? THE SECOND-HAND INCONSIDERATION IS BOTHERING ME
I APOLOGIZE THAT WE DON'T, BUT WOULD A BEER HELP? I'D LOVE TO GET YOU ONE.
THANK YE' KINDLY MAM, I DON'T THINK I BE COCKED ENOUGH

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

IT'S GETTING SO I FEAR STOP SIGNS ON EVERY STREET-CORNER SOMEBODY WANTS MONEY FROM ME I'M SICK OF IT!
WASHING MY WINDSHIELD. COLLECTING FALSE CHARITY. KEYING MY CAR IF I WAVE THEM OFF!...
THERE'S NO TELLING HOW LOW SOME PEOPLE WILL STOOP FOR MONEY!
ALLLL WE ARE SAAAYING! IS GIVE GUNS A CHANCE!
THIS IS CLINTON'S FAULT.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Z.
WAKE! WAKE UP! YOU'RE IN THE COMIC STRIP!
AH, OK.. UM... HEY, MCGUFFMAN, DID YOU, UH I MEAN, I WILL YOU UH...
AW, SCREW IT... IT'S BEEN SO LONG I FORGOT HOW TO BE FUNNY

Garfield By Jim Davis

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

Butterling By John Ottinger

NAT NOWHERE TO BE FOUND. THERE'S NO WEIGHT CLAUSE IN MY CONTRACT. WHY DIDN'T I THINK OF IT BEFORE? READERS LIKE THEIR CARTOON CHARACTERS BLUM AND ACTIVE. THE ROAD TO PORTSIDE IS MY TICKET OUT OF HERE!
CONTRACT
CHUNK! CHUNK! CHUNK! CHUNK!
AHHH! CHINS-A-PLENTY. ALL RIGHT, A DEAL IS A DEAL. DRAW ME A TICK RAT FRANK!. SO I CAN PUSH MY INSIDE THROUGH TO FREEDOM!
TWOO FIM!
DWAW DEM MADDA!
YEWEE FUNNY! MY WOB AH STUCK!

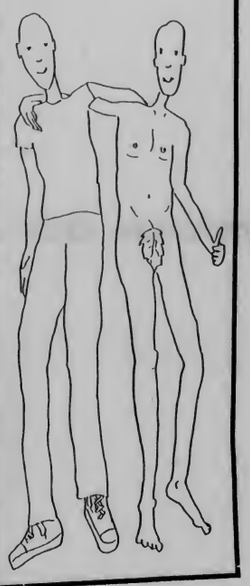
Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I've been trying for about a year to get a part time job. I filled out a ton of applications.

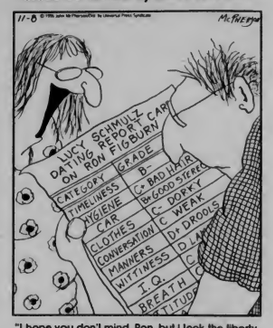
All last summer I went to bed with my pants on... I did that just in case they called me in the morning. I wanted to be ready.

But I think there was a flaw in my approach. I should've been fresh. Fresh is more important than ready.

I should've gone to bed naked. Fresh is more interesting..



Close to Home By John McPherson



"I hope you don't mind, Ron, but I took the liberty of writing up a report card on our date last night."

Geofrey By Embryo

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... James Ganley
Production ..... David Voldan
Brian Inocencio

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH	DINNER
Beef Stew/Biscuit	Hot & Spicy Chicken
Chicken Cutlet	Baked Ziti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Greek Style Skillet	Korean BBQ Tofu
Chicken Cutlet	Baked Ziti

Thursday

LUNCH	DINNER
Cheese Pizza	Roast Beef/Fied Shrimp
Reuben Sandwich	Bread & Spread
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Cheese Pizza	Beans & Rice /Shrimp
Garden Vegan Burger	Bread & Spread

Friday

LUNCH	DINNER
Fishburger	Beef Strudel w/ Gravy
Ravioli w/ Tomato Sauce	Turkey Tenderloin
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Red Beans	Curried Chick Peas
Fishburger	Fiesta Rice & Cheese

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things to do When You're Really Bored in Class

10. Play a rousing game of Yahtzee with yourself.
9. Periodically shout at your pencil, "NO! I won't kill for you."
8. Sneeze every time the professor says "the."
7. Lather, rinse, repeat.
6. Have a picnic on your desk.
5. Play with Barbie.
4. Keep asking the professor, "When do we get to the sex part?"
3. Snore like a buzz-saw.
2. Write notes with your feet.
1. Knit.

Quote of the Day

"If we had known we'd get this famous, we'd have called ourselves something else."

–Glen Phillips of Toad the Wet Sprocket

PUT OUR JEANS ON

GAP
DENIM

For the nearest Gap store, call 1-800 GAP STYLE

Sports

Minutemen look sloppy in win

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The last time the Massachusetts men's basketball team wore black, the Minutemen were the No. 1 team in the nation, and ended up losing to George Washington.

The Minutemen wore black again last night in their first exhibition game of the 1995-96 season, against Dinamo of Novosibirsk, Russia at the William D. Mullins Center.

Massachusetts	105
Dinamo	75

Although UMass played poorly, just as they did against GW, the results were different — the Minutemen came away with the win.

But Massachusetts coach John Calipari still was not happy about his team's 105-75 thumping of Dinamo.

"That wasn't a very good performance," he said. "I was a little upset with the decision making. Eighteen turnovers against the zone is a lot. We were playing against us, not playing against the other team."

On the other hand, Dinamo wasn't too protective of the ball either, as it committed 26 turnovers, making for an extremely sloppy game, as one might expect from an exhibition contest.

The Minutemen did have some solid performances though. Marcus Camby had a team-high 24 points, as five Minutemen scored in double-figures. Carmelo Travieso had 18, Dana Dingle had 17, Inus Norville added 14 and Donta Bright finished with 10. The only Minuteman who didn't score was freshman walk-on Ross Burns, who entered the game with 1:04 to go.

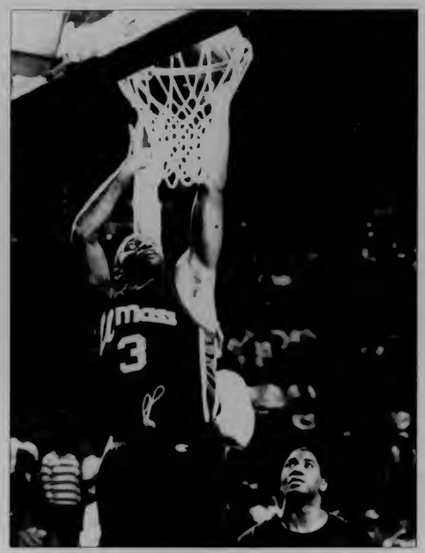
Perhaps the biggest night came from Travieso. The junior guard connected on four three-pointers and finished with the 18 points on 7-for-15 shooting. With depth at the guard position being one of the Minutemen's weaknesses, Travieso's play was much-needed. His counterpart, Edgar Padilla, dished out a game-high 10 assists, but still committed six turnovers. He finished with seven points and four steals.

The Minutemen started off slow, holding an early 7-0 lead, but Dinamo proceeded to go on a 12-2 run (including seven straight points) to take a 12-9 lead. UMass climbed back in front when a Travieso layup started off a 15-0 run which included a monster dunk by Camby which made it 22-12 at the time.

"In the beginning, we weren't ready to play," Travieso said. "It's a good thing this was an exhibition."

Dinamo slowly creeped back into it, cutting a 12-point lead to a three-point lead on a Dmitri Shoumikhin trey making it 30-27. Konstant Guerassimov keyed the comeback with six points.

Turn to HOOPS, page 8



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Senior co-captain Dana Dingle rattles the rim for two of his 17 points as the Massachusetts Minutemen beat Dinamo of Russia 105-75 in exhibition action last night at the Mullins Center.

Bryant looking at LaSalle; A-10 recruiting falling off

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The nation's top high school senior basketball player is leaning toward committing to ... LaSalle.

You read that correctly. Kobe Bryant, a player that most recruiting experts consider the top prospect in the nation is strongly considering becoming an Explorer.

The catch? You ask.

Bryant's father is the legendary Joe "Jelly Bean" Bryant, who is currently employed as, you guessed it, the assistant coach at LaSalle.

This of course presents an interesting recruiting scenario. A coach can't give a recruit money or shoes, but a father certainly can. Does the fact that there is a limit on how many home visits coaches can make mean that Bryant has to restrict contact with his son?

Of course not.

But what a gold mine Bryant could be for the struggling program.

Now granted LaSalle isn't the only horse in the Bryant race. North Carolina, Duke, Kentucky, Michigan and a host of Big East schools are all chasing what looks to be the biggest prize in the recruiting pool.

But Bryant hasn't reached prop. 48 requirements yet and is considering what insiders are now calling "Pulling a Garnett." Bryant is considering bypassing college all together and taking a chance on trying his luck in the NBA.

If Garnett is successful this season, look for others to follow his lead as well.

• • •

With three verbal commitments already in the stable for next year, Massachusetts has its sights set on some other big names.

UMass appears to be trailing in the race for prize forward Tim Thomas with UNC and Rutgers in the lead, and several other schools fighting for position.

Shamel Jones, a 6-foot-8 power/small forward from Brooklyn reportedly has considerable interest in becoming a Minuteman.

Chris Carrawell, a forward with a solid shooting stroke, whose list until recently included just about every school in division one has narrowed his list to five schools including UMass.

The Minutemen are also still pursuing guards Kevin Morris (New York City) and David Jackson (Portland, OR), forward Todd Palmer (Ramsey, NJ) and center Ajmal Basit (Jersey City).

• • •

After UMass, the Atlantic 10 is hurting in terms of recruiting. Other than UMass, Atlantic 10 schools are only on the final lists of two of the top 40 players listed in Reidel's Roundball Review's top high school seniors.

After Bryant, only George Washington's pursuit of Patrick Ngongba (No. 38) could bring the rest of the A-10 a star.

Even Temple's John Chaney, who used to always be a top contender for at least one blue chipper is out of the picture with most of the top studs. The Owls are in the hunt for some lesser prospects and have already received a verbal commitment from Julian Dunkley, a 6-foot-8 forward who didn't make Reidel's top 100 seniors.

• • •

While the Minutemen appear poised to capture a strong recruiting class, former UMass associate coach Bill Bayno is scoring big as a recruiter as the head coach of Nevada-Las Vegas.

He has already landed 6-foot-10 center Isiah Epps and is in the running for several other talents including Lester Earl (Reidel's No. 3), Joe Adkins and DeCoursey Jamison.

Bruins capitalize on Carey

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md — Jozef Stumpel and Kevin Stevens scored 57 seconds apart in the third period Tuesday night as the Boston Bruins ended their three-game losing streak by rallying past the Washington Capitals 4-3.

Sandy Moger also scored in the third period for the Bruins, who appeared headed for their fifth loss in six games before reeling off three goals in a span of 2:55.

Stumpel started the comeback with 13:47 left by lining a wrist shot past screened goalie Jim Carey from the right circle to make it 2-2.

Less than a minute later, Carey let a shot by Mariusz Czerkawski pop out of his catching glove. Ted Donato passed the rebound across the slot to Stevens, who tapped the puck into the wide-open net. Moger capped the surge by skating down the left side past Keith Jones and lifting a shot into the top right corner of the net with 10:51 remaining.

Washington's Peter Bondra scored his second goal of the game with 1:21 to go, but the Capitals did not get another shot. The victory lifted Boston out of last place in the Northeast Division. Bruins goalie Blaine Lacher stopped 23 shots to end a four-game losing streak.

The Capitals were 7-0-0 when leading after the second period. Bondra, who also got an assist, has scored in all eight games since ending his holdout on Oct. 20. The NHL defending goal-scoring champion has a team-high nine goals - seven in his last four games - and four assists.

Down 1-0, Boston tied it on a power-play goal by Neely at 14:07 of the second period. Neely's seventh goal of the season, a slap shot from the right circle that zipped through Carey's legs, ended a streak of 34 consecutive penalty kills by the Capitals.

Washington regained the lead with one minute left in the period. Lacher made a sliding save of a backhander by Bondra, but Calle Johansson got the rebound between the circles and blasted the puck past the prone goaltender.

The Capitals went up 1-0 at 17:24 of the first period when the charging Bondra fired a slap shot from the top of the left circle past Lacher, who had come out of the net to cut down the angle.

Hartford 7, San Jose 3.

HARTFORD, Conn. — The slumping Hartford Whalers got off to a fresh start under new coach Paul Maurice with a 7-3 win Tuesday night over the troubled San Jose Sharks, who only have won once in their first 13 games.

Andrew Cassels scored twice and five different teammates had goals for the Whalers, who fired coach Paul Holmgren on Monday following a 1-6-1 start.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rookie defensemen Kyle McLaren and the Boston Bruins got back on track tonight as they downed the Washington Capitals, 4-3.

SF-Dallas matchup, doesn't match up

JUSTIN C. SMITH on the NFL

All right you die-hard football fans, this is the weekend you have been waiting for since the league announced the 1995 regular season schedule. San Francisco at Dallas.

Entering the showdown in Texas Stadium, the Cowboys are tied for the best mark in the NFL at 8-1 and the 49ers are, (gulp) third in the NFC West with a 5-4 record and right on their heels are the expansion Carolina Panthers.

The Fox Television Network had to be foaming at the mouth once again, with the clash of the two football wrecking balls, when it was announced. Now with all the injuries to the reigning Super Bowl Champs, the ridiculous spreads that they garner on the rest of the league has been slapped on them. Dallas by nine and it could go larger.

I realize that this is a game that San Fran really needs so they'll be up for it, as well as the fact that they will probably have Steve Young back in the lineup. But he will not be at the health that made him last year's Most Valuable Player of the regular season. Even backup QB Elvis Grbac is hurt and would not be at full strength, so if Young were to reinjure himself during the game it would up to third- stringer Cary Conklin to dissect the dominant Dallas defense.

Defense will be the key word for San Francisco this weekend, because no matter who starts under center, they cannot win the same way they prevailed over the Cowboys in last year's NFC title game. 38-28. And the reasons are almost one in the same:

Deion Sanders no longer plays cornerback for San Fran and Deion Sanders now plays cornerback for the Cowboys.

If anyone can do anything about stopping Jerry Rice it is "Prime Time". Rice fumbled near the goal line this passed weekend, look for him to come out very determined more because of that added to the Sanders confrontation. I wonder if Deion will try and shake Jerry's hand like he did in Atlanta.

If the Niner's defense steps it up and Young is healthy, it will be close, otherwise look for Dallas to cover the spread, handily.

• The fact Art Modell has decided he wants to move the Cleveland Browns to Baltimore is a travesty. The talk of other franchises moving (i.e. Houston Oilers to Nashville) hurts the sacredness of the game.

Not only do fans not know where their favorite players will be from year-to-year, now they have to worry about their teams. Imagine Al Davis and Jerry Jones on the phone:

Davis: "I'll trade you the Raiders for the Cowboys."

Jones: "Only if I can keep the Cowboy cheerleaders."

• With the New York Jets and Washington Redskins taking this weekend off, all NFL teams have taken their bye week for the 1995 campaign and that can mean only one thing: the start of the stretch drive for the playoffs.

After the Cowboys 34-12 destruction of what would have been their only competition for the NFC East crown, the Philadelphia Eagles, that division is the only one without a true race entering week 11. It's time to determine which teams have a chance of making a serious playoff run.

I'll start with the AFC West where only two teams are fighting for the top spot. Kansas City (8-1) goes up against the Chargers who must knock off the Chiefs this weekend if they have any hopes of getting a wild-card. If San Diego can reach deep and pull off the upset Oakland (7-2) should pull even with K.C. as they face the lowly Giants. The Raiders can't look passed NY to the Cowboys which they have the following week however. The rest of the way, Oakland has the easier of the schedule, as well as the horses to win the West. Don't be surprised if John Elway heads into the match up with the Chiefs Dec. 17th, having won all games form now till then.

Has there ever been a division as bad as the AFC Central? Not in recent memory. The only reason the banged up Steelers are a game ahead of the pack is because they can beat up on the rest of the division which is just hurting themselves. The Browns are in turmoil with there proposed move to Baltimore, the Oilers are coming around behind a revived Chris Chandler but emotion can only go so far in the NFL. Cincinnati has to play Green Bay, Chicago and Minnesota the three nest teams in the NFC Central the last four weeks. They will drop at least two losses on the

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

Massachusetts vs. Ska Samara

Melissa Gurile

7 P.M. • THE MULLINS CENTER

Pandolpho puts on a shorthanded show

When the Massachusetts power play struck five times against Army, it was beyond comprehension. Even Roget might have trouble coming up with an adjective to describe what Boston University did Saturday night against Northeastern.

The Terriers tallied a Hockey East record five shorthanded goals, three of them by Jay Pandolpho.

College Hockey by Leigh Torbin

On the weekend Pandolpho had four shorthanded goals and a pair of assists, one of them coming on Friday's game- winner at Northeastern. It was the second hat-trick of the season for the league's Player of the Week.

Still more impressive is that the Terriers have scored more goals while shorthanded this season, than their opponents have while holding the man advantage (8-7).

BU should consider playing its entire season man-down.

• Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, located on the state's northern peninsula, is hardly a tropical paradise. To

Turn to COLLEGE HOCKEY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 46 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, November 9, 1995

Coffee is perking up all over...
Coffee houses, cafes and shops have become a staple of American life, and more specifically the fossil fuel of a college campus (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Revolutionary warns society
Ramona Africa spoke last night at the Campus Center about the abuse of power in the United States (See story, page 3).

Myers creating goals for Minutewomen
Junior midfielder Rebecca Myers has developed into a leader for the NCAA-bound UMass women's soccer team (See Sports, page 20).

Extended Forecast
Today should be partly sunny and cold with increasing cloudiness that could lead to snow flurries. A chance of light snow or rain is expected on Friday morning, but a warmer day and weekend.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 22	HIGH: 44 LOW: 35	HIGH: 40 LOW: 32

Chancellor to appoint task force

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott is appointing a task force to work on a proposed new harassment policy which would apply to the entire campus community. Currently, only undergraduate students have such a policy.

In a letter sent to the all University employees and distributed randomly to students, Scott said he hopes to have the new policy in place by next semester.

"We now have a document that is just a starting point for discussion," Scott said.

The proposal has initiated some controversy because it limits freedom of speech when the expression of that freedom is a form of harassment, said Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson.

Response to proposal

There have only been about 20 responses to the Chancellor's office about the proposal, said Scott. About half were negative.

The strongest response to the proposal was made by a few faculty members who contacted the Boston Globe, objecting to any limitation on the freedom of speech.

"Critics say the proposed speech code is Orwellian," according to the Boston Globe, which also said faculty was upset "their input is being sought at the last moment."

In actuality, the proposal cannot go into effect until the task force writes a final proposal, which is passed by the Student Government Association (SGA), the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) and the Faculty Senate, before it would go into effect. The task force will have faculty, staff, administrative and student representatives. They will have an opportunity to "re-craft" the policy, Scott said.

Faculty interviewed for the Boston Globe article was concerned that the policy may curtail curriculum choice or prohibit talking about certain topics, such as the breakdown of the family.

"[The policy] does not affect curriculum issues in the classroom," Scott said. "What it does apply to is harassment of one individual by another individual, more or less face to face."

According to Pearson, "The proposed policy does restrict people's freedom of speech, and there are faculty members who believe no restrictions on the freedom of speech are appropriate and believe such restrictions are unconstitutional."

However, Pearson argued, courts have accepted such limitations when them involve libel, slander, and — more recently — sexual harassment.

According to Pearson and Scott, the proposal extends that same limitation to any incidence involving racial harassment.

The restrictions would not apply to public speakers, Scott said.

Scott said other objections to the proposal were voiced by individuals who believed the policy was to be passed as it is.

The Boston Globe article was, according to Pearson, the result of "a serious misunderstanding of where we are."

Working out the details

The proposed policy includes a Statement on Freedom of Speech, a proposed Consensual Relations Policy, changes in the Sexual Harassment and Discrimination grievances procedures, a Statement on Workplace Violence, guidelines for gender-neutral language in publications, and a Statement on Religious Displays and Religious Holidays.

For undergraduates, the major difference between the proposed policy and the existing policy in the Undergraduate Code of Student Conduct is that grievances would go through the Affirmative Action Office, as opposed to the student judicial system.

"The policy itself is simply a little more explicit," Pearson said.

In some of these more explicit areas, the writers of the proposed policy are in disagreement. However, according to Pearson, these are minor. In general, the GEO prefers a wider interpretation of harassment than the administration representatives.

Both groups agree that the policy should be committed to equal access at the University regardless of "race, color, national or ethnic origin, gender, sexual orientation, age, religion, marital status, veteran status or disability."

The GEO, however, wants to expand that to include "citizenship, culture, HIV status, language, parental status, political affiliation or belief and pregnancy status." According the proposal, the administration believes these categories are already included in the first list.

"I don't think they're vital issues," Pearson said.

The Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) and five representatives of the administration worked on the proposal for a year and a half before it was distributed. Pearson said the group felt they were at the point where outside input would be helpful.

The idea for a universal harassment policy has been discussed since 1990, according to Scott. A committee circulated a draft, but then lost memento. Three years ago, the GEO expressed disappointment that the process was taking so long, and got things rolling again.

EMILY BERY/COLLEGIAN

'Riveting stuff'
Senior psychology major Jen Calvani is in no rush as she checks out a Collegian on the Campus Center escalators.

Panel focuses on women's comfort on campus

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

Susan Pearson, the associate chancellor of the University of Massachusetts, urged women everywhere to get involved in working towards improving their environment on campus.

A panel of four speakers addressed current issues for women on campus yesterday at the annual reception for the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women.

Each of the speakers chose different aspects about what is happening at the University of Massachusetts campus that effects them individually and women as a whole.

"It is important for all groups on campus to be in touch with each other," said Marcellette Williams, deputy chancellor at UMass.

Pearson addressed such issues involved in the report from the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women.

One of the issues Pearson will be focusing on this semester is the development of campus guidelines on gender neutral language, particularly in campus publications.

Other issues Pearson would like to focus on this year include telecommunicating, sick child care and salary equity at UMass.

Pearson urged the audience for help to work and address any of the issues she outlined, as well as any additional ideas which may arise.

"Today at the University, we have achieved gender equity in intercollegiate athletics," Pearson said, "and in addition, a child care home page will be up on the worldwide web within the month."

Pat Crosson of the Provost, said the women faculty at UMass are not losing ground compared to male faculty, but that women are not gaining ground either.

Crosson said that currently on campus, 22 percent of the total faculty is female and that thus percentage has increased only slightly since the early '90s.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Provost Pat Crosson

"We don't have the kinds of proportions and representation of women on the faculty that we could have and should have on this campus," Crosson said.

Williams called attention to the need to end sexism and classicism on campus.

"We are talking about individual behavior and attitude that reflect differential treatment because of race, sex, age, ability," Williams said.

"We are the poorer and less substantial in everything that we do when we fail to do that," she said.

The final speaker, Charlena Seymour, the graduate dean of the University talked about two issues which affect graduate women students.

The first issue affecting the students, she said, is the difficulty that graduate students have in balancing a career and home life.

Seymour also talked about what a positive influence mentoring dialogues would have on graduate students.

Such dialogues would involve gender, child care mentouring in order to address such issues as sexual harassment and date rape.

"I believe that women's issues must be everyone's issues," Seymour said.

Batya Weinbaum, the founder of a group called Family Court Action, is asking for people everywhere to address women's issues.

"We are asking everyone to e-mail Chancellor Scott to ask the question 'where is the child care?'" Weinbaum said.

Weinbaum would like to see improvements made, for example, in the library in the area of access of child care.

"There are women in this University now that are in the trenches. Some of us can fall through the cracks and drop out for the semester," Weinbaum said. "The University has to provide us with the tools in order for us as mothers to pursue our education.

Prison Awareness Week looks at weak jail system

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

The problem of dealing with criminals in society is often a debated social issue. Many people feel that prisons are no longer institutions of reform, but instead an instrument of social control on the part of the U.S. government.

In response to such an issue, a Prison Awareness Week was organized by many groups on University of Massachusetts who strongly felt the need to bring a range of topics concerning prisons and social control to the public.

The Prison Awareness Committee consisted of the UMASS Radical Student Union (RSU), the Maoist International Movement (MIM), the Revolutionary Anti- Imperialist League (RAIL), the Black Mass Communication Project (BMCP), the Cape Verdian Student Association (CVSA) and ALANA. The events were also organized by the American Friends Service Committee and the Western Massachusetts Prison Issues Group.

The week's activities include speakers, discussions and music geared towards educating the UMass public. All the events are free and open to the public.

One of the week's events took place last night in the Campus Center at 8 p.m. — "Criticism and Self-Criticism: How a Socialist Society deals with its Enemies." Allyn Rickett, a former Naval Intelligence officer in the Marine Corps and a teacher at the University of Pennsylvania, talked about his experience in China in 1951. He was wrongly arrested as a "U.S. spy," and of reeducation under the Chinese Communists.

Rickett said in America, criticism and self-criticism is known as brainwashing, whereas in China it is called thought reform. He said group therapy resembles self- criticism. When done properly and with a neutral moderator, it can be used to help prisoners deal with their problems.

According to Rickett, the problem with U.S. prisons is, "the orientation

Turn to SPY, page 2

COURTESY ROTC

Just where I want 'em
Senior cadet Irene Mahoney smiles while preparing to play-shoot junior cadets last weekend at a field training exercise.

Powell turns down presidential bid

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Retired Gen. Colin Powell thanked his grassroots organizers "for the faith and confidence you have in me," but that did not soothe their pain Wednesday as the man they desperately wished to be president bowed out of the 1996 campaign.

Across Massachusetts, more than 1,200 people had already joined the "Draft Powell for President Committee," organizing supporters in case Powell decided to run for president.

"I'm sad that he didn't run, but I understand his comments about not having the fire in his belly," said Jeremiah Cole, a Cambridge resident who led the state organizing effort.

Cole said he had not had time to think about whom he might support next year, but he saw Powell's decision as a testament to his character.

"The fact that he wouldn't succumb to the temptation to seek that office, given the benefits in front of him, that to me says an enormous amount about the man's character," he said. "I think most of us, faced with that chance or opportunity, might have succumbed to the temptation to have all that adulation showered upon us."

Powell capped years of speculation about his political future on Wednesday, announcing that he was a Republican but had decided not to run for president in 1996 and would not be a vice presidential running mate.

Powell, with his wife Alma standing at his side, said he had analyzed the costs and benefits of a campaign, but decided he did not have the internal drive needed to make a successful run.

"Such a life requires a calling which I do not yet hear. I cannot go forward," Powell said.

Powell, however, did not rule himself out of politics for good, saying "The future is the future."

Although the Democratic Party still dominates Massachusetts, with 40 percent of registered voters, an increasing number of voters are signing up as independents and the Draft Powell movement had flourished here.

Two weeks ago, three members of Gov. William F. Weld's administration and a variety of other state political figures attended a rally and declared their support for Powell.

One of them, Lawrence Mayor Mary Claire Kennedy, said: "At this time, today, Colin Powell represented the biggest threat to Bill Clinton. If I was enthusiastic about [Sen. Bob] Dole or the others, I wouldn't have been involved in the Powell movement."

Kennedy also was unsure about whom she would now support.

Frank Ollivierre, secretary of the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, another Powell supporter, said: "I, like a lot of other people, was hoping he would run, because he offered leadership, he's right in the middle, and I think we need that. Plus he had strong support - bipartisan, multi-racial, multi-ethnic support."

Ollivierre said he hoped a more moderate Republican would emerge and earn his support.

Cole, meanwhile, was heartened by Powell's criticism of political conservatives. While Powell said they had legitimate political points to make, he disagreed with personal attacks they had made on him.

"In this day and age, seeking public office is an extremely ugly thing to participate in," Cole said. "It's a shame, and one of the reasons it's so bad is it keeps some really decent people from taking part and seeking public office. I think the country poorer for it, and today's announcement is just another example."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Nov. 9

Meeting — Jewish Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual meeting at 6 p.m. in Campus Center. Call 549–1710 for room number.

Discussion — Gary Lehrig, Smith College political science professor will be discussing topic: Officially Gay — The Public Construction of Sexuality. Event will be held at noon in Campus Center room 803. For more info. 545–4824.

Theater — UMass presents Our Town by Thorton Wilder, directed by Edward Golden. Nov. 8–11 and 17–18 at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Tickets are $6 general admission and $3.50 for students and seniors.

Boricuss Unidos — Puerto Rican Women & Relationships at 7 p.m. in the Latin American Cultural Center. For more info. please call 545–2073.

Discussion — "Sharing this Moment: Personal Reflections on Yitzhak Rabin and the Meaning of this Hour." From 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Speech — Susan Schneider, Editor–in–Chief of LILITH magazine is speaking on "Jewish & Female: Choices and Changes in our World Today." 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Meeting — The Wildlife Society will be discussing the population dynamics and behavior of black capped chickadees. 6:30 p.m. at 203 Holdsworth.

Discussion — Panel Discussion with Peter Derrico (UMass Legal Studies) and Tony Gugliemi (Prison Education Project). "The Political Economy of Prisons: 3 Strikes Laws, Privatization and Racism." 6:30 p.m. at the Campus Center rm. 903. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Film — "Control Units and the Politics of Dehumanization," followed by a discussion led by the Committee to Free Puerto Rican Prisoners of War and Political Prisoners. Campus Center rm. 174–176 at 8:00 p.m. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Friday, Nov. 10

Film — "Attica" and discussion led by MIM. 6:30 p.m. at the Campus Center rm. 903. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Reading — Political poetry reading "Jazzotree." 8 p.m. at the Cape Cod Lounge. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Dinner — Larry Goldbaum will speak on his role as Director of Office of Jewish Affairs at UMass. 7:15 p.m. at the Hillel house. For more info. please call 549–1710.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday at 1 p.m. in Campus Center, for more info. please call 256–8482.

Theater — UMass presents Our Town by Thorton Wilder, directed by Edward Golden. Nov. 8–11 and 17–18 at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Tickets are $6 general admission and $3.50 for students and seniors.

Saturday, Nov. 11

Conference — "End Amerikan Lockdown." The conference consists in two sessions, each with a panel discussion and part small groups. The conference takes place from 1–5:30 p.m. at the Campus Center rm. 174–176. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Fair — The 23rd annual Antiques, Crafts and Arts Fair, sponsored by the Amherst's Women's Club. The event is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Amherst Regional Junior High School.

Recital — Classical guitarist Phillip de Fremey will hold a recital at the El Greco/Mykonos restaurant at 8 p.m.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions Should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The Hampshire College AIDS Action Collective is running a "Safer Sex" erotica contest. They are accepting poetry and prose. Submissions are due Nov. 9, and can be sent via Five–College mail to Hampshire College Resource Center. Winners will be awarded prizes and will be published in the magazine. Please include a mailing address.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production.

The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Campus Police Log

Traffic stop
Oct. 7
David J. Garappolo, 20, of 12 Senix Ave., Center Moriches, N.Y., was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and failure to use a turn signal.

Vandalism
Nov. 6
There was a window smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.
A convertible top was cut on a vehicle in Parking Lot 49.

Accident
Nov. 6
A vehicle parked in Parking Lot 65 was struck by an unknown vehicle.

Burglary/breaking & entering
Nov. 6
An individual reported that someone broke into her room and damaged her personal property.

Larceny
Nov. 6
Property was stolen from a new lounge area in Bartlett Hall.
There was a report that a wallet had been stolen from the Campus Center.
There was a checkbook stolen from a locker in the W.E.B. DuBois Library.
There was a money order stolen over the weekend from a mailbox in John Adams Residence Hall.
Nov. 7
A dispute between roommates in Van Meter Residence Hall was referred to Housing Staff.

Medical emergency
Nov. 7
An individual who injured her knee falling in the Campus Center Garage was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in the William D. Mullins Center with stomach problems was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Fire alarm
Nov. 7
A trash can fire on the eighth floor of Kennedy Residence Hall was extinguished.

Annoying behavior
Nov. 7
There were skateboarders on the Campus Center Way.

Assist agency
Nov. 7
Police assisted bus drivers in heavy traffic at an intersection by University Dr.

spy

continued from page 1

is headed in a negative direction. It is compliant rather than thinking. And there's no follow up. These people are thrown back in the communities that created the problem."

Rickett then began to discuss his own first–hand experience with self–criticism. He told of how he and his wife had gotten a Fulbright scholarship to China, but inflation had wiped out the grant. They were stuck in China and lived with the Consulate general.

It was then, said Rickett, he was asked to live among the people and find out how the Chines people felt toward the U.S. involvement in China. "It was no James Bond stuff," laughed Rickett, "and it was peacetime."

But when war broke out, his wife and he couldn't leave with their visas. "[The Chinese Communists] came out of the blue with a warrant for my arrest," Rickett said.

Rickett spent four years in prison, during which he was made to write a confession of his involvement in the war. The process of self–criticism could only take place after the confession was made, said Rickett.

After he was released, Rickett said that he could see elements of self–criticism in America, especially in the women's movement. But he also noticed that, "Some people used it to trash opponents, and it was brutal."

"Self–criticism is good in and of itself, but it's no solution. You can never reform, ... at best you can recognize your mistakes. But society today provides no support for such a change."

Mandatory News Meeting
Tonight at 6:30
All associates and correspondents must attend

Want to write about this column?
Contact Editor Wayne Darling
113 Campus Center basement
545-1762

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
Music From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

Revolutionary warns of power-hungry U.S.

By Lisa Chiu and Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

Revolutionary, Ramona Africa pleaded to a crowded house at the Campus Center last night, "we better wake up."

Africa spoke of the corruption of the U.S. government and its "system," in a forum prepared as part of Prisoner Awareness Week.

Africa spoke from first–hand knowledge, being the only survivor of the bombing of her family. She described how, in 1985, some Philadelphia police officers bombed her home causing a fire which killed five babies and six adults.

According to Africa, the fire fighters at the scene refused to extinguish the fire, while police forces stood outside the burning home shooting the people who would try to exit. Africa was the sole adult survivor.

Africa also talked about the struggle of freedom fighters. In her opinion, freedom fighters are people who act against social injustices like police brutality or legal discrimination.

She focused on the current and debated case of one such freedom fighter, Mumia Abu–Jamal, who many believe is falsely imprisoned in Philadelphia. The authorities of that state had initially condemned him to death by lethal injection. In September of this year he received a "stay of execution," meaning he will stay on death row until the appeal for a retrial is heard.

"No matter how many times I see the video it makes my blood boil," said Africa after the showing of a video exposing the inconsistencies in Mumia Abu–Jamal's trial. He was accused of murdering a police officer.

According to the video, a large percentage of people believe in Abu–Jamal's innocence, and participate in public campaigns to free him.

"What I would like to stress tonight with the case of Mumia [Abu–Jamal], and other cases all across the country, is that people are being victimized by the government. People may not feel oppressed only by being arrested. This is a system that doesn't care about people at all," said Africa. "[The] Government will do whatever it needs to do in its self interest. That self–interest is to keep itself going at all costs."

According to Africa the targeting of people like Abu–Jamal will end through community effort and unity, rather than by legal means. She said the only way to change the system is to start with the people.

"What has [the government] done for us? The United States is worse now than it was 25 years ago. They are hired to do a service and they don't do it," Africa said. "They say they are public servants, but they don't do what we specify them to do. The government twists things around so much they have us believing we are their servants. We are paying them to exploit and oppress us."

She said she is a revolutionary, part of the MOVE organization, a revolutionary group.

"People are frightened. They say if we fight the government it will be chaos," Africa said. "I answer them, what do you think we have now. This is chaos."

Africa said she was thinking about U.S. history when she came to Massachusetts. "Wasn't the country built on resistance? They went to war with actual cops called 'Red Coats.' What makes Nathan Hale, who fought against legal injustice, a hero, but Abu–Jamal, who is fighting against legal injustice, an urban terrorist?"

According to Africa, resistance is even ingrained in the Declaration of Independence, when it asserts not only the right to resist bad government, but the duty to remove government that has proven to be oppressive.

"How do they get away with it? Look in the mirror," Africa said. "We have to get on the move, be active; not to stagnate; not to be dormant; and not to be a doormat for the system."

The full lecture will be televised in the future by Union Video Center.

Eighth grade couple dies in apparent suicidal drowning

By Tom Wells
Associated Press

MIAMI — Two eighth–grade sweethearts, forbidden by the girl's mother to see each other, apparently drowned themselves in a canal, leaving suicide notes that told of their undying love, their desperation and their hope of being together in another world.

The bodies of Maryling Flores, 13 and Christian Davila, 14, were found Tuesday in the murky, weed–choked waterway just a few blocks from the school they attended. Neither could swim.

"I can't go on living. I've lost Maryling," Christian said in a note his parents found Sunday. "I'm escaping from the realm of reality into the darkness of the unknown. Because reality is, I can't be with Maryling."

Maryling left more than six suicide notes, police said.

"You'll never be able to understand the love between me and Christian," she said in one addressed to "Mom and Dad."

"You don't let me see him in this world, so we're going to another place. Please don't cry for me, this is what I want. I want to feel happy, because I'm going to a place where I can be with Christian."

Maryling's mother had forbidden her to see Christian anymore, police said. They wouldn't say why. Maryling had told friends she might be pregnant and her mother feared the same thing, police said. But an autopsy showed she wasn't pregnant.

"It's a Romeo and Juliet story," said Officer Ramon Quintero, who knows both families.

Police listed the drownings as a homicide–suicide, which is routine when investigators don't know exactly what happened. It's "a fair assumption" the two jumped 15 feet into the Tamiami Canal together, Quintero said.

Their bodies were found a few hundred yards apart, but the canal has a swift current when the flood–control gates are open.

Police wouldn't identify the parents and the principal at the young lovers' school wouldn't talk to reporters.

In his note, Christian quoted from an 1892 Italian opera, "The Players," by Ruggiero Leoncavallo. It's the story of a man who kills his wife and her lover. Christian wrote: "'Applaud, friends, the comedy is over.' I love you all."

RYAN TIEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Minuteman and friends

Our beloved Minuteman decides to take a load off at the Mullins Center during last night's women's basketball exhibition.

American reporter freed to assist in peace talks

By Julijana Mojsilovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — An American reporter held by Bosnian Serb rebels for nearly two weeks was freed Wednesday, in what Serb leader Radovan Karadzic called a goodwill gesture to help peace talks.

David Rohde of the Christian Science Monitor was turned over to U.S. Embassy officials in Belgrade by Serb security officers who mediated his release.

"I feel very relieved and very happy to be out, and I'm grateful to the Serbian security corps for getting me out," Rohde told the Associated Press in a telephone interview.

In a statement earlier Wednesday to the Associated Press, Karadzic said Rohde was "cleared of all charges" and would be released "as a sign of goodwill and contribution to the peace talks," in Dayton, Ohio.

Rohde, the Monitor's Eastern Europe correspondent based in Zagreb, Croatia, disappeared after contacting his editors Oct. 28.

He had written articles about human rights violations by Serbs against Muslims in the Bosnian city of Srebrenica.

He was freed from a jail in the Serb–held town of Bijeljina in northeastern Bosnia.

"I was treated well physically," he said. "There was continuous questioning whether I was a CIA agent. I think the whole thing was more political than anything else."

A U.N. source in Sarajevo, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the release was the result of strong U.S. pressure, and contacts between U.S. and Bosnian Serb officials Monday and Tuesday.

In the Monitor's newsroom in Boston, where some employees had barely slept since Rohde's capture, fatigue gave way to celebration.

"We're all relieved, we're all very happy," said international editor Dayton Jones, who went to Dayton for two days to plead Rohde's case to negotiators there.

The Monitor issued a statement thanking international organizations and political leaders who helped win Rohde's release.

The newspaper denied Bosnian Serb allegations that he was doing anything improper.

"Now that David is safe, we want to state unequivocally that David was on a journalistic assignment for the Monitor. Claims that he was engaged in espionage are totally false," said David Cook, the Monitor's editor.

The Bosnian Serbs said Rohde was tried and convicted of illegal entry into Bosnian Serb territory and of falsifying documents. On Tuesday, the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA said prosecutors were considering charging Rohde with espionage, but that Karadzic also was considering releasing him.

Rohde was planning to leave Thursday for the United States, where relatives eagerly awaiting him.

"I'm going to hug him first and say, 'David, tell me all about it,'" said his grandmother, Elizabeth Cookman of Wellesley.

New Course:
Economics 190J
Comparison of the US & Japanese Economies.
This Course Carries SBD Credit.
SBD designation accidentally omitted it in the Schedule Booklet. See the Course Description Guide in the Pre-registration Guide for more information about the course.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD
ON THURSDAYS!

OUR SALES ARE REAL HEAD-TURNERS! COME SEE FOR YOURSELF!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
ROLLING ROCK & LT CASE OF 2 12 PACK BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP.
BUD DRY CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.99 + DEP.
PABSTS BLUE RIBBON CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP.
COORS, COORS LIGHT COORS GOLD CASE OF 2-12PK. BOTTLES $11.99 + DEP.
BASS ALE 12 PACK BOTTLES NEW $10.49 + DEP.
SHIPYARD BREWERY BLUE FIN STOUT, GOAT ISLAND LIGHT, MOOSE BROWN ALE, SHIPYARD ALE 6-PACK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUDWEISER, LT & ICE, MICHELOB, LT & DK, ICEHOUSE & RED DOG, LITE $39.99 + DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
CHATEAU STE MICHELLE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML CHARDONNAY 750ML $8.99 $7.49
WINE OF THE MONTH
COLUMBIA CREST CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML CHARDONNAY 750 ML SEMILLON-CHARDONNAY 750 ML $6.49 $5.49 $4.49
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS 4 QT. $6.99
CONCHA Y TORO CABERNET/MERLOT CHARDONNAY/SAUVIGNON SAUVIGNON/SEMILLON, MERLOT 1.5L $4.99
NAPA RIDGE CABERNET SAUVIGNON CHARDONNAY, PINOT NOIR 750 ML $4.99
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT 750 ML $4.99
CANADIAN MIST 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 FINAL COST $7.49
COSSACK VODKA 1.75L SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
CUTTY SARK SCOTCH 1.75L SALE $10.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $7.49
RON ROBERTO RUM 1.75L SALE $10.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $8.49
ROMANA SAMBUCA & ROMANA BLACK SAMBUCA 750 ML $13.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/9/95 THRU WEDS. 11/15/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Killington.
Mount Snow
Haystack
sugarloaf/usa
Waterville Valley
BROMLEY
COLLEGE SKI or SNOWBOARD FROM $18 a day STUDENTS
a free lift ticket is just the beginning
When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement.
With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.
And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.
the extra credit card is now valid every day!
Monday thru Friday / Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington $25 / $30
Mount Snow 25 / 30
Haystack 18 / 25
Sugarloaf/USA 25 / 29
Waterville Valley 20 / 29
Bromley 18 / 28
Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996
If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.
So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.
Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Tim White Interim Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Bord Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wirtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Sied Mohammed Ali Reza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.I. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymon Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

'The Real World' — Amherst?

This is a true story ... of five people ... picked to live in a house ... and have their lives taped ... to find out what happens ... when people stop being polite ... and start getting real. The real world ... Amherst, Massachusetts.

"Staci, get off the phone, for Chrissakes," I say to myself as my housemate continues to talk to her boyfriend. You figure when she gets a phone bill for over $170, and it's to nearby New Hampshire, she'd ease up with the long distance phone calls.

Instead, she now only calls him three times a day.

I can't really bust her up, though, because my phone bill was just under $130. The very small difference was that I made about four calls, but mine were to Spain. So with my outrageous phone bill, I have an excuse.

The other male housemate comes charging into my room, bends over and a disturbing noise comes out of his backside. He turns to me and smiles, wafting it in my face. I shake my head, only to run out of the room due to the atrocious stink. When the smell filters out of my poor room, some 15 minutes later, I go back in and he does the same thing. Finally, I just sit and suffer with the smelly bastard.

He then closes the door and shows me a picture of Pamela Lee as he drools all over himself. He explains how hot she is, what he'd like to do with her and acts out the way he would do it. Just as he gets going, his girlfriend, who also lives in the house, calls out his name.

"Grrreeeeeggggggg," she says in an impatient voice. "Come here, Greg."

Greg stops immediately and walks back to his room. Minutes later Carly begins to yell at him for doing obscene things with the dog. Carly comes and knocks on my door.

"Can I ask you something? If you have a dog and you bring it up to school and you love the dog and you want it to live a normal dog life and you have a boyfriend who continues to let it hump his leg and all that — not for nothing, but wouldn't you get pissed off?"

I look at the concerned look on Carly's face — as Greg stands directly behind her making obscene gestures.

Another housemate is cooking downstairs, as the sweet smell of apples and cinnamon fills the house. Jill is one of those who actually cooks edible things. Not like me, where boiling water and using a microwave require concrete directions and a large effort. One morning when I woke up, it smelled like a Thanksgiving dinner, as she cooked all the fixings along with turkey.

I shook with eagerness as I absorbed the delicious smell — while snacking on my saltines pouting in my room.

Staci comes into my room. She wants what everyone else wants. She wants money.

"I need the rent money by tomorrow afternoon."

"I know, Bach. I'll get it to you," I say as I glance at my pickle jar which is filled with change. There I was the day I moved in, psyched to fill that jar up with extra change. It was actually pretty fun and at one point actually believed I would be able to visit my girlfriend in Spain with all the change I dropped into that pickle jar.

Until, of course, last month, where I had to take out $14 worth of quarters to scrounge up money for our landlord.

Staci then leaves my room, I put on some Beastie Boys. When my door closes and no one is in sight, I have a tendency to sing. I have this firm belief that I can sound exactly like Mike D., Ad Rock and MCA. Staci peeks in as my rapping voice is at it's horrendous peak.

"Oh, I didn't know the Beastie Boys were here," she says with that annoying smirk of hers.

Isn't this MTV material? The Real World V, straight from a college town in Massachusetts. We've got it all and it's all real. It's as real as my strained Ad Rock voice. It's as real as that Puck from Real World fame. It's as real as the smell that still lingers from my room since Greg was in it a few days ago.

Knowing Greg, this all may actually be too real.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Here kitty, kitty...

Why is there such a division between people and their pet preference? There are dog people and there are cat people. Of course, a handful of people exist that are both, but they are about as numerous as good "Baywatch" episodes.

So why the big division? This weekend (for some reason that has yet to become apparent to me) I was pondering that very question. After hours of deliberation, I am now able to sum it up in a sentence — it's a gender thing.

When was the last time you saw a cat food commercial where a man was the one snuggling or feeding the cat? Did a man portray the voice of the cat in the movie Homeward Bound? And in that movie, did a little boy own the cat? Hardly. Does DC comics have a character Catman? No, there is however, Catwoman.

This Halloween, I was unable to find a single man who dressed up as a cat. I did however, find at least ... oh, say ... eight million women dressed as cats. When women get in nasty fights, what do we call it? You got it — cat fights.

So there's the "answer," so to speak. Men are dogs and women are cats. Society inflicts this upon us from birth. In a way, this makes perfect sense.

At a relatively young age, women begin maturing. They start thinking more like adults, becoming more in touch with their bodies and its rhythms, and doing better in school than the boys, who are still getting a kick out of sticking fire crackers in Barbie's panties. Funny enough, this sort of male behavior continues well into high school, through college and often into a man's early 30s.

There is a perfect parallel here to cats and dogs. Cats are graceful, refined animals, fending for themselves and keeping themselves clean from the time they are kittens until they die. Dogs are way too busy sniffing each other's asses and humping legs to take notice in such behavior.

I have often heard people say, "It's a man's world." Unfortunately, to an extent, this is largely true. We still live in a sexist society. I find this especially peculiar when looking upon the dog/cat issue, because, without a doubt it's a cat's world out there.

So there's the "answer," so to speak. Men are dogs and women are cats. Society inflicts this upon us from birth. In a way, this makes perfect sense.

Brian Marchionni

Society loves the cat. Disney made millions with The Lion King and we all know a lion is essentially a big cat. What were the "bad guys" in this movie? The "mangy poachers"? Hyenas, of course, which we all know are relatives to the dog.

The cat has the greatest relatives: the cheetah (the fastest land animal), the puma, the panther, the tiger, the leopard, etc. Let's look at a dog's family: the wolf. Yeah, sure, "the big bad wolf." The wolf is always the evil character in children's stories: the stupid brute that's tricked into something and gets it in the end. Don't forget the hyena either: an ugly scavenger who has an annoying laugh.

When Hugh Grant was caught soliciting sex this summer, what did the June 28 issue of The New York Post headline? "Hugh, Dirty Dog!" There are the so-called "dog days of summer." When you're in trouble with your spouse you're "in the dog house." Sick? I'll bet you're "sick as a dog."

I have yet to find anything really positive associated with dogs in society. Yet, I love them to death. I can relate to dogs. I'll never own a cat. I'll never dress like a cat. Why? Simple — the Y chromosome.

Brian Marchionni is a UMass staff member.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to work the system.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

The U.S. scores badly on yet another history test.
The 1920's were a period of pro-business, anti-federal regulation, pro-stock investing prosperity with an increasing disparity between rich and poor. What followed next?
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
I'M PRETTY SURE IT WAS SOMETHING GREAT.

Letters to the Editor

Assumptions misinterpret readers

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Hernán Rozemberg's article on Nov. 7. Mr. Rozemberg's article was published the very same day the Boston Globe published an article pointing out the ridiculous attempts of UMass administrators, citing, inter alia, some notable UMass professors, to formally codify political correctness at this institution. But although the Collegian failed to even mention this issue, I shall not venture into it here.

Apparently upset at the lack of response to his Multicultural Affairs issue, Mr. Rozemberg has considered it necessary to give UMass community a little lecture. Appalled that his section failed to elicit a single response from the readers, he is fast to stamp the readers with ignorance. He goes on saying, "If this is not a sad, real demonstration of ... ignorance, someone please tell me what it is." Well, it seems quite plain to me, although it may be hard for Mr. Rozemberg to swallow — perhaps the readers are simply not interested. Yes, I know this free society idea is terribly annoying, but people do generally choose for themselves what interests them and what not.

If Mr. Rozemberg was simply expressing his dismay at readers' lack of interest at multiculturalism, something he himself doesn't quite understand, never mind knows, how it is relevant (but hey, that's why "Everybody needs to worry about it"). That would just waste some more of the Op/Ed page and we're used to that. It is most disturbing to read how (again) white people are "too damn stupid" to read "a few sentences" in his double-spread issue, unlike the students of color who at least stopped at the sight of the issue (not that they've read it).

The most imbecile part of this lecture is the psychoanalytic insight into the minds of us whites, who, for some reason, still don't feel guilty enough that our "ancestors enslaved, tortured, raped, killed, or exile" our neighbor's ancestors.

Again, the timing for an article like Mr. Rozemberg's is perfect. I would suggest Mr. Rozemberg read the neat little parody of an editor who was recently flamed for his lack of interest in sexual diversity (published in the Collegian). Here is an alternative proposal — as soon as our Administration codifies political correctness, I suggest we establish a Multicultural Awareness Directive, with Mr. Rozemberg as the Head Inquisitor. Perhaps some more authority is all that's needed to enhance our free society. Then, it will be a whole lot easier to make people listen, won't it?

Martin Pogacnik
Sunderland

Art's and Living staff unprofessional

To the Editor:

I am responding to the unprofessional manner in which I have been treated over the past few weeks regarding my concern over the Festival of Lights review in the Collegian written by Matt Sinclair on Oct. 23, in the Arts and Living Section.

To make the history of the issue clear to all staff, I contacted the Collegian several times seven to 10 days before the event, requesting an interview with the reporter assigned to the Festival of Lights, Marlene Housner, Program Director-Arts Council, Ranjanaa Devi, Director Asian Dance and Music Program and I were available to answer any questions about multiple events which were scheduled to occur over a two-day period.

It was important to us that information regarding the Festival be clear and complete in order to better reach a potential audience, and to voice our excitement over new community activities, such as the "Chalk Walk." No response was made to my request; however, I felt confident that the Collegian would provide accurate information. I had provided the Graphics Department with brief, yet complete, information for the four ads which ran on Oct. 13, 19 and 20, as well as providing the Collegian with a summary and press release FYI.

The following review of the Festival was inadequate and unrepresentative of the importance of the event. Matt Sinclair's account left the reader with questions and disregarded completely some aspects of the Festival integral to the overall celebration. This left the UMass community with a diminished view of an event already hampered by poor weather. A more articulate and careful review would have been greatly appreciated as the Festival of Lights is an annual event that has been perpetuated through the determination and interest of dedicated individuals, for a diverse, always captive audience.

I continue to have great difficulty reaching anyone who could remedy this situation and feel that too much time has passed to print a meaningful follow-up.

I will develop programming with the Arts Council through the Spring Semester. I hope to also develop a more cohesive and effective relationship with Collegian staff members. Any feedback from the Collegian staff would be most appreciated, particularly if a more clear protocol could be outlined regarding production schedules, press releases and the natural order of things. If any clarification is needed, I will gladly answer any questions.

Sara Shephard
Project Assistant at UMass Arts Council

Financial aid fight not over

To the Editor:

There is still several weeks for the legislative process to be completed before the bill is sent to the President to be signed or vetoed. Students need to get active now and let congress know that we are watching and will hold them accountable for their actions. Only then will we avoid these cuts which would effect hundreds of thousands of students across the country.

Financial aid is not a government handout, but rather an investment in tomorrow. We need to stop this assault on hard working families. Students are planning a meeting on Nov. 14 in the Student Government office in the Student Union to discuss the Nov. 20 Day of Action. (Call 545-0355 for more information.) If you rely on financial aid to attend the University it is essential to your future that you get involved.

Jason Vecchio
SCERA student organizer

Women need to keep guard

To the Editor:

This article is written in response to Wendy Darling's article on Nov. 2, Ms. Darling, such violence you speak of may not have happened to you, but it happened to me. Last semester, I was sitting in my room in Cashin, typing with my door unlocked and a man I didn't know came in and grabbed my wrists and forced me into the room. Were it not for my suitemate coming back to make sure everything was OK, I don't know what would have happened.

So yes, I do have a right to be afraid. I have a reason to be afraid because when my sister went to UMass she was stalked. I have a reason to be afraid because half of the women I meet from college tell me similar stories of themselves and each one of them thought it would never happen to them.

I wrote the flyer you refer to because I don't want another women to have to feel the anxiety and fear that followed what happened to me. As a riot grrrl, I never stated that these safety tactics were an answer or solution to the problem, but they are a start until we are all safe. Also, my father has taught me feminism ever since I was a child and was the one to console me when I was raped at a young age.

I am in no way attempting to make men (especially all men, considering I love many of them) out to be monsters. My father does not consider these safety tactics or the flyer to be at all "militant paranoia" and neither do I. We see them as a way to make new students and old aware of the fact that women are attacked and assaulted on this campus, because it is all too often forgotten and pushed aside.

I am glad that you feel safe on this campus, but my experiences have led me to fear my surroundings and to be wary of situations. Until rior grrrl and other women can stop the violence and assault in this country, we will keep giving those that are afraid a way of alleviating their fear.

Also, in reference to your appeal to the "guys down the hall" — the guys down the hall from me are the ones that initially suggested that I include that part of the safety flyer. It was the guys down the hall that came up with it.

Amanda Spadaccini Sylvan

Aid elimination causes problems

To the Editor:

Many of you have probably heard about the "Student Rally to Save Financial Aid" that was held in Boston on Oct. 31. The goal of this rally was to gain media attention in the hopes that students could influence the legislative process. In the upcoming weeks students will continue organizing around this issue with a day of action planned on Nov. 20. I would like to take this opportunity to explain about some of the programs being cut and to tell you what you can do to help.

On Oct. 11 Congress voted to eliminate the Direct Loan Program form the budget. The Program was established this year to simplify the loan process. Under the program, the federal government provides the funds for loans directly to each campus instead of involving banks. The Program eliminated the middleman from the loan process and is more efficient and less costly. A majority of the colleges that took part in Direct Lending this year reported that they were "very satisfied" with the program.

In addition to eliminating the Direct Loan Program, Congress also plans to eliminate the six month grace period that graduates have before they must begin paying their loans. In addition, the interest subsidy on loans to both undergraduate and graduate students is also being cut.

All of these programs help students, particularly working families, to get on their feet before paying back their loans. The interest subsidy for graduates and undergraduates in particularly is a direct attack on lower income students. Many full-time students already hold several jobs to pay for tuition, fees and the cost of living. This is an assault on every student that struggles to afford to stay in school each semester.

Other programs that have been slated for elimination or downsizing are Pell Grants, Plus loans, the Work Study Program, as well as Americorps. In addition, a .85 percent tax on each college per volume of student loans that it lend has been proposed. It is estimated that this tax will cost UMass over $400,000 a year and some colleges as much as one million dollars a year.

Jason Vouch
SCERA

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday, November 9, 1995

Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 46

'Single Guy' fails to make first

There's something increasingly mind-numbing about television lately. Kind of like a been there, done that, so lets do it again mentality.

That kind of philosophy ruled NBC's Thursday night line– up. "Caroline in the City's" Lea Thompson made "Friends" with Chandler and Joey on their turf. It was a semi-funny encounter that vaguely resembled a past episode of "The Single Guy." Then Jonathan Silverman's real–life pal David Schwimmer had mistaken impressions on "The Single Guy."

Tube Notes
By Seema Gangatirkar

To complete the cross–overs, Matthew Perry had an extremely brief cameo on "Caroline in the City" as a boyfriend meeting his girlfriend's parents for the first time. The first time any network attempted the star–crossed thing, it was funny and original. Now it's just been done before.

Ever watch a show so stupid that it's funny? "High Society" is one of those shows. The new comedy follows "Murphy Brown" and stars "Designing Woman" Jean Smart and Mary McDonnell (Grand Canyon). The two play wealthy society women who really have nothing to do with their time. In fact, this past week, the duo made their first venture into the kitchen. Watching McDonnell smoke a stalk of asparagus and put sunglasses on a fully plucked chicken made the whole half hour worthwhile.

For those of you who manage to stay awake through "Saturday Night Live," it's worth hanging out in front of the tube for another hour to check out Dick Dietrich's talk show which airs directly afterwards. The show is a complete spoof. The guests overact wonderfully and the host himself acts terribly tacky and insensitive. Watching Dietrich is like watching Ricki Lake, Jenny Jones and Richard Bey all rolled into one.

I'm convinced that all the writers of "Melrose Place" are on drugs or something. After marrying Alison off to Hailey (how can they be so in love after only four episodes?) and Amanda getting back together with Peter, you have to wonder. Of course, it was nice to see Sydney back up to her old tricks, though the whole Richard/Jo thing is too weird for words.

Then, "Ned and Stacey" and "Partners" was canceled for

Turn to TV, page 13

Caffeine Nation

LOOKING INSIDE PIONEER VALLEY COFFEE SHOPS

The History of Coffee

There are actually five food groups. That's right, coffee makes up the fifth group. The majority of students drink some form of caffeine every day starting from the moment they wake up till they go to bed at 2 a.m.

Seema Gangatirkar

Actually the whole coffee drinking phenomenon is not that new. The beans were first cultivated in Yemen in 575 A.D. The first recorded use of coffee was in Ethiopia by the Abyssinians in 800 A.D.

The use of coffee spread rather slowly through the Middle East. During the Arabian Classical period (A.D. 850–992) coffee was widely used for medicinal purposes.

For a long time, the Arabs were intensely protective of coffee and jealously guarded the secret on how to prepare it. In fact, in some parts of Persia, the drink was actually used in religious ceremonies by the Mohammadons. Even today, Arabs can drink between 25 to 30 cups a day.

The popularity of coffee, though, led to persecution. In Egypt, the emperor thought the people were too involved in drinking coffee after seeing a group sitting in a coffee house sipping the drink before prayers. The emperor, thinking it was wine, was dismayed. After being corrected, he still thought coffee drinking was a bad idea and banned it in 1511. After Cairo was conquered in 1527 by the Turks, the drink made its way to Constantinople where it was banned in 1534 after houses were burnt down and riots ensued.

The introduction of coffee to western Europe was slow. Probably the first instance of coffee drinking didn't take place until the late 1500s. By the 1800s, coffee houses such as Ye Coffee House had sprung up all over London.

The Dutch introduced coffee into New Amsterdam in 1668, though it didn't catch on until after the Dutch surrendered to the English and the city was renamed New York. English influence made coffee the beverage of preference, replacing beer at breakfast.

Coffee houses became very popular in New York and Philadelphia until the price of a pound of coffee skyrocketed to $4.68 a pound. It happened that dinner at a coffee house would cost around 12 cents. A cup of coffee would cost 17 cents, making ale a better drink to accompany the dinner.

These days the major coffee growers are Venezuela, Costa Rica and Columbia. Coffee beans differ in shape and size from country to country, which accounts for the different textures and flavors.

So take a break from studying and make the trip down to one of the coffee houses in the area. Heck, even Helen of Troy drank coffee.

College Fossil Fuels

There's nothing quite like the aroma of coffee wafting through the air when you wake up in the morning. A couple of cups of instant and you're ready to go. But if you're looking to indulge and try some really good coffees, area coffee houses serve up not only coffee, but scrumptious desserts and a good time.

Claudia's Cafe
Main Street, Amherst
Open Monday–Thursday 7:30 a.m.–11:00 p.m.
Friday 7:30 a.m. 12 a.m.
Saturday 8:30 a.m.– 12 a.m.
Sunday 8:30 a.m. 11 p.m.

Claudia's Cafe is a warm, cozy place to sit down and share a cup of coffee with a friend or just to go and study. Formerly known as Cafe Mediterranean, the Cafe is now owned by Claudia Vazoli. Vazoli makes all the yummy pastries, cakes and other delights that line the shelves and "remind college students of home." Her specialty is cheesecakes, but brownies, rice krispie treats and vegetarian options are available, as well.

The coffee, which comes from San Francisco, is served in thick ceramic mugs. Flavors range from the traditional Hazelnut to the more exotic Mocha Java and Mexico dark.

According to Vazoli, Claudia's Cafe offers "a little of everything." Wednesday nights, live music is featured and the poetry SLAM is held the first Friday of every month. (Seema Gangakirtar)

The Coffee Connection
Main Street, Northampton
Open Monday–Thursday 7 a.m.–10 p.m.
Friday 7 a.m.–11:30 p.m.
Saturday 8 a.m.–11:30 p.m.
Sunday 8 a.m.–7 p.m.

The sophisticated and chic Coffee Connection in Northampton is a great "place to study," according to Josh Lewis, who works at the cafe.

The Coffee Connection, a corporate–owned shop, serves coffee, tea and biscotti. It also features a gift shop, which sells items that include colorful handpainted Italian ceramic mugs. Natasha Yeklley, store manager, commented that the Coffee Connection is "good gift shopping and prices are reasonable."

The comfortable atmosphere makes it easy for people to sit and talk. Yeklley noted people come to meet for the first time here.

Lewis mentioned that the Coffee Connection's appeal is that it is a chain store and people "can expect the same quality environment." (S.G.)

Pioneer Valley Coffee Company
North Pleasant St, Amherst
Open Monday–Saturday 7 a.m.–7 p.m.
Sunday 8 a.m.–4 p.m.

The Pioneer Valley Coffee Company is a small store that caters mainly to business people and regulars, according to morning manager Sarah Blackburn.

The store's specialty is Carvali coffee, from Seattle. Carvali is a rich coffee and "very good" which makes it a little more expensive than regular coffee. Pastries can be bought to accompany the coffee. The Pioneer Valley Coffee Company provides soy milk, which many coffee houses do not.

Coffee Gallery
King Street, Northampton
Open Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday 10 a.m.–5:30 p.m.
Thursday 10 a.m.–6 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.–5:30 p.m.

The Coffee Gallery is a specialty food store in Northampton that doesn't serve coffee but does sell high quality estate–grown coffee. The business was established in 1974 and for the last twenty–one years, it has distinguished itself by coming up with custom house blend coffee.

Some of the newer blends include Island Blend, which is described by owner Bob Heiss as "full–bodied and clean." Those searching for the perfect espresso can find it at the Coffee Gallery. The blend made by the store "tastes exactly the way you'd expect espresso to taste." And of course, the store manufactures a "brisk" Northampton blend. (S.G.)

Turn to COFFEE, page 13

Coffeetalk: it's more than just java

Tara MK Connelly

Coffee is perhaps the most underestimated drug in the country. Caffeine is an addiction. Ask anyone who ever skipped their morning cup of Joe If they ever got headaches or felt languid and tired. You can bet after a mug of Columbia their right back on track.

Coffee has become almost a main stay of our society with coffee shops, cafes and houses flourishing across the country. In fact a college wouldn't be one with a trendy cafe to hang out in and pass the time away. Coffee houses have become a new way for people to meet and regroup. But they are far from a modern invention.

In England coffee houses were places where people met to discuss politics and other news. Certain coffee houses were known for the different types of news and information one could pick up there.

Newspapers first started reporting news by listing the different coffee houses and recounting the information exchanged in them. Coffee houses were indeed almost like clubs for the lower class who couldn't afford membership into places like the upper class.

In other cultures coffee houses were also places to meet and exchange news. In Indonesia, fishermen have certain coffee houses they go to after fishing to talk about the day and discuss village politics.

Even Hollywood has picked up on the chic of coffee houses and cafes. What would shows like "Friends," "Ellen" and "Seinfeld" be without their favorite caffinated haunt? Indeed coffee houses have become a symbol of the '90s replacing the stereotypical smoke filled room with poets and bongo permeating a badly lit stage.

Here in the Valley, coffee houses most defiantly inspire a more casual atmosphere and create havens for students to escape campus life and get together in a warm and familiar atmosphere. Have you ever tried to get a table outside Rao's or find a booth in Bart's on a Friday night? Coffee houses offers an alternative to the hustle and bustle of bars. They are also a place that more and more students are going to study at as well.

So not matter what your agenda and whether or not you like coffee (most places offer an array of beverages), try to find your own little niche, sit back and enjoy the atmosphere.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Layout & Design by James P. Gurley & Tara MK Connelly

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"Indie rock is like high school all over again, except the football team is the guys in Pavement showing off how cool they are." — Billy Corgan

"'American Pie.' by Don McLean. It's nine minutes of pure hell." — Eddie Spaghetti of Supersuckers when asked what's the worst song in the world.

"Don't ignore my color. Don't ignore my kinky hair, my somewhat flat nose. I am a black person and I don't want anyone to forget it. I've never forgotten it and I've had occasions over the years where people have not let me forget it. So let's not forget it now." — Retired General Colin Powell

People and Pop Culture in the News

The hills are alive with the sound of cross dressing as Julie Andrews returns to Broadway in Victor/Victoria, a story about — what else? Girl mistaken for boy.

Sigourney Weaver is fresh from her new movie Copycat and admits that none of the ants in the bed scene actually touched her — she used two sheets on the bed. However her next project has her playing the evil queen in a live version of Snow White.

There is no stopping some people. Oprah Winfrey just signed a five year deal with Walt Disney Co. to produce and act in several movies. Her first project will be Toni Morrison's Pulitzer Prize–winning best–seller Beloved and Harpo will produce it.

Whoopi Goldberg will return to host the 68th Annual Oscars in March. Already the hype has started and some contenders are Nicole Kidman and Angela Bassett (Best Actress); Apollo 13 and The Bridges of Madison County (Best Pictures); and Clint Eastwood and Morgan Freeman (Best Actor).

Kim Basinger and Alec Baldwin have a bouncing baby girl, Ireland Eliesse. Baldwin was recently arrested for allegedly hitting photographer Alan Zanger who tried to tape his wife and baby.

The godfather of soul, James Brown was arrested for supposedly battering his wife, Adrienne. This is Brown's third arrest for assaulting his wife. He will stand trial Nov. 27.

Sharon Stone was recently presented with a Knight of the Order of Arts and Letters medal by the French Minister of Culture Philippe Douste–Blazy. Her new title is now Chevalier.

What did Al Gore and wife Tipper dress as for a Halloween bash in the Second Couple's Washington home? Beauty and the Beast with Gore sporting a beat's mane complete with ears and bushy eyebrows. Tres chic!

O.J. news continues with rumors of Marcia Clark and Christopher Darden admitting he and Clark have a romance and hope to marry as soon as her divorce goes through.

Also waiting to finalize a deal is Drew Barrymore, who hopes to get the role of the girl that steals Julia Robert's best Buddy in My Best Friend's Wedding.

Farrah Fawcett will appear partially nude in the Christmas issue of Playboy and hopes that even though she is baring some, she still is a G–rated Mom. Her most recent project included doing the voice of a faucet in The Brave Little Toaster Goes to Mars.

Material for this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Video — Cinderella

Now that Disney is taking a break from pumping out animated films for a while, they have decided to go back to the basics and are bombarding the country with ads and promos for one of their all time classics, Cinderella.

In a time where Power Rangers and X–Men run rampant across television screens in a majority of children's homes, it is nice to see that something as timeless as Cinderella can still get rave reviews everytime.

With songs like "Cinderella" and "Bibbity, Boppity, Boo" cranking from the set, you can't help but be caught up in the magical land of fairy godmothers, evil step sisters and talking mice. You root when the Cinderella makes off with the Prince and that justice prevails. Sure some say it's sexist and demeaning to women, but it's a fairy tale and one written before dreams were easily shadowed by the realities and being a princess seemed like a damn good profession.

— Tara MK Connelly

Show — Knuckle Sandwich

Pearl Street will be one hopping place tonight as UMass' own Knuckle Sandwich celebrate the release of their debut 7" single.

For the past two years the band has entertained crowds with their unique sound featuring bits of ska, rap, punk, funk, hard–core, disco and country. Due to their outrageous sound they were once described as "Sesame Street On Crack." Plus they have performed with bands as diverse as Throwing Muses, Murphy's Law and Blues Traveller.

Their debut single is being released by Silke Records out of Holyoke, marking the label's first release. Featured on the 7" slab of vinyl will be the songs, "Caught In the Middle," "Big Wheel World" and "Jenny Picolo."

Doors open tonight at 7 p.m. The Mitchells, Low–Fi Big Band (formerly J.C. Superska) and Nigel 6 will be opening up. Plus there will be free food and giveaways so put your books down and come party with Knuckle Sandwich.

— Mike Burke

TV — Hoop Dreams

On Nov. 15, at 8 p.m., PBS will air the first–ever television broadcast of the basketball documentary, Hoop Dreams.

The two–hour plus film about young NBA basketball hopefuls, Arthur Agee and William Gates was the most widely–received and praised documentary of 1995 — that is, by audiences, not the Academy (sigh).

Hoop Dreams followed Agee and Gates through their turbulent high school years, which involved triumph and heartache both on and off the basketball court.

The film may have ended with the boys leaving for college, but life has gone on for Agee and Gates, and the public will find out what is happening with the young men in a half–hour update segment which will follow the movie. Filmmakers Frederick Marx, Steve James and Peter Gilbert will hold a round table discussion with Agee and Gates, and we will find out if their hoop dreams came true.

—Laura Stock

Beatlemania lives on with new ABC miniseries

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Derek Taylor takes a swig of water from his Beatles mug and declares that the upcoming ABC miniseries "The Beatles Anthology" — and all the hoopla surrounding it — still won't close the book on Beatlemania.

"It's never the last word," Taylor, a lively 63, says in a basement office at Apple, the room stuffed with books, files and papers pertaining to the legendary rock 'n' rollers who still control Apple Corporation Ltd.

"In my head, though I may think this is for good, the fact is the interest goes on and on," says Taylor, who worked two stints as the Beatles' press officer and is now fielding worldwide press on the "Anthology."

"It will survive us," he said, "and the main thing now is that we must survive it."

When Taylor discusses survival, it's clear he knows whereof he speaks. Born in Cheshire in the north of England, he was working as the northern drama critic for The Daily Express newspaper when he first saw — and reviewed — the Beatles in concert.

A subsequent profile of manager Brian Epstein led to a job as Epstein's assistant, ghostwriting his memoirs. After eight months, Taylor left Apple for PR work in Los Angeles but returned to the Beatles' press job, and its ceaseless demands, in 1968.

"I knew they were wonderful," Taylor said of the group. "What I didn't know was there were four of them, and they could hide away, whereas there was only one of me. I could not hide, and the world's press is vast."

At home, he remembers "phones under cushions and permanently off the hook and if they weren't off the hook, they rang 24 hours a day. There was no peace." In 1970, Taylor left Apple again to work as a record executive, returning a decade ago to the company on an ad hoc basis that, he says, has become full time during the "Anthology."

"Nothing has ever been controllable with these people because of whatever it is they generate," Taylor said. "It's always been too exciting for people to know the consequences."

"The Beatles Anthology," inevitably, is generating its excitement — and its own industry.

Beyond the six–hour, three–night TV special starting Nov. 19 on ABC, attention is focusing on the release of two "new" songs in which the three surviving Beatles lend vocals and added instrumentation and arrangements to two unreleased John Lennon songs.

Taylor characterized the first song, "Free As A Bird," as "late–Abbey Road, but it's also now, and it's the Beatles." Capitol Records will release the song as part of a double CD on Nov. 20.

Taylor said he found nothing macabre about blending living and dead in a recording move some have criticized as "virtual reality" music.

"If it were to be tacky and unsatisfactory and unappetizing or any of those things, the people would have to judge, and I have to assume the ex-Beatles would not do it because it would not be a Beatlish thing to do," he said. "It really is for people to judge. I can't spin that one."

How does Taylor regard the group's break-up some 25 years later?

"I always had a romantic view that the thing should, if possible, be able to continue," he said. "There should always be a Beatles."

But, he said, referring to the Beatles' final album, released in 1970: "Let It Be' I thought was living hell. There was such a bad atmosphere around — rumors were coming back that our beloved friends were squabbling, and I never wanted to be in any way partisan."

Taylor said the "Anthology" shows, among other things, the group's ambivalence about the split.

"You can see them pulling back from letting it all end at 'Let It Be' and saying, 'Let's go to [producer] George Martin and do another album,'" he said.

"Of the three survivors," he said, "I would say Paul is perhaps keenest on the Beatles as a concept, though they all acknowledge their reason to be grateful for what happened."

Now, Taylor said of the "Anthology," "I think they would be quite relieved if this were it."

Not bloody likely.

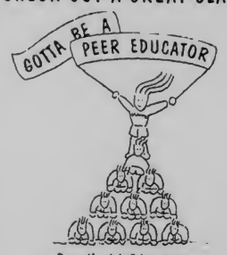
"Nobody ever escapes the Beatles," Taylor said. "Unless they behave dishonorably, they never get away. It is for life."

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!



Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

PEER HEALTH EDUCATION II & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 549-2671 Ext. 181.
Class will meet on Wednesdays from 2 - 4:30 PM.
Priority is given to those who meet with the instructor before November 17th.

The Hottest Thing In Outdoor Footwear
NIKE!!!
NIKE Day Sat., Nov. 11th
All Nikes $5 OFF

draw for a free pair
Nike rep present
the Mountain Goat
177 Main Street, Northampton • 586-0803 • Open 7 Days
Outdoor Clothing • Footwear • Travel Gear

RUSH ΒΘΒ
The only fraternity on campus that lets you haze yourself!
- Beta Theta Beta -
103 Campus Center

Surviving the Holidays:

Two support Groups Offered by the Mental Health Division of the University Health Services.

Eating, Body Image, and the Holidays
This is a 4 session group meets
Mondays 12:30 - 2:00 PM
November 13, 20, 27 & December 4
Meetings will be held in the Campus Center.
Family problems, numerous food centered events, expectations to "look good" and feel joyful all contribute to the pressures many feel at this time of year. If you find that negative feelings about food and body image intensify around the holidays, this os a group where you can share your concerns and learn some coping strategies.

Which Home For The Holidays?
This 4 session support group meets
Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 PM
November 15, 29 & December 6, 13
This group for students from divorced of separated families will examine coping strategies to deal with the particular stresses that occur at the holidays when families are no longer together. Attendance at all 4 sessions is expected.

Preregistration required for both groups.
To resister call 545-2337
8:00AM - 5:00 PM, Monday - Friday

New book inspirational, funny and enlightening

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Joan Brady's spiritual fable God On A Harley wins best book title of the year. The novel, published at the end of the summer, is part enchanting odyssey and part inspirational guide to the secrets that can enlighten and enrich our lives. Brady's story offers a funny and touching look at one woman's spiritual journey.

Christine, the main character, experiences an epiphany in a most unusual of locations: during an evening walk on the Jersey Shore. Wandering dejectedly down the beach, wallowing in self–pity, Christine suffers from a severe case of the blues.

Thirty–seven years old, no husband, no children, career–burnout and an imperfect figure, Christine's just waiting for something to change. Luckily for her, at that moment, a ruggedly handsome stranger sitting astride a 1340cc Harley Davidson calls out to her across the moonlit sand — and Christine's life is changed forever.

Helped along by "Joe," Christine slowly learns to trust in herself and to make room for the new people, places and things in her life. As she crawls out of her mid–life crisis, Christine struggles through the pain and pleasure of self– discovery and takes her first shaky steps towards the future.

Midlife crisis' seem to be the popular trend in fiction as Ann Beattie's Another You features an English professor at a small New Hampshire college named Marshall along with his wife, Sonja, who are both suffering from a pesky case of neurosis. Thankfully, Beattie takes another line from the traditional and creates a drama of escalating intensity about how easily ordinary lives can go completely out of control.

Every character in this novel has a secret and in a frightening sort of way, every secret is connected. The story begins as Marshall takes too strong an interest in a student distressed by the trauma her roommate has suffered at the hands of another professor, McCallum. Marshall barely knows McCallum but is soon entangled in his surprisingly volatile and violent life.

While Marshall struggles to tame his demons, Sonja's got her own secrets to deal with. She confesses she had a rather silly affair with her boss. Then Marshall's charming stepmother dies and the door opens for concealed facts on her life.

Another You is described as "a powerfully composed work of great wit, subtlety, literary finesse and insight," by Booklist. Kirkus Reviews adds to the praise by calling the novel "Vivid, rich and utterly real."

"If it were possible to write a Great American Novel of this time in our lives, this is what it would look like ..." says Publishers Weekly of Independence Day, the long– awaited sequel to Richard Ford's celebrated novel, The Sportswriter.

The hero of The Sportswriter, Frank Bascombe, is back to star in this latest offering. The often poetic and sometimes hilarious account of a few days in Frank's life takes place around the Fourth of July.

Divorced, working with genuine enthusiasm and insight as a real estate salesman, Frank has embarked on a tentative new relationship with Sally who lives by the sea. The weekend, however, is not without struggles as Frank desperately tries to find a new home for some brilliantly observed losers from Vermont and has some resentful exchanges with his former wife, not to mention taking his resentful son on a sports Hall of Fame tour.

The novel is long, packed with observations of life and reflections of human encounters. If anything, Independence Day is a book that will make you smile, maybe even laugh, but will always make you see something that you probably hadn't seen before.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernan • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

~ MOVIE ~

Holly Hunter goes home for the holidays

Robert Downey Jr. delights as a weirdo in an eccentric family tale by Jodie Foster

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS
Directed by Jodie Foster
with Holly Hunter, Robert Downey, Jr., Anne Bancroft
Playing at Hampshire Six

Looking forward to seeing the family on Thanksgiving? Well, after you see Home for the Holidays, you might change your mind.

Claudia Larsen (played poignantly by Holly Hunter) is having a really bad day. First, she has a terrible cold which causes her to sneeze all over the painting she is working on in a museum. Then she gets fired by her 60 year–old boss, whom she later kisses.

When her teenage daughter Kit ("My So–Called Life's" Claire Danes) drops her off at the airport (Claudia hates to fly, too), she tells her mother she is going to have sex for the first time with her boyfriend. Finally, Claudia loses her coat in the airport and is stuck sitting next to the proverbial talkative old lady in the plane.

When Claudia finally arrives at her parents house, the cat coughs up a hairball at her feet, setting the precedent for one bizarre Thanksgiving.

To call the Larsen family eccentric is far too polite. As her brother Tommy, Robert Downey Jr. (Only You) earns a new respect playing a crazy person. He is like a three year–old in a 30 year–old's body. Tommy's behavior (instigating arguments, running around snapping Polaroids of everything, beating up his brother–in–law) is equally annoying as it is hilarious.

Anne Bancroft (How To Make An American Quilt) plays Claudia's doting mother, who flitters around, making the turkey, intruding on Claudia's life — the typical meddling mother routine. Bancroft brings something more to this stereotypical mother act; her character is crisp and funny, and more on top of things than most members of the family.

Also thrown into the family medley is Claudia's aunt who has Alzheimer's disease. Her peculiarity fits well in the film, as she believes her brother–in–law is her husband, sings and gives away lamps to people. Claudia and the rest of the family humor her, but the strain is visibly noticed in her sister's eyes.

COURTESY IMDCD LAB

Robert Downey Jr. stars in Home for the Holidays.

Claudia's bitter sister (Cynthia Stevenson) comes to dinner with her own fat–free turkey, spoiled children, and literally anal–retentive husband, played by Steve Guttenberg. Her character has obvious resentment towards everyone in her family, and prompts the dinner's path to disaster.

Each of the characters is predictable in a way, but so wonderfully weird, you can't help both laughing at and caring about the quirky family all at the same time.

With her roles in The Piano, Copycat, and now Home for the Holidays, Holly Hunter has proven her clout as an actress. Though three vastly different roles, Hunter always gives her character an unbreakable strength and solidity. Claudia strives on this hard personality to get through the turbulent Thanksgiving dinner.

Jodie Foster steps behind the camera for her second directing venture. The Academy Award–winning actress made her directorial debut in 1991 with the family drama, Little Man Tate, in which she also starred.

Foster proves she has a keen eye behind the camera for comedy as well in Home for the Holidays, which is filmed in short segments chronicling Claudia's disastrous family dinner.

Home for the Holidays, based on the short story by Chris Radant, delights with its bizarre sense of humor and Hunter's exquisitely sharp performance.

This family is so blissfully dysfunctional it will make your family appear as normal as Beaver Cleaver's. So look at Hunter, then breath a sigh of relief when you head home for the holidays. B+

Club Crawl to raise money for Friends of Aids Care

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Don't walk or run, but rather "crawl" to Northampton this Friday night where you can participate in the Club Crawl, an event to benefit the Friends of Aids Care of Hampshire County.

According to Carol Hyde, owner of Pearl Street Night Club, the Club Crawl is an event where "basically people go from place to place to raise money for charities."

Hyde, who is a member of the Friends of Aids Care program, had wanted to do a Club Crawl for sometime.

"I am on the committee for the Friends of Aids Care and I've been in what they call pub crawls in England," said Hyde. "I've actually been wanting to do this for a while and now I have the chance."

The evening's events start at 7 p.m. at Packards. Participants will spend one hour there before moving onto the Brewery at 8 p.m. where a belly dancer is scheduled to perform. Next, it's on to The City Cafe (9 p.m.) and then Fitzwilly's (10 p.m.) where a magician will be entertaining the crowd. Finally it will end at 11 p.m. at Pearl Street where Ben Harper will be performing. Pizza, from Pizza Paradiso, will also be served to the participants. There, a raffle will also take place for a Sony CD and cassette player provided by Tripod Audio.

"It's really a night of entertainment and having fun for a good cause," said Hyde who targeted the event for 21+ participants. "The pizza is our thanks to people for finishing. People can buy their tickets at Packards or enter anywhere along the route as well."

The event is also sponsored by WRNX and their DJ will be MC–ing the event.

"You can come to Northampton and walk to each place. It's really a perfect route for a club crawl," she said.

Tickets for the event are $10 and participants will also be getting free T–shirts which they are encouraged to wear. The T–shirts were donated by Red Hook and the crawl is in part sponsored by the company who also provides free O'Douls beer, as well.

Hyde believes the event will be a success and hopes to make the Club Crawl a bi–annual event.

"We've gotten a lot of repose and we hope to make it a bi–annual event, twice a year," said Hayes. The Club Crawl begins at 7 p.m. at Packards. Tickets are $10. Bars will be donating 30 percent of the profits they make within the hour of their participation to the Friends Of Aids Care of Hampshire County.

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
5:50pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:15pm	Southwest
4:50pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:10pm	Morrill*	5:18pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:50pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

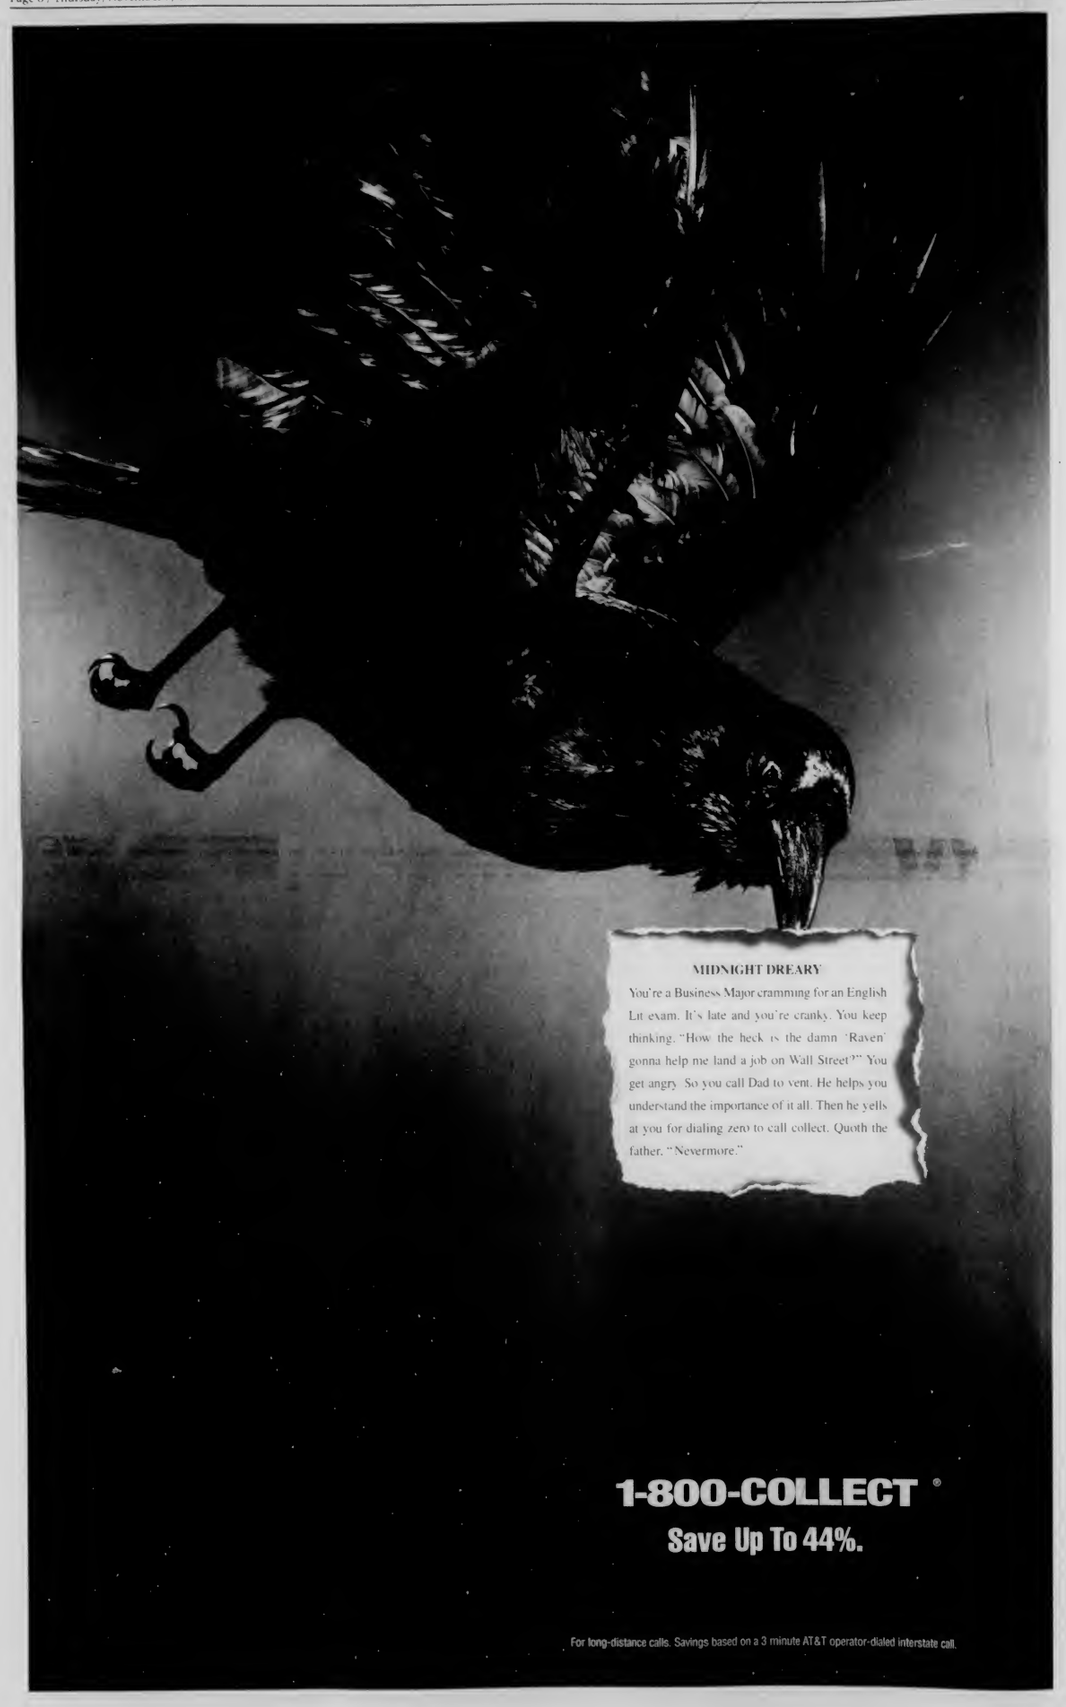
DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

LATINO SUPPORT GROUP
This group will deal with issues of identity facing Latinos as living or attending college in the mainland USA. Living in a culture where Latinos are viewed as a "minority" will be discussed in the context of how it affects Latinos self perception.
This will be a drop-in group held every week.
UMASS Campus Center
(Check schedule board for room number)
Wednesdays beginning November 8
and running until April.
3:30 - 5:00 PM
ANYONE WHO IDENTIFIES AS:
- Latino/ born in Mexico, South/Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or the Dominican Republic.
- is first generation (meaning born here is the USA from Latino parent(s)
- is of Latino heritage

IS WELCOME TO ATTEND.
Please call 545-2337 to register.
The group will be conducted in English or Spanish depending on membership

November 17th
in the Student Union Ballroom
8:00
311
with Shootyz Groove!
presale tix: $15 for UMASS students, $18 for general public
Tickets are sold at Tix Unlimited (at UMASS), Northhampton Box Office, Strawberries (in Hadley), and For the Record (in Amherst).
For More Information, Call UPC at (413) 545-2892

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $140 $280
PARIS $175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
TOKYO $859
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs-Immigration taxes apply
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC



MIDNIGHT DREARY
You're a Business Major cramming for an English Lit exam. It's late and you're cranky. You keep thinking, "How the heck is the damn 'Raven' gonna help me land a job on Wall Street?" You get angry. So you call Dad to vent. He helps you understand the importance of it all. Then he yells at you for dialing zero to call collect. Quoth the father, "Nevermore."
1-800-COLLECT ®
Save Up To 44%.
For long-distance calls. Savings based on a 3 minute AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

~ MUSIC ~

Kim Deal is back with the Amps; Pizzicato Five mix it up again

THE AMPS
Pacer
4AD/Elektra

Kim Deal will never be accused of not taking chances with her musical career. While still a member of the Pixies, one of the best bands of the 1980s, Deal left for a while to form the Breeders who have since become her full time band. Now once again, Deal has taken her own path — this time forming an all new band, the Amps.

Overall the album does not represent a major artistic achievement for Deal. Musically it is not a large departure from her work with the Breeders, though many of the songs are darker, moodier and less appealing.

Standout songs like "Hoverin" and "Breaking the Split Screen Barrier" prove that Deal is among the most talented female artists alive. The later song is filled with quick strong guitar riffs, tight drumming and unique song structure, making it one of the more interesting tunes on the album.

Fans of the Breeders will be glad to hear tunes like "I Am Decided" and "Pacer" which sound like out-takes from Last Splash, the band's most recent release.

Although the album fails to live up to some of the standards that Deal has set in the past, it is still one of the better albums you will come across in the near future. A- (Mike Burke)

COURTESY JIM GREER
Kim Deal with her band the Amps.

PIZZICATO FIVE
The Sound of Music by Pizzicato Five
Matador/ Atlantic

Although relatively new here in the States, Pizzicato Five (Maki Nomiya and Yasuharu Konishi) have been cranking out albums since 1985 in their native Japan. With over 30 recordings under their belt the dynamic duo are no strangers to the business.

The Sound of Music by Pizzicato Five, their second album released on Matador and first to be distributed by Atlantic, is a true testament to their talent. The first single off the album, "Happy Sad" also is the soundtrack single from the Miramax film Unzipped.

Describing themselves as "alternative pop," the group is anything but forgettable. "The Night is Young" combines Japanese spoken lyrics with a grand piano, organ and a styling disco beat. "Happy Sad" is like "alternative Motown" with a '70s sounding theme show groove, Joni Mitchell- esque lyrics in a smattering of both Japanese and English. "Groovy Is My Name" is a hip-hop salsa of techno pop and "If I Were a Groupie" has a "Pump Up The Jam" feel infused with sound effects. A (Tara MK Connelly)

COURTESY GEN IWABA
Straight from Japan — Pizzicato Five.

DAMON & NAOMI
The Wondrous World of Damon & Naomi
Sub Pop

When Galaxy 500 broke up in 1991, leader Dean Wareheim formed Luna, a band that went on to gain more fame that Galaxy 500 ever dreamed about. His former bandmates Damon Krukowski & Naomi Yang have remained in the obscure underworld of indie rock but have proved themselves as equally talented.

Spending time between their duo and Magic Hour, Damon and Naomi have continued to make beautiful music that rivals anything that Luna has done. Also Naomi's voice is as soothing and moving as one you can find anywhere.

Many of the tunes are reminiscent of the poppier side of Galaxy 500 minus the noisy guitar solos. Imagine if the band played all acoustic tunes and had never heard of the Velvet Underground. With the help of the legendary producer, Kramer, Damon & Naomi collaborate on eleven songs. Highlights include "The New Historicism" and a live version of "Tour of the World." The album closes with a moving duet between Damon and Naomi on a cover of The Band's "Whispering Pines."

This album is a must hear for fans of Galaxy 500. While Luna has been caught in a rut for several years, Damon & Naomi have continued to produce intriguing and innovative music. Sit back by the fire and enjoy. A- (M.B.)

LONDON PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA
Us And Them: Symphonic Pink Floyd
Point Music

Rock 'n' Roll has been fully integrated into mainstream society. Gone is the day where the music spurred contempt and hostility from "real musicians." Today Pavorotti is doing a duet with U2 and courses in rock 'n' roll are being taught in music schools along side classical, jazz and other genres of music. It is not surprising that a contemporary producer would take rock songs and perform them with a symphony orchestra. The result is Us and Them: Symphonic Pink Floyd. The album contains various Pink Floyd tunes re- invented by being played by the London Philharmonic Orchestra.

It seems fitting for Pink Floyd to be chosen for this sort of project. Their music is complex with various instruments layered much like an orchestra. The song choices on the album are appropriate. They all have strong melodies that would be readily recognizable by Pink Floyd fans.

The album contains some of their most popular songs which are arguably the best songs on the album — "Another Brick In The Wall (Part II)" and "Comfortably Numb." These two treatments would please any Pink Floyd fans. Other songs on the album include "Money," "Brain Damage," and "Us and Them." The low point of the album is the last song a remix version of "Time" (a non-remixed version is also included) which is over- produced and not necessary.

Us and Them would definitely appeal to Pink Floyd fans with some appreciation for classical music. If nothing else the music is so soothing it can induce slumber for any insomniac. B+ (Ed Hurley)

Trax On Trax Off

SUNNY DAY REAL ESTATE
Sunny Day Real Estate
Sub Pop

From the success of Sunny Day Real Estate's debut record, Seven, it came as a shock to most everyone when Jeremy Enigk, lead singer and main songwriter, left the band. Now that the band has officially broken up, and William Goldsmith and Nate Mendel have become full time Foo Fighters, Sub Pop has released their last recording.

The opening tune "Friday" shows the band is still into the same sad guitar-driven alternative tunes that made the band so well known. Enigk, who at times exaggerates his slightly British accent, makes or breaks most songs on this album. During "Theo B," Enigk's voice blends perfectly over the beautiful guitar phrasing, making it the most positive and radio friendly tune on the disc.

However on "5/4" Enigk over extends his vocal range forcing comparisons to vocalists in the heavy metal genre. Throughout the CD, the music and sound is perfect largely due to the power house rhythm section of Goldsmith and Mendel.

While this band is one you either love or hate, it is hard to deny their tight musicianship. The same holds true for this CD. C+ (Jason Flax)

MIKE SCOTT
Bring 'Em All In
Chrysalis/ EMI

Mike Scott, leader of the popular Irish band the Waterboys, makes an auspicious solo debut with Bring 'Em All In, an album that delights and surprises from beginning to end. Without having to rely on sonic assaults of screeching guitars, weepy overwrought orchestration, or mind-numbing jackhammer drum machines, Scott instead opts for the radical route — one voice, one musician and a highly appealing collection of songs.

Wonderfully sparse yet tremendously full, Bring 'e'n All In has Scott playing acoustic guitar and singing, occasionally peppering the tunes with organ, rollicking piano and Dylan- esque harmonica. In fact Scott's sound conjures up images of what a Bobby Zimmerman album might sound like without so much mumbling and braying. Credit must go to Scott's lone collaborator, Niko Bolas, for placing Scott's voice — cool and lean, rarely raising much above a whisper — as the central instrument, and for helping create such a complete album from such humble components.

Lyrically, Scott's songs are the story of a man who has reached a kind of peace with his life — a peace brought about by a careful balance of wistful reminiscence, wonderfully guarded optimism about the future and an understated yet everpresent reverence for the Lord. Standout tracks include, "What Do You Want Me To Do?," "Iona Song," "Learning To Love Him" and the great fun, rhythmic Celtic blues number, "City Full of Ghosts."

In this season of new releases by big guns like Smashing Pumpkins and Green Day, let's hope that a hidden gem like Bring 'em All In doesn't get lost in the shuffle. Pop this one on, light a couple of candles, lay back and prepare to feel good inside. B+ (Josh Wardrup)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Hempilation
Capricorn Records

Hemp is Back. Fashion designers are introducing new lines of hemp fabric clothes, hemp leaves have become an acceptable fashion symbol and public support for legalizing the substance has probably not been higher (no pun intended). It is not surprising to have a group of artists put their music where their mouth is. The result is Hempilation.

Among the talent enlisted on the album are The Black Crowes, Blues Traveler, Ziggy Marley, 311 and Drivin' n' Cryin'. The results are mixed. The Black Crowes' cover of the classic Dylan tune "Rainy Day Woman #12 & 35" leaves a little to be desired. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers' version from the Dylan Tribute is much

Turn to TRAX, page 9

COURTESY DAVID CORIO
Ex-Members of Galaxy 500, Damon & Naomi.

Classifieds Now
VISA
MasterCard™
Accepting Credit Cards

Newbury Comics

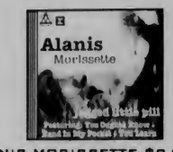
NOW OPEN!!

50 Main Street • Amherst, MA

256-8840

50 HITS ON SALE!

1. Smashing Pumpkins "Mellon Collie & The Infinite Badness" $15.99CD
2. Alanis Morissette "Jagged Little Pill" $9.99CD
3. Green Day "Insomniac" $9.99CD
4. Red Hot Chili Peppers "One Hot Minute" $9.99CD
5. Natalie Merchant "Tigerlily" $9.99CD
6. Pulp Fiction Soundtrack $9.99CD
7. Ozzy Osbourne "Ozzmosis" $9.99CD
8. Toad The Wet Sprocket "In Light Syrup" $9.99CD
9. Goo Goo Dolls "A Boy Named Goo" $9.99CD
10. Sonic Youth "Washing Machine" $9.99CD
11. Marilyn Manson "Smells Like Children" $9.99CD
12. Foo Fighters "Foo Fighters" $9.99CD
13. Presidents of the U.S.A. "Presidents of the U.S.A." $9.99CD
14. Oasis "(What's the Story) Morning Glory" $9.99CD
15. Hootie & The Blowfish "Cracked Rear View" $9.99CD
16. Dave Matthews Band "Under The Table And Dreaming" $9.99CD
17. Bush "Sixteen Stone" $9.99CD
18. Rancid "And Out Come The Wolves" $9.99 CD
19. Candlebox "Lucy" $9.99CD
20. Friends Soundtrack $9.99CD
21. Silverchair "Frogstomp" $9.99CD
22. Toadies "Rubberneck" $9.99CD
23. G. Love & Special Sauce "Coast To Coast Motel" $9.99CD
24. Anthrax "Stomp 442" $9.99CD
25. Indigo Girls "1200 Curfews" $19.99CD
26. John Hiatt "Walk On" $9.99CD
27. Heather Nova "Oyster" $9.99CD
28. Grateful Dead "Hundred Year Hall" $17.99CD
29. Pretenders "Isle of view" $9.99CD
30. David Bowie "Outside" $9.99CD
31. John Osbourne "Relish" $10.88CD
32. Blues Traveler "Four" $9.99CD
33. Nine Inch Nails "Downward Spiral" $9.99CD
34. Lisa Loeb "Tails" $9.99CD
35. Erasure "Erasure" $9.99CD
36. Letters To Cleo "Wholesale Meats and Fish" $9.99CD
37. Blind Melon "Soup" $9.99CD
38. Rentals "Return of the Rentals" $9.99CD
39. Reservoir Dogs Soundtrack $9.99CD
40. Seal "Seal Second" $9.99CD
41. Lenny Kravitz "Circus" $9.99CD
42. Dave Matthews Band "Remember Two Things" $9.99CD
43. Steely Dan "Alive In America" $9.99CD
44. Radiohead "The Bends" $9.99CD
45. Bob Seger "It's A Mystery" $9.99CD
46. Weezer "Weezer" $9.99CD
47. Korn "Korn" $9.99CD
48. Buffalo Tom "Bleepy Eyed" $9.99CD
49. Garbage "Garbage" $9.99CD
50. Urge Overkill "Exit The Dragon" $9.99CD



ALANIS MORISSETTE $9.99CD

GREEN DAY $9.99CD

FOO FIGHTERS $9.99CD

HOOTIE & THE BLOWFISH $9.99CD

CANDLEBOX $9.99CD

DAVE MATHEWS BAND $9.99CD

Shop Here, Die Happy!

$4.00 off
Any Compact Disc* With Coupon
At Newbury Comics
No Double Discounts • Regularly Priced $12.99 or more
Expires 11/21/95 554778

$4.00 off
Any Compact Disc* With Coupon
At Newbury Comics
No Double Discounts • Regularly Priced $12.99 or more
Expires 11/21/95 554778

COURTESY TOM TAWES

Young jazz superstar Joshua Redman.

Young jazz star proves worth

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Correspondent

JOSHUA REDMAN
Iron Horse
Nov. 6

Monday night the Iron Horse was alive with jazz as Joshua Redman led his up-and-coming quartet to the stage. The first song an upbeat tune names, "Jig a' Jug" from Redman's album Spirit Of the Moment, leapt immediately into a melodic tenor saxophone solo.

Redman built his solo quickly, wasting no time in getting the crowd excited, finally topping it off with a series of lightening fast phrases. Redman then turned the song over to Peter Martin on piano for another solo and finally to bassist Christopher Thomas.

The second tune, "The Oneness of Two" from Redman's album Moodswing was equally entertaining, with a quick pace and a savory melody. Soloists were Redman on soprano saxophone, Martin on piano and Mark Brettler on drums.

After a brief break where Redman conversed with the crowd, the quartet delved back into the music with a ballad entitled, "Never End" featuring tenor sax and piano solos. The tune finished off with a long cadenza by Redman, where he used extreme harmonic ranges of the saxophone and difficult pitch bends.

The show covered most bases of acoustic jazz, continuing with a Latin tune, several bebop and swing charts, and finally ending with a quick rendition of "I Feel Good." For the encore he and his quartet played an upbeat, happy tune composed by Ornette Coleman named, "Uno Muy Bonita," which featured solos by alto saxophone and piano solo.

Joshua Redman proved once again why he is being considered one of the most accomplished saxophone artists of today. The quartet flawlessly represents nearly all the form of acoustic jazz, while Redman himself plays with a style uniquely his own. A truly great artist in the making, Redman is helping to construct a future for jazz that will take the music in exciting new directions while drawing from its roots.

Douglas' mixes politics and love

'American President' questions government authorities lovelife

By John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Politicians are fed up with Hollywood, and voters have had it with Washington. So why in the world does anyone think there's an audience for "The American President?"

The new movie stars Michael Douglas as the widowed man in the White House and Annette Bening as the environmental lobbyist who catches the chief executive's newly roving eye. Opening Nov. 17, the film is being touted even by rival studios as one of the fall's brightest lights and a certain box-office smash.

The enthusiasm is sparked in part by "The American President's" kindly stubbornness. Where the media (and rival lawmakers) frequently portray the president as a soulless political creature, Douglas' Andrew Shepherd is warm and human. Against a national backdrop of cynicism and apathy, the filmmakers glorify optimism and persistence. It's almost like the Kennedy years, three decades later.

"The American President" is also the year's most distinct romantic fantasy — how many people dream of dating the world's most powerful leader?

"I think the movie celebrates the presidency," says Rob Reiner, the film's producer and director. "It asks the question, 'Can you be a president and a man at the same time?' And it says, 'You have to be. In order to be a good president, you have to be a human being.'"

Unlike some movies about Washington (see 1993's "Dave"), "The American President" does not drop real-life politicians into its life-like Washington sets. There's no mistaking Shepherd's similarities to President Clinton, however, and Richard Dreyfuss' mean-spirited Sen. Rumson is an admitted hybrid of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The film's minor messages about gun control and the environment unfold in the background. The real story is about romance on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Shepherd, whose wife died from cancer, is a single parent to a young girl. As much as daughter Lucy longs for a mother, the president misses companionship (Robert Redford was originally set to play Douglas' part but dropped out).

Bening's Sydney Wade character first meets Shepherd while lobbying for an environmental bill, and the president is immediately smitten. But what can the president do? Call up and ask her out on a date? Send flowers? Share a dance at a state dinner? What will the voters think? And how does the president get an outside phone line?

That core story evolved during nearly two years of screenwriting by Aaron Sorkin, who collaborated with Reiner on 1992's "A Few Good Men."

Clinton's advisers granted Sorkin and Reiner some White House access, and current and former administration officials offered guidance. From a novel-length script of 375 pages of heavy political speeches and argument, Sorkin and Reiner trimmed "The American President" to a manageable light comedy.

The romance, Sorkin believes, will draw audiences in. Once there, he hopes, they will see the president as he could be and should be seen, not as he is frequently depicted.

"I think the audience is interested in a good story," Sorkin says. "You can have a good story about yaks, and people will watch it. But I think a love story will trump everything else. My biggest fear in writing this was I don't think American adults and the moviegoing audience wants to be taught a lesson. I think they resent that."

Reiner and Sorkin struggled, therefore, in establishing a proper tone for the film. They wanted to make their political points and take shots at conservative Republicans, but they didn't want to turn out a polemic. They sought to concoct a credible romantic comedy, but not to trivialize the importance of the office. "That was the trick to this whole film — to balance the fact that we have a romantic comedy as the centerpiece of the film and at the same time the backdrop is the president of the United States and the White House, which is a very serious undertaking," Reiner says.

"I mean, we've got him about to share his first kiss with the woman he's starting to fall in love with and just as that happens he gets a message from one of the Secret Service agents that the Libyans have attacked this Israeli defense station. You're going from comedy to something very stark and real.

"But the film would not be good if it didn't have both those elements. If it was just a romantic comedy, it would not be satisfying. If it was just a political film, it would probably not be as accessible to the audience."

As "The American President" unfolds, Shepherd is denounced by Sen. Rumson for his relationship with Wade, and the gossip-hungry media grows far more excited about the president's personal life than pending legislation and government.

It looks a lot like the real Washington, and is probably the film's most subtle statement about how decency and relevance are vanishing from the White House. "Now, anything that anybody does is fair game," Reiner says.

Little of Sorkin's original, admittedly long-winded script remains in the finished film — except for one scene. Near the end of the film, Shepherd heads to the White House press room podium to defend himself and repudiate smear campaigning. If the movie has a message, it's to be found in the somewhat preachy speech.

In that speech, Sorkin for a moment saw himself speaking not only as the president but also for the American voters. Says Sorkin: "My hope is that perhaps it will shove some people into cutting it (personal attacks) out, knocking it off and getting serious."

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Author, Lecturer, Journalist and Editor-in-Chief of Lilith Magazine

Susan Weidman Schneider

will speak on

"Jewish & Female: Choices and Changes In Our Lives Today"

Tonight
7:30pm

Campus Center 101, UMass

(for more info contact Hillel at 549-1710)

Susan Weidman Schneider is an author, journalist and lecturer. She has appeared on such national television programs as "Donahue," "Good Morning America" (on intermarriage) and "The Oprah Winfrey Show." She has received such honors as the Hadassah Myrtle Wreath Award, B'nai B'rith Women Woman of Distinction Award and the B'nai B'rith Women Woman of Achievement Award. She has also given more than 50 academic lectures to such colleges and universities as: Barnard, Brandeis, Brown, Columbia, Harvard, New York University Law School, University of Pennsylvania and Williams. Susan Weidman Schneider has also given over 300 lectures to Jewish and general audiences, including the Anti-Defamation League, the American jewish Committee National Board and Women's Issues Committees, the American Jewish Congress and the B'nai B'rith Women Biennial Conventions and District Conference.

Sponsors:
UMass Hillel; UMass Jewish Women's Issues Group; 5-College Hillel; Umass Every Woman's Center; and Umass Judaic Studies Department

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
DO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

Attention All WILDLIFE & FISHERIES, NAREST, FORESTRY, ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE, & ANIMAL SCIENCE Majors!
Field Experience Information Session!
(Co-ops and Internships)
Monday, November 14th at 4 pm
In Holdsworth - Room 203
Your questions about Field Experience answered!
Learn how you can compete in the job market- - before you graduate!
****
MAY GRADUATES!
Come explore the Career Center & your EMPLOYMENT OPTIONS!
Prepare for February recruiters with Electronic Resume Referral!!!
For More Information call 545-2224 or attend a Workshop: Tuesdays at 4pm/ Fridays at 3:35 pm

Rancid's LP strays from pack

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

RANCID
... And Out Come The Wolves
Epitaph

COURTESY EPITAPH

Rancid ...And Out Come The Wolves.

"There's a punk-rock kid on every corner today." — Keith Morris, Circle Jerks

When Rancid first appeared on the music scene the first response to them was, "Oh, great. Another wanna-be Johnny Rotten." And indeed that is what most people said of songs like "Salvation" and "Radio" off their sophomore effort Let's Go.

But soon "Salvation" found its way to the MTV Buzzbin and began blocking airwaves with their bombastic sound and cut throat lyrics. Soon the opinion changed and Rancid was no longer just another punk revival band, but a good punk band riding on its own lyrics and pure punk sound.

Now with their third LP ...And Out Comes The Wolves, produced by Jerry Finn (Green Day, Pennywise and The Muffs), Rancid hopes to secure their spot in the world of punk/ska and prove once and for all that their no cover band.

The album opens up with "Maxwell Murder" which quickly puts an end to any notion that these guys have strayed from the path of the genre. Lyrics are kept to a minimum while the bass and guitars fuel the rest.

"Time Bomb," the first single has a jittery jumping feel to it. It's got a Ramones type style to it with nonsensical lyrics and a catchy ska riff that sucks you in and has you humming it for the rest of the day.

"Listed MIA," "She's Automatic" and "As Wicked" follows the same sort of slap shot recipe that's one part guitar, one part vocals and three parts attitude mixed tightly and packed for perfection.

Rancid, a four member band comprised of Tim "Lint" Armstrong (vocal guitar), Lars Frederiskson (guitar, vocals), Matt Freeman (bass) and Brett Reed (drums). They debuted on Lookout Records with a 7" and then signed to Epitaph. The albums lyrics are expressive of their lives amidst drugs, homelessness and the street life in their native East Bay.

"Journey To The End Of The East Bay" chronicles the story of Freeman and Armstrong's first band the ska/punk Operation Ivy. Formed in 1987, this Gilman St. club staple influenced such punk notables as Green Day. It was the first San Fran band to move form the area and bring its music all over the country.

In "Olympia WA," Armstrong bites out, "Hanging out with Lars down on 6th street, he knows I was in trouble/I was feeling like the devil/There's something burning deep inside me." Other lyrics are sung or shouted with equal force and Cypress Hill–esque shadowing (minus the irritation). One of the more unique sounding arrangements is on "Junkman" which has a voice over type chorus that sounds oddly like something The Fall would include.

Rancid definitely has the look of old–school punk — mohawks and tattoos neatly in tact and it is with little speculation that they have chosen to revert back to their Operation Ivy influences. With their scathing guitars, solid three cords and anthem lyrics fueling their success, it wouldn't be surprising that after all the dust has cleared, the hype has died and only the die hards remain, Rancid will be one of the few still standing.

■ Trax

continued from page 9

better. Blues Traveler's cover of Sly and the Family Stone's "I Want to Take You Higher" is surprisingly soulful.

Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers' tune "In the Flow" is also interesting. The muted trumpet in the song adds a slight jazzy element to the song, a competent composition compared to Marley's dead father Bob's work.

Another standout on the album is a Muddy Waters tune, "Champagne & Reefer" performed by Ian Moore. The electric blues of the tune preserves the spirit of the original version.

There are low points of the album however including "I Like Marijuana" by David Peel and the 360's. A cheeky tune about what the name implies. Another rather bad track is Sacred Reich's version of Black Sabbath's "Sweet Leaf."

The best tune on the album would be Sublime's version of the Peter Toss tune "Legalize It." Overall the results of the album are mixed but people who smoke and enjoy music inspired by their substance would really enjoy this album. B (EH)

LORELEI
everyone must touch the stars
Slumberland

Washington D.C. natives, Lorelei's testosterone filled trio pumps out pure pop tunes on their debut album from Slumberland Records, a Berkeley, Calif. independent label.

People first got a taste of what this band could do on the Slumberland compilation Why Pop Stars Can't Dance with "Stop What Your Doing" and "Float My Bed." Their latest EP Asleep got rave reviews and encouraged the band to put out their first full length album.

everyone must touch the stars touches upon the outer limits of pop and music. Songs like "Throwaway" and "Inside Crimelab" cleverly mix together lush vocals, wailing guitars and throbbing percussion.

Lorelei combines several different flavors of music to create a sound uniquely their own. It's a mixture of noise and pure pop that one can hear in "Piller" and "Day." Also the added spice of a marimba, xylophone and double bass that gives this up and coming band a space all their own. B+ (TMKC)

DUB NARCOTIC
Ridin' Shotgun EP
K

"Hey friend do us both a favor, no parking on the dance floor," is the opening line on the title track to this fun and funky EP by Olympia WA premier dub band, Dub Narcotic.

Led by Calvin Johnson, the Dub Narcotic keep the dance beat grooving on six tracks — three originals and three remixes. In the world of dance music this album is completely insignificant and virtually worthless but Dub Narcotic is a dance band for people who usually hate dance music. Strange isn't.

Tunes like "Half Life," Ridin' Shotgun" and "Harvester Traveller" shows the band getting down on the street. Probably the most appealing part of the disc is simply Johnson's infectious baritone voice.

Johnson has been an essential figure in the Northwest music scene for over a decade. He was recording on his cheap boombox with Beat Happening back when Kurt Cobain was still just a high school student. Slowly the band reinvented punk rock opening the scene to bands across the world from Beck to the Vaselines.

So where does Dub Narcotic fit it? It is hard to tell. Johnson probably needed a new means of expression, knowing just a few chords can be quite limiting. But this music is made from the soul and filled with funky grooves that will keep you from parking yourself on the dance floor. B+ (M.B.)

Collegian Classifieds - they work
(Really, I'm not kidding. Why can't you just believe me?!?)

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification: Special Handling
EB2 & 3 Waivers
Outstanding Professor / Researcher
National Interest / Extraordinary Ability
Religious Problems
All Immigrant / Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1145 Main Street, 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103 — 413-781-4270
32 Old Worth Street, Northampton, MA 01060 — 413-586-3232

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

Pearl Street Nightclub
THURSDAY NOV 9
WHIMP DANCE PARTY
It's LIVE hosted by Nick Danger!
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
18+ / 100 COURTESY OF SUBWAY
Music courtesy from Western College Ski & Sport
DOWNSTAIRS 7:30 PM
Record Release Party
KNUCKLE SANDWICH
FRIDAY NOV 10
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70'S & 80'S
FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD
Every Fri. and Sat. - Only The Club Cover 8 / 10:00 PM w/ Pearl ID
Rte. 9 - Pelham Pandora
Call 584-4756 For More Information
DOWNSTAIRS 8:30 PM
WRSI Welcomes
BEN HARPER
SATURDAY NOV 11
CLUB NIGHT
DJ Dave Playing Retro to Techno
DOWNSTAIRS 9:00 PM
WRSI Welcomes
POI DOG PONDERING
MON NOV 13 8:00 PM
JEFFERSON STARSHIP
WEDNESDAY NOV 15
GAY NIGHT
THUR NOV 16 7:30 PM
7 SECONDS
SAT NOV 18 & SUN NOV 19
Special Two Night Club Engagement
THE MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
SAT 6:30 pm, 18+
SUN 8:00 pm, All Ages
SAT NOV 18 9:00 PM
Downstairs - Free with Resistors Fix
THE BOGMEN
SUN NOV 19 2:00 PM
THE BATTLEFIELD BAND
TUES NOV 21 7:30 PM
KORN
COMING TO PEARL STREET...
11/23 THE BIGHS
11/24 TEEN NIGHT
11/25 THE EQUALITES
12/1 TREE
12/8 GOVT MULE
12/9 CHUCKLEHEAD
12/10 MAX CREEK
Tickets for all shows available at N'hton Box office: 586-8686 / 1-800-THE TICK. Canadian Hours: For The Record in Amherst Tuesday - Saturday in Greenfield
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-584-7777

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Call for Craft Vendors
Student Union Craft Center
Annual Craft Fair
Dec 7 & 8 Contact Cynthia Cosentino 545-2096

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-1 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Steve Madden.
(Im from New York)
ZANNA
Downtown Amherst

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED. CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

"I HATE MONDAYS" SPECIAL
Bring in this ad to receive
$4off HAIRCUTS
(REGULARLY $14-17) ON MONDAYS DURING NOVEMBER ONLY!
256-0438
103 N. Pleasant AMHERST
(next to Bart's)
HAIR EAST

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

CATAMOUNT 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + dep.	BASS ALE 24-12 oz. bott. $21.99 + dep.	BLACK DOG 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 + dep.	KILLIANS RED 24-12 oz. bott. $15.99 + dep.	BUDWEISER 30 pk. cans $14.49 + dep.	BUSCH & LT. 24-12 oz. bott. $8.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. 30 pk cans $11.99 + dep.	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. bott. $9.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT. 24-12 oz. cans $8.29 + dep.	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.19 + dep.	BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 +DEP
PASSPORT SCOTCH $18.49 1.75L	SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99 1.75L	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	OLD KRUPNIK POLISH LIQ. $11.99 .750 ml	BUSH MILLS IRISH WHISKEY $14.69 .750 ml	SAMBUCA ROMANO $14.99 .750 ml
SEBASTIANI COUNTRY WINES $6.99 1.5L	RENE JUNOT WINES $4.99 1.5L	BALLATORE SPUMANTE $3.99 .750 ml	CARLO ROSSI WINES $6.99 4.0L	RIUNITE WINES $5.99 1.5L	BOONE'S FARM WINES $1.99 .750 ml

KEG OF THE WEEK!
MICHELOB $36.99 + DEP.
LITE, RED DOG, M.G.D., LOWENBRAU, ROLLING ROCK, LITE ICE
"KEGS" $39.99 + DEP.
BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK

ICE!
10 lbs. $1.39
50 lbs. $5.99
100 lbs. $9.99
blocks 10 lbs. $1.99
WE DELIVER!
Sale Thru 11/15/95.

~ PREVIEW/REVIEW ~

Doe performs a punkless show

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

THE JOHN DOE THING
Iron Horse Music Hall
Nov. 7

Playing in front of a seated audience, the John Doe Thing took the Iron Horse stage Tuesday night with an air of nonchalance that overlooked the singer's punk legend status.

Punk didn't seem to be a concern, though. Doe was quite aware of the audience at hand and marveled that, "everyone didn't go to Pennywise."

Such honest sarcasm merely augmented the relaxed atmosphere. And with the surprise presence of fellow X member D.J. Bonebrake behind the drum kit, Doe felt right at home leading his band through most of their latest record, Kissingsburd.

"Fallen Tears" started things out (as it does on the album) which hinted at what was to come — Doe's soulful vocals throughout. Smokey Hormel's blues-inspired leads, Brad Houser's virtuoso, 6-string bass playing and Bonebrake's solid drumming.

What followed was a slew of Doe's melancholy ballads ("Hits the Ground," "Field of Dirt") intertwined with his more rocking alternative songs ("Love Knows," "Beer, Gas, Ride Forever").

In "Tragedy by Definition," Doe displayed the usual motif of relationships so evident in X ("Romance has got to be the greatest fantasy"). Described as "King Crimson plays Iron Maiden," "Love Knows" saw a return to unrestrained punk simplicity with a twist of progressive pop.

Other surprises surfaced which included a new song written on tour from his first solo effort, "With Someone Like You" off of Meet John Doe.

The John Doe Thing's performance was indeed a treat as it was an unconscious history lessen. Unfortunately, Doe's time may have run its course in the realm of popular music. Whether he or X was ever in that position is questionable, yet it is evident that his or X's influence has hardly achieved the recognition deserved.

COURTESY WGCO MORTENSEN

John Doe performed at the Iron Horse Tuesday night.

Japanese dancers to perform tonight

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

The New York City based Saeko Ichinohe Japanese Dance Company will perform at Bowker Auditorium tonight. The company has been especially noted in recent years for its ability to act as a cultural bridge between East and West. The company combines an appreciation of the traditions and art forms of Japan with the added dimension of American contemporary dance.

The company began its activities in 1970 and toured the United States in 1973. The company was fully incorporated under Saeko Ichinohe in 1975 and has since performed at the New York Dance Festival, The Lincoln Center Out–of– Doors Festival and at the Kennedy Center's Terrace Theater.

Television appearances have included PBS's "Live by Satellite: Japanese Performing Arts in America," and the company has also featured in a commercial for National Young Audiences— sponsored by the Mobil Corporation.

The dancers represent different ethnic backgrounds and it is this diversity which helps create and express the true blend of East and West.

The four pieces that will be performed include — Chidori (1987), which is based upon Japanese shore birds. This act features traditional dance vocabulary and is used to express the movements of the birds.

Dosojin (1992) is based upon a Japanese deity or guardian of the same name. This dance will portray a day in a local village as the Japanese people pass by a dosojin.

The third act is an excerpt from Moon Breeze (1994) and features Akhome–Ohgi or ———Japanese traditional fans Such fans originated one thousand years ago and the company will utilize them in ways that transcend their traditional function.

The final act is an excerpt from The Tale of Genji (1995). This tale (written by Murasaki Shikibu in the eleventh century) is a dance that will depict the youth of Prince Genji, son of Emperor Kiritsubo.

Saeko Ichinohe and Company will perform at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are available at the box office for $15, $10, and $8 for children 16 and under. Tickets for Five–College students are $5. For more information call the box office at 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:
Something Every Friday
A weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday
The Movie: "SPECIES"
in the Bluewall Cafe
November 10, 1995, 8 pm & 10pm
FREE
Refreshments Will Be Served

"A HEART-STOPPING THRILLER IN THE TRADITION OF 'ALIENS' BUT FAR SUPERIOR"
"THE SCI-FI EVENT OF THE YEAR IS HERE!"
"THE SUMMER'S MOST THRILLING TWO HOURS!"
SPECIES

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.
Sign up 545-3600

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Bud Dry" $9.99 case bots
Saranac "All flavors" including Season's Best case bots. $16.99
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Smuttynose- Shoals Pale Ale, Old Brown Dog Ale
Catamount- All flavors including 'X-Mas Ale!'
Pete's Wicked- Ale, Lager, Wheat, Red, & Winter Brew!
Sam Adams- All flavors
Brooklyn- Lager, & the Rich Brown Ale!
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Black Jack Black & Tan $3.99 6 pk/bots
Bacardi Amber or Silver $7.99 750 ml
Stoli Vodka 80° $11.99 750ml
$.5. Pierre Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75 liters
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Distinguished Visitor's Program Proudly Presents
Katie Koestner
"No-Yes"

Koestner will speak of her personal experiences with date rape, including her campus hearing and post-rape encounters with college administrators, police, health officials, and Congress. She will also discuss facts about rape - its prevalence among college students and its relationship to drugs and alcohol - and suggestions for prevention.
Wednesday, November 15
8:00 P.M.
UMass Student Union Ballroom
Admission: Free to UMass Undergrads, $2 all others.
Distinguished Visitors Program

ATTENTION
Golden Key National Honor Society Members
You are invited to attend the 1995 Induction Ceremony.
When: Sunday, November 12, 1995
Time: 1:30 p.m.
Where: Student Union Ballroom
The initiates would be pleased to have you share in their accomplishment.
We look forward to seeing you there.
Golden Key National Honor Society

■ coffee

continued from page 5

Haymarket
Main St., Northampton
Open Sunday–Saturday 8 a.m.–12 a.m.

Northampton is home to one of the smallest big coffee shops in the area. To be more specific, the entrance upstairs on Main Street is an area as wide as a dorm room. But downstairs, one finds a rather large coffee shop with a few little rooms for sitting to enjoy the coffee and conversation.

The shop prides itself on being cheaper than most shops in the area, as well as offering a "relaxed atmosphere" for its patrons. The downstairs area is lined with bookshelves filled with books that are for sale. Small circular tables are scattered about, suitable for large crowds.

The Haymarket does draw large crowds. A spokesman says that weekend nights are really busy. Late afternoon from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. is also a popular time at the coffee shop. The clientele varies, ranging from townspeople in the morning to students in the evening.

The shop has an intimate, almost homey feel to it. The cups and saucers, table cloths and chairs are all mis– matched, creating an environment more like someone's kitchen rather than a impersonal restaurant.

Fans of coffee and ambiance will certainly love the Haymarket coffee shop. Stop by and have a cup and enjoy the truly special environment the Haymarket offers. (Ed Hurley)

Rao's Coffee Roasting Co.
Kellog Avenue, Amherst
Open Monday–Friday 7 a.m.–12 a.m.
Saturday & Sunday 8 a.m.–1 a.m.

Perhaps the most patronized coffee–house in Amherst, Rao's combines a trendy student atmosphere while serving up a delicious blend of sumptuous coffee and delightful pastries. This roastery has something to suit all tastes, and, while specializing in exotic coffee, it also has a vast selection of tea from which to choose.

Some drinks are highly idiosyncratic to this store and the "Brown Cow" is just one of many. "Cafe Mocha" is also notable and as an exotic mix of coffee and mocha — it provides the perfect cocktail for any coffee–loving, caffeine– avoiding individual.

There is no typical coffee that defines this roastery as it is imported from all parts of the world. The unopened coffee– bean sacks and large steel grinder also add to the heady atmosphere and provide an aroma that tempts the punters in.
(Matt Sinclair)

Bart's
North Pleasant St., Amherst
Main St., Northampton
Open Sunday–Thursday 8 a.m.–11:30 p.m.
Friday & Saturday 8 a.m.–12 a.m. (Amherst)
Open Sunday 8 a.m.–11 p.m.
Monday–Thursday 7:30 a.m.–11 p.m.
Friday & Saturday 7:30 a.m.–12 a.m.(Noho)

The Valley is graced with a double–dose of Bert's, with locations both in Amherst and Northampton. While it is world–renowned for its ice–cream, the most popular item on the menu, according to Noho Bart's manager Jaimye Krol, is actually coffee.

Besides the vast selection of coffees to choose from, Bart's also offers their seasonal special, mulled cider, and bakery desserts — most of which are prepared there.

Krol, who is a freshman theater major at UMass, said that the most popular treats are, "cookies, I guess."

Compared to the rest of the coffee houses in the area, Krol says that Barts' prices are "better than most around."

The colorful paintings and tee–shirts that adorn the walls of Bart's make for a playful atmosphere, where friends gather over cups of steaming java. You'll find the biggest crowds on Friday and Saturday nights — the typical "date nights." (Laura Stock)

Bluewall
Campus Center
Open Sunday 5:30 p.m.–12:30 a.m.
Monday–Thursday 8:30 a.m.–12:30 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.–5:30 p.m.
Closed Saturdays

UMass students have to stray no further than their own Campus Center to fulfill their cravings for some great gourmet coffee.

The Bluewall is the most popular place to get coffee and bakery items on campus, and the long lines in–between classes prove it.

There is always an array of coffees, which they get from Omar Coffee Co., to select from at the Bluewall, ranging from Mocha Java to their Columbian house blend. Their most popular flavors, according to employee Amy Lunderville, are Hazelnut and Java Jolt.

Desserts from the Bluewall bakery are also among students' favorites. Their best–sellers, said Lunderville, are cookies and bagels.

"Carrot cake always goes really fast," Lunderville added.

The atmosphere of the Bluewall ranges from people catching up on their soaps in front of the big–screen TV or grabbing a sandwich around lunchtime. The Bluewall, however, is most widely known as an ideal place to study and stay fueled with caffeine. (L.S.)

■ TV

continued from page 5

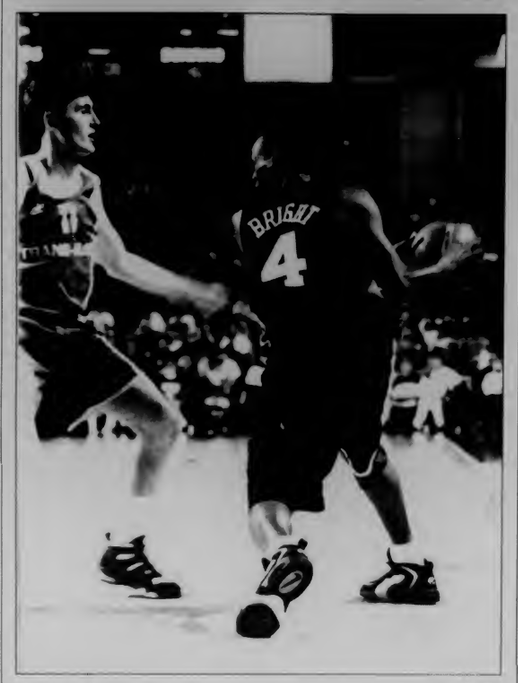
a very special episode of "Beverly Hills 90210." If you flipped the channel to NBC though, you'd find former lovebirds Tiffani–Amber Thiessen and Brian Austin Green in their very first film together. Yippee! "She Fought Alone" was the exceptionally bad movie about a high school senior who was raped by someone she knew.

And in case you didn't know, last night was Luke Perry's last appearance on "90210." After marrying the love of his life, Toni, she is murdered. Thank God for small miracles. Now if we could just get rid of Tori Spelling and Jamie Walters ...

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Laura Schmidt or Aimee Schwartz
113 Campus Center
545-3500

~ SPORTS ~



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The 'Cats are coming!

Donta Bright and the rest of the Minuteman basketball team are preparing to face a formidable Kentucky team on Nov. 28.

Pro football in Nashville?

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Bills coach Marv Levy has never enjoyed relying on rookies. It's not that he doesn't like them. He just doesn't trust them to play consistently.

Levy, finding a team riddled with injuries upon his return from prostate cancer surgery, doesn't have a choice but to throw his younger players at the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday.

"The fact that we're playing these young players is a fact of life," Levy said. "Rather than fret about it, we want to get them ready. These are opportunities. We hope that they will come in and play in outstanding fashion. It's tough on a rookie, but sometimes they step up and do the job. They're going to have to."

Buffalo, stripped of veterans during free agency and lacking depth after recent injuries to six starters, might begin its game this week with five rookies. The Bills have not started more than three since 1987.

The Bills will be especially inexperienced at cornerback after Jeff Burris sustained a season-ending knee injury Sunday against Indianapolis. They will start third-round pick rookie Marlon Kerner, one of three cornerbacks on Buffalo's roster, against Atlanta's run-and-shoot attack.

"Our secondary's going to be under a lot of stress this coming game," Levy said. "We haven't fastened a game plan yet, but most teams use more than the standard four defensive backs against them. It hurts."

Buffalo's problems don't end in the secondary, either.

Rookie Damien Covington, who has been active for only six of the nine games, is expected to start at inside linebacker for Cornelius Bennett.

Bennett has been hobbled by a sore hamstring, and he did not play in the second half against the Colts. Bennett was moved inside after veteran Mark Maddox sustained a season-ending knee injury in Week 6.

"The coaches have been taking their time and showed me the different techniques," Covington said. "I'm just working hard to get things down pat. I'm ready to come out Sunday ready to play."

On offense, running back Darick Holmes has struggled while filling in for injured Thurman Thomas, who is not certain whether he will play this week. Thomas has been nursing a pulled hamstring and hasn't played in two games.

Andre Reed will not play against Atlanta after sustaining severely pulled hamstring Oct. 8 in a victory over the New York Jets. Two-year veteran Russell Copeland as been teamed with veteran Bill Brooks and rookie wide receiver Justin Armour in the K-Gun offense.

Ruben Brown, the first rookie to earn a starting job in training camp for the Bills since Thomas, will remain at left guard. Brown, Buffalo's top draft pick, has been plagued by penalties while trying to adjust to the NFL over the first nine games.

"We're not going to war by ourselves," Armour said. "We have a lot of veterans around us every play telling us what to do. We're just an extension; we're not the meat of the it."

The NFL in Nashville?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Raiders, the Rams, the Browns, the Oilers. Hardly a month passes without another team being sold or agreeing to move to a city that has learned just how loudly money talks when courting pro franchises.

An Indiana University professor who's been studying franchises for 20 years says Nashville, which may have both NFL and NHL teams by next fall, upped the ante this year by offering $20 million to anybody willing to relocate.

"The bounty you guys put up down there, $20 million if anyone would come, oh my goodness that just raised it a notch higher. Baltimore said, 'We'll give $50 million for an NFL team,'" Mark S. Rosentraub said Wednesday by telephone.

Nashville officials wanting a team to give the city a major league cachet offered the $20 million last spring when the NHL's New Jersey Devils looked around for a new home. The Devils used that standing offer to any team as leverage for a better contract at the Meadowlands. But that $20 million figure caught the attention of Oilers' owner Bud Adams who is unhappy with his revenue as an Astrodome tenant.

Nashville now has a non-binding agreement with Adams to relocate the Oilers to Music City by 1998 dependent upon building a new stadium and selling about $70 million in personal seat licenses, the new cash pot for pro teams.

The Oilers could be playing in Tennessee next September if the team is able to buy out its Astrodome contract. Oilers' executive vice president Mike McClure said Tuesday night that they had not talked about such a deal.

Music City also wants a tenant for a 20,000-seat arena that opens next fall. Gaylord Entertainment Co. would like to buy a NHL or NBA franchise it could operate a block from the Ryman Auditorium, former home to the Grand Ole Opry.

"The intention three years ago when we proposed the arena was to begin to position Nashville as a place for professional sports," said Jenny Hannon, director of the Nashville Sports Council. "And since then, step by step, we've put together a package and the city's been very progressive."

The money being offered by cities has accelerated teams moving around, but Rosentraub, director of the Center for Urban Policy and the Environment at Indiana University, said NFL, NHL, NBA and major league baseball owners remain in control.

NFL owners leave meetings still shocked

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

GRAPEVINE, Texas — Still a bit shocked by Art Modell's decision to move the Browns from Cleveland, NFL owners headed home on Wednesday, some to contemplate their own stadium problems and their ramifications for the future.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue pronounced the league still healthy. But it was clear that a lot of owners were more than a little disheartened by the Browns' move, a symbol to many of instability in a league that prides itself on being the least troubled of any of the major sports. And Tagliabue acknowledged that.

"This is more than just a public relations jolt," he said. "It's a deep psychological jolt to fans of the NFL, not just fans of the Cleveland Browns."

There was little action taking during the meetings — owners decided to put off realignment until after the 1996 season, raised Super Bowl ticket prices to a high of $350 and disposed of a few housekeeping matters. Tagliabue also said it was unlikely there would be expansion until the next century. But the meetings were dominated by the movement of the Browns, the prospective move of the Oilers from Houston to Nashville and the perceived instability that represents.

There is also increasing concern about the difference in revenue producing ability between "haves" and "have-nots," the "haves" in this case being teams with good stadiums and favorable lease arrangements as much as teams in major markets."

Cordova named AL Rookie of the Year

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Marty Cordova, the Minnesota Twins outfielder who had 24 homers and 84 RBIs, was voted AL Rookie of the Year on Wednesday, edging California's Garret Anderson in the closest race in 16 years.

Cordova and Anderson each received 13 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America (BBWAA). Cordova had 13 seconds and one third for 105 points, while Anderson had 10 seconds and four thirds for 99 points.

Andy Pettitte of the New York Yankees and Troy Percival of the Angels each received one first-place vote.

It was the closest race in the AL since 1979, when Twins third baseman John Castino and Toronto shortstop Alfredo Griffin tied with seven votes each. The following year, the BBWAA switched to the system where each writer makes three picks, with 5 points for a first-place vote, 3 for a second and 1 for a third.

The last rookie race decided by such a narrow margin was the NL award in 1982, when Steve Sax of Los Angeles edged Pittsburgh's Johnny Ray by six points.

Cordova, 26, finished the season hitting .277. He made his major league debut on April 26 and started in a 2-for-16 slump, but rebounded to hit .301 in May with eight homers and 21 RBIs. He slumped to .247 in June, then hit .293 in July. He closed strongly, hitting .304 from Sept. 1 to the end of the season with four homers and 23 RBIs.

He homered in five consecutive games from May 16-20, tying the major league rookie record set by Rudy York in 1937 and matched by George Alusik in 1962 and Ron Kittle in 1983. It also matched the Twins record accomplished twice by Harmon Killebrew in 1970.

Anderson hit .324 with 16 homers and 69 RBIs. He started the season with the Angels and was just 0-for-8 when he was sent back to the minors on May 15, when rosters were reduced from 28 active players to 25. He returned to California on June 7 and in July was picked as the AL player of the month after hitting .410 with seven homers and 31 RBIs in 25 games.

Anderson would have received a $10,000 bonus if he had won the award.

TONIGHT

Meet... Coach Mallen
UMASS Hockey Coach
at 6:00 p.m.

AND

Free Popcorn

Coach Hodges
UMASS Football Coach
at 7:00 p.m.

Big Screen TV

Then stay for "Friends" & "Steinfeld" Starting at 8:00 p.m.

TOC LOUNGE

Mon - Sat. 4:30 p.m. - 12:30 a.m.
11th Floor Campus Center

PAWSS

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES

PRESENTS

"TRADE WARS"

A Five College Faculty Panel with :
Daniel Barbezat, Amherst College
Beth Yarbrough, Amherst College
Dennis Yasutomo, Smith College

Thursday, November 9th
7:30 PM
Converse Hall, Amherst College

This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519

~ SPORTS ~

■ Myers

continued from page 20

as is UMass' central defender, Erin Lynch. Now that she has had three years at UMass, she does have that feel for the game and knows where different people will be positioned.

"When we were all freshman, Julie stayed back on defense while I was always on offense," Myers said. "After playing together, we understand where each other will be. Now I come back and play defense sometimes and she can get forward because she has a great shot up top and is dangerous coming through the middle."

For a great deal of her development, Myers credits Lynch.

"Everyone has a feel of where we all will be now and that helps," Myers said. "When I came in as a freshman I got really intimidated a lot out on the field. I could always look back to Erin and she would never be intimidated. Nothing could phase her. She's always confident out there.

"Having her back helped my confidence level incredibly. She's an amazing player."

After learning such an important lesson, she now can help develop the confidence in the younger players just starting out on the team. Freshman Karin Johnson feels that Myers has been a factor in helping her adapt to the collegiate level of play.

"Rebecca is a very good player and she has helped my confidence a lot," Johnson said. "Sometimes it's hard for me to play my style, but she talks to me and reminds me to play my own game. She is a great leader as a captain. Watching her play and how she deals with things helps me so much."

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rebecca Myers has been a leader offensively for the third straight season for the Minutewomen.

■ football

continued from page 20

Dame, Michigan and Penn St. Will the Big 10 title mean a trip to Pasadena for the Wildcats? Not necessarily. If both Ohio St. and Northwestern run the table, it will mean the Buckeyes head to the Rose Bowl with the better overall record.

• Four names remain in the race for the Heisman. Eddie George from Ohio St. had 178 yards last week and has 1,278 yards on the season with 18 TD's. Tommy Frazier of Nebraska accounted for four TD's last week and has 27 on the year. Troy Davis, the nation's leading rusher with 1,657 yards, is also a contender. Danny Wuerffel rounds out the hopefuls with 22 TD's and a average of 277.7 passing yards per game.

• The games of the week feature the nation's top three teams. Here's a look.

Nebraska at Kansas

On paper it looks good. No. 1 goes up against No. 12, but it probably won't be so great on the field.

KU has beaten Colorado and Oklahoma this season and comes in 8-1. QB Mark Williams and running back June Henely key a potent offense but the defense will be the sore spot against the 'Huskers.

Nebraska comes into this game in cruise control. Lawrence Phillips is back for the remainder of the season and Tommy Frazier has been tremendous at the helm of the offense. Freshman running back Ahman Green is coming off a career day, rushing for 176 yards against Iowa St. Nebraska looks like world beaters and will roll the rest of the season. Nebraska 50, Kansas 21.

Illinois at Ohio State

Ohio St. enters a tough part of an already brutal schedule. First it's Illinois, then a breather against Indiana, and the big season finale with Michigan.

This series has been owned by the Illini of late. Illinois has won six of the last seven meetings between the two. Lou Tepper's team is keyed by defense and it all starts with Lombardi finalist Simeon Rice. Rice is phenomenal and will have to be if Illinois hopes to stop the OSU offense.

The OSU offense is amazing and you've heard the names before — Eddie George, Bobby Hoying and Terry Glenn. If the banged-up Glenn is ready for Saturday, then this one won't be close. Ohio State 36, Illinois 18.

Florida at South Carolina

The real intrigue here is seeing how many yards and points these two teams put on the board.

South Carolina gave up 56 points last week and its defense is virtually non-existent. This poor defensive unit will get bombarded by Danny Wuerffel and Co.

Just like Obi-Wan was Leia's only hope, QB Steve Tanneyhill is the only hope for the Gamecocks. Once a trash-talking freshman, Tanneyhill is now a reserved senior and he has been lighting up secondaries all season long. The Gator's defense is weak and Tanneyhill should put some points on the board, but in the end its too much of the Florida offense. Florida 55, South Carolina 38.

Greg Corey is a Collegian Columnist.

■ NBA

continued from page 20

Warriors some much needed stability.

Others to watch:

(G-F) Michael Finley — Suns, (F) Ed O'Bannon — Nets, (C) Ardivas Sabonis — Blazers and (F) Rasheed Wallace — Bullets.

Spanning the "Globe"

• Michael Jordan is back, and his 42 point opening night.

• I don't get it, the Magic traded Anthony Avent to the Grizzlies for reserves Larry Stewart and Kevin Pritchard. Their next move? They pronounced Pritchard WOA (waived on arrival) and axed Stewart a day later.

• The Knicks are looking for a new 12th man to help an already-thin backcourt. Look for them to sign ex-Clipper Gary Grant within the week.

• Enough is enough, bring back the real refs before somebody else gets hurt.

• I'd like to enter my vote for the NBA's slowest team. The Celtics' fastest member, M.L. Carr, as he runs for cover once the Celtics can't break .500 by Christmas.

Darren Cohen is a Collegian correspondent.

■ swimming

continued from page 20

come has been decided by the result of the last relay.

"We're not going to change the way we're playing," Newcomb said. "We're going to continue to practice hard with the same workouts and keep working on our strokes, turns and techniques."

Northeastern has a well-rounded squad also and it will take a strong effort to pull off the win.

"Northeastern is still strong on butterfly events, diving and backstroke," Newcomb said. "We will match up very well with them. They lost three talented players to graduation, but it will still be a very tough meet. It's always a good, healthy, rivalry against Northeastern."

However, the loss of some of their best swimmers does not have Newcomb and the team relaxing.

"You can never slack off against Northeastern," Newcomb said. "We have to have everyone concentrate on their individual events and beat their opponent."

UMass will use this meet and the next one against Boston University in two weeks to prepare for the New England Championships in Connecticut at the beginning of December.

"We want to shoot for a good turnout in the three championships — the New England, the Rhode Island and ultimately the Atlantic-10," Newcomb said. "We're still shooting toward February [A-10s]."

Barbara Hickey, who swam well last meet and who has filled the shoes of the injured Karen Sonnwald (holder of the UMass records in the three longest freestyle events), will need to turn in another winning performance this weekend.

Senior Sarah Baker, who has proven herself to be one of UMass' best swimmers, will once again be called upon to help lead the team to victory.

Divers Algelique Rodriguez and Krystin Carpenter also had good showings last week and are a vital part of the diving competition for the Minutewomen.

After UMass' meet with Northeastern, the Minutewomen will play BU at home at 4 p.m.

The Daily Collegian, we bring you sports

What Do YOU Want In A Perm?
Maybe . . .
❤ No frizz!
❤ No smell!
❤ The curl you asked for!
❤ Lasting curl with no damage!

So send your hair to . . .
Shear Bliss
Non-toxic, Holistic Salon Pure flower & plant essences used in every service
☆ Perm Special ☆ $25 Value!
Complementary makeup application & free matrix lip color with perm.
Prices given during free consultation, not over the phone
253-2322
479 West St., Amherst
On UMass/Hampshire Bus Route
ALSO . . . Acrylics Nails • Pedicures • Facials • Lash Tinting • Gorgeous Haircoloring • Makeovers • Men's 100% Botanical Shave/Skin System • And More!

UMass Division of Continuing Education
• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996
• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy.
Sometimes you gotta break a few rules.
And it is during these times that you know ...
There's no going back."

last chance to prepare for the December test
GRE
Last class begins on: 11/18/95
Phone #549-5780
get a higher score
KAPLAN

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
Now Renting...
Four (4) Bedroom apartment on Rte.9
1 1/2 bath, super clean & quiet!
Call 256-0741

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

AMHERST CINEMA
Only Local Showing
Starts Fri. 7&9 Daily
The New Comedy from Woody Allen
"Mighty Aphrodite" Makes All Righty!
The goofiness is almost magical.
MIGHTY APHRODITE
ACADEMY of MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Nov. 17
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information: Campus Activities Office Student Union or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

~ SPORTS ~

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Evans and his Minuteman teammates are excited about their 3–0 start and their sweep of Merrimack last weekend.

■ ice hockey

continued from page 20

"Anytime you get a sweep it is very special, but because it was Merrimack it did add to it," Rissling said.

Although the season is still very young, the Hockey East coaches, who picked UMass to finish last again, are starting to rethink their decision.

Being picked ninth has motivated Massachusetts to prove the Hockey East coaches wrong.

"When we found out we were last in the polls, I think everyone in the room was pretty upset about it," Manganaro said. "We knew what kind of team we had."

While the team was optimistic going into the season, the perfect start has increased its confidence even further. But with 27 games still to play, the coaching staff is stressing confidence, but not over-confidence.

"Coming off the weekend I told the team we need confidence, not over-confidence," Mallen said. "It's very easy to get over-confident."

Regan said so far the Minutemen have held to Mallen's advice.

"It's been a very positive atmosphere," Regan said. "We're very confident, but we're not being over-confident."

Rissling said the team has to get used to winning.

"This is a new feeling for the team and it's something," said the defenseman, "we'll have to grow with and take in stride."

The Minutemen return to action this weekend, when they will tangle with the UMass–Lowell River Hawks for a home- and-home series. Friday the two teams will play at the William D. Mullins Center and Saturday at the Joseph Tully Forum for Lowell's home opener.

King attacked during trial

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A prosecutor's charge that Don King's testimony in his insurance fraud trial was "absurd" and full of lies so upset the boxing promoter's lawyer that he told jurors in closing arguments Wednesday he might cry.

It was a lively climax to a six-week trial that had produced snores and yawns from spectators who watched prosecutors try to prove King faked a boxing contract to collect $350,000 in insurance money for a 1991 cancelled fight.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Craig Stewart launched his closing argument with an attack on King's credibility and urged jurors to use his own words to find him guilty of nine counts of wire fraud. "It's not fair and square to take a solemn oath to tell the truth ... and then tell you a story that has no relationship with the truth," Stewart told the federal jury in Manhattan.

As boxer Mike Tyson watched with other spectators, Stewart said King's testimony over three days actually clarified the prosecution's case. King admitted it would have been wrong and deceptive to add a clause to a contract for the canceled bout after the fight was scrapped, Stewart said.

"The question then becomes, ladies and gentlemen, was he a part of it ... and you know he was because the only person who stood to benefit was Don King," he said.

Stewart said King lied any time he needed to cover up the fact that he participated at every turn in the attempt to fool Lloyd's of London into paying $350,000 in training expenses that were never incurred for the bout between Julio Cesar Chavez and Harold Brazier.

Stewart described as "patently absurd" testimony in which King said he was never told that his employees were asking for $350,000 in training expenses.

"He knew. He orchestrated it," he said. "When he needed something on the witness stand ... he just made it up. That story, ladies and gentleman, was a lie."

For two hours, Stewart bashed King's handling of the claim and then warned jurors to remember the promoter's misdeeds if defense lawyer Peter Fleming "sheds a tear for Don King" during his closing argument.

Minutes later and late in the day, an angry Fleming followed the prosecutor and did not hide his emotions.

"I may shed a tear," he told the jury as he began with a 45-minute summation that will continue Thursday morning. He wiped his nose several times and his voice seemed to crack as he spoke. Then he took aim at Stewart for accusing King of faking a contract, backdating checks and lying about conversations and then telling the jury, "where I come from, they call that fraud."

"Where I come from," Fleming said, angrily crumpling a piece of paper and throwing it beneath him, "no prosecutor is going to call a man a liar and I know he doesn't replace evidence with speculation."

"There's nothing that happens in this case, no piece of evidence, that they don't choose to look at as sinister. That is the mark of prosecutors, who you might find have a higher obligation, trying to make a case," he said.

The trial is the second federal case for King, 64, who in 1985 won an acquittal in a tax evasion case.

King in the past quarter century has risen to the top of the boxing world, promoting Buster Douglas' stunning upset of Tyson in Tokyo in 1990, the "Rumble in the Jungle" between Muhammad Ali and George Foreman in 1974 and the "Thrilla in Manila" between Ali and Joe Frazier in 1975.

Navy gets its goats — back from Army

By John Kekis
Associated Press

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Navy is getting its goats back. No kidding.

Officials at West Point said Wednesday they had located the trio of mascot goats stolen from Annapolis over the weekend by a contingent of Army seniors.

"We know where the goats are," Lt. Col. Don McGrath of the West Point public affairs office said. "Two of the cadets involved have come forward and met with the commandant. Now, we're working cooperatively with the cadets and the administration to return the goats safely and expeditiously back to the Naval Academy."

McGrath said the incident will be reviewed and appropriate action taken.

"We have viewed it as a breach of discipline," McGrath said. "We've taken it very seriously."

McGrath said Navy had been notified and he didn't expect any retaliatory strikes.

"We hope not," he said. "Actually, we're quite confident the Naval Academy will do the right thing. We wish we had done the right thing here. We did not."

When the animals turned up missing over the weekend, it didn't take long to figure out who stole them.

"We knew Army cadets were involved," Navy sports information director Tom Bates said, "because they cut through two fences to get to the goats, and 15 feet away there was an unlocked gate."

The kid trio disappeared from a Maryland farm 15 miles from Annapolis during a predawn raid Sunday. The action came five years after the academies had begun making annual pacts to halt the mascot-stealing shenanigans because they were getting out of hand. The goats were being held hostage somewhere in the Hudson River highlands near West Point.

The cadets had intended to keep them until the Army-Navy game in December, but the Army brass stepped in and ended the prank through the cadet chain of command.

"We will, as soon as possible, after we have ascertained through our veterinarians that the goats are healthy and can travel, take them to Annapolis with the appropriate apologies," said Brig. Gen. Robert J. St. Onge, in only his seventh week as commandant of cadets.

The cadets said the goat-napping was payback for a 1991 Navy raid on West Point that netted all four of Army's mascot mules. Despite the breakdown in discipline, this was a major coup for the cadets, who were duped big-time in 1990. They stole a goat they thought was Bill XXVI, the Navy mascot. Instead, they got "faux goat"— an ornery character who was drummed out of Annapolis because of his bathroom habits.

Navy wasn't the only weekend victim. High in the Colorado Rockies, Air Force was recovering from the theft of the Commander-in-Chief's Trophy, the symbol of football supremacy among the service academies.

Army invaders stole the hardware from the Falcons' trophy case and left a hand-scribbled note — "We took it early 'cause we're going to win it anyway" — in its place. A security guard discovered the empty case early Sunday.

This is serious business, folks. The Air Force public affairs likened the theft to a "tragedy ... on the same level of shock and outrage a security guard at the Louvre would feel at the theft of the Mona Lisa."

"We're a little bit concerned," Air Force coach Fisher DeBerry said during a break in preparation for Saturday's game against Army. "Really, it was just a prank in the spirit of the game, I'm sure the culprits are some Army exchange students we have here. It'll probably turn up sometime."

The Daily Collegian, we bring you the weather

Commonwealth Opera presents

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN & JEROME KERN'S
SHOWBOAT
UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER
Saturday, Nov. 11 at 8 pm
Sunday, Nov. 12 at 2 pm
$18 • $15 • $12 • Student discounts • Groups take 1/3 off!
Northampton Box Office 586-8686
Don't miss this grand musical and dance extravaganza!

When Appearance Counts,
Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATION
586-6843
33 WEST STREET NORTHAMPTON

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

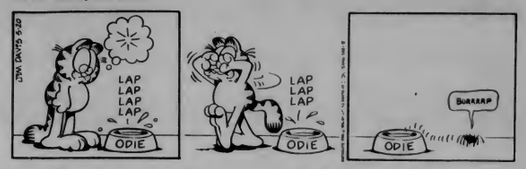
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Rolling Rock	$6.99 12-pack Bottles	Early Times Bourbon	$6.99 750 ml
Bud Dry Cans & Bottles	$10.99 Case	Jagermeister	$8.99 375 ml
Shipyard (Ale, Brown Ale & Stout)	$4.99/Six	Malibu Rum	$8.99 50ml
Oregon Ales (I.P.A., Nut Brown Ale, Honey Red Ale, Rasberry Wheat)	$4.99/six	Keg Special: 1/2 Keg	$75.00
Gordon's Vodka	$5.99 750 ml plastic	Sam Adams Scotch Ale

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Garfield By Jim Davis

Garfield By Jim Davis



Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Sex is a big thing for most people. When they get it right... for most people it's a blast.

What about creatures who don't really have it...? Like bees.

But they can fly. All summer they cruise in and out of the gardens at 100 miles an hour.

Imagine yourself standing at the top of the roof to your house. You look at the building next to you, simply raise your arms and fly over to the trees nearby. When was the last time you looked down at the top of a tree? Absolutely lovely!

Wouldn't it be great to fly all over whenever you wanted... up into trees, over homes... just jump up into the air and soar through the blue skies... free from the shackles of an earth bound, plodding, foot existence.

Gee, what would be better than flying...?

SEX.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"After the oral surgeon took out the fourth wisdom tooth, he discovered there were four more! Can you believe it?! Eight wisdom teeth, all removed at one time!"

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

MR. ROGART DON'T SEE NOBODY!
HE'LL SEE ME! IT'S ABOUT SANDRA STEWART!
I'VE GOT WHAT HE ASKED FOR!
WHAT'S THAT ALL ABOUT?
IT'S SAFER NOT TO KNOW!

Generation X By Chris Lehman

ABC'S "BEATLES ANTHOLOGY" IS FACING SOME COMPETITION.
CBS IS PLANNING "THE WHO ANTHOLOGY." NBC IS PLANNING A "SUPREMES ANTHOLOGY."
FOX IS PLANNING AN "AEROSMITH ANTHOLOGY." THE WB NETWORK OFFERS "THE MONKEES ANTHOLOGY."
AND THE UPN NETWORK IS PLANNING A "NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK ANTHOLOGY."

Bruno By C. Baldwin

IF I WRITE YOU FROM CALIFORNIA, DO YOU PROMISE TO WRITE BACK?
OF COURSE BUT AREN'T YOU GOING TO MISS THE NEW ENGLAND AUTUMNS? YOU'VE ALWAYS LOVED SO MUCH TO WATCH ALL OF THE PLANTS DYING
I KNOW. I KNOW. BUT YOU KNOW IN CALIFORNIA IT RAINS FOR THE ENTIRE MONTH OF JANUARY AND BESIDES, I WANT TO BE THERE WHEN THE ENTIRE STATE SLIDES INTO THE OCEAN
FAIR ENOUGH

Dilbert By Scott Adams

HAVE YOU TAKEN THE MANDATORY TRAINING FOR BUSINESS ETHICS?
NO, BUT IF YOU SAY I DID THEN YOU'LL SAVE SOME MONEY ON TRAINING WHICH YOU CAN SPEND TO DECORATE YOUR OFFICE
LUCKILY, I HAVEN'T TAKEN THE TRAINING MYSELF
I HEAR IT'S MOSTLY COMMON SENSE ANYWAY.

Big Man On Campus By Dave Schneider

ISN'T THIS A COOL PARTY? I TOLD YOU MY FRIEND COULD THROW A GREAT BASH!
DON'T LOOK SO DEPRESSED LOOK, I THINK I SEE ANOTHER MOOSE OVER THERE. YOU CAN TALK TO HIM AAAAHHH!
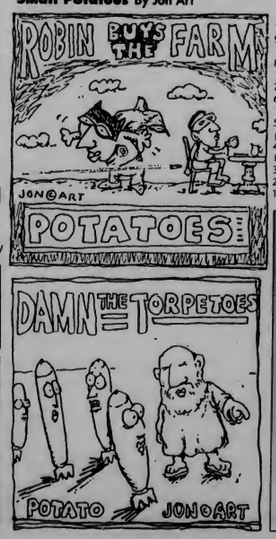
HA! HA! HA!

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellerini

KEEPING THE ENVIRONMENT CLEAN FROM PROFIT-OBSESSED BUSINESSES IS A NECESSARY JOB!
CREATING JOBS THROUGH LITTERING IS A FAR CRY FROM A PUBLIC-EDUCATION WORKING FOR "GREENPEACE."
HEY! PLAIN AND SIMPLE IF COMPANIES DIDN'T LITTER "GREENPEACE" WOULDN'T EVEN EXIST!!
PERSONALLY I THINK THEY OWE EXXON A THANK-YOU NOTE!
I'D RATHER THEY TEACH THEM RESPONSIBILITY!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



8
Cooler than pools,
more hip than billiards,
better than a cold glass of beer...
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Timothy J. White
Copy Editor.....Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician.....Ryan Tiezzi
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Helfner
Production.....Amy Paradysz
Leon Latino, Matt Audette

Dining Commons Menu

Thursday

LUNCH	DINNER
Cheese Pizza	Roast Beef
Rueben on Rye	Fried Shrimp Dinner
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Cheese Pizza	Beans & Rice
Veggie Burger	Carrot Onion Schine

Friday

LUNCH	DINNER
Fishburger!	Savory Beef Strudel
Ravioli with Sauce	Turkey Tenderloin
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Red Beans	Curried Chick Peas
Fishburger!	Turkey Tenderloin

Saturday

LUNCH	DINNER
Breakfast sandwich	BBQ Chicken
Grilled Ham	Sweet & Sour Pork
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Breakfast Sandwich	Sweet & Sour Tofu
Split Pea Stew	BBQ Chicken

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that You're Not Going to Do Well This Semester

10. You often spend class time "in the corner."
9. Professors have changed their "dunce" caps to read your name.
8. You're not 100 percent sure what classes you're taking yet.
7. You've forgotten how to read.
6. When you walk into class, professor greets you with "Good morning, Jack ass!"
5. You're usually too drunk to understand a word the professor says.
4. Beavis and Butt-head are the brightest people you know.
3. Professor tells you "not to bother" with exams.
2. That whole addition thing still has you baffled.
1. Your last name? Gump.

Quote of the Day

"Like Sam the butcher bringing Alice the meat, like Fred Flintston driving around with bald feet."

–The Beastie Boys

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Attn: Anscy/Pre-vet club Don't miss out on the Hadley farm barn clean up & BBQ! Sat. Nov. 11 at 9:30 am. Questions- rides call 549-3891 or 549-4372

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi delivering. Sunday through Thursday 12-11pmand Friday and Saturday to 3am.

U MASS HOCKEY
Unfortuned (Mass Mindsweep take on U Lowell- Friday night @ the Mullins Center! Students, pick up your free tickets today @ Hicks Cage & go check out your new winning team!

University Productions & concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general comm-tee meeting in the campus center tonight at 6:00 in room 167. Come get involved!

AUTO FOR SALE

Convertible '85 Dodge 600. Beautiful rust free car $2200 obo 549-9240 Brian 1985 Chevy Blazer Good condition New engine $2200 obo. 549-0805.

'86 SUBARU
4 wheel drive, power windows Brand new brakes water pump and muffler $1350 or Bo Call 582-9105.

EMPLOYMENT

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford, and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000 $10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-569-9939.

Cash part time business No selling turn $7500 into $22,000.00. Call 941-766-9001

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16 Jan 19. $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-6769

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise ships hiring! $$$ • Free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent, no experience nec essary. Guide (819) 879-4298 Ext C1040

Exotic dancers Flex hours no exp 413-536-0502

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours- Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri 413-586-8525. ABT Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mt. Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

Looking for Adventure Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Fax resume to (617) 236-4713 Attn: Tricia or call (800) 783-4237 x 234

National Parks Hiring Seasonal, full time employment available at national parks, forests, & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N50912

We want you! Unique liquor related product. Retains for $7,000. Inventory required $2,500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day= each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-768-9001

FOR SALE

Fish tank 30 gallon tank w/ complete set up. Includes tank, hood, stand, heater filter, pump & green. $100 or be 253-6723

Gaman mixer Two slides plus cross fader org. Price $100 asking $75 foto Call John 549-6292

Used/reconditioned rack systems and stereo/tv components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection friendly advice, warranty and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Flea Market Mountain Farms Mall Hadley. Open Sundays only 9-5. Other days call 256-0941.

Wanna see Lisa Loeb in Boston Tuesday Nov 14th. Call 546-1255

Word processor Brother 7500D. Incl. Spellcheck, Thesaurus, Terms, Lotus 1-2-3, IBM pc compatible! $275/bo. 259-1880

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guiter lessons. Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

British passport It was left in a black backpack in Dinamo on Sat night. I desperately need it to go home at Xmas. If found call Sara 546-2405.

PERSONALS

The Sigma Kappa sister with crayola letters: thank you for the lollipop.

Rabbit Have a happy Thursday. Pooh-

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail 11/95 One room in large 3 bedroom w/ yard $275+ Bus line extras! Leda 665-7577

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art Robert 546-1794

International Students Visitors DV-1 greencard program by US Immigration Legal Services tel (818) 772-7168 20231 Stagg St Canoga Park, CA 91306

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-2271.

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Design 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Free Travel! Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group=Travel free. Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida. Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Winter Break Special! Killington week $709. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Really want a guinea pig from a good home. Please call 253-1976.

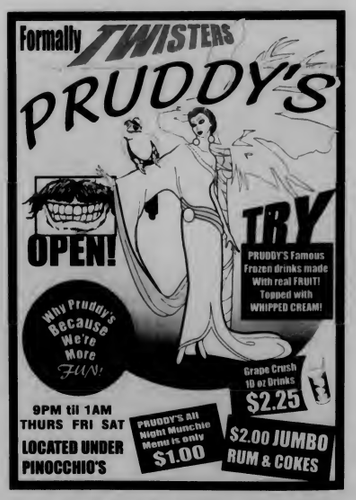
Wanted 100 students to lose 8-100 pounds. Call (303) 572-7975

Jewish Affairs needs writers.

See Jacob Michaels, Jewish Affairs Editor 545-1762

Formally TWISTERS

PRUDDY'S



OPEN!

Why Pruddy's Because We're More FUN!

TRY

PRUDDY'S Famous Frozen drinks made With real FRUIT! Topped with WHIPPED CREAM!

Grape Crush 10 oz Drinks $2.25

9PM til 1AM THURS FRI SAT

LOCATED UNDER PINOCCHIO'S

PRUDDY'S All Night Munchie Menu is only $1.00

$2.00 JUMBO RUM & COKES

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make someone feel good today. Buy a card for a loved one, or call them up to say how you feel about them. Shower the people you love with love, show them the way that you feel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do something spontaneous today. It will prove stimulating and get you back on track. There is nothing out of the realm of possibility if you believe it can happen. Don't forget to call mom, she misses you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those seemingly lucrative financial opportunities appear to be the wrong thing to do. Make the most of fresh starts and make wise decisions involving employment. Don't trade your love for ambition or you get washed away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You're in for a fabulous day, full of excitement. It's going to be one of those days when you just want to kick back with a lemonade and listen to some Young MC.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The new arrangements in your life kick off to a promising start. Take advantage of opportunities but don't work too hard. Call someone you haven't talked to recently. True friends will always be there for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tread carefully around sensitive issues with people you care about. Don't try to change them. Work within the scope of their personality to make things work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22): Your recent success will likely continue, but be careful to avoid any more unnecessary embarrassing situations. Appeasement is a good thing. Wear baggy clothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Those seemingly lucrative financial opportunities appear to be the wrong thing to do. Make the most of fresh starts and make wise decisions involving employment. Don't trade your love for ambition or you get washed away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Go for the gold today. It's one of those days that things are going right, because you're good enough, you're smart enough and doggone it people like you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A logical problem can be solved if you take a calm clear-headed approach. Devote more time to community or church activities. A business offer requires some soul searching.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to see a cheesy movie, because the weather is cold. Stay up late and have long conversations with good buddies. Buy a box of tissues for that friend with a cold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may get some unwanted phone calls. Don't be afraid — it's probably just one of your co-workers playing games with you.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

This is it.

The BIG Newsroom mandatory meeting, tonight at 6:30.

All news associates, correspondents & writers must come. If you can't make it, contact Chris Conner News Editor, 545-1762.

~ SPORTS ~

Mavs excited about 3–0 start

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — Just three games into this season, the Dallas Mavericks are undefeated and excited about how well they are playing together.

"It feels good to be 3-0," team captain Jim Jackson said. "What makes it feel better is that everybody's contributing. For us to be the team we want to be down the road, we need everyone to contribute and we're getting that now."

Each game this season has provided a different challenge for the Mavs, second-youngest team in the league and they have answered them all.

In the opener on the road against San Antonio, Dallas trailed by 14 at halftime. The Mavs roared back to go up by 10 after three quarters, then held on down the stretch for a 103-97 victory. The home opener wasn't as pretty. Luckily, it didn't have to be. Jackson, Jason Kidd and Jamal Mashburn combined for only 32 points and Dallas shot only 43 percent, yet the defense was strong enough to stop Golden State 99-84.

Another good sign the Mavericks have arrived was how they played in a 99-88 victory Tuesday night against the Vancouver Grizzlies. Dallas didn't take the expansion team lightly. In fact, having recently been a similar collection of players other teams didn't want plus a few draft picks, the Mavericks were very serious about taking out the Grizzlies early.

The starters did just that, then the bench took over in the second quarter and actually expanded the lead. The starters raised the lead to 19 by the end of the third quarter and the reserves played the entire fourth quarter.

Dallas coach Dick Motta wouldn't say he expected to give four reserves 20-plus minutes, but he was sure glad he got the chance to do it.

Motta was especially happy he could work in the two new guys in his rotation: first-round picks Cherokee Parks and Loren Meyer. "Every minute they get is money in the bank," Motta said.

Parks saw the most time of all reserves with 26 minutes and he responded with a game-high 10 rebounds and four points, including a high-flying dunk off a lob from George McCloud. Meyer had eight points and eight rebounds in 20 minutes, although his preseason foul problem continued as he was whistled four times.

Rebounding is another reason the Mavericks are hot.

They've won the battle of the boards in each game by a combined 166-111, continuing the trend from last season when they set team records for total rebounds and offensive rebounds.

"They're a good rebounding team," said Vancouver coach Brian Winters. "They were last year and they still are."

New stadium may create Va. jobs

SPRINGFIELD, Va. (AP) — A major league baseball stadium in northern Virginia would create 1,790 new jobs and bring $7.7 million a year in new state taxes, a private study released Wednesday concluded.

The economic study prepared for would-be team owner William L. Collins III also figured a park could mean an annual $113 million in new spending at games and in related businesses such as hotels and restaurants. The local government where the stadium is built would reap an additional $1.3 million in new tax revenues annually, the study by KPMG Peat Marwick said.

"An economic impact analysis is one of the first major steps you have to take along this path. There are going to be questions about why should I vote for this, what is the benefit," said Mike Scanlon, a spokesman for Collins.

Building a stadium would require local and state government approval. Collins would probably seek state bond financing for some or all of the estimated $235 million project.

The tax estimates include income taxes players and park employees would pay, real estate taxes, business and sales taxes.

The new permanent jobs would include team employees, concessionaires, the hospitality industry and other related businesses, the study said.

The report was presented to the stadium authority deciding whether and where to build a park. Collins paid an estimated $40,000 to $50,000 for the three-month study by the New York-based consultant.

Building a stadium would mean an estimated $183.4 million in construction spending over approximately two years, Collins' report said. The state would get $3.4 million in taxes during the park's construction, the study said.

The project would also bring 970 construction-related jobs, the study said.

Virginia would also get indirect benefit from a major league club and stadium, including increased media exposure, tourist appeal and spillover development in sports-related industries, the report said.

Stadium Authority Chairman George Barton said the study appears sound, but the authority will scrutinize assumptions about the secondary jobs and taxes created by the franchise.

"That's when it can get all blue-sky and hypothetical," Barton said. "That's when [public officials] get nervous."

State authorities last month granted Collins' Virginia Baseball Inc. exclusive rights to negotiate for a team.

Collins wants to buy a team and move it to northern Virginia, since the area was passed over for an expansion team this year. The team would play first in Washington's RFK Stadium, then move to a new home in the suburbs in 1998.

The stadium, with a minimum of 40,000 seats, would be built in either Fairfax or Loudoun Counties. The most likely site is near Washington Dulles International Airport.

Collins has reportedly discussed paying up to $160 million to buy the Houston Astros. Collins said his talks with team owner Drayton McLane Jr. have been cordial but preliminary.

Scanlon refused comment Wednesday on the possible deal. McLane has told major league baseball officials he wants to sell the money-losing team to Collins. Baseball's owners, who must approve the move, reportedly are skeptical.

Acting baseball commissioner Bud Selig and other owners want McLean to exhaust all possibilities to keep the team in Houston before they entertain a move.

No baseball team has moved since the Washington Senators left following the 1971 season and became the Texas Rangers.

McLane met with Houston's mayor Bob Lanier earlier this week to discuss his ongoing effort to gauge fan support for the club, a spokeswoman for the mayor said.

Two weeks ago, McLane gave the city two weeks to demonstrate sufficient fan support to keep the team in Houston. He claims the team lost more than $60 million.

Knapp declared ineligible

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Northwestern University declared basketball recruit Nicholas Knapp ineligible because of his heart condition Wednesday, a day after he sued to force his way onto the team.

Northwestern spokesman Ken Wildes said the team physician determined Knapp could be "at significant risk" of having another cardiac arrest like the one he suffered during a Sept. 19, 1994, pickup game in Peoria.

The decision was based on Knapp's medical history and current guidelines on athletes with heart problems, the university said. Knapp filed a lawsuit in federal court in Chicago seeking to force the school to let him play and asking for unspecified damages. He said a regulatory device placed in his abdomen enables him to play and he contends the university should honor the commitment he made to them after his junior year of high school in Peoria.

Northwestern says it is honoring its commitment — Knapp will be allowed to attend the school on his full scholarship even though he can't play.

■ women's hoops

continued from page 20

Then on defense, freshman Lucia Madajova was fouled bringing down a rebound. Madajova was sent to the line where she converted the two free-throws, bringing UMass within one point.

That would be as close as the Minutewomen would come as SKA hit its free-throws, resulting from UMass fouls in the waning seconds of the game. A three-point prayer from the fingers of freshman Jaywana Bradley was answered to conclude the game.

"We learned a lot about our team and a lot about each other," O'Brien said. "We will take this into next week and get a lot of positive things out of it."

Next week the Minutewomen will travel to Maine to participate in the preseason NIT. They will then return home Nov. 24 to face nationally ranked and 1995 NCAA Final Four participant Stanford at the Mullins Center. Game-time is 1 p.m.

RYAN TEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Senior Tricia Hopson shot 2-for-3 from three-point land and finished with eight points in the Minutewomen's exhibition loss.

Sports Notice

Tune into Sportsline tonight from 5:30–6:30 on WMUA 91.1 FM. Tonight, Sportsline, UMass' only call–in sports talk show, will feature NCAA–bound women's soccer.

COME SEE THE BIG GUY!

BIG GUY LIQUORS

KEGS BEER BALLS

Full Line of Beer • Wine • Liquors

BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE

RTE 63 NORTH AMHERST (NEXT TO CUMBY'S) • 549-3555

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS

ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99

ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99

7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.

LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs & Fri 8 p.m. - 1a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425

SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99

COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY 20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons

Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

rock bottom prices

YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL

Northampton/Holyoke

584-4112 • 535-1888

Scott's LIQUORS

Check Out These Great Savings AT SCOTT'S

Thank You For Your Patronage

Quantity Discounts Available

OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692

Bacardi Rum Silver $14.99 1.75 liter

Rolling Rock Reg & Light $6.99 +dep 12 pack bottles

After Shock $14.99 750ml bottle

Red Wolf $6.99 +dep 12 pk bottles

Sutter Home Chardonnay $4.99 750ml bottle

MD 20/20 All Flavors $1.99 750ml bottle

Michael Sheas Honey & Brown $3.99 +dep 6 pack bottles

WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!

MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check

Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials

6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Alumni Stadium University Drive Rafters SCOTTS Victory Market

The Bluewall

DISCO DISCO DISCO

Thursday, Nov. 9th
9:30pm - 1:00am

WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND

MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM

"Last Chance To Dance" with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

Sports

Minutewomen fall short

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

Opposite ends of the spectrum collided last night at the William D. Mullins Center, when the Massachusetts women's basketball team squared off against SKA-Samara of Russia.

The inside hustle and muscle of the Minutewomen was not enough to overcome the outside bomb squad of the SKA three-point shooters. SKA drained seven from outside the arc, baffling UMass defenders and handing the Minutewomen a 72-70 loss in their exhibition season opener.

Massachusetts	70
SKA-Samara	72

"This is the fourth time we've played a foreign team, so [we] should have known they were going to [shoot three-pointers]," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "I just think our intensity lacked, we had poor shot selection and there were nerves."

RYAN TEZZI/COLLEGIAN

SaRiya Mitchell (11) goes up for the layup in last night's women's basketball exhibition against SKA-Samara. Mitchell dished out four assists in UMass' 72-70 loss.

Senior co-captains Melissa Gurile and Octavia Thomas led the way for the Minutewomen, pouring in 14 points apiece. Gurile was steady under the basket, putting home rebounds and drawing fouls. Thomas utilized her quickness, scoring on flashy drives to the hoop and jump-shots in the paint.

"A good move will always get the crowd and the team into the game, a good pass or a good shot," Thomas said. "I felt great though. I mean I made a lot of mental mistakes, but overall it was OK."

The game was not as close as the scoreboard indicated. Five first half three-pointers had SKA with a comfortable 41-28 lead at halftime. Most of the SKA threes were from NBA distance.

"At first we were like, wow,' at how far they were shooting [three-point shots] from, but we would get close and they would hit them again and again," Thomas said. "They have the line a little further back, so they had no problem shooting from where they were shooting."

Trailing by 13 to start the second half, the Minutewomen buckled down and played a more intense game. The defense complemented the offense as UMass outscored SKA 42-31 in the second half, but to no avail.

"We did some good things in the second half. I was really disappointed with the first half and our defensive intensity," O'Brien said. "For whatever reason they came out flat and it got us in a hole. The second half we fought back. I easily could have left my starting five in there, but this game was about learning and not winning."

With anywhere from a six to 12-point deficit throughout the second half of the game, UMass did have a key opportunity to climb above SKA. Under three minutes remained on the clock and SKA was sitting on a 65-59 point lead. UMass worked the ball around the perimeter and with one second remaining on the shot clock, senior Tricia Hopson nailed a three-pointer to bring the Minutewomen within three with 2:12 remaining.

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOPS, page 19

Hockey's 3-0 start excites campus

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

In the period of 48 hours, the monkey jumped from the Massachusetts hockey team's back onto its bandwagon.

The campus community was optimistic when the Minutemen had beat Army 6-3 in their season opener. They looked good, yet they had beaten Army before (twice) including their first season.

To gain real respect, they would have to beat Merrimack. The very same Merrimack team that had owned Massachusetts since the program's reinstatement and outscored UMass 25-8 in that span. To beat the Warriors even once would be a big step.

A sweep?

Yeah, right. This was the team that finished last a year ago. Dead last. The last time UMass had won back-to-back games, its opponents were Sacred Heart and North Adams State.

"Sure," the skeptics said. "They'll be good eventually, but its only their second season in Hockey East. They're not ready yet."

So now two weeks into the season, while those same skeptics are conspicuously quiet, the UMass campus has started to get excited about the prospects for this season as the Minutemen swept through the Warriors last weekend.

Coach Joe Mallen

UMass coach Joe Mallen and his players have all gotten positive feedback from the campus and the community after their 3-0 start.

"Professors have commented and said good job," said senior captain Jaynen Rissling. "It seems like there is a lot more interest in the University community. It's very encouraging."

Sophomore goaltender Brian Regan hopes that last weekend's success translates into more fans at Friday night's matchup with in-state rival UMass-Lowell.

"I think a lot of positives came out of last weekend for our team and our program and I think our fan support will increase by it also," he said.

Their lack of success against the Warriors in the past has made the win even sweeter for the Minutemen.

"The whole weekend was special. When we beat them the first night, a lot of people thought we stole one from Merrimack at home," Mallen said. "But then when we beat them the second night, it woke people up around Hockey East."

"We were 0-5 going up against Merrimack going into this past weekend and we definitely had this grudge against them," said senior forward Sal Manganaro. "We wanted to put our foot down and make sure it stopped right there."

Turn to ICE HOCKEY, page 16

Swimming team faces Northeastern

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

After the victory last weekend in Vermont, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team is hoping to make it two splashes in a row. The Minutewomen will take on Northeastern in a dual meet at Boyden Gym on Saturday at 1 p.m.

UMass came off a 140-85 victory over the Catamounts with a well-rounded team performance, which is just what Minutewomen coach Bob Newcomb will be expecting this week.

"This weekend everyone has to be ready," Newcomb said. "The only way we can beat them is if the whole team is committed to what we're doing."

In the last three dual meets with Northeastern, the out-

Turn to SWIMMING, page 15

Mourning to Heat, Shaquille is out

With barely a week gone by in the season, there has been so much going on that it's been hard to keep up. Trades, injuries and scab referees have been flooding the news for the past two weeks. At the top of list are two of the NBA's superstars, Alonzo Mourning and Shaquille O'Neal.

As reported here in my Eastern Conference preview, Mourning is now a member of the Miami Heat. Early Friday morning, the Charlotte Hornets completed a deal that sent their disgruntled star center to the Heat. The terms of the deal — Hornets received (F) Glen Rice, (C) Matt Geiger, (G) Khalid Reeves and a first-round pick in 1996. Heat received (C) Alonzo Mourning, (G) Pete Myers and (F-C) LeRon Ellis.

Darren Cohen on the NBA

So, it didn't take long for General Riley to make his mark on the Heat, did it?

Truth is, this is a good deal for both clubs. Riley gets the big man he craves (re: Kareem, Ewing) and the Hornets ... well ... safely escaped from a problem they started themselves.

When Charlotte signed Larry Johnson to a 12-year, $84 million extension, it overpaid the wrong guy. LJ's extension started the salary escalation that eventually caused the recent lockout. Besides, what's to say Riley will agree to Mourning's outlandish salary demands. He's looking for $15 million per season, with a four-year out clause. Reports indicate that the Heat have offered $44 million for four years, which 'Zo agreed to. Hold on, there's more.

As 'Zo was looking for places to go, he was very selective. Hornet representatives implicitly stated Mourning vetoed deals to every team except for the Heat and the Knicks (yes, that's right my beloved New York Knicks). Honestly, Alonzo wanted to become Patrick Ewing's partner and the Knicks would have liked nothing better than to "steal" 'Zo out of Riley's hands.

At the 11th hour, it almost happened as the Knicks offered Charles Oakley and Charles Smith for Mourning. The Hornets backed off, so the Knicks upped the ante — Anthony Mason, John Starks and a No. 1 draft pick. Still, no deal. It was no secret that the Hornets wanted young, exciting players for their star center and the Knicks just didn't have any to give. All this and it's still the first week of the season.

• By now I'm sure you are all aware of Shaquille O'Neal's injury. O'Neal was injured in a preseason game vs. the Miami Heat. During the game Shaq was fouled hard by (ex-Miami center) Matt Geiger. Geiger's karate chop resulted in a technical foul, but more importantly, broke O'Neal's thumb. The Magic fared well without the big fella in preseason but have struggled in their first couple games. Coach Brian Hill has re-arranged the offense to focus around Penny Hardaway (check out his new commercial). If the Magic can hold the fort without O'Neal, they should be OK. If not, the Eastern Conference should make for an interesting race. League sources say Shaq will be out until late December.

• Toronto Raptor rookie guard Damon Stoudamire, booed by fans on draft day (including me), has been a pleasant surprise. A dynamic preseason has made Stoudamire a fan favorite up north. Despite shooting 30 percent in the Raptors first three games, Damon has been sharp. Recording two double-doubles hasn't hurt his image either. If Stoudamire can stay hungry, Raptor fans can thank V.P. Isiah Thomas for sticking to his "Build Another Detroit" gameplan.

• DC's projected All-Rookie team:

G) Damon Stoudamire (Raptors) — see above.

G) Jerry Stackhouse (76ers) — This guy is nothing short of spectacular, plain and simple.

F) Kevin Garnett (TWolves) — Yes, straight out of high school, this kid is right where he belongs. He won't score big but his impact has already been felt.

F) Antonio McDyess (Nuggets) — "Medusa" will have his hands at the top of the Mile High City.

C) Joe Smith (Warriors) — "Ordinary" gives the

Turn to NBA, page 15

Myers develops into a leader for UM

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

"Get number 11!" screams Shannon Higgins-Cirovski, head coach of George Washington. "Make sure you stay on No. 11!"

That is often the sentiment of opposing coaches when they see that junior Rebecca Myers, who wears No. 11 for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, is roaming freely on the field or making a run down the sideline.

When Myers first came to UMass, she wasn't quite sure of how much playing time she would get. But since her arrival from Marietta, Ga., Myers has started at the center midfield position for the Minutewomen. The amount of time she spent on the pitch was a tremendous surprise to her.

"I really didn't think I would be playing that much," Myers said. "I was just so happy to be playing."

Myers made the most of her exceptional amount of playing time for a freshman, as she tied for the team-high in points scored. She racked up nine goals and 11 assists for 31 points in her first collegiate season. The trend would continue her sophomore year as she tied for the team lead in scoring once again (11 goals, six assists for 28 points).

This season the co-captain missed her first start ever at UMass with a strained hamstring, which kept her sidelined for nearly three weeks. Even with the injury, this season she is currently second on the team's scoring list with 24 points. It is not the points that matter so much to the stand-out ballhack, but the passing of the ball to her teammates that leads to scoring chances for her team.

"I like passing the ball to my teammates and being creative," Myers said. "We know we can play defense and if we score, any of us, we are going to win."

Her height (5-foot-9) makes her presence felt in the air, adding to her passing attack as well as controlling the field. She uses her head not only to create scoring chances off corner kicks and crosses, but to intercept long balls in her defensive end and flicking balls on to teammates.

"I love winning headers. They get me more mentally focused," Myers said. "When I start winning air balls, it brings up my game everywhere."

Her prowess in the air, which can control the entire midfield, is acknowledged by the opposition and appreciated by her coach.

"When she plays well it seems that the team works together so much better," said Len Tsantiris, head coach of Connecticut. "She's very dominant in the air and when she is getting air balls, she can control the midfield.

"She distributes the ball very well and has been much more of a connector, as she generates quite a bit of their offense. Rebecca is always a standout when we play [UMass]."

"One thing she has done this year is play simpler in the midfield with more small connections," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "She doesn't use up so much energy because she has a lot to do out there. She has to take goal kicks and punts, she has to play defense against some of the better half backs around and then move forward. She is that special sort of player."

Myers position is one that necessitates connecting with everyone on the field and knowing where her teammates are going to be. Her fellow midfielders, Amy Powell, Julie Magid and Sandy Shimogaki are all juniors,

Turn to MYERS, page 15

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rebecca Myers loves to create scoring opportunities for her teammates when she's not scoring herself.

Virginia Cavaliers rise to occasion; Ohio State Buckeyes don't disappoint

GREG COREY on College Football

Every now and then, the unthinkable happens in sports. The underdog rises to the occasion and beats the favorite in a spine-tingling upset. So was the case in Charlottesville, Va., last Thursday night.

The then-No. 24 Virginia Cavaliers hosted the then-No. 2 Florida St. Seminoles in a game where the 'Noles were favored by nearly 18 points. Florida St. had never lost in ACC play, a win streak dating back to 1991. The outcome was one which many did not expect.

Behind 311 total yards from running back Tiki Barber and a goal line stop on FSU's Warrick Dunn in the game's final play, the Cavs were able to pull out a 33-28 win, and pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the college football season. Not only was the win big for UVA, but the national championship race lost a contender as the 'Noles dropped to No. 6 in the national polls.

For all the problems that the polls carry with them, one would have to agree that justice is being done at the top. Nebraska (9-0) is the top team in the nation for a second week. The 'Huskers are coming off a 73-14 spanking of Iowa St. last week. The 'Huskers look very strong as they head into their final two games and are on track for a trip to the Tostitos' Fiesta Bowl and a shot at the national championship.

• Last week I wrote that Ohio St. should be ranked No. 1 and the Buckeyes did not disappoint last Saturday. John Cooper's team rolled over Minnesota 49-21. Florida (8-0), Tennessee (8-1) and Northwestern (8-1) round out the AP Top Five.

Speaking of the No. 5 Wildcats, they have been getting press all season long. And why not? The 'Cats are tied for first in the Big 10 and have posted upsets over Notre

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 15

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 47 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, November 10, 1995

Rematch of rivals
Erin Lynch and the UMass women's soccer team takes on Hartford in the first round of the NCAA tournament on Saturday. (See Sports, Page 10).

Veterans remembered
The Army and Air Force ROTC at UMass gave tribute to the soldiers lost in battling for the United States. (See story, page 3).

Catch the spirit
Spiritualized's new single, "Any Way That You Want Me" makes the list of 7" reviews in this week's Liner Notes (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Weekend Forecast
Today will be cloudy with a high in the mid-40s and a 30% chance of rain. Saturday will have a high of 63 and low of 46. Rain in the p.m. will end Sunday morning. Sunday will see a high of 56.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 36	HIGH: 63 LOW: 46	HIGH: 56 LOW: 49

Chancellor advises SGA on plan

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott made the second appearance of his two years at the University before the Student Government Association last Wednesday night, where he responded to questions on several major issues currently facing the campus.

The Chancellor addressed the deans' proposal for administration restructuring and whether he endorses William Bulger as a candidate for President of the University of Massachusetts.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Tom Robinson, whose job is jeopardized in the deans' proposal, accompanied the Chancellor to the meeting. Susan Albright, the American Council and Education Fellow who is studying leadership skills at the university this semester, was also present.

Scott was asked by SGA Attorney General Jason Fields about his view of the deans' response to Scott's "Strategic Thinking Document." Scott refused to reject or endorse the proposal.

"We need to ask what is the role of student affairs for the next ten years," Scott said. "Will it be more or less important than it has been for the last 10 years?"

However, he did show concern over whether the deans' plan was in the best interest of student affairs.

"I'm not personally convinced the best solution for the next 10 years is to merge student affairs with academic affairs," Scott said.

He added that he was not in favor of "wholesale condensation" of student and academic affairs. Rather, he wants to see a structure which focuses on "the ecology of a living, working and learning environment."

Scott said he welcomes all input on his "Strategic Thinking Document" from legitimate governing bodies at the university. He will then use some of these in a revised implementation doctrine which will be crystallized in early February.

Scott was also asked whether he endorses candidate William Bulger as university president.

"I have no knowledge of the search, only what I read in the papers," Scott said. "I don't know him well. I have met him many times, relatively briefly. I find him to be an intellectual person who thinks deeply. From his background, I feel he values a high quality of learning. I hope any candidate is asked what they see for the future of the University."

Scott also updated the SGA on the resolutions made in 1991 to increase campus diversity.

"We've made progress on a lot of issues and not on some," he said.

One of the issues resolved to increase the amount of ALANA students to 20 percent by Fall 1995. The class for this semester enrolled 16.5 percent of ALANA students, Scott said. He said he sees this percentage as a better reflection of those students prepared for college after high school graduation. Although they failed to meet the 20 percent goal, Scott said, the figure is proportionately correct and should not be seen as a loss.

"A land grant university should achieve a diversity that would reflect diversity among the senior class at high schools across Massachusetts," Scott said. "The original agreement was unrealistic. What matters is not 20 percent. What matter is how many are prepared to enter college. With past histories of discrimination and lack of support in the community, we have exceeded it. But to that extent, it is not a victory.

"Our next challenge is to increase the number of college prepared students. The university has to work with the high schools. We're working in a responsible way for a meaningful goal."

The Chancellor was optimistic about meeting their goal in the near future.

Senate rejects women's caucus

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Despite a heated session of debate, the Student Government Association refused to pass a motion Wednesday night to form a women's caucus of non-senators. The senate also enacted a repeal of the posting policy of Northeast and Sylvan Area Residence Halls.

The proposal to form a women's caucus was presented by senator David Gafney. He was approached by a group of women who planned on forming a charter for a women's caucus. Gafney explained that it was his duty to represent the needs of his constituency by making this motion.

"Creating a women's caucus in the senate will make more representation in the senate," Gafney said. "More people need their voice heard, [especially] for non-senators not represented here."

However, many senators were upset with the way the motion was presented to the senate floor and said it did not go through the proper channels.

Senator Lisa Chiu found serious problems with creating a women's caucus without consulting the women on the senate first.

"If it's affecting women, why weren't women in the senate informed?" Chiu asked.

Senator Sean Loughran debated on behalf of Gafney's proposal.

"We, as a senate body, need the representation of women," Loughran said. "We shouldn't need to ask that of everyone here.

Turn to SENATE, page 2

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Time for a study break?
A UMass student is too busy studying in the library to smile for the camera.

Jewish women see change in role

Editor says feminist movement responsible for new relations

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Susan Weidman Schneider, editor-in-chief of "Lilith," a Jewish women's magazine, spoke about being "Jewish and Female: Choices and Changes in Our Lives Today" in room 101 of the University of Massachusetts Campus Center last night.

Schneider's speech focused on the recent changes Jewish women have made in three areas of their lives: religious life, personal relationships and community life.

The feminist movement has inspired a great push to explore areas of Jewish life that have previously been taken for granted, Schneider said.

Historically, Jewish women have made their contributions to their faith through family and community involvement: it was the men who were religious, she said.

Jewish women have been taught to be smart, but not too smart, Schneider said. They were expected to be educated and family oriented.

In the last 20 years tremendous changes have occurred in the religious life of Jewish women, Schneider said. Women are now leading services as rabbis, they are cantors — someone who sings religious songs during services — and they have their own religious groups and celebrations, she said.

"I think the presence of women rabbis has been very thrilling for a lot of Jews," Schneider said.

Schneider used the birth of her two daughters as an example of how the importance of women has changed in the Jewish faith. Her first daughter had a small naming ceremony when she was born. Schneider's second daughter's ceremony included blessings and prayers similar to those always given to a male child.

Switching topics, Schneider said Jewish women have not advanced much in the "personal relationship arena."

"In the Jewish community there is a lack of recognition of women's power and contributions," Schneider said.

The issue is not limited to the access women have to different experiences; it also includes the idea of women's experiences being acknowledged by Jewish men, she said.

Schneider gave the example of Jewish men belittling or discrediting the accomplishments of Jewish women.

Shifting topics again, Schneider said Jewish women have improved the way in which Jews deal with social problems. No longer are Jews afraid to look at the negative aspects of their religion, she said.

She told of how one synagogue's sisterhood put up signs giving information about battered women's shelters in both the women's and the men's bathroom stalls.

"Women can make these changes," she said.

Schneider ended her speech by thanking the feminist movement for helping shift the attitudes of Jewish people. Everyone wants a better community, she said.

Schneider has written several books including: "Jewish and Female: Choices and Changes in Our Lives Today" and "Intermarriage: The Challenge of Living with Differences Between Christians and Jews."

Schneider is a recipient of the B'nai B'rith Women Woman of Distinction Award and the B'nai B'rith Women Woman of Achievement Award.

JAMES STANLEY/COLLEGIAN

Susan Weidman Schneider, editor-in-chief of the magazine "Lilith," addresses students in the Campus Center last night.

Group rallies to protest adult video store

By Humphrey Brown III
Collegian Staff

When the Amherst Town Committee approved the opening of a video store in Hadley, they said they had no idea the store was going to be a pornography shop specializing in X- rated videos.

At this point the committee is extremely displeased with the video store's presence, and are trying to get it shut down. The debate over art and pornography has struck the town of Amherst and is stirring up much controversy.

Located just across the Calvin Coolidge Bridge outside of Amherst, the Adults Only Video Store claimed the right to sell the videos to willing customers. There are mixed opinions on the issue, especially among those who feel that pornography is, in fact, art and should be accessible to all who are interested.

At the forefront of the fight against the video store is the Every Woman's Center. After viewing one of the store's films which showed raw footage of the rape of several women by men, the center organized a rally against the video store in Hadley, set to take place today at 4:00 p.m.

"[I] saw the porn slide show and it woke me up to the affects of pornography and how it influences violence," said Abby Shaw, a student and one of the rally organizers. "It's overlooked in our society how much pornography affects us. Some say it's art, but it's taking art too far when they're trying to justify rape."

At this juncture the Every Woman's Center said they are checking to see whether it would be lawful for them to rally directly in front of the store in the hopes of turning away would-be customers and halting regulars from entering the store.

In the event that rallying in front of the Adults Only Video Store is not possible, the protestors said they will rally on the Calvin Coolidge Bridge, giving passing motorists a clear view of the protest.

The Every Woman's Center said they want the support of both women and men in their efforts to shut down the video store. Flyers have been pasted around campus and the women's studies department has been notified of the rally.

How the rally will affect business at the Adults Only Video Store remains to be seen, but the Every Woman's Center said they hope the message behind the rally will be enough to close the store permanently.

Students continue to mourn for Rabin

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

For many students, the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin last Saturday is old news, with no more importance than something to talk about over dinner.

However, for many Israeli and other Jewish students on campus, Rabin's death is still an emotional issue.

Hillel Assistant Director Yehudit Heller, who is Israeli, said many students are looking for someone to talk to. She said many of them are upset because for other people on campus, life is going on as normal, and that there is nothing they can do.

Even with such things as the moment of silence at last Tuesday's men's basketball exhibition game against Dinamo, set up at the request of a University alum, students are still trying to find other ways to share their grief.

Professor Richard Ellis, who is Jewish and has lived in Israel on three separate occasions, said he had the same problem on the Monday after the assassination. He said he was "looking for people to talk to... People didn't understand [how I was feeling]."

That led him to speak at a small gathering yesterday at Hillel House, where he and several other people got together to speak about their feelings.

Ellis, Heller, and Shmuel Bolozky, the chair of the Judaic studies department, talked for a brief amount of time about what Rabin meant to them.

Bolozky spoke of how, at first, he hadn't had much respect for Rabin, because his military achievements were not of that much importance to him. Rabin was a general during the Six Day War, where Israel defeated several neighboring countries. However, he said Rabin's "greatness comes with this fantastic stride he made" from being a man of war to being a man of peace.

Similarly, students have gathered all over campus to discuss their feelings about the prime minister and his assassination. In addition to several quickly organized discussions like the one yesterday, students have come together on their own for the last several evenings at the Hillel House to talk to other people who feel similarly.

Also, students have spontaneously left memorial candles and flowers on the steps of the Student Union and Hillel.

One group of students is trying to set up a more permanent memorial. David Bloch, an Israeli student, is gathering a group of 10 students to

Turn to RABIN, page 3

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Survey says? Bzzz!
Students brave the cold wind yesterday to survey the lay of the land.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Nov. 10

Film — "Attica" and discussion led by MIM. 6:30 p.m. at the Campus Center rm. 903. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Reading — Political poetry reading "Jazzotree." 8 p.m. at the Cape Cod Lounge. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Dinner — Larry Goldbaum will speak on his role as Director of Office of Jewish Affairs at UMass. 7:15 p.m. at the Hillel house. For more info. please call 549-1710.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday at 1 p.m. in Campus Center, for more info. please call 256-8482.

Theater — UMass presents Our Town by Thorton Wilder, directed by Edward Golden. Nov. 8–11 and 17–18 at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Tickets are $6 general admission and $3.50 for students and seniors.

Saturday, Nov. 11

Conference — "End Amerikan Lockdown." The conference consists in two sessions, each with a panel discussion and part small groups. The conference takes place from 1–5:30 p.m. at the Campus Center rm. 174–176. This is part of Prison Awareness Week.

Fair — The 23rd annual Antiques, Crafts and Arts Fair, sponsored by the Amherst's Women's Club. The event is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Amherst Regional Junior High School.

Recital — Classical guitarist Phillip de Fremey will hold a recital at the El Greco/Mykonos restaurant at 8 p.m.

Service — Campus pond pruning project sponsored by the UMass/Stockbridge Arbor Club. For more info. please call 546-6943.

Sunday, Nov. 12

Speaker — A brunch with speaker to talk on Kristalnacht. 12:30 p.m. in the Hillel House dining room.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five-College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The Hampshire College AIDS Action Collective is running a "Safer Sex" erotica contest. They are accepting poetry and prose. Submissions are due Nov. 9, and can be sent via Five-College mail to Hampshire College Resource Center. Winners will be awarded prizes and will be published in the magazine. Please include a mailing address.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Campus Police Log

Assault & battery
Nov. 9
Dana L. Lightner, 21, of 33 Kingwood Dr., Little Falls, N.J. was arrested for domestic assault & battery.

Annoying behavior
Nov. 8
A confrontation between a motorist and a pedestrian on Massachusetts Ave. resulted in the pedestrian throwing an object at the motorist's vehicle.

Missing person
Nov. 8
PVTA staff reported that an employee has not been seen for almost a week. The Northampton Police Department is investigating.

Burglary/breaking & entering
Nov. 8
A possible forcible entry was made through a locked door leading to an office in the astronomy building. A storage device for a computer and a number of computer discs was stolen.

Larceny
Nov. 8
There was a telephone stolen from an office in Goodell Library.
An individual reported that her jacket was stolen from Cashin Residence Hall.

Health/safety hazard
Nov. 8
There was an investigation into a smoke smell in Baker Residence Hall.

Medical emergency
Nov. 8
An individual fell outside the Bluewall, possibly breaking her ankle. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Fire alarm
Nov. 8
There was intentional damage to the sprinkler system on the 11th floor of Kennedy Residence Hall. A lounge was flooded.

Family offenses/domestics
Nov. 8
Police assisted Housing Staff with three individuals in Kennedy Residence Hall who were involved with an assault. A temporary restraining order was issued.

■ senate

continued from page 1

We should come together in support of the people we represent."

Senator Christopher Amshe believes that women do not need added representation in the senate.

"There is no need for a women's caucus," Amshe said. "There is a 20–30% representation in the senate," Amshe said. "While it is underrepresentation, it is not severe underrepresentation. There are other groups that have no representation."

Speaker Dan Castellano wanted to make it clear that the reason why the motion failed was because of the way it was brought forth, not because it supported a women's caucus. He hopes that there will be more definitive guidelines on creating caucuses in the senate's future.

Chiu agreed with Castellano and wished to speak for the ALANA caucus, which is currently the only formally recognized caucus in the senate.

"ALANA is not against the women's caucus, just against this motion," Chiu said.

However, senator Lawrence Plano saw the failure of the motion as a step backwards for women in the senate.

"The senate disregarded women's issues. Period."

The senate also enacted a motion that the university repeal the Housing Services/Residence Life Northeast/Sylvan Area office posting policy.

The presentation to repeal the policy was made by senator William Boberg.

"Who has the right to deem what can be posted and what can't," Boberg said.

Currently, the judgement lies solely with the Residence Director on what can be posted. Senator Ashavan Doyon said there should be guidelines, leaving no possibility for the abuse of power.

The senate also had several motions that were tabled for one week, including motions to approve area government by-laws.

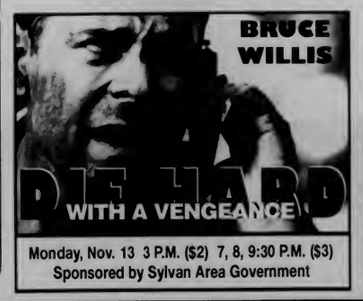
8 Cooler than pools, more hip than billiards, better than a cold glass of beer...
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

SWELL! I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a fix of Toke Maki and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the moose out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case cum brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the moose in the bottle."

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

LOOKING TO BUY OR SELL?
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK
113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT 545-3500

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212



Monday, Nov. 13 3 P.M. ($2) 7, 8, 9:30 P.M. ($3)
Sponsored by Sylvan Area Government

Call for Craft Vendors
Student Union Craft Center
Annual Craft Fair, Dec 7 & 8. Contact Cynthia Consentino 545-2096

Classifieds Now
VISA MasterCard™
Accepting Credit Cards

ROTC pays tribute to Veterans

By Jack Farrell
Collegian Correspondent

With the American flag already flying at half–staff in honor of a martyred Israeli prime minister, the somber November skies set the tone for the opening ceremony of a 24–hour vigil commemorating U.S. veterans outside Memorial Hall Wednesday morning.

As the final notes of the national anthem played, the color guard made up of men and women from the university Army and Air Force ROTC placed the American and POW– MIA flags on either side of the Vietnam memorial stone.

Cdt.\Maj. Brian O'Connell of the Air Force ROTC summoned Father Joseph Quigley of the Newman Center to give a benediction for the ceremonies.

Quigley saluted all those who have died for their country and called on all Americans to remember these "gallant men and women who have stepped in to succeed their forbears." He then asked that the "Lord bless this land, these people, and the Commonwealth."

Cdt.\LTC Teresa Baker introduced retired Lt. Col. Robert J. Picknally, a University of Massachusetts graduate who served in the Korean War and was successful in recruiting many candidates for the Air Force Academy. He reminded the future officers of their responsibility to be the guiding hands to the men and women in their charge.

After Picknally spoke, O'Connell read a list of 50 people, all from Massachusetts, who have not been accounted for from the Vietnam War.

As each name was read, a member of the color guard placed a white carnation at the foot of the memorial stone. With that, the 24–hour vigil began. Through the rest of Wednesday and all through the bone–chilling night cadets stood guard by the flags and the Memorial.

Dusty Houser, director of local relations for Sen. John F. Kerry, attended both days of ceremonies. Houser, like Kerry, is a Vietnam veteran.

Houser said that normalization with Vietnam will only help in the on–going attempts to account for the missing service–persons. He said Kerry, who co–chaired a Senate sub–committee investigating the status of the POW–MIA search, remains committed to the issue.

As the wind continued ripping across campus yesterday morning, the vigil came to a close. At exactly 10:30 a.m., two A–10 fighter jets from the Air National Guard at Barnes Airport in Westfield streaked low over the crowd of spectators, service persons, and officials assembled outside Memorial Hall.

The closing speech was made by retired Air Force Col. Thomas Carhart of Amherst. Carhart flew P–38 Fighter planes in World War II, and later flew F–4 fighter jets in Korea. In the 1960's, Carhart was a professor of Aerospace Studies at UMass.

The solemn music of "Taps" filtered through the crowd as the ceremony ended.

■ Rabin

continued from page1

buy a Sugar Maple tree which they hope to plant near the Campus Center. He said they also want to get a granite block inscribed with a memorial to Rabin to be placed at the foot of the tree.

Even as the assassination fades into other news, groups are working to make sure Rabin and his cause are not forgotten. A major rally is being planned in Boston's Copley Square for Nov. 16 at 6 p.m. The rally "marks the absence of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was scheduled to speak... in Boston that evening." Set up by the Brandeis Coalition for Peace, the rally is expected to draw in excess of 6,000 people. Organizers said they hoped a students from the Five– College community would join with Boston community members to remember Rabin and show their support for the peace process.

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Inquiring minds want to know...
Several UMass students take a break from their classes to see where Elvis was spotted most recently. No surprise, it was in a fast food restaurant.

Dead–beat dads may have licenses taken

BOSTON (AP) — Parents who are behind on their child support payments could find their privileges to be behind the wheel revoked under a bill unveiled by Gov. William Weld on Wednesday.

The bill would give the Department of Revenue the power to suspend drivers' licenses for nonpayment of child support.

Currently, the DOR can only stop parents in arrears from renewing their licenses.

"If you are going to drive your own children to financial ruin, then you're not going to be joyriding around this state," Weld said.

The legislation has yet to be filed, but Revenue Commissioner Mitchell Adams said the proposal "would give us a lot more leverage in getting delinquents to pay up."

Meanwhile, the Weld administration also has released a fifth edition of its "Ten Most Wanted" poster that lists the state's worst child support scofflaws, who owe a total of $364,000. The posters are being distributed state wide and are going up in buses and subway trains around Boston.

Critics, like divorced father Patrick Henry Flynn, say the posters unnecessarily vilify fathers. Flynn, who has joint legal but not physical custody of his 8-year-old son, is legislative director of a group called the Coalition for the Preservation of Fatherhood.

The 52-year-old from Peabody said the posters are a public relations gimmick that overshadow strongarm tactics being used by DOR to collect money from men who can't afford to pay out what the courts have ordered.

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

The Daily Collegian, we help you catch the bus!

PLEASE DRINK RESPONSIBLY.
Or you could wake up handcuffed to a very large, sweaty man wearing a blonde wig and lederhosen.
CIDER JACK HARD CIDER

The Bluewall
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM
"Last Chance To Dance" with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

The Hottest Thing In Outdoor Footwear NIKE!!!
NIKE Day Sat., Nov. 11th
All Nikes $5 OFF

draw for a free pair
Nike rep present
the Mountain Goat
177 Main Street, Northampton • 586-0803 • Open 7 Days
Outdoor Clothing • Footwear • Travel Gear

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Position vacant Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sabo Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernán Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

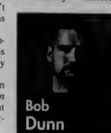
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The cop out of Colin Powell



What do Colin Powell and the sport of hockey have in common?

No balls.

The announcement came Wednesday afternoon from a tacky motel ballroom in Virginia. Powell solemnly stood at a podium flanked by his wife, while members of his family sat quietly in the crowd surrounded by all the usual suspects of the media carrion.

Powell just said no.

He posed and blubbered, made vague allusions about his unwillingness to give up his privacy, and his inability to hear the "call." He probably couldn't hear it over the din of the cash register, as his book goes into multiple printings.

After all of the coy pandering and deliberate avoidance, this entire episode seems like little more than a clever ruse precisely timed to boost sales. Presidency, my ass.

Backing away from a fight you can't win is smart, backing away from a fight you can win is gutless. Backing away from a fight that's not only winnable but that you started in the first place is despicable.

I never thought Powell was that great of a prospect. He had no platform, no stand and no issues. What upsets me is that he started all of this. No one just finds themselves in the middle of a campaign. Media exposure alone doesn't make you a prospect. If that were the case, Howard Stern and Kato Kaelin would be the next pair of runners. He had to have started this somehow, and once his little book tour was finished, so was his pseudo-campaign, and the media ate it up. He was Geppetto to the their Pinocchio.

But I never considered him a deceitful hack.

Until now.

This cretin had the nerve to stand in front of the entire world and honestly try and convince people that he suddenly realized he and his family's privacy would be at stake. Where has he been? Of course privacy is at stake. If you're vying for the position to become leader of an entire country, people tend to recognize you on sight. I find a bit hard to believe that someone who's got their grinning mug plastered in every bookstore window from here to Hawaii is really worried about giving up his privacy.

If Powell can honestly suggest that after having served in the White House, the privacy issue has just occurred to him recently, then he qualifies as too stupid to be a serious candidate anyway.

He came across like an obnoxious magician at the press conference, taking delight in having proved Abe Lincoln right and fooled all of the people some of the time by duping us into picking the wrong card.

"Where's the ace of diamonds? Ha! Wrong! Fooled you! Simp."

If you play back video tape of his speech real slow, I'll bet you can see him mouth the word "Suckers."

The news had been filled all day with reaction from commentators, newscasters, talk show hosts and some boorish slob who used to know Powell and hadn't seen him since 1954. In a campaign full of sham and deceit, this guy's two cents are probably worth about as much as anybody's.

The one who's probably the happiest about the news is Bob Dole. I'm not sure, but I think I heard him cheering all the way from Washington. Several unconfirmed rumors go so far as to suggest he actually threw a sheet of cardboard onto the floor of the Senate chamber and actually breakdanced. Word is the Senator is resting comfortably and is expected to make a full recovery soon.

With Powell taking a back seat, Dole has a more solid grasp on the lead in the Republican race, and at this point it appears he'd have to do something incredibly stupid in order to lose it. Most of the remaining GOP candidates are either dreadfully uncharismatic or woefully unknown, except for Pat Buchanan, who's more frightening than feasible.

So, with the General gone, I have a few suggestions for military figures who would fill the void nicely, and who might even stick around until it's all over.

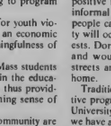
Colonel Klink, Colonel Mustard, Captain Kirk, Captain Stubing, Popeye the Sailor, The Captain and Tenille (Tenille would be VP, of course), Captain Trips, Commander USA, Captain Marvel, Captain Lou Albano and Captain Crunch. All of them would make fine replacements, and as far as I know, none of them are retired, so they wouldn't look quite as out of place wearing their uniforms to press conferences and interviews as Powell did. The game's over, Colin, take off the jersey, huh?

So, why am I so upset? Why should I care if this duplicitous, weasel-like, sleight-of-word artist runs or not? Because no one made him lead us on. No one begged him to run for president until he had made his intentions clear. He duped a country, and I for one, don't enjoy feeling fooled. If he had been anywhere near a television, newspaper or radio, he would have had to know that mostly everyone was convinced he was about to run. If he had wanted to shut down the rumor mill, he should have poured sand in it right then and there, but he didn't. He winked, smirked, threw fuel on the fire, and then bitched about nearly getting burned.

There are just certain things you don't do if you want to be taken seriously. You don't cry wolf, you don't suit up if you're not going to play, and you don't put on a condom if you're not going to.... well you know. Powell did them all, and personally I'm tired of him. Sit down, Colin. Your 15 minutes are up.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

A TEAM effort to help youth



Most people know what causes youth violence; troubles at home, dangerous schools and neighborhoods, the lack of role models, the lack of jobs, and an overall loss of hope.

Unfortunately, the list of solutions to this ever-increasing problem is much shorter. After spending three summers coordinating the Governor's Summer Job Hunt program through the Colorado Department of Labor, I have realized the importance of providing young people a positive outlet in which to expend their energy.

Once in a while, we are given the rare opportunity to witness individuals working in concert with one another with the goal of improving the lives of youth. Such is the case in Greenfield, Mass., where local teens, community and business leaders are joining hands in the battle against youth violence.

The Teen Empowerment And Mediation (TEAM) program, sponsored by Franklin Mediation Service and funded by a grant from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, is demonstrating to teens, parents and community members how to deal with conflict by non-violent means.

The program has enabled teens to focus their energy in a more positive way, thus decreasing youth restlessness and the community problems associated with it.

The TEAM program is utilizing an integrated approach to provide Greenfield teens a safe, confidential place to resolve their problems. The program has enabled teens to focus their energy in a more positive way, thus decreasing youth restlessness and the community problems associated with it.

The success of the TEAM program may be attributed to the fact that it has been designed both for and with Greenfield youth. Teen mediators are trained to handle disputes that arise between youth, teachers and parents, ultimately shifting the focus of attention from the problem itself to developing cooperative solutions.

The program is the first in the nation to take the kind of mediation techniques already used in many schools out on to the streets, according to program coordinator Court Dorsey.

As we are finding, the best deterrent for youth violence is a hope for the future. Not just an economic hope, but a hope and faith in the meaningfulness of life.

All community members, including UMass students and faculty, can contribute by assisting in the education and empowerment of young people, thus providing hope and decreasing the overwhelming sense of despair.

Presently, 20 members of the UMass community are lending their hand to the TEAM effort as part of the Chancellor's Civility Grant for Community Conflict Resolution.

These individuals, along with Leda Cooks (a professor in the Communications department) and Joan Mikalson (a graduate student in the School of Education Social Justice Program), are demonstrating the college enthusiasm indicative of the UMass campus by brainstorming for funds from both within and outside the Town of Greenfield. Through their effort and support, these students are helping to facilitate growth in the TEAM program, thus enabling it to become a viable service within the community.

Jennifer Raitt, a UMass student and member of the campus contingency, hopes to see TEAM hold its ground, eventually becoming so strong that they only need their own to exist.

However, the TEAM program presently requires outside assistance to achieve this goal. According to Raitt, "Teen empowerment programs such as these, if they are to be successful, must be sustained emotionally as well as financially. The benefit to youth relies upon a commitment from the rest of society."

This is where the entire UMass community comes into play.

Through educational outreach and fundraising, we too can do our part to curb teen violence and assist in providing youth a hope for the future. There will be an upcoming tag sale with an Amherst "drop site" where donations and proceeds will benefit the TEAM program (please follow the Collegian for further notice).

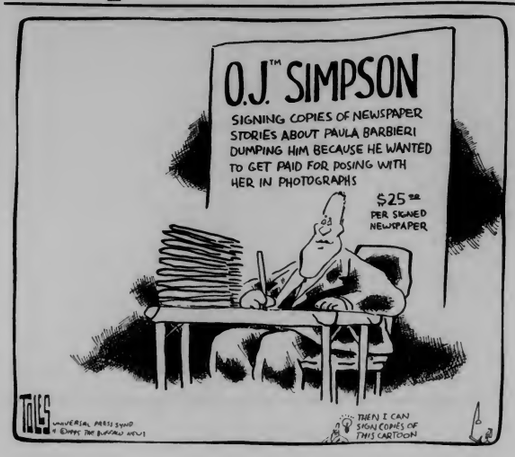
So far, the TEAM project has generated a broad base of community support. We would like to see this support extend into UMass, Amherst and beyond.

Throughout this process, we will all be doing our part to demonstrate to teens that there exist more positive means of conflict resolution. Programs like informal mediation will prove that the more young people can do for their community, the less animosity will occur between youth and local business interests. Dorsey calls this the process of "social hygiene," and would like to see these skills transcend the streets and schoolyard, ultimately finding a place at home.

Traditionally, support for these practical, preventative programs has been sadly deficient. As part of the University community, we need to recognize the power we have as role models, and find time to spend encouraging youth.

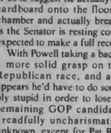
Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial



O.J.™ SIMPSON
SIGNING COPIES OF NEWSPAPER STORIES ABOUT PAULA BARBIERI DUMPING HIM BECAUSE HE WANTED TO GET PAID FOR POSING WITH HER IN PHOTOGRAPHS
$25 ea PER SIGNED NEWSPAPER
TALES
THEN I CAN SIGN COPIES OF THIS CARTOON

The practical logic of the '96 election



Wednesday was a good day for Sen. Bob Dole, but an even better one for President Bill Clinton. In fact, Clinton now seems closer to re-election than he has since the start of his term.

Gen. Colin L. Powell's withdrawal from a race he never even entered has thrust Dole back into the frontrunner slot. Dole scored a double-coup on Wednesday, when he also received the endorsement of New Hampshire Governor Steve Merrill, an extremely popular, and influential, Republican. This means that, unless he is discovered to have sold crack to handicapped orphans to help finance Saddam Hussein, Dole is virtually assured of winning New Hampshire's February primary.

The two-month Powell "candidacy" damaged Dole, possibly beyond recovery. He fell badly in the polls, and was burned by hits from his three of his strongest challengers, Phil Gramm, Pat Buchanan and Lamar Alexander. Now, Dole will continue on, with nine nondescript opponents nipping at his heels. He will win in New Hampshire, but only by stumbling across the threshold. Dole will be on his way to the GOP nomination, but still 20 points behind Clinton.

It was not supposed to turn out this way. A week ago, Powell was leaning toward running, and was even putting a campaign together. He was willing to look past the objections of his wife, Alma Powell. It is not too much of a stretch to say that if that right-wing Israeli punk had missed his shot at Yitzhak Rabin last weekend, Powell's Wednesday announcement would have been quite different.

Suddenly, Alma's fears of assassination were not so fantastic. Powell, a fairly liberal black man becoming a serious contender in an increasingly bigoted Republican Party, might have wound up a martyr, not a hero. The General made a dignified retreat.

Some would argue that Powell's place is greater now; he looked at a chance to run the presidency, and walked away. But the effect on his newly-adopted GOP will be disastrous. Powell will not run for vice-president; he doubts he will even campaign for the nominee. Who will Dole get now? Bill Weld?

The night before Powell's announcement, the Democratic Party made some substantial wins. In every single major state referendum in the country, the more progressive side won. And the results of CityVote, a national, non-binding primary on the presidential race that was held in 18 cities, gave Clinton a huge victory. Clinton had more than twice as many votes as his nearest rival — Colin Powell. Dole received only about 10 percent.

In Kentucky, Lt. Gov. Paul Patton was elected governor in an upset victory. Patton's whole campaign was based on criticism of Bob Dole, Phil Gramm, and Newt Gingrich.

And Gingrich is rightly at the center of all of this. Twelve months ago, as frustrated in 1994 as they had been in 1992, the electorate threw out the party in power. The usually- savvy Gingrich incorrectly interpreted this as a show of wide support for his policies.

In the past, Gingrich has shown that he does not let his ideology stand in the way of practical politics. He has modified positions, and even lied about his intentions. (Remember his and Clinton's joint proposal for a commission on campaign reform? That's just getting done now, and in a way that satisfies no one.) But Gingrich is an ideologue, and a true believer in the economic policies he preaches.

That is why it is surprising to see him so doggedly putting ideology first on the Medicare issue. I would have thought Gingrich was too bright to actually try to enact the policy he believes in. On Medicare, Gingrich is proceeding mathematically, trying to create a paradigm in which economic policy can be calculated like the tides or the orbit of the planets — all logic, no pragmatism.

Newt Gingrich is the most important player in Bill Clinton's re-election campaign. Gingrich would be wise to remember a Republican of the past who also thought economic policy could be set by pure science: President Herbert Hoover.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

What happened to "Bruno"?

To the Editor:

As a fifth year senior, I have been reading the Collegian for several years now, and have become particularly fond of following C. Baldwin's comic "Bruno." Until recently, "Bruno" was a daily strip with a definite story line. This semester, however, she has been appearing only sporadically, and the story line has become choppy and hard to follow. Then yesterday, a strip was published which I recognize from last year. Is this because C. Baldwin has stopped submitting to you regularly, or because the Collegian is not publishing the new "Bruno" every day? If it is the latter, I would appreciate being able to read Bruno daily again on the Collegian comics page, as I cannot find her in any other valley newspaper. Please bring her back.

Natasha Hunter
Northampton

Flyers send out important message

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to an article written by Wendy Darling printed in the Nov. 3rd edition of the Collegian, "Living in fear not the answer." As a member of Riot Grrrls, I feel the need to respond to the writer's attack on a flyer which was produced and distributed by our organization. The purpose of this flyer is to make female students on this campus aware of ways to protect themselves.

This flyer was intended to educate, not frighten. Ms. Darling seems to already be aware of several ways to stay safe as a woman on campus, yet many other women do not. Being safe does not mean living in fear. It means knowing that women are being assaulted on this campus, but there are certain ways to help prevent this from happening to you.

I have only lived on campus for three semesters. Still, I have heard accounts of men walking into women's rooms in the middle of the night, sometimes attacking them, other times just falling asleep on the floor. I have read police logs in the Collegian of reported rapes and I have heard of others that have gone unreported. I have heard of women who have been stalked. I have witnessed a woman being physically threatened by a boyfriend and then turning away from help. But I am not afraid.

I know that there are things that I can do to keep myself safe. I call the escort service when I need to walk at night, or I take the library shuttle. When I visit male friends down the hall in the dorm, I ask them to keep their doors open. I don't go out and get drunk or stoned and find myself losing control of my situation. I lock my door when I go to sleep at night. Fortunately, I have had to deal with nothing more than harrassing phone calls.

The flyer also lists ways to prepare for an actual attack as well. Carrying mace, knowing self defense, just being able to scream "fire" not "help" really loudly. Knowing that you are prepared for anything is cause for feelings of empowerment not fear.

None of my male friends are insulted, either, by the flyer or my own precautions. The creator of this flyer did not intend to insult either. In fact, the suggestion to make a point about being careful when visiting the guys down the hall came straight from the sour: the guys down her hall.

And we do not present these methods as an answer. The answer will be when we find a way to stop these attacks from happening. No, a woman cannot be too careful these days, but we do not have to live in fear.

Sharon Furgason
Riot Grrrls

Poem hypocritical and full of ignorance

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the poem titled "Gringo" by Juan Jose Chacon. Why was this poem allowed to be in the Multicultural Affairs category? It clearly defies the entire purpose for multiculturalism and instead sends out an ignorant, discriminate, hate message to all white Caucasians. For the non-speaking Spanish population, the entire poem was dedicated to describing how the "white" population has oppressed, suppressed, killed, robbed, etc. the Spanish culture and people.

For example, he states "Por que eres gringo, y escupes tu poder materialista en mis pomulos indigenas." He is saying because you are "gringo" (or American) you spit your materialistic power in my native face. He is basically implying that every American is materialistic and is to blame for this type of behavior.

This is continually done throughout the poem. One statement translated into "you have never realized that you're 'gringo.' Maybe not in your factions, but in your thoughts and trying to help, you (the gringo) destroy the community." Here is a clear example of putting the whole population at fault. These types of broad, ignorant statements are some of the many he uses to generalize the whole population.

He finishes his weak attempt at a successful poem with this statement — "Maldito Gringo American Yankee Green Beret asesino." Please, you say you are the one being discriminated and oppressed against and yet you write in statement this ignorant, rude, and overall hypocritical.

To conclude, writing this poem in Spanish may have disguised your ignorance and hate to the majority that don't understand your language, but it isn't taken lightly by the Spanish-speaking American Caucasian population on campus.

Jeff Pezzella
Amherst

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Developing Nations

Friday, November 10, 1995

The life and crimes of General Yitzhak Rabin

Yitzhak Rabin is dead. Murdered. Killed by a fellow Israeli, a supporter of the right-wing settler movement.

The unwitting and unwilling instrument of justice, law student Yigal Amir was a young man driven over the edge by the twisted ideology that Rabin spent his whole life enforcing and developing.

Now, Yitzhak Rabin has been elevated to the status of a secular saint, a sort of military Mother Teressa.

The truth is, of course, that Rabin was a monster, a war criminal, ethnic cleanser, mass murderer, and terrorist. Radko Mladic is little more than a budding Yitzhak Rabin.

A complete accounting of Rabin's crimes from 1948 until last Saturday would fill many volumes. A few small vignets, then from this extraordinary career.

Rabin cut his teeth on murder and made his name as a soldier in the war of conquest in 1948, when the minority European Jewish settlers established the Zionist state by expelling most of the indigenous Arab population, almost one million people.

The brash and bright young officer, Lt. Colonel Yitzhak Rabin was personally responsible for one of the most ruthless and systematic expulsions. As OC operations for Operation Dani in July, 1948, Rabin ordered and oversaw the slaughter and expulsion of virtually the entire populations of the adjacent Palestinian cities of Lydda and Ramleh.

On July 11, 1948, Moshe Dayan, under Rabin's command, led a jeep commando column through the city of Lydda, "with rifles, Stens, and machine guns blazing," shouting down every living thing in the streets. As the smoke cleared, over 250 Palestinian civilians lay dead in the streets, and scores of unarmed detainees were massacred by Rabin's troops in the church and mosque compounds in the city center.

Even before the last shots of the massacre were fired, Rabin issued the order for ethnic cleansing: "1. The inhabitants of Lydda must be expelled quickly without attention to age. They should be directed toward Beit Nabala. Yiftah must determine the method and inform Dani HQ and Operations Brigade HQ. 2. Implement immediately. Signed: Yitzhak Rabin." The same order was sent for Ramleh.

Thus it was that over 100,000 Palestinians were driven from their homes, stateless refugees to this very day, ethnically cleansed to make way for more European settlers.

Rabin's troops systematically looted the towns of Lydda and Ramleh, and stripped their victims of possessions as they drove them from their homes. Hundreds died under the blazing June sun, especially the children, from exhaustion, disease and thirst. Rabin offered no water to his victims.

Israeli archeologist Shmarya Guttman remembered the ethnic cleansing thus: "A multitude of inhabitants walked one after another. Women walked burdened with packages and sacks on their heads. Mothers dragged children after them.... Occasionally, warning shots were heard.... Occasionally, you encountered a piercing look from one of the youngsters in the column and the look said: 'We have not yet surrendered. We shall return to fight you.'" Guttman said the scene smacked of "the exile of Israel at Roman hands."

This was Yitzhak Rabin's contribution to Israel's "War of Independence," mass murder and ethnic cleansing of the most brutal variety. Perhaps it was from this time on that he was ear-marked as a possible future Prime Minister of the State of Israel, having shown all the necessary qualities.

Over the years Rabin rose through the ranks of the Israeli Defense Force to become Chief of Staff in 1964. In 1967, Rabin, along with Prime Minister Levi Eshkol and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, planed the war in which Israel would conquer the last remaining portions of Palestine.

The 1967 war completed the colonial disaster that Zionism, Israel, and Rabin were visiting on the Palestinian people. After the new conquests, the ethnic cleansing began anew.

In Jerusalem, Rabin's troops set up floodlights around the Haram Ash Sharif, gave the residents of the Moghrabi Quarter three hours to get out of their homes, and then bulldozed the entire neighborhood.

The inhabitants of, among many villages, Beit Nuba, Imwas, Qalquilya, Beit Awa, Beit Mersin and Yalu were driven across the Jordan, before their homes enjoyed their appointment with Rabin's bulldozers. In all, almost 300,000 Arabs were expelled from the newly occupied territories by Rabin's army following the 1967 war.

Americans were not spared by Rabin either in 1967, as he oversaw the notorious attack on the USS Liberty, a United States Navy observation ship strafed by Rabin's airforce in order to prevent monitoring of Israeli actions in the war. 34 American sailors were killed and 171 wounded in the massacre.

Credible accounts now confirm long alleged reports of the use of summary executions of thousands of Egyptian POWs by Rabin's troops in 1967. It is also certain that Rabin was aware of these mass murders and condoned them since he was provided with full information at the time by his own investigators and failed to discipline any subordinates. Some Israeli historians have suggested that Israeli massacres of POWs were so widespread in the 1967 war that it constituted an unofficial government policy.

In 1974, Rabin became the Prime Minster of Israel, and oversaw a series of terrorist actions against numerous targets in the Arab world. The attacks included regular shellings and bombings of south Lebanon, a nation that would often feel the wrath of Rabin.

In one small example of this kind of terrorism, in Aitroun Rabin's mortars hit a school-yard, killing 9 children aged between 4 and 12. Scores of Lebanese civilians were murdered by Rabin's army in 1975 alone. An uprising of Palestinian civilians in 1976 was put down, at Rabin's orders, by a shoot-to-kill policy, a warm up for his later role in violently suppressing the Intifada in the 1980's.

Rabin expanded and developed the illegal Israeli settlements throughout the occupied territories and ran an apartheid system in which people lived under different sets of laws according to their race.

During this period, Rabin also pushed forward with Israel's close alliance with its fellow apartheid state, South Africa. Under Rabin, the two continued their project of jointly developing nuclear weapons, and sharing intelligence.

Rabin was brought down in disgrace after it emerged in 1977 that he had maintained illegal bank accounts in the United States under his wife's name in violation of Israel's currency laws. He lied about the amounts of money involved and was generally shown to have behaved like a petty pilferer.

In 1987, Rabin was brought back into government as Defense Minister in the "national unity" Labor/Likud coalition. In this capacity, Rabin instituted the "Iron Fist" policy on South Lebanon, promising massive retaliations against any Lebanese who dared to resist his forces of occupation. Dozens of bombing raids, mass killings, and wanton destruction of homes in South Lebanon characterized this period of Rabin's death-dealing.

But above all, this part of Rabin's "career" will be remembered as the days of the Intifada, the Palestinian uprising in which the youth of the occupied territories rose up and challenged the colonialism, racism, occupation and apartheid under which they lived. With rocks and stones, ordinary Palestinians took to the streets to battle Rabin's battle-hardened, ultra-well-equipped army, one of the most heroic anti-colonial uprisings this century. But most of the Intifada was concerned with efforts of non-cooperation, civil disobedience, and non-violent resistance.

Rabin's savagery was stunning. In response to the popular revolt, Rabin oversaw the shooting of hundreds of unarmed Palestinian demonstrators, many of them children. The use of toxic gas by Rabin's forces also killed numerous innocents at that time, particularly by inducing miscarriages in dozens of cases.

Beyond this, Rabin issued his notorious "broken bones" policy in which Israeli soldiers were ordered to catch any Palestinian demonstrators and break either their legs or their hands.

As his colleague, Shimon Peres told a prominent Israeli newspaper, "Yitzhak Rabin intends for the Israeli army to intensify the use of violence and body-beating, which is exemplified by the breaking of limbs, in order to quell the demonstrations."

Rabin insisted to Israelis that his brutal methods of "force, might, and beatings" would subdue the unruly Arab rabble and put the Palestinians back in their place. Massacre followed massacre, beatings were inflicted one after another. Rabin and the Israeli army stopped at nothing in their efforts to break the will of the occupied people of Palestine. Death squads conducted summary executions, torture reached new heights, olive and citrus groves were uprooted wholesale, and Rabin's troops even buried a number of Palestinian youths alive.

One of the most important characteristics of the suppression of the Intifada under Rabin was the use of collective punishments, holding whole villages or families to account. Villages were routinely closed, and people starved and deprived of work, and homes summarily bulldozed.

The atrocities Rabin supervised on a daily basis during the Intifada require an encyclopedia to chronicle. However, between December 1987 and April 1990, over 1,300 unarmed Palestinian civilians had been killed by the Rabin's army. 130,000 were placed in prison or in concentration camps. 86,000 were injured and maimed for life. 1,228 homes were demolished, and 140,000 fruit and olive trees uprooted. All in the service of one of the most oppressive, racist occupations in history. All overseen by Yitzhak Rabin.

As his brutal methods failed to achieve the aim of pacifying the colonized Palestinians, Rabin turned to international terrorism in a desperate attempt to attempt turn the tide. One of the Palestine Liberation Organization's senior leaders, Khalil al-Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad, was believed by Rabin and his cohorts to be coordinating the resistance activities in the occupied territories.

On April 16, 1988, Rabin sent a hit squad of Israeli terrorists to murder Abu Jihad in Tunisia. After murdering a gardener and two guards, Rabin's terrorists slaughtered Abu Jihad in the presence of his wife and daughter.

Alas for Rabin and Israel, even this desperate act of international terrorism failed to kill the Intifada, and in fact even strengthened it.

During the same period, Rabin was also heavily involved in repeated bombings, attacks and killings in south Lebanon, and also acts of international terrorism such as the kidnapping and taking hostage into Israel of dozens of Lebanese including Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid.

In 1992, Rabin once again became Prime Minister of the State of Israel. One of his first major actions was to launch another invasion of Lebanon, as Rabin was determined to try to end Lebanese resistance to Israeli occupation troops in the south.

Rabin's attack on south Lebanon was explicitly designed, as Rabin was the first to admit, to drive civilians away from their homes and create hundreds of thousands of refugees. Hundreds were killed and wave after wave of Lebanese civilians were driven north by the onrushing Israeli assault.

Once again, however, Rabin's preferred method of brutally suppressing occupied peoples failed to pacify the area. South Lebanon remains a burial ground for occupying Israeli troops.

Rabin also inaugurated his new administration by radically expanding on Israel's long standing policy of expelling Palestinians who rose to leadership positions or became too accomplished or prominent for the occupier's tastes. Rabin had 500 Palestinian men, mostly respected professionals, rounded up in the middle of the night, blindfolded, put onto trucks and dumped on an isolated hill in South Lebanon.

When these men tried to walk back to their homes in Palestine, Rabin's soldiers shot at and shelled them. For months they languished on that hilltop, freezing and starving, sustained only by the kindness of local Lebanese villagers who brought food and blankets. These men, expelled from their homeland by Yitzhak Rabin, left to rot on a barren and forsaken hilltop, stood as living metaphors for the generalized condition of Palestinians after Zionism.

Rabin's reputation as a "peacemaker," for which he is currently being mourned, comes about due to his recent series of agreements with Yasser Arafat. As Israel Shahak pointed out in a speech at UMass last year, the "peace accords" are based on Rabin's new understanding that his old approach of directly ruling the Palestinian towns and cities was inefficient. Apparently he was learning in his old age.

Instead, what Rabin proposed and Arafat accepted was that Israeli troops should withdraw from some populated areas, while retaining full sovereignty and effective control, and that Palestinians should be made to police themselves. He was, to use Zygmunt Bauman's admirable phrase, "soliciting the cooperation of the victims."

Time and again Rabin assured Israelis that there would be "no withdrawal from an inch of territory," and above all "no Palestinian state." And indeed, withdrawal and statehood do not come into the plan which, although celebrated in the west, is nothing more than a Palestinian-enforced Israeli occupation. No aspect of the accords is worth preserving, since they have only served to make matters worse in every respect for ordinary Palestinians, as Rabin always intended.

In these accords, Rabin remained true to his principles and modus operandi of colonialism and violently enforced racist occupation. The "peacemaker" was, as much as he had ever been, a war monger.

The irony is that his own life's work led ineluctably to his killing, his assassin an inevitable product of the nation he created, steeped in the ideology to which Rabin dedicated his life. The 73-year-old patriarch spent his life creating the conditions that gave birth to the 27-year-old fanatic. Amir killed Rabin, Israel killed Rabin. Rabin killed Rabin.

They tell us now that Rabin was a great man. If this is so, then surely we must admit that he was, as they say, wickedly great.

We will never really know the exact number of innocents slaughtered by Yitzhak Rabin, how many children blown to pieces, how many families exiled, how many bones shattered, how many lives destroyed. But his victims number, as we have so impolitely reminded everyone, in the thousands, hundreds of thousands, and millions.

These human beings, their lives and suffering, their pain and blood, cannot be forgotten or dismissed to make way for a convenient myth of "Rabin the Peacemaker."

Their souls cry out for justice.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian Columnist.

GPO PHOTO

Israeli military leaders reviewing plans in the 1948 war. From left to right, Major Yehoshafat Harkabi, Major Arieh Simon, Colonel Yigael Yadin, and the young Lieutenant- Colonel Yitzhak Rabin.

Rwanda: a result of colonialism

By Syed Mohammed Ali Raza
Collegian Staff

News Analysis

Death dawned on the rich agriculture fields of Rwanda on the 6th of April 1994. The frenzy of ethnic fundamentalism, that engulfed Rwanda left at least seven percent of the population dead and another forty percent in refugee camps. It has left a nation at the cross roads of survival, where the options available are of sorrow, poverty and hatred.

The vengeance and force of evil that the youth of Rwanda has been exposed to is a nightmare for the "civilized world." For a Western observer the cause is simple, ethnic rivalry. But is it?

The bitter truth of Rwanda is far more complicated then the web of a spider. The reality is, that in the case of Rwanda, even the spider has lost its way out. To make it very precise and simple, the Rwandans were set up. They were set up by the inability and abuse of an ignorant colonial nation. The ethnic fundamentalism which exists in Rwanda today was started centuries ago by the imperialists.

In 1884-85 the conference of Berlin "decided" that this part of Africa would be part of the German East African Empire. After the defeat of the Germans in WWI, the colony was "handed" over to Belgian occupiers. It was the colonial masters who started the discrimination of Hutus. The masters preferred Tutsis over the Hutus, hence sowing the seed of hatred.

In 1962, when the Belgian occupiers finally decided to leave, a state of chaos followed. The Hutus burning with ethnic fervor took the government of Rwanda while equally fundamental Tutsis took charge of Burundi. There is no need to mention what happened next; the filthy brand of Western politics had left a nation in strife.

There were massacres, coups, guerilla wars and attempts to oust each others' governments, on the part of both Rwanda and Burundi. The politics of death and devastation had dragged Rwanda into the valley of death. To make matters worst, in 1973 General Juvenal Habyarimana seized control of Rwanda. He persecuted the Tutsis to the extreme.

In 1990, the Tutsis under the banner of the Rwandese Patriotic front started a civil war. Finally, in 1993 Habyarimana realized the problems at hand and lifted the restrictions on the Tutsis. The situation was definitely about to improve on the dawn of April the 6th, until the plane of Habyarimana and the President of Burundi was shot down.

The fires of centuries of discrimination and exploitation are still alive in the hearts of the Sons of Africa.

The "civilized world" should do something about it. Otherwise, who knows, when the next time the lava of ethnic fundamentalism flows in Africa it just might be headed for the West.

EXPLORE A WORLD
OUTSIDE OF UMASS.
Write for Developing Nations.
See Syed Mohammed Ali Raza at 113 Campus Center or call 545-1851.

Arts & Living

~ PREVIEWS ~

Amherst hosts French ensemble

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Capriccio Stravagante, a chamber music ensemble from France, will present a concert of Baroque and Renaissance music at Amherst College tonight. The concert which will include both vocal and instrumental music will begin at 8 p.m. in Buckley Recital Hall.

Capriccio Stravagante is a well established team of young musicians who have won international acclaim for their musical interpretation. Praised for their brilliance, imagination, versatility and richness of sound, the group was founded by harpsichordist and artistic director Skip Sempé.

Other members of the ensemble include Patricia Lavail on recorder, Jay Bernfeld and Carol Lewis on viola da gamba as well as Mike Fentross on chitarone and guitar. Tonight's concert will also feature mezzo-soprano Guillemette Laurens.

Sempé, an American virtuoso harpsichordist, is at the forefront of today's musical personalities in Renaissance and Baroque music.

Laurens' diverse and exotic repertoire ranges from the Middle Ages to Stravinsky. She has won praise internationally for her performances in concert and in staged appearances, including operatic roles, as well as for her recordings with Les Arts Florissants.

The ensemble has recorded albums for Deutsche Harmonia Mundi. One of their recordings of 17th-century madrigals won critical praise from the New York Times as "one of the most exciting early music recordings in years."

Tickets for the concert are $15 for orchestra seat and $13 for balcony seats with discounts for senior citizens and students. Reservations may be made by calling 542-2195 mornings.

Marley-influenced Harper hits valley

Acoustic rock & folk to be featured off Fight For Your Mind

By Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

Ben Harper will be coming to Pearl Street tonight in support of his new album, Fight For Your Mind. Harper plays with an acoustic side technique and sings political as well as introspective charged lyrics, giving his music a folk sound that seems somewhat Bob Marley-influenced. This isn't surprising considering, Harper, who comes from The Inland Empire area of California, sites Marley as his main influence.

After receiving many rave reviews for his previous album Welcome To The Cruel World, Harper has returned with the new Fight For Your Mind, which he co-produced with J.P. Plunier. On his newest release, Harper and his exremely talented band, the Innocent Criminals, play an eclectic bunch of songs that range anywhere from reggae, folk, hip hop to downright funky music.

During the first song "Oppression," Harper sings some words of liberation while the Innocent Criminals supply some intense percussion. Meanwhile "Ground On Down" begins with some experimental sounding guitar strumming, only to break into one of the funkiest rock jams heard on record in a long time.

Then when you thought Fight For Your Mind couldn't get anymore diverse, Harper sings about relationships and being alone on the intimate, "Another Lonely Day" — "It wouldn't of worked out any way/for now it's just another lonely day."

As far as playing live goes, Harper is hardly an amateur. Opening for the likes of Luscious Jackson, Spearhead, The Roots and later this year, P.J. Harvey, Harper's strong and inspiring lyrics come across just as much if not more than on record. In addition, one can watch Harper go to work on his acoustic guitar while the Innocent Criminals play behind him.

Harper, who will be at Pearl Street, will most likely appeal to anyone, due to his diverse musical styles. If you are into classic rock, reggae, hip hop or just appreciate real talent, he shouldn't be missed. Also, if there is any justice in the rock 'n' roll world, he will probably soon become big and this will be one of the last opportunities to see him play small intimate shows like the one tonight.

Ben Harper will be appearing at Pearl St. tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the downstairs of the club. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited and For the Record in Amherst.

Musicians find trouble with law

Liner Notes
compiled by Mike Burke

MUSIC NEWS (POLICE REPORT) — Why does it seem that the same musicians remain in the headlines week after week?

Courtney Love is now on trial for assaulting several fans at a Hole concert in March. If convicted, she could face two years in prison. Just two months ago, Love pleaded guilty to assaulting Kathleen Hanna of Bikini Kill. During the court session Love was quoted as saying, "Hey prosecutors. Psssst. Are you the prosecutors? Can I be O.J. and you be Christopher Darden?" Will Love ever learn to keep her mouth shut?

Flavor Flav, a member of Public Enemy, had another run in with the law this past week. After the taxi cab he was driving in was pulled over, police officers searched Flavor Flav finding an automatic weapon and three vials of crack. This past August he completed a three month jail sentence for shooting at a neighbor.

UPCOMING SHOWS — Need to hear some live music? Well, there are plenty of shows over the next week that will entertain you without breaking your budget.

Tomorrow night is a busy night for shows. Over at the Bay State in Northampton, New Radiant Storm King will take the stage with the Purple Ivy Shadows from Providence. If you have never seen NRSK, I cannot praise them enough — they are the cream of the crop when it comes to local bands. Over at Hampshire College's Prescott Tavern, Pumpernickel and Zoepy will perform their pop hits. Meanwhile, the basement of the Greenough Dormitory here at UMass will be punked up with Action Patrol (from Virginia), Hellbender, Eraserhead and more.

But the real killer shows of the week will take place over at the Amherst College Frontroom later this week. On Wednesday, Yo La Tengo and the Pastels will take the stage and then the next night Versus, Tizzy and New Radiant Storm King will showcase their talent. Yo La Tengo and Versus are among the premiere live bands on the East Coast, both known for their intense, energetic live shows. You will not be disappointed.

SINGLES OF THE WEEK — Here is a look at some of the more interesting 7" singles that have been recently released.

SPIRITUALIZED — "Any Way That You Want Me" (Sub Pop) Grunge may be dead but Sub Pop's hey day is hardly over. Over the past few years they have continued to release hit singles one after another by bands as diverse as Elastica, Scud Mountain Boys and the Tindersticks. The streak continues with this new piece of 7" vinyl by Spiritualized who prove once again why they are one of the most hyped bands around. Forming in the ashes of Spaceman 3, Spiritualized have continued in their predecessors' footsteps writing dreamy, anthem like tunes. The A side is a mellow, beautiful tune beefed up by the sounds of a full orchestra of strings. The flipside, "Step Into the Breeze" is a more upbeat tune that sucks the listener in much like old Spacemen 3 tunes.

HALOGEN/TREIOPS TRYFID — split single (Kilogram Denial). Here is the inaugural release by a new local label run by a Hampshire College student. As with any good split single, this piece of vinyl serves as an excellent introduction to two most interesting artists. Treiops Tryfid spends most of his time as guitarist in Pitchblende, but recently he has started solo recording and this is his first release. "Hand Full Of Babylon" is a mighty catchy tune which sounds like a cross between Unrest and Polvo. Look for an upcoming EP on VHF. Proteen recording artists Halogen contribute "Hindude," an intriguing tune that mixes Slint/Rodan influences with catchier guitar grooves to combine for a mighty enjoyable listen. Let's keep our fingers crossed and hope for more stellar releases from Kilogram Denial.

VARIOUS ARTISTS — Blue (Magic Eye). This new label has one goal, "to present unreleased songs that are different from those a band usually creates." It might sound like a great idea but it does not work too well. Local music fans will be interested though as it contains new tracks by New Radiant Storm King and Zeke Fiddler. The NRSK song, "Embry Crossroads" is a rare glimpse at the band's softer, acoustic side. Zeke appears here, with Steven D (Scud Mountain Boys) on bass, singing a song probably about life in the Valley, "Eventually Everyone Leaves This Town." The Sonara Pine, featuring Tara Jane O'Neill (formerly of Rodan, now of Retsin) and Scan Meadows (lune of 44) jam on this two guitar piece that is only slightly enjoyable. Overall this collection leaves much to be desired and is only recommended for die hard fans. After one listen, you quickly realize why these tunes have probably not been released before.

COURTESY COLIN BELL

Spiritualized releases their new single, "Any Way That You Want Me," on Sub Pop.

Have you always wanted to know what makes life interesting?
Then write for Arts & Living.
Come down and talk to Tara.
113 Campus Center / 545-3500

Free for all!
PLAY ONE HOUR AND GET THE SECOND HOUR FREE WITH THIS AD...
Great food and cocktails. Open 7 days 'til 2 a.m.
Pay must be completed by 10 p.m. Out of pre table per visit.
BOSTON BILLIARD CLUB
885 Riverdale Street, W. Springfield MA (413) 731-POOL
Boston · Worcester · W. Springfield · Warwick · Danbury · Fairfield

Only Local Showing
Starts Fri. 7&9 Daily
The New Comedy from Woody Allen
"Mighty Makes All Righty! The goofiness is almost magical."
MIGHTY APHRODITE
ACADEMY of MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
POWDER PG-13
FAIR GAME* R
SEVEN R
NOW AND THEN PG-13
HAMPSHIRE 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
ACE VENTURA PG-13
GET SHORTY R
GOLD DIGGERS: THE SECRET OF BEAR MTN PG
HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS* PG-13
COPY CAT R

The Daily Collegian, we bring you the weather

$$$ MONEY FOR COLLEGE $$$
OURS IS THE LARGEST NATIONAL SCHOLARSHIP DATABASE WITH OVER 150,000 MONEY SOURCES! AND WE WON'T "ROB" YOUR SCARCE FUNDS: YOUR PERSONALIZED SEARCH ONLY $49.50
YOU MIGHT EVEN BE ABLE TO GET YOURS FREE!
DON'T MISS ANOTHER DEADLINE--GET YOUR APPLICATION TODAY! CALL OR WRITE:
UNITED DATA SERVICES
DEPT. UM11
P.O.BOX 1154, SOUTHWICK, MA 01077
1-800-518-2700 VOICE MAIL
TOUCH TONE 5 112

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:
"A HEART-STOPPING THRILLER IN THE TRADITION OF 'ALIENS' AND 'FAR SUPERIOR'"
"THE SCI-FI EVENT OF THE YEAR IS HERE!"
THE SUMMER'S MOST THRILLING TWO HOURS!
SPECIES
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs. Sign up 545-3600
Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday:
Ping-Pong and Pool Tournament in the Student Union Game Room
Please call 545-3600 to sign up
The Movie: "SPECIES"
in the Bluewall Cafe
November 10, 1995, 8 pm & 10pm
FREE
Refreshments Will Be Served

November 17th
in the Student Union Ballroom
8:00
311
with Shootyz Groove!
presale tix: $15 for UMASS students, $16.50 for general public
Tickets are sold at Tix Unlimited (at UMASS), Northampton, Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record (in Amherst).
For More Information, Call UPC at (413) 545-2892
Event Sponsored By: Rolling Stone FILA

V-ball tries to clinch playoffs

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Looking to clinch a postseason berth, the Massachusetts volleyball team (21-10 overall, 12-5 Atlantic-10) will travel to Xavier and Dayton this weekend to take on the Musketeers and Flyers.

UMass was victorious against both teams the first time around, leaving the Minutewomen with an opportunity for a successful weekend.

A win over both teams would ensure a spot in the A-10 Championships, to be held at UMass on Nov. 24 and 25.

Back on Oct. 13, the Minutewomen had almost no trouble with Dayton, sweeping them in three games, 15-6, 15-3, 15- 10. The match marked the return of Giza Rivera, who had been out almost a month with an ankle injury. Rivera led the team in kills that night, with 15.

The following day, UMass played host to Xavier, and it was more of the same. The Minutewomen earned their second consecutive sweep winning 15-8, 15-6, 15-10. Rivera registered 18 kills, another team-high.

Although Dayton is a respectable 16-11, 9-7 A-10, it has dropped four of its last five games.

Interestingly enough, the one win was against a strong Virginia Tech (17-10, 9-6) squad. The losses include Temple, Wright State, George Washington and Xavier.

The Flyers are led by Jody Klare, who is averaging a team-high 3.242 kills per game, along with 2.394 digs per game, good for second on the team. Paula Kirch follows Klare with 2.394 kills per game. Tops on the team in hitting percentage is Michelle Carter, who is hitting at a .297 clip. Sheila Krein is second at .265, while Klare is third at .255.

As a team, the Flyers are averaging 2.085 blocks per game, 14.287 digs per game, and own a .244 hitting percentage.

"I think our team has really been working hard lately, both in practice and in the matches," UMass middle blocker Leigh Readey said. "If we continue our intensity, and execute, we should have a successful weekend."

After these two affairs, UMass travels to Rhode Island next Thursday to face the Rams, who are currently in second place in the conference. UMass could boost its confidence with a win over URI, which is a potential post season opponent.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Erin Lynch has been named Atlantic 10 Player of the Year the last two seasons, as she has been the backbone of the UMass defensive corps.

■ Lynch

continued from page 10

way. Soccer News All-American. National Soccer Coaches Association of America (NSCAA)/Umbro New England Region All- America second team honors. All-Atlantic 10 First Team.

Looking for a letdown in 1995? You won't find one, as Lynch has gotten even better. It is readily apparent how important she has become to the Minutewomen.

"She's very important in terms of her quality of play and in particular, her quiet and steady leadership," Rudy said. "She's not a really loud leader, but she doesn't have to say much to get people to play. People know that when Erin gets on the field, she's there to play and there to succeed."

She continues to succeed this season as now she is currently third on the team in scoring with four goals and eight assists for 16 points.

Her higher scoring output comes from the fact that she is getting forward even more than a year ago.

Many times during a game she'll see an opening and advance up the field.

"My role's changed a little bit with Amanda [Thompson] coming in the back. I have a little bit more flexibility, I can get forward a little bit more," Lynch said. "I don't have as much defensive responsibilities, but still, defense is the first thing."

"She's so threatening when she comes through the middle, because to see someone with her capabilities coming through the middle like that, out of the back, people just don't know what to do," Myers said. "So when she's coming through, it's just like you sit and watch her go through, because she's that type of player."

Lynch's outstanding 'D' has helped lead the Minutewomen to a 0.59 goals-against-average, bettering the team's 0.76 GAA of a year ago.

"You can't replace (1994 graduate) Heidi Kocher but our defense is still as strong as ever," Lynch said.

First-year assistant coach Chris Chamides, who was a defender himself at Lafayette, has helped Lynch continue to get better at her game as well.

"He points out the little things that help you out," Lynch said. "He's played so long he can tell you exactly what will help you. He's a really great person, great coach."

Can Lynch get any better?

"Oh yeah," Rudy said. "You'll just see her go. Someone who trains like her will just do nothing but get better."

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

well in practice. Martin and Donaldson both responded to the challenge issued to them at A-10s, giving LaFreniere an optimistic outlook for this weekend.

"The quality of this field is real strong," LaFreniere said. "It will give my women a chance to run with some big guns. They are ready and rested, and I think we will do well.

"Katie is looking a lot better, and now that Jen is healthy, she's looking the best I've seen her all year," she said. "Rebecca is looking great, really pumped."

The meet holds double importance for Donaghue, who will attempt to qualify for the NCAA Championships. According to LaFreniere, Donaghue is in excellent condition and ready to make a run at qualifying.

"Rebecca has a serious shot at making NCAAs. She's in the right mindset to do it," LaFreniere said. "There will be tough competition to push her, and I think she can do it. Katie O'Toole (UConn), and Sue Yaagielski (St. Joe's) will be two of the top individual runners, and the Providence, Villanova, and Georgetown teams will have several top finishers."

LaFreniere is confident about her team's chances of doing well, and closing out the season on a positive note.

"We're fresh, we're feeling good, looking good," she said. "We're going to run smart, and do well."

■ men's cross-country

continued from page 10

meet is Providence College. The Friars have been a top 10 nationally ranked team all year. After Providence, Dartmouth is a favorite to grab the second qualifying spot.

The third, and final qualifying spot is up for grabs. The rest of the field is as evenly skilled as possible. With teams such as Brown, Boston College, and Williams to worry about, Massachusetts has its hands full. The Minutemen have already competed against these teams, and done well, so there is a definite possibility of UMass running away with that final qualifying spot.

As of late, Massachusetts has been running magnificently. Coming off a top five finish at the New England Championships, the team outdid itself with a first place finish at the A-10s.

They have accomplished this with a solid team effort. Throughout the season, different runners have stepped up with spectacular performances, all at different times. Along with the consistent running of juniors Matt Behl, and Mike Maceiko, overall team depth has been the formula of success for the Minutemen.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

Candidate Greg Bullock left school early to join the IHL's San Francisco Spiders.

Mallen said while the Riverhawk forwards do have talent, there are still question marks in Bullock's absence.

"Jeff Daw is a great player. Christian Sbrocca is a great player," he said. "Nobody really knows what the effect of Greg Bullock was on their point totals. Whether they made a lot of passes to Bullock who scored or that he put it on their stick and they scored."

Those forwards will have to contend with Regan on Friday night, who has been strong early. Regan has been the iron man in net so far, as he's been there for all three of UMass' games. Depending on how tonight goes for the sophomore from Connecticut, Mallen will consider using either Dave Kilduff or Rich Moriarty tomorrow.

The rest of the lineup will remain the same however as Mallen isn't straying from his winning formula.

"So far it's like, if it ain't broke don't fix it," he said, "but we have some guys that are ready to break into the lineup, but we haven't had many major mistakes by our players so far. We have to keep going with what's gotten us there."

FolkTree and LampLighter present
O.J. SIMPSON TRIAL PROSECUTOR
Christopher Darden
IN PERSON
Saturday November 18th • 8 PM
at John M. Greene Hall
Smith College in Northampton
Tickets are $15 student, $20 public or $65 reception included.
$65 ticket includes catered reception with Christopher Darden at Smith College Club (Faculty Center on College Lane) from 8 PM to 7 PM, plus preferential reserved seating
$15 and $20 tickets are general admission.
Tickets on sale now at the Northampton Box Office (Thorne's Market)
Charge by Phone (413) 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK
Presented in association with Z-104 WHYN News/Talk 560 93 WTTY-FM
Talking about the trial, the verdict, the aftermath
Followed by questions and answers with the audience
A portion of the proceeds to benefit local shelters for battered women

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD
ON THURSDAYS!

Steve Madden
(Live from New York)
Downtown Amherst

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
VETERANS DAY SALE!
★WINTER SPORTS★
Exel World Cup Cross Country Ski Package
★ Aurora 7 Smm Boot
★ 3 PIN 75MM Binding
★ Fiberglass Pole
★ Mounting
FREE Lesson
$89.99
2.8 ADV Downhill Ski Package
★ Salomon Quest S Binding
★ Salomon SX 5 D/Nordica AFX 46 Boot
★ Pole
★ Mounting
$279.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
SNOWBOARD PACKAGE
★ ZERO BOARD ★ NALE BINDING
★ DALBELLO DUNE BOOT
$439.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
HOCKEY STICKS
BUY ONE @ regular price
GET ONE AT 1/2 PRICE
BAUER TURBO SR
$54.99
JR. $49.99
ELAN 797C Downhill Ski Package
★ Salomon 577 Binding
★ Salomon SX 40 Boot
★ Pole
★ Mounting
$249.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
ELAN Jr. Lightning Downhill Ski Package
★ Salomon Quadrax 3 Binding
★ Salomon SX25 Boot
★ Pole
★ Mounting
$179.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
AVALANCHE SNOWBOARD PACKAGE
★P99 OR P109★RANGER BINDING
$299.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
Cooper NCB EQUIPMENT BAG $19.99
CCM COMPETITOR FIGURE SKATE SR
$29.99
JR. $27.99
YOUR CHOICE! Cooper HPS50 PANTS OR CCM Training PANTS
$44.99
FREE
GORE MOUNTAIN LIFT TICKET
With The Purchase Of Any Complete Downhill Ski Package
CARNET HILL
• X-Country Ski Lesson
• 1/2 Price Ski Pass & MORE!
With The Purchase Of Any Complete Cross Country Ski Package
Columbia Sportswear Company BUGABOO $99.99
SKI CLOTHING 20-50% OFF
NORDICA edelweiss
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Attn: Asscc/Pre-vet club Don't miss out on the Hadley Farm Barn clean-up & BBQ! Sat. Nov. 11 at 9:30 am. Questions, rides: Call 549-5851 or 546-4372

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Alpha Chi Omega invites all University women to come to open rush on Monday November 13 at 5:30. If you have any questions please call Patrice 549-3305.

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am

University Productions & concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 8:00 in room 162. Come get involved!

AUTO FOR SALE

Convertible '85 Dodge 600 Beautiful rust-free car $1700 obo 549-8240 Brian.

1985 Chevy Glazer Good condition. New engine $2,100 obo 549-0825.

'83 GMW 1815 Coupe excel cond alarm & remote start. Call David 585-5284

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialities: taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50,000. Fax resume (212) 564-2030

All students N.E. College-age painters now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000-$10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-669-9939

Car Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16 - Jan 10. $100. Call Anne 545-5823, 256-6788.

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise Ships Hiring!! $$$- free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii?) Seasonal/permanent. No experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext. C1040

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N 5801.

We want you! Unique liquor related product! Retails for $7.00! Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001.

FOR SALE

Fish tank 30 gallon tank w/ complete set up. Includes tank, hood, stand, heater filter, pump, & gravel. $100 or bo 256-8273

Magic: The gathering from the game connection boxes, packs, singles. Great selection lowest prices. All games available. Visit us Sunday at Jackson's Flea Market Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley 1-413-436-7505.

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Used/reconditioned rack systems and separate components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection, friendly advice, warranty and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only 9-5. Other days call 256-0941

Wanna see Lisa Loeb on Boston Tuesday Nov 14th? Call 548-1255.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Brown cloth wallet contains IDs. Reward!!! 253-2609

Lost keys on red fabric key holder between Bartlett and library. 545-3560 reward

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2947

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail 11/95 One room in large 3 bedroom w/yard $275+. Bus line. Extras! Leda 665-3573

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 548-1794

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-2231.

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Free Travel Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Port Antonio, Jamaica Ocean view cottages great neighborhood. Walk to beaches, restaurants, dance hall clubs $150/week 413-367-9250

Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399, Jamaica from $439, Florida from $99. Organize and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800-648-4849 for more info. Or a campus contact. Liz at 546-7146, Jason at 546-5529 or Catherine at 549-7584.

Winter Break Special Killington week $169. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Wanted 100 students to lose 8-100 pounds. Call (303) 577-7975

Today as we walked home from church our son Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of action smurf figurines and made a key contact for a job getting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Willamina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're rudiotic & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that paper the children read, the one we use to wrap our fish."

Collegian
"Fish wrapping good!!!"

CLIP & SAVE

Okay, so it isn't a coupon. But it caught your attention – Right? You can do the same thing by simply coming down to the Collegian, talking to Chris Conner (our wonderful, over-worked news editor), and telling him you want to write news stories. This will put a smile on Chris' face, as he needs lots of writers to cover all the interesting things that happen here at UMass, the Five Colleges and in all of Western Mass.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-3500

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X _____ Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

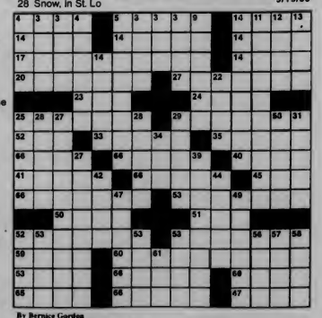
ACROSS
1 Moisty
5 Part of a posy
10 State
14 Kuwaiti VIP
15 Author of "Hard Cash"
16 Summon
17 Place for W.J. Bryant
19 River of NW France
20 Mozart was one
21 Made corrections
23 Needlefish
24 River in Normandy
25 Mideast city often in the news
29 Salad greens
32 Muhammad—
33 Catkin
35 Life force
36 "Hot —": Swit role
38 City of Tuscany
40 Sailors' patron saint
41 Ancient Egyptians
43 Soccer scores
45 Scottish waterfall: Var.
46 Computer capability
48 Blue-eyed feline
50 Battle is one
51 Noted period
52 Installs broadloom
55 Like old trees
59 Crooked
60 Place for Carmen
62 Small change
63 Pay back
64 Flask for Rioja
65 The road to Rome
66 Tortoise shell
67 Van —, Calif.

DOWN
1 Jalopy
2 Boundary river of Manchuria
3 Venetians' vacation spot
4 Successor to the icebox
5 Handouts at 60 Across
#6 Hair-raising
7 Skater Babilonia
8 Together, to Solti
9 Jack, who played Felix
10 Vesuvius' range
11 Place for Weber & Fields
12 Folklore character
13 Dandelion
18 Crown
22 Wagner's earth goddess
25 Baby dusters
26 "The Wasteland" author
27 Place for Jumbo
28 Snow, in St. Lo
29 Lab vessels
30 TV awards
31 River at Lyons
34 Classic beginning
37 Gypsy Rose Lee was one
39 Estrange
42 Put money away
44 Actress — Jessica Parker
47 Crocs' cousins
49 Shade of red
52 Muslim judge
53 Settled
54 Gamble, for short
55 Pluck
56 Beaut
57 Notice
58 Poor marks
61 Big bird

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	H	A	M		P	L	O	T		S	C	R	I	P
T	U	T	U		R	I	D	E		A	L	A	T	E
A	G	E	S		A	M	E	N		M	O	R	A	L
R	O	N	H	O	W	A	R	D	C	O	S	E	L	L
			R	U	N				R	A	E
P	I	C	O	T			A	G	A		T	O	N	E
A	R	R	O	W			D	R	O	S	S		A	I	T
N	A	O	M	I		J	U	D	D	H	I	R	S	C	H
I	T	O		T	U	N	E	S			L	E	T	H	E
C	E	N	T		E	D	E	N			A	N	S	E	R
			E	S	E				A	G	O
J	O	H	N	W	A	Y	N	E	N	E	W	T	O	H
A	M	I	N	E		E	A	R	N		N	A	T	O
M	A	R	I	A		A	P	I	A		E	R	I	S
B	R	E	S	T		S	E	E	S		D	A	S	H

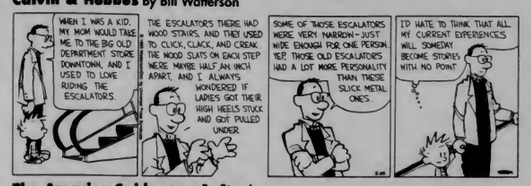
5/19/95



By Bernice Gordon
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



WHEN I WAS A KID, MY MOM WOULD TAKE ME TO THE BIG OLD DEPARTMENT STORE DOWNTOWN, AND I USED TO LOVE RIDING THE ESCALATORS.
THE ESCALATORS THERE HAD WOOD STAIRS, AND THEY USED TO CLICK, CLACK, AND CREAK. THE WOOD SLATS ON EACH STEP WERE MAYBE HALF AN INCH APART, AND I ALWAYS WONDERED IF LADIES GOT THEIR HIGH HEELS STUCK AND GOT PULLED UNDER
SOME OF THOSE ESCALATORS WERE VERY NARROW- JUST WIDE ENOUGH FOR ONE PERSON. YEP. THOSE OLD ESCALATORS HAD A LOT MORE PERSONALITY THAN THESE SLICK METAL ONES.
I'D HATE TO THINK THAT ALL MY CURRENT EXPERIENCES WILL SOMEDAY BECOME STORIES WITH NO POINT.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SO! YOU'RE HERE ABOUT SANDRA STEWART, EH?
RIGHT, YOU MUST BE MR. ROGART!
AND YOU MUST BE STUPID TO THINK YOU COULD TRICK ME!
THE HIM UP, GONZO!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

HEY, ALL I DID WAS COME HERE TO BAIL OUT MISS STEWART!
YOU THINK I WAS BORN YESTERDAY?
HOW DID YOU KNOW TO FIND ME? I HAVEN'T YET TOLD ANYONE WHERE TO BRING THE MONEY!
YOU'RE A PHONY! HE'S GONA-- ROGART! LOOK A THIS!

Garfield By Jim Davis

Garfield By Jim Davis

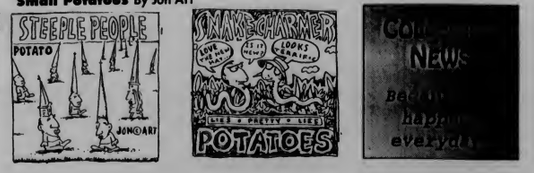
Dilbert By Scott Adams

HEY! THAT LITTLE STUFFED DOLL LOOKS JUST LIKE ME!
IT GIVES ME AN EMOTIONAL LIFT TO HAVE YOUR LIKENESS NEARBY
I NEVER REALIZED WHAT HE THOUGHT OF ME
STOP DROPPING IN LIKE THAT!!
WHACK!

Generation X By Chris Lehman

OK, TERI, NOW WE NEED TO GET YOU IN SOME BUY CLOTHES.
NOW IF WE CAN GET PAST THE R.A., WE'LL GET AWAY WITH YOU BREAKING YOUR DORM CURFEW.
HI, DOUG. WHO'S YOUR FRIEND?
UHH... IT'S TERRY, THE FOOTBALL PLAYER.
HI. I'M REALLY A BOY!
OH, JEEZ...

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellerini

I ALWAYS GO FOR WALKS IN THE RAIN
WHY?
THIS IS HOW MY WIFE TOUCHES ME FROM HEAVEN IN THE FORM OF RAINDROPS
SHE RESTS ON MY FACE AND BODY UNTIL THE LORD DRAGS OUT THE SUN AND TAKES HER BACK AGAIN.
I ALWAYS THOUGHT IT WAS JUST RAIN
IT'S ALL NOW YOU LOOK AT IT, NEIL.

Leoid By Roger & Salem Salloom

I had an English teacher who thought he was the smartest guy in the world. He was always telling us how lowly and stupid we all were.

At first I thought maybe I liked him but I think I was just afraid of him. He didn't care about our feelings.

Personally, I think he had something missing.

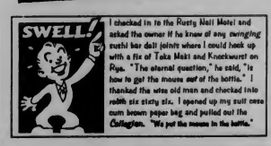
I wrote a paper so good that he accused me of stealing ideas.

He didn't think my little poems were any good either.

He showed our class one of his own poems and boasted,... "This one will be read and enjoyed for a thousand years to come."

I said, "Well, you could be right, but we're going to have a hard time keeping an eye on that."

Fish face.



I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar dell joints where I could hook up with a fix of Toke Maki and Kneekwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the moose out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into rodith six sixty six. I opened up my suit case num brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the moose in the bottle."

Close to Home By John McPherson

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH SPORTS ON CAMPUS

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Allison Connolly
Photo Technician.....Jeffrey DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....
Production.....William Darby
Dan Bergeron

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Fishburger on a Roll
Ravioli w/ Tomato Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Red Beans
Fishburger on a Roll

DINNER
Savory Beef Strudel
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet
BASICS DINNER
Curried Chick Peas
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet
Fiesta Rice and Cheese

Saturday

BRUNCH
Worcester Breakfast Sandwhich
French Toast Sticks
Stawberry Sauce, Syrup
Grilled Ham Slice
BASICS BRUNCH
Worcester Breakfast Sandwhich
Split Pea Vegetable Stew

DINNER
Savory Barbecued Chicken
Savory Sweet and Sour Pork
BASICS DINNER
Savory Sweet and Sour Tofu
Savory Barbecued Chicken

Sunday

BRUNCH
Omelet/Sauteed Onions, Peppers and musrooms, Cubed Tomatoes, Piquante Sauce
BASICS BRUNCH
Omelet/Sauteed Onions, Peppers and musrooms, Cubed Tomatoes, Piquante Sauce

DINNER
Savory Vegetable Lasagna
Savory Beef Strips w/ Savory Snow Peas and Savory Mushrooms
BASICS DINNER
Savory Vegetable Lasagna
Savory Bean Burrito

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Best Kept Secrets at UMass

10. The government is manufacturing "soylent green" in the Polymer Science building.
9. The directions to the bat cave.
8. The ingredients to the secret sauce.
7. The people who give prospective students "the campus tour" lie 'till they're blue in the face.
6. At night, Whitmore serves as a temple for the anti-Christ.
5. What drug the architect who designed the FAC was on.
4. All those greenhouses? Chock full o' hemp.
3. Chancellor Scott can kill a man with his bare hands.
2. Coach Calipari actually works for pennies.
1. How the UMass food services define "beef."

Quote of the Day

When you walk with reason, you walk on air. Since no one can walk on air, you fall down and you stop using reason as your pavement.

–Helen in Anne Roiphe's Lovingkindness

Sports

Lynch, UMass to host Hartford in NCAA action

After a quick rise to fame, star defender Lynch shines brightly

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Taking a quick look at Erin Lynch, a defender for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, one might not see the greatness in her.

But more importantly, her coach sees it, her teammates see it, and opposing coaches see it.

"She's got the complete package. Her strength is that she does everything really well. She's in the top five [in the country]. I've got no questions about that," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy. "There might be a defender or two that's got more speed or more recognition, but this kid knows how to play. She knows the game. Intellectually, her game is above most kids in the country."

"Erin is an unbelievable player. She's always amazing. Nothing phases her game. She's always out there confident," said teammate Rebecca Myers. "She always seems to put together a strong game regardless of the outcome. She steps out on that field and it's all together for her, and to me, that's amazing to see in a player."

"She's a great player," Connecticut head coach Len Tsantiris said. "She's good in the air, covers a lot of space and is very effective. She's very difficult to beat one-on-one. When she does well, the whole team is really in gear. She's up there with the top players that we've faced."

In her three years at UMass, Lynch has been a tough, reliable and steady defender for the tradition-rich Minutewomen program.

"When you put on the UMass maroon jersey, you're playing for this school. You're playing for the tradition that it's always had. You want to play your best and hopefully keep the tradition going, just winning games," Lynch said. "You're playing with a lot of pride when you put on the UMass colors."

When it's time for post-season awards, defenders are usually overlooked. The top scorers in the conference are the ones that get the awards, right? Not in the Atlantic 10. The last three Atlantic 10 Player of the Year awards have gone to defensive players, all from UMass. In 1993 it was goalkeeper Briana Scurry, now a member of the U.S. National Team.

In 1994, and again this year, it was Lynch.

"I was honored. It means a lot to me to be honored twice in a row," Lynch said. "It makes me feel great because you don't expect to get all of the publicity, being a defender, if you don't score all the goals. It shows that people appreciate the defensive side of the game, which is great."

In 1993, Lynch had a solid freshman campaign, starting 17 games while seeing action in 20. The Austin, Texas native finished her first year of collegiate ball with six points (one goal, four assists) and her only goal was the game-winner in a 5-0 victory over Providence in the NCAA Northeast Regional semi-final.

But it was in 1994 that she really made a name for herself. Entering the season, she was tabbed as one of the top 10 sophomores in the nation by College Sports magazine. She backed up that claim by displaying her tremendous ability in getting forward.

She ended up scoring 12 points on five goals and two assists, good for fifth on the team. Two of her goals won games for the Minutewomen.

As the season progressed, she kept getting better. That's when the accolades started to be thrown her

Turn to LYNCH, page 7

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior defender Erin Lynch will be part of UMass' wall of defense that will face Hartford tomorrow at Richard F. Garber field starting at 1 p.m.

Rivals square off

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

On Oct. 11, the Massachusetts and Hartford's women's soccer teams played to a 0-0 tie after regulation and two overtimes. There was no winner that day, but tomorrow in the first round match-up of NCAA Northeast Regionals, one team will survive to play Connecticut next weekend and the other's season will end.

The Minutewomen and Hawks are no strangers to one another, as this will be the seventh meeting between the two teams in the last four years. UMass is 1-4-1 in those meetings leading up to tomorrow's contest, including twice losing to Hartford in the NCAA tournament.

Both of those losses came in Hartford, but this game will be held at UMass' Richard F. Garber field, and with the change of atmosphere, the Minutewomen hope for a change in results as well.

"We played really well here in the Atlantic 10 tournament," junior Rebecca Myers said. "Hopefully we can continue to play well and we'll just see where that can take us."

During the A-10 tourney, UMass played it's best back-to- back games of the season downing George Washington and Xavier, 2-0 and 6-0 respectively. Now they will attempt to continue that trend against a Hawk team that controlled much of their first match.

Both teams had quality scoring opportunities but it was Hartford who had more of them. The Hawks outshot UMass 24 to 13 and had three more corner kicks than the Minutewomen. UMass coach Jim Rudy attributes that to the mindset of his team.

"We worried about them more than we worried about ourselves," Rudy said. "We are concentrating on our game this time. And we have been playing extremely well as of late. This could be our last game [on Garber Field] and we are looking forward to playing Hartford."

Rudy's players echo his sentiments.

"I can't wait to play Saturday," halfback Rebecca Myers said. "We love going up against Hartford. Its always exciting."

"Last time we played [the Hawks]," forward Karin Johnson said, "we didn't play our game, we worried about what they were doing. We're not doing that this time."

Two players who UMass fans will be worrying about on Saturday are seniors Jessica Reifer and Irene Stelling. Both Reifer and Stelling out of the midfield have the ability to set up their forwards, as well as giving themselves prime scoring chances. Reifer has 11 goals and nine assists on the season, while Stelling has seven goals and nine assists.

A hockey rivalry in the making

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Senior forward Sal Manganaro has been one of the reasons the UMass hockey team is off to a 3-0-0 start. They put their unbeaten record on the line tonight at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Looking over some of the greatest rivalries in college hockey, Boston University and Boston College... Michigan and Michigan State... Minnesota and Minnesota-Duluth... Massachusetts-Lowell?

Well not yet. But if things continue the way the two teams battled a year ago, it could be.

The two teams will renew that rivalry this weekend, tonight at the William D. Mullins Center and then Saturday for Lowell's home opener at the Tully Forum. Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen pointed to the fans at Lowell as a big part of the rivalry's beginning.

"The place will probably be packed," Mallen said of Lowell's home-opener. "I think that UMass-Lowell has made it into a big rivalry. We went there last year and they had the signs saying 'The rivalry has begun.'"

Just looking at the scores over the three matchups wouldn't bring rivalry to mind. The Riverhawks dominated the Minutemen, sweeping the three-game series.

But what most defined the three contests was the physical play of both teams and the animosity between them. The Massachusetts players have not forgotten the bad blood.

"We don't forget what happened last year," said senior forward Sal Manganaro. "They came into our building, played physical and hurt a couple of our players and we don't take kindly to it.

"I think it's going to carry over to this weekend. I think it's going to be very physical, very hard fought."

Another thing adding to the rivalry this year will be the inception of the Alumni Cup. The trophy will be given each year to whichever team captures the season series.

With the trophy case on the third floor of the William D. Mullins Center currently dominated by basketball trophies, sophomore goalie Brian Regan hopes to add some hockey awards.

"We're looking to take the Alumni Cup this year and put some hardware in these trophy cases," he said.

Mallen is looking for the trophy to add motivation for his squad.

"I think we can contend for the Alumni Cup," Mallen said. "I hope it will be motivation for us to play hard this weekend."

"The way you build tradition is by starting one, and that's what we're doing here," said Manganaro. "That's what the cup is going to be about. We want to win it."

With Massachusetts coming in on a high note after a 3-0 start and Lowell sporting a weaker lineup than last year, the game should be a competitive one.

The Riverhawks check in undefeated at 2-0-2, but they have been a bit shaky in the early going. They opened their season with a win over Rensselaer, tied Air Force twice, and then beat Princeton last weekend.

"We have had our ups and downs," said Lowell coach Bruce Crowder. "I thought we played well against Princeton."

The Riverhawk forwards are still looking for an identity this season as would-be Hobey Baker

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Donaghue, UMass look for success at ECAC's

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When the final Massachusetts women's cross country runner crosses the finish line this weekend, it will mark the curtain call for the 1995 season. And as the house lights go up, the Minutewomen are hoping for a happy ending.

Travelling to Boston this weekend, the UMass team will compete in its final meet of the season, the ECAC Championships. Considered one of the toughest meets of the year, the ECAC's will feature a tremendous amount of talent, from the best teams on the Eastern seaboard.

"There is going to be so much cross country talent in Boston this weekend. It's going to be incredible," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said. "This is a huge meet. There are going to be a lot of teams close together, and I think some will only be separated by a point or two."

Franklin Park, the site of the 1992 World Cross Country Championships, will be the host of this weekend's meet. The course is a flat, fast course which favors track style athletes.

"My women have to get out in front early, and keep their pace," LaFreniere said. "On this course you have to get out immediately. You can't sit back and then pick your way to the top. This is a course with the track runner in mind. It's fast, and 800 [meter] runners do well."

UMass will be led by Rebecca Donaghue and Jen Waeger, two of the top harriers in New England. Donaghue has led the Minutewomen all year, placing second overall at the Atlantic 10 Championships. Waeger, who battled health problems for a stretch during the latter half of the season, has been just as consistent. She has finished second for UMass in every race this season.

The supporting cast of Katie Greenia, Christy Martin, and Kristin Donaldson will be counted on to push the Minutewomen to the top. Greenia has had trouble with her hamstring, but has been running

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

Minutemen head to Boston for IC4As

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's cross country team has had a very fulfilling season. They have already competed in two Championships, and have fared extremely well. The team placed fourth at the New Englands, and finished first at the Atlantic 10 Championships. Both meets were hotly contested, competitive battles.

The Minutemen used a balanced team attack to place at the top. This weekend will be a true test of the Minutemen's overall strength, as they run at the IC4A Championships this Saturday at Boston's Franklin Park.

Every NCAA Division I school on the east coast will be in attendance, as well as numerous Division II standouts.

"It's basically every top Division I and II school on the East Coast fighting it out, to see who is the best," coach Ken O'Brien said. "Not only does it determine who the 'best' is, the IC4A is the qualifying meet to see who runs at the NCAA Championships."

The top three finishers at the IC4A meet from Division I, and the top two finishers from Division II, will compete next weekend at the NCAA Championships.

Heading into this weekend, the favorite to take the

Turn to MEN'S CROSS-COUNTRY, page 7

Football looks to take advantage of disappointing Terriers

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The best part of the Massachusetts football team's record up to this point is that it still has a chance of going a respectable 7-4 for the season (2-4 in Yankee Conference), despite all but being out of the playoff picture.

Intrastate rival Boston University's season, though, is a flat out disappointment. The Terriers (2-7 overall, 1-6 YanCon) have plummeted from its ever-successful 1994 campaign, going from a 9-3 NCAA Division I-AA Tournament team a year ago to the current 2-7 squad. After defeating Villanova (21-16) and Maine (40-21), they have dropped seven consecutive contests, including a 28-17 loss to Connecticut.

That spells out last place in the New England Division of the YanCon, despite being picked a consensus third prior to this season. If anything, the Terriers will have the Nickerson Field crowd on their side against the Minutemen tomorrow afternoon (1 p.m.) in Boston, as they shoot for their first win in just under two months.

As for the Minutemen, last week's 24-21 overtime loss at Maine was a heartbreaker. After going 2-3 in the first five tilts, UMass made a run that looked postseason-bound to the hopefuls. Three consecutive victories, including a 20-9 decision over William & Mary, and the Minutemen were on a much-needed roll.

Then came the crushing blow, a 35-yard Chris Binder field goal for the Black Bears, and their playoff chances are now all but obsolete.

Regardless, the Minutemen still have a chance to salvage the season. Senior co-captain and Walter Payton Award candidate Rene Ingoglia, who has amassed 1031 yards and scored 18 touchdowns this season, was the one who fumbled on the first play of the overtime period to turn it over to Maine for the winning drive. That was the first costly error by Ingoglia in recent memory, as the fullback has spent the season closing in on and setting school, conference, and national records.

On the defensive end, no one has turned more heads for his efforts than junior linebacker Justin Reimer. His 118 tackles nearly double UMass' second-place tackler (Khari Samuel — 69), including 76 unassisted. He is also second on the team to Samuel in sacks with six.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Kevin Bourgoin and the UMass football team travels to Nickerson field tomorrow to take on the Terriers of Boston University.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 48 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, November 13, 1995

LeDuc clutch again for Minutewomen
Rachel LeDuc scored the 12th game-winning goal of her career win a NCAA first round victory over Hartford (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

"Sex is Not a Game" provides info & fun
The "Sex Is Not a Game" card game provides information about sex, pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases (see story, page 3).

Returning to Folk roots
Ben Harper entertained Pearl Street this past Friday night as part of the Northampton Club Crawl (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Get out your scarfs and mittens — it will be cold today, lows in the upper 20s, with increasing cloudiness and a 40 percent chance of snow this evening. Tuesday will arrive with more snow.

HIGH: 42	HIGH: 45	HIGH: 45
LOW: 31	LOW: 35	LOW: 30

Two protests held outside new Hadley video store

By Humphrey brown III and Daymion Smith
Collegian Staff

"One, two, three, four — we don't want your porno store..." was one of the chants heard from students, protesting the opening of the Adults Only Video Store in a rally last Friday, held just outside of the store on Route 9. The rally was organized by the Everywoman's Center to demonstrate their disapproval of the store's presence and of pornography in general.

"They sell underground pornography of women being raped," said Heather Foran, one of the organizers for the rally. "Pornography perpetuates violence against women."

The driving mechanism behind the rally was the violence that pornography allegedly promotes. Supporters and members of the Everywoman's Center came to let passing motorists know of their views. Along with the women, a couple men showed up to show their support as well. Ben Waterman, a UMass student shared the women's opinions on violence in pornography.

"I was raised to equate the reading of pornography as the coming of age of a man," Waterman said. "I think it's bogus. If you turn women into a 'thing,' violence is inevitable."

Yet with every issue, there are two sides and the other side made their presence known last Friday as well in an anti- rally for pornography and the Adults Only Video Store, directly across from the anti-porn demonstrators. With signs that read, "I love porn" and "Honk if you love porn," the pro-pornography supporters made a territorial stand as well as a political one as they occupied the area directly in front of the video store, causing the anti-porn demonstrators to move down. Damien Weaver, a Hampshire College student and organizer of the anti-rally, explains the reasons behind the counter protest.

"I organized the counter protest, because in this country there is a concerted effort to make people feel ashamed about their sexuality, gay or straight," Weaver said. "I believe pornography and masturbation to be a healthy, fulfilling part of a person's overall sex life."

Although outnumbered, the pro-pornography demonstrators managed to draw a good number of supporters.

"I read in the Collegian that there was a protest, so a bunch of us came to support America's amendments' first right," said Stephanie Cote, a Hampshire College student. "I'm against exploitation, but we live in a country where it's one conscious decision to exploit any talent they have when it is within the law. Pornography is legal and should continue to be," Cote said.

The two demonstrations going on at the same time caused confusion among some of the passing motorists, who couldn't distinguish between the two groups. As a result, many cars would pass by one set of protesters, honk for them, then honk again when they passed by the others not realizing that the two were different. Even though the anti- pornography demonstrators were surprised by the presence of the counter rally, there was a mutual respect given and no animosity was shown.

"I'm a community woman from

Turn to PROTEST, page 2

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Students who planned a rally against the Adults Only Video store in Hadley were met with opposition by students in support of pornography.

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Students from the Five College area rally against the new adult pornography store located in Hadley.

Five-College profs. discuss trade wars

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

International trade, through the course of the twentieth century, has become a primary source of conflict amongst nations — a phenomenon discussed by a Five-College panel at Amherst College Thursday night.

Beth Yarbrough and Daniel Barbezat of Amherst College and Dennis Yasutomo of Smith College spoke on "Trade Wars," a event sponsored by the Five-College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

While Yarbrough, a professor of economics, said that exact definitions remain ambiguous, she defined a trade war as "one country using its trade policy in the efforts to force another country to change its trade policy."

In recent years, most notably since the end of the Cold War, global trading patterns have changed substantially. Yarbrough cited countries in Eastern Europe, which have replaced their communist systems with Westernized, free- market economies.

"Developing countries as a whole have dramatically opened as well," using examples in Latin America and South East Asia.

This evolving system of trade poses new challenges to exporting nations, and has had its effects, domestically speaking, on the political landscape within the United States, Yarbrough said.

"Politicians often claim that their trade wars are fighting unfair trade practices," abroad, Yarbrough said. This reasoning was used by American policy makers earlier this summer, when the US threatened severe restrictions on Japanese luxury auto imports if they did not open their market to increased US goods.

Moves such as these, Yarbrough said, are motivated by those who see foreign competition as a threat to domestic job market security. This theory, however, "clashes rather directly with simple economics."

The economy "is not manipulated by a single trade policy," Yarbrough said. Trade, in actuality, transfers jobs within a country from one internal market to the next, shaped by the nature of external competition.

This fact, in turn, means that, while trade wars can protect, and hence, work to the advantage of one sector of the economy, it comes at the expense of another sector, or the entire economy in general, Yarbrough said. "There is always a price to be paid."

The future of trade wars will depend on improvements in what Yarbrough refers to as "dispute resolving mechanisms" within the World Trade Organization (WTO), created by a provision in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

"International trade should start working better," Yarbrough concluded.

Barbezat, a professor of economics, shared the views of his colleague from Amherst by emphasizing that trade should not be seen as a threat by countries such as the US.

"The mayhem of trade wars

Turn to TRADE, page 2

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

UConn, get ready...
The UMass women's soccer team celebrates its double overtime victory against Hartford in the first round of the NCAA tournament on Saturday (See Sports, page 12).

Project works for equal schools

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

The National Coalition for Equality in Learning (NCEL), a project started by a University of Massachusetts professor, held a conference in Montgomery, Alabama on Oct. 26 to discuss the problem of inequality of academics in our nation's schools.

The NCEL is an innovative reform effort headquartered at UMass. Dr. Robert Sinclair, a professor of education at the University, who started the project five years ago, serves as the Coalition's director. Sinclair and five UMass graduate students lead this experiment, funded by the Danforth Foundation.

"The NCEL is hope for any student who, for whatever reason, is not succeeding in the existing system," said graduate student David Raker.

The NCEL's work is centered around seeing where changes can be made to help the students realize their potential, Raker said.

The meeting in Montgomery involved educators from all of the eight NCEL school districts, which includes 75 diverse elementary and secondary schools.

"The meeting, which was titled: 'On Equal Terms: Improving Our Nation's Schools,'" was designed to be an exchange of ideas. Educators from across the country could compare notes on problems they face in their individual school system and the progress they are making there, in order to help all the people learn well.

"Dr. Sinclair invited people from each of the districts to write papers to present at the meeting," Mensing-Triplett said. "This was an effort to bring together theory and practice, to look carefully at the practices the schools have engaged in to meet the needs of marginal students."

According to Sinclair, the problems of inequality facing many students today is seen as a civil rights question, and the Montgomery meeting concentrated on this theme.

"Montgomery is known as the birthplace of the civil rights movement," said John Eberhart, superintendent of Montgomery's public school system. "That was the reason we had the meeting there."

Eberhart also noted that the present condition of Montgomery schools made the site of the meeting appropriate.

"In Montgomery's public school system, 60 percent of our students come from impoverished households, and 90 percent of the Coalition schools are impoverished," he said.

Sinclair agreed with Eberhart's correlation between socio- economic deprivation and learning difficulties.

"We are finding that when students are not successful in their learning, many of them happen to be African-American and hispanic kids from poor homes," Sinclair said.

The problems that these students face varies greatly, and the Coalition's goal is to solve each problem individually, dealing with the problem one-on-one, Sinclair said.

"The Coalition helps educators to help themselves," he said. "We want to build the school's capacity to recognize its own distinct problems, and give educators insight to their own solutions."

The Coalition is encouraging learning in Montgomery by working with teen-age parents to help them finish school. They have also started a tutorial

Turn to SCHOOLS, page 2

Debate tournament hosted by Mount Holyoke College

By Amy H. Poradysz
Collegian Staff

SOUTH HADLEY — "I'm exhausted," said Sandra Rengel, the Mt. Holyoke College senior who directed a 40- team debate tournament at the college this past weekend.

Debaters came to Mt. Holyoke from as near as Amherst College and as far as the University of Alberta, Canada, for an Oxford-style contest, in preparation for the World's Debate Tournament in Cork, Ireland later in the year.

The 40 participating teams of two needed the practice because American parliamentary debate is different from the Oxford-style which will be used in Ireland. American debate focuses on content and argumentation, as opposed to Oxford-style debate, which according to Rengel, emphasizes a speaker's verbal skills, including wit. Other differences between the two styles include the way subjects are chosen, and the number of teams speaking in one debate.

After two days of debate, the final round Saturday featured four teams — two for the proposition and two for the opposition — debating the resolution: "This house will give land for peace."

The proposition team applied that to a real situation, saying that Russia should give land to Chechnya. The opposition put forward several objections to that proposal. According to Rengel, they argued that giving freedom to a piece of a country could lead to the disintegration of that country. Also, Rengel said, they asked whether it is possible to assess if the majority in that region, as to opposed to just the leaders, want to be separate.

> "I think that preparing such an event really tests your organizational skills and your leadership skills. Even if you plan everything... you're going to have to make a judgement every five minutes."
> – Sandra Rengel

In the end, Fordham University's A team took the first place trophy, followed by Western Ontario University in second, University of Connecticut in third and Columbia University's C team in fourth.

Mt. Holyoke, as the host, didn't get any Oxford-style practice from this tournament, but Rengel said they probably will not send a team to the World's Tournament.

"Debate is an expensive sport," Rengel said. It costs about $100 for a two-person team to compete in the average tournament, she said.

Although, Rengel said Mt. Holyoke probably won't be able to afford to send a team to the World's, they plan to send one to the National's and the North America's Tournaments.

The Mt. Holyoke Debate Society made a $2,500 profit this weekend, and it got an opportunity to use some non-debate related talents.

"I think that preparing such an event really tests your organizational skills and your leadership skills," Rengel said. "Even if you plan everything... you're going to have to make a judgement every five minutes."

For example, when one of the participants thought she had chicken pox, Rengel decided to temporarily place someone else in charge of the debate and personally take the woman to see a doctor.

Mt. Holyoke has had a College Debate Society since 1896. The current 20-person group, with Rengel as vice-president, competes in regional contests almost every weekend. The student-run American Parliamentary Debate Association asked the Society to run this year's tournament.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Nov. 13

Workshop — The Mather Career Center presents the first part of "It's Worth the Loot," a three part workshop series on job opportunities. The workshop series will be in the Malcolm X Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Food Drive — As part of MASSPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Week activities, food drive begins today running through Friday. For more information call 545-0199

Meeting — UMass Update is holding its news meeting at 7 p.m. at UVC–TV 19 located behind the Hatch. All those interested in reporting, writing and technical crew are welcome to attend. Any questions, call UVC–TV News Department at 545-1336

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program, will be discussing "Coping at Home and School." The group meets in the Psychological Services Center on the first floor of Tobin at 7 p.m.

Film & Lecture — Boricuas Unidos presents a film and lecture in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 14

Meeting — The TEAMS Project is having a recruitment meeting this evening, 4:30–6 p.m. in Campus Center Room 165–169. Also visit the TEAMS table on the Campus Center Concourse today through Thursday. For more information contact Robyne Jenkins at 545–1118 or 545-0945

Supermarket Sweep — MASSPIRG will be distributing "wish lists" at local supermarkets and collecting items upon exiting the supermarket. The wish lists will contain items needed by local shelters and soup kitchens. For more information call 545-0199.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program, will be discussing "Holidays and Anniversaries." The group meets in the Psychological Services Center on the first floor of Tobin at 7 p.m.

Reception — The Latin American Cultural Center presents a reception for Coro de la Universidad Politecnica de Puerto Rico this evening.

Wednesday, Nov. 15

Meeting — For anyone interested in studying France next year, students and faculty who have participated in UMass' Academic Year in Paris/Rouen program will talk about their experiences and answer questions. 6:30 p.m., 301 Herter Hall. For more information contact Jenny, 546–7361

Women's Studies — Women's Studies students are invited to attend an event focusing on course offerings for the spring semester. Faculty will give brief presentations on upcoming courses and the course offerings guide will be available, 4:30–6 p.m. in the Women's Studies Lounge in Bartlett 208A. For more information call 545–1922.

Skip-A-Meal — MASSPIRG is encouraging students on the University meal plan to volunteer to skip dinner at the Dining Halls. Food Services has agreed to refund each skipped meal and donate the proceeds to a local soup kitchen.

Hunger Banquet — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a banquet held at Earthfood at 6 p.m. illustrating the pattern of global food distribution. Speakers will be present as well as live music. Cost is $4. For more information call 545–0199.

Musical — The UMass Theater Guild presents Chess, an 80s pop-rock musical by Tim Rice, Bjorn Ulvaeus, Benng Anderson and Richard Nelson. The show will be in Bowker Auditorium through Nov. 18 and the curtain is at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or at the FAC box office. $4 for students and $6 for the general public.

Games Night — There will be dominoes & Briscas at the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. this evening.

Lecture — The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series will present Professor Raymond S. Bradley in "Climatic Changes: Past, Present, and Future" at 4 p.m. in Thompson Hall Room 104. The event is free.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five-College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions Should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016, The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

■ trade

continued from page 1

seduces you to think that their is something adversarial about trade," Barbezat said. "We trade because we want stuff— some of that stuff comes from foreign countries. There is nothing wrong with that."

Global trade agreements made in the aftermath of the Second World War, were, generally speaking, "trying to diminish the protectionist," ideology, Barbezat said.

This trend however, said Barbezat, has begun to reverse itself as nations suffering from economic woes turn inward, becoming less enthusiastic about the prospects of foreign involvement in their respective economy.

Yasutomo, a professor of government, focused his discussion on US–Japan trade relations, and the changing nature of the relationship between these two nations.

The US occupation of the Japanese homeland in 1945, said Yasutomo, created a new Japan which included a very Americanized economic system.

"The US saw itself as the superior partner," in their efforts to rebuild Japan, encouraged by, a "occupational mentality," ingrained in the US, said Yasutomo. "Americans got used to telling Japan what to do," he added.

The election of President Clinton, who was educated in the 1960s and not directly after the end of WWII, has been a diving factor in the way the US now views Japan — as a economic power and competitor, Yasutomo said.

"The US no longer feels the need to be the benevolent mentor," Yasutomo said, suggesting a reason for increased tensions evident between the countries in their most recent trade disputes.

Friction, therefore, is an "accepted and permanent" element in US–Japan trade relations. While the US sees "keeping up the pressure," as a means for success in trade wars, Japan finds a hard–line stance their best defense against US interests, Yasutomo said.

■ schools

continued from page 1

program for elementary school students in danger of failing, and have opened a Parent Center, where parents can come and learn how to help their students succeed in school.

According to the educators in Montgomery, the NCEL has had much success in its five year history. According to Eberhart, test results in the Montgomery public school system are up for the first time in five years.

The Coalition also has received help from Dr. Camille Cosby, wife of comedian Bill Cosby, who has funded the Coalition for two years to help teen mothers, and Dr. Betty Shabazz, widow of Malcolm X, who serves on the advisory board.

The reason the NCEL exists was best put by Sinclair in a paper he co–authored with Robert Shapiro.

"We are not all equally guilty of the problems of inequality that some children experience in our schools," they wrote. "But we are equally responsible for creating conditions in schools that help all youngsters realize their personal and academic promise."

Any students who wish to volunteer their services can contact Marco Basaccia at 545–3642.

■ protest

continued from page 1

Northampton and I'm out here because I believe that pornography promotes violence against women," said demonstrator Patricia Mato–Meijer. "I think that it's fine that supporters are here for pornography. It's a democratic process. They need to express their opinion like we have to express ours."

The owner of the store was unavailable for comment.

The debate over the presence of the Adults Only Video Store in Hadley is continuing. Currently, the video store has a 15 year lease and is protected under the law to sell pornography.

It is rumored that more than 1,000 people from Hadley have entered the Adults Only Video store. There have been no accounts disputing that number.

Arts & Living

So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You like it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike – you just have to do it.

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.

• NEED CAR

• CALL RYAN AT

545-3500

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents

A Spectacular Sports Extra

The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview

Coming to a newstand near you December 6, 1995

LOOK FOR IT!

'Sex is Not a Game' gives information; sex, pregnancy & disease are discussed

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Sex is not a game, or maybe it is. There is a new card game available for students which teaches them about sex, pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

"Sex is Not a Game" was created by a group of parents in the Cincinnati area in conjunction with doctors.

"We got together and started discussing problems with sex education," said Theresa Rahe, Dealt Seriously Co. national sales representative and parent. "We thought children and teenagers would learn a lot through a game."

According to a Dealt Seriously press release, 17 to 30– year–olds — the primary target audience of the game — constitute the fastest growing group of AIDS cases.

"The response to 'Sex is Not a Game' has been phenomenal and we have received great positive feedback," said Dan Dugan, Dealt Seriously's director of marketing.

Orders have been coming in from across the nation and even from as far as Puerto Rico, Rahe said.

Results of test marketing with students has been excellent, according to Dugan.

"My friends and I thought we knew everything about sex until we played the game," said Eric West, a sophomore at the University of Cincinnati. "We had a great time learning that we were wrong."

The game focuses on three primary areas of interest: pregnancy, sex and sexually transmitted diseases.

Rahe said the game took two to three years to develop, and the answer to every question has been extensively researched and approved by a doctor.

The game includes questions like: "the average child molester is 65. True or False?" The answer is false, the average age of a pedophile is 33 years–old.

There are about 900 cards, and every card is color coded for the three focus areas. The cards come in an easy to carry, durable, hard plastic box.

Dealt Seriously donates profits from the game to sex education programs across the nation.

Rahe said the game is currently unavailable through retailers because they want to keep the price down, but Dealt Seriously hopes to eventually sell the game through college bookstores. Despite the lack of retail support, Rahe said they are beginning to see sales rise as the holidays approach.

The game costs $34.25 which includes the five dollar shipping charge, and can be ordered through 1–800–887– GAME.

Rahe said a computer version is currently in the works.

ROMEY RIBITZKY/COLLEGIAN

Stress relief...

Freshman Josef Geiger, a film major, and Tina Fabian, a classics major, write some of their thoughts on the wall while waiting for their food at Sweets and More Snackbar in Orchard Hill.

Monday, Nov. 13 3 p.m. ($2) 7, 9:30 p.m. ($3)
At the Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by Sylvan Area Government

• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental

North Amherst Motors CARSTAR

78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid

for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail

Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!

Jonathan Reid

The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!

GOTTA BE A PEER EDUCATOR

Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

PEER HEALTH EDUCATION II & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 549-2671 Ext. 181.
Class will meet on Wednesdays from 2 - 4:30 PM.
Priority is given to those who meet with the instructor before November 17th.

HOT MAMA'S

The Valley's Favorite Salsa, Dips & Hummus

Available at
UMass People's Market

November Special
50¢ off with Scan Saver at Stop & Shop

Also Available at Bread & Circus and Other Fine Stores Throughout the Valley

WANTED!
T.V. NEWS REPORTERS

UMASS UPDATE
is looking for crew members reporters, and writers.
No experience necessary.

If interested, come to the News meetings every Monday at 7:00 P.M. at UVC-TV 19.
Located behind the Hatch in the Student Union Building

Any questions, call the News Department at 545-1336

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

New Course:
Economics 190J
Comparison of the US & Japanese Economies.

This Course Carries SBD Credit.

SBD designation accidentally omitted it in the Schedule Booklet. See the Course Description Guide in the Pre-registration Guide for more information about the course.

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

FolkTree and LampLighter present

O.J. SIMPSON TRIAL PROSECUTOR

Christopher Darden

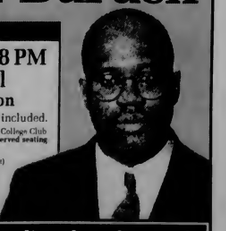
IN PERSON

Saturday November 18th • 8 PM
at John M. Greene Hall
Smith College in Northampton

Tickets are $15 student, $20 public or $65 reception included.
$65 ticket includes catered reception with Christopher Darden at Smith College Club (Faculty Center on College Lane) from 6 PM to 7 PM, plus preferential reserved seating
$15 and $20 tickets are general admission

Tickets on sale now at the Northampton Box Office (Thorne's Market)
Charge by Phone (413) 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK

Presented in association with Z-Z0 WHYN News Talk 94 93 WYK-FM



Talking about the trial, the verdict, the aftermath
Followed by questions and answers with the audience

A portion of the proceeds to benefit local shelters for battered women

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Tim White Interim Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gaskey Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Mari Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Tisler Copper News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist

Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Hertz Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Mary Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

An Angel's story

Angel is a real person and her story is true. Names and places have been changed because Angel and her children are minors.

My name is Angel.

I'll be 16 in two months. I live — I guess you would call it living — on the streets, but I sleep wherever I can. I do dates down in Alphabet City to get by.

I know you think it's bad I do dates, but I'm not doing it to buy drugs or anything. I'm just trying to save some money so that I can get an apartment for me and my kids.

They're livin' with my ma and Charlie, and I just wanna get them out of there. Emmett's four years old and Bea, that short's for Beatrice, is gonna be two in three days. My ma asked me why I named 'em with such old people names and I said, "Ma, I looked at 'em and they had old eyes so I had to give 'em old names." She just shook her head and called me her crazy Angel.

Marni E. Helfner

I lived with my ma for as long as I could remember. She always said my dad was someone I didn't have to remember 'cause he sure didn't remember me. Then one day she brought home Charlie and said he was my daddy. She said I should be happy he remembered us and that he had come home to take care of us and to ain't give him no mouth.

I'll never forget what he said when he met me. "You're such a beautiful Angel — I hope that you'll bring me to the heaven." My girl Jenny said that he didn't sound like no dad, and I gotta say that it did sorta make my skin crawl.

Anyway, Charlie was real good to us for a little bit. My ma was always smiling, and we always "had food on the table," like she said. Charlie always brought me home a new dress or a chocolate rabbit or a new set of stickers, and he always gave me that sticky smile and touched me on the shoulder.

I don't know if Charlie is my real dad, but I hope he ain't. Like I said, he was real nice up until he lost his job and started fighting with my ma. She got herself a job and wasn't home when I got home from school, but Charlie was there. It all started out one day when I came home crying 'cause I got a D on my math test, and I didn't want my ma to find out. I knew she would give me a whooping and so I kept on crying. Charlie started to give me hugs to make me feel better.

Next thing I knew, he was kissing me and pushing me down on the couch. I tried to push him off but he said, "God dammit, your ma won't give me any, so I'll get it where ever I can." I was so scared and felt so dirty that I just sat there and cried. When he was done, he got up and said, "You don't need to be telling anyone about this. Every daddy does this with his little girl, and you don't need to be telling the whole neighborhood. If you keep this a secret, I'll keep your test a secret."

I was so scared about the test. I felt so ashamed that I didn't say nothing. But Charlie just kept at it, everyday, until my belly started to grow. My ma asked me who I been sleeping with, and I just shook my head no. I wasn't gonna tell her. She wanted me to give that baby up, but I said no, his name's Emmett and he's gonna stay with me. She said I was crazy, but OK. I was gonna have to take care of it.

Charlie looked after Emmett while I was at school, but when I came home I could see that he wasn't takin' care of him. Emmett would be in the same diaper I'd left him in that morning and he'd be screaming hungry. When I asked Charlie why he wasn't takin' care of Emmett he just slapped me and called me ungrateful. Then he'd make me get on the couch. That's how I got Bea.

Again my ma asked me who I was sleeping with. I didn't answer her and she slapped me and said, "You know you're not supposed to be going out. Answer me!" When I said, "They're Charlie's — they're both Charlie's!" she slapped me again.

"Don't you dare say such things about your daddy. He's a good man. You're just a little slut, and if that's the way you wanna be, you can just find another place to live."

So that's how I came to be where I am now, doing dates down in Alphabet City. My kids is living with my ma and Charlie, and they're startin' to get big. Emmett is startin' kindergarten next year — he's real smart. Beatrice is startin' to walk. I can't see 'em much as the court says I ain't good for my kids, but I see 'em when my ma takes 'em to the grocery store.

Emmett is nice and tall and Bea has got bright red hair, but they still got those old eyes. My ma wanted to know why I gave 'em old people's names, and I said it was 'cause they got old people's eyes. But I guess that those old people eyes come from the fact that I'm just a crazy angel that got old eyes before I was old.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Hate speech discussed

To the Editor:

I assume that the decision to print Matthew Pugh's editorial was made before this weekend's tragic assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. However it is sad to find the only discussion of hate speech in the Collegian was a plaintive whine from the right that the left is not playing fair. It is very probable that hate speech in Israel, directed toward Prime Minister Rabin, played a large role in the twisted reasoning of the deranged man who killed him.

The Collegian's readers would have been better served by a call to end all speech that demonizes one's political opponents, especially that which brands an opponent worthy of death. While it is the nature of political discourse for people to try to repudiate the claims of opponents, words and actions that call for harm to come to one's opponent are beyond the pale.

I would commend Mr. Pugh's effort at calling to task those individuals on the left who call for harm to befall their opponents on the right. Or for using bellicose words that might lead a dysfunctional person to the thought that violence is even called for or approved of. However, Mr. Pugh chooses not to use his opportunity to call for an end to hate speech, in all its forms and from all its sources. Rather he seems to justify hate speech from the right by citing hate speech from the left.

The lesson that Mr. Pugh should have drawn from his review of hate speech and recent history is that hate speech which dehumanizes your opponents leads to death and destruction. That was the lesson Timothy McVeigh, John Salvi and Paul Hill had so recently taught us. That is the lesson that Yigal Amir is teaching us now.

Gary Rehorka
Amherst

Possible harassment policy disturbing

To the Editor:

For a year and a half the University and the GEO (without involving undergraduates) have been working on a harassment policy which would apply to everybody (including undergraduates). What they have come up with so far is a printed document called "Proposed Harassment Policy." It is a very disturbing paper, and we should not let it become University policy.

The trouble starts with the cover letter. It is written to a long list of people, including undergraduates, and it is dated Sept. 20 1995. These two facts lead me to believe these were going to be mailed out, but a month and a half later I still have not received my copy (However, I did receive the bill for my computer account).

The first section of the proposal tells you that the purpose of the 12-page document is to prohibit harassment. The next section is definitions, and this is where the fun begins. Under the policy: "2) Harassment is defined as verbal or physical conduct that a reasonable person, with the same characteristics as the targeted individual... would find discriminatorily the condition under which the targeted individual or group of individuals participate in the activities of the University... 5) Verbal conduct may include, but is not limited to,... negative stereotyping... [or] material that serves to harass..."

Several serious problems can be found in just this little part. Putting the pieces together, they defined harassment as verbal conduct that serves to harass. This is equivalent to saying that crime is something committed by a criminal. You can see that negative stereotyping is prohibited. I assume that positive stereotypes are still allowed, so please tell me if the statement "blacks are good at playing basketball" is a positive or negative stereotype.

The policy that would apply to "all members of the campus community," which includes the people who teach the classes. Then at the bottom of the page, it says that these people can use whatever material they want, even if it offends someone. This is not the only place the educated (?) minds that produced this document contradict themselves.

If you are accused of breaking the policy, then you have a hearing. The document states that the hearing "is not a court proceeding and the hearing panel will not be bound by the procedures and rules of evidence of a court of law." The Fifth Amendment says that no person may "be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law," and the 14th Amendment says that no state can violate the Fifth Amendment. So, although the federal and state governments cannot take away our right to due process of law, the University can.

There are many more problems with this document. When the time comes (there will supposedly be public forums the week of Nov. 13) voice your dissatisfaction with this proposal, or else next semester we will be in for quite a shock (like mandatory harassment policy education).

Scott Henderson
Southwest

Right to breathe clean air

To the Editor:

This is in response to Jeremy Hurewitz's article "A government smoke screen," which described America's anti-smoking policies as unfair.

The author stated that, "In America, every tight-assed fiber-eating health nut wants to criminalize tobacco and convert us to their cult in which they all live to be 100, eat rice cakes and excrete pebbles with smiles of excitement long absent from their gaunt sagging cheeks."

The amusing images produced by this statement do not make up for its wild inaccuracy. The legislation banning or limiting smoking in public places is justified. That doesn't mean I want to criminalize tobacco. If people want to smoke, that's their business. They have the right to enjoy cigarettes as long as they don't interfere with the public's right to breathe clean air.

He compared current anti-smoking legislation to the government's criminalizing of marijuana 50 years ago. He stated that the studies and the surveys that the government cited were fabricated by the timber industry, which felt threatened by hemp's wide ranging possibilities. He said that the government "played whore to big business and big money."

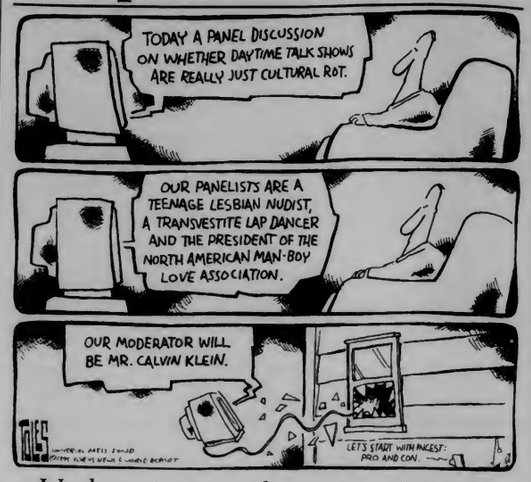
This is quite plausible. However, his suggestion that the government is misleading the public the way it did 50 years ago makes no sense. What industry fabricated the studies that show that second hand smoke is dangerous? Why? What big business is the government playing whore to today?

The list of big businesses that benefit from the use of tobacco is endless. A mountain of evidence shows that tobacco companies know second hand smoke was dangerous and covered it up for decades. Jeremy Hurewitz's argument doesn't support his position, it weakens it.

The government is protecting our right to breathe clean air. It is not taking away our right to enjoy cigarettes.

Adam Sherson
Leverett

Opinion/Editorial



TODAY A PANEL DISCUSSION ON WHETHER DAYTIME TALK SHOWS ARE REALLY JUST CULTURAL ROT.
OUR PANELISTS ARE A TEENAGE LESBIAN NUDIST, A TRANSVESTITE LAP DANCER AND THE PRESIDENT OF THE NORTH AMERICAN MAN-BOY LOVE ASSOCIATION.
OUR MODERATOR WILL BE MR. CALVIN KLEIN.
LET'S START WITH INCEST: PRO AND CON.

Underestimating the power of words

I could not count on my fingers the amount of times I have said things and after the fact have immediately regretted saying them. I'm an anxious, talkative person, and sometimes my mouth works quicker than my mind, which explains why my mother has frequently said to me throughout my life, "If you have nothing nice to say, don't say it all."

As a writer, I have come to learn that words are one of the most powerful things in this universe. They are constantly misused and misinterpreted, and many times are thrown around without a second thought put towards them.

There have been many times I have written letters to people when I was upset with something they have done, and they would write me back responding to me as if we were in a fight. Evidently, my words were misinterpreted and read as if I were angry at them, when I was only expressing hurt, not any kind of anger.

A friend of mine once asked me why I wanted to be a journalist when they constantly have to struggle with reporting facts, and reporting them through their eyes without bias.

Journalists do have a big responsibility in choosing the correct terms within their writing. The words they choose in a story to describe an event, or describe a person, must be consciously chosen to be accurate. This responsibility is the reason why politically correct terms have come to exist and are extremely necessary.

People who say they are sick of political correctness, especially at the University of Massachusetts, really don't know what PC is. The term PC has been abused, and has come to be looked at as a negative term rather than a positive one.

I believe in freedom of speech, and if someone wants to say something that is clearly either full of ignorance or hatred and gets their kicks out of doing it, so be it. But those people need to realize that using politically correct words is not just a matter of being PC, it is a matter of having respect for a particular culture other than their own.

This weekend, I was laying on my couch watching a movie when a friend of mine, who is a lesbian, came in and sat down next to me. She asked me what I was watching and I replied, "Some gay movie." Immediately after I said that, I felt my heart sink into my stomach and looked up at her. She looked at me and said, "Some gay movie, huh?"

But those people need to realize that using politically correct words is not just a matter of being PC, it is a matter of having respect for a particular culture other than their own.

Geri Sahn

I'm glad she didn't let me get away with saying what I said without realizing my ignorant actions. I took a word, and not only misused it, but used it in the most negative way possible. It is incidents like these that make me realize the power of words, and the way particular meanings of them have been internalized into people's vocabulary. And it is due to incidents like these that words need to be presented to the public with a politically correct definition.

I personally can't stand it when the word Jap is thrown around to describe all Jewish females who happen to dress and act a particular way as Jewishness. Although the slander may not be aimed directly to me, it is sexist, and it demeans the Jewish female, which I am.

That night I felt the need to where a big "H" on my chest for hypocrite. I am always advocating respect and the use of PC terminology for the Jewish community, and yet I didn't use it for the homosexual community at that moment. The woman did not hold what I said against me, and she didn't lecture me, but I'm still embarrassed. She deserves respect, as everyone does. And this, PC bashers, is the reason why this country needs to redefine and control words and use.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian columnist.

Murderer one, America nothing

God bless America, my home sweet home. I had to weep today, for yet another part of my beloved country has been lost. It was last spring in the quiet streets of Chapel Hill, North Carolina when tragedy struck not only the lacrosse world, but a large portion of the eastern population.

Kevin Reichardt was riding his bicycle through the University of North Carolina on an otherwise normal day. What Kevin didn't realize was that just up the road ahead awaited a man armed with several semi-automatic rifles. As Kevin passed by, the man took aim, shot, and sent Kevin tumbling to the sidewalk. Severely wounded, Kevin tried to crawl out of the shooter's aim, but was unable to do so.

Matt Pugh

My friend Kevin was shot again and killed in cold-blood. The people that knew him were stunned. How could anyone kill Kevin? He was the guy everyone loved. He was the type of young man that every mother hoped their daughter would marry some day. He was an honor student at Chapel Hill, a member of the varsity lacrosse team, a tremendous contributor to the community and an all around wonderful person.

He had touched so many lives. A reflection of this was easily shown by the thousands of people who attended his funeral, and the six to seven-mile-long car line to the burial. The man that murdered Kevin was a law student who also attended Chapel Hill. Without a crack in his voice or a tear of remorse, the murderer confessed to the killing. His motive was derived from the overwhelming amount of stress associated with being a law student.

On Nov. 8, 1995, Kevin's murderer was found not guilty by way of temporary insanity. Justice was not served and America lost again. (O.J. and Menendez pun intended).

When will this country's judicial system hold people responsible for their actions? When will we learn that regardless of a person's state of mind or mental capacity, they must be punished for their crimes? It seems that Americans are more concerned with the perpetrator than the victim. Kevin was murdered, but the murderer is a victim of society and therefore we must let him go?

This is an outrage. When is murder not murder? I believe that part of this growing judicial blunder is a direct result of the court's failure to acknowledge the presence of the Creator. It seems that the courts have lost the moral capacity to heed the simple divine law of "Thou Shall Not Kill." There is no room for interpretation in this law. It does not state, "thou shall not kill, but if you're temporarily insane then it's O.K."

Even though this country was founded on the freedom of religion, we seem to forget that all of the founding fathers acknowledged the presence of one higher law. "In God we trust," "they are endowed by their Creator," "God shed his grace on thee (America)." We can not overlook this fact. Americans are afraid to stand strong to a principle that holds true for almost all religions. I cannot begin to fathom how a judge and jury could find this diabolical murderer not guilty. I hope the blood of their children will curse their cowardice, for they have let a murderer walk free.

He will walk and breathe the air in this wonderful land as if nothing ever happened. He is free to live the life which young Kevin will never have. Never again will Kevin feel the warm embrace of his father's arms; never again kiss the cheek of his loving mother; never again see the sun rise or set; never pursue another dream; never take another breath; never rest in peace for justice was not served.

This is a splendid country in which to live. No other place in the world has been blessed with opportunity like America. This is the sweet land of liberty, but she's in dire need of spiritual healing. The integrity of her government, her military, her media, and especially her judicial system is slowly withering away. In the name of Kevin we must fulfill our imperative duties to uphold this country and the basic divine truths she was founded upon; lest all will be lost. God save America, my home sweet home.

Matt Pugh is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e-mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

Arts & Living

COURTESY HERB GREENE

Jefferson Starship, an offshoot of Jefferson Airplane (seen here), will bring their authentic and chaotic style to Pearl St. tonight.

Starship to land at Pearl Street

By Robert Grover
Collegian Correspondent

For more than 30 years Paul Kanter has been flying through the music scene, first in Jefferson Airplane, then in its successor the Jefferson Starship.

Tonight he brings the latest incarnation of the Starship, a quartet he which he calls the Acoustic Shuttle Craft, to Pearl Street. The acoustic offshoot of the main group consists of Kanter on vocals/guitar, keyboardist Gary Combra, new vocalist Diana Mangano and veteran Airplane bassist Jack Casady.

They come to town in support of their recent release Deep Space/Virgin Sky and the recently announced induction of Jefferson Airplane into the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame. The acoustic tour is an annual event for the Starship and it offers a selection of past favorite, new music poetry and the unexpected all rolled into what Kanter called, "a celebrated chaos."

Chaos is not new to Kanter as his first band, Jefferson Airplane, was at the epicenter of the counter cultural movement of the 1960s. Between 1965 and 1972 the Airplane provided the soundtrack for the youth movement with eight albums that mirrored the times. Kanter said that, "Rock 'n Roll should be dangerous." Accordingly, he has never followed the prescribed path of rock stardom.

When Airplane finally landed in '72, Kanter didn't remain grounded for very long. He recorded three solo albums, two with former Airplaner Grace Slick. By '74 he had (along with Slick and Airplane co-founder Marty Balin) assembled the band that would become one of the most successful groups of the '70s — Jefferson Starship.

For ten years the Starship was more successful than its predecessors. Starship produced eight albums, had six chart topper singles and sold millions of records. In 1984, Kanter left the group and pursued other interests including a fact finding tour in Nicaragua in '87, but in '91 a renewed interest in song writing and performing prompted him to launch a new Jefferson Starship.

If there has been a center to Kanter's music throughout the years, it has been a constant message of hope wrapped in a running commentary on mankind's condition. Times have certainly changed since he began writing songs and so his methods have evolved.

"I learned not to stand on a soapbox and shout at people," he said.

Kanter describes this Starship as, "post-Einstein, science fiction, rock 'n' roll" all mixed together. While the description is intentionally ambiguous, the messages and urgent observation of the music is not.

Living in an age of artificially colored and flavored chaos where simply dying your hair or piercing your nose is viewed as dangerous, it is comforting to know that someone is still dealing with the genuine stuff.

Jefferson Starship will play Pearl St. tonight. Call the Northampton Box Office at 586-8686 for more information.

Harper brings folk to the Valley

Musician cites variety of musical talent as influences

By Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

BEN HARPER
Pearl Street
Nov. 10

NORTHAMPTON — Ask 26-year-old musical virtuoso Ben Harper what folk music means to him and he will tell you, "to me folk doesn't mean somebody whining on a banjo about a time they don't even know about."

"The soul has been stripped of American folk music, and it's up to us to put the soul back in American folk music, which is what were going to do," Harper continued.

Harper and his band The Innocent Criminals did just that Friday night when they hit the stage at Pearl Street. Harper, who served as his own opening act, played a couple of numbers off of his newest album Welcome To The Cruel World. During "Power Of The Gospel," Harper sang with such power and conviction, the mostly-seated audience seemed to fall under the trance of Harper spiritual words.

Once back on stage with his band, Harper began the real portion of his set. Opening with the "Oppression," Harper's simple acoustic strumming rang as loud as any electric guitar could.

Harper then went into an appropriate cover of "Get Up/Stand Up" bringing the crowd to their feet. The talents of Harper and his band were spotlighted in "Breaking Down" from Welcome To The Cruel World. Throughout the show Harper's bass player and percussionist showcased their solos winning the crowd over. Even Harper had to stop playing and dancing because his back up music was so powerful on the hip hop sounding "Fight For Your Mind".

After playing most of the crowd favorites such as "Whipping Boy," "Gold To Me" and the intimate "Please Me Like You Want To," Harper played the Hendrix tune "Voodoo Chile (Slight Return)" making it all more apparent who his influences are. Then he brought his show to a close with "Burn One Down," an a optimistic sing-along which had the crowd chanting, "I can make peace on earth with my own two hands."

On Friday night Harper was as intense, spiritual and true as ever. Harper, whose voice and guitar playing is so magical on record, is even more effective live. Although he cites Robert Johnson, Blind Willy Johnson, Jimmi Hendrix, Bob Marley and Otis Redding as influences, he still says, "My mom is the greatest singer in the world." But regardless of his musical mentors, it was Harper who moved the crowd.

Ben Harper entranced the crowd at Pearl St. on Friday night.

COURTESY RICK OLIVIER

Boricuas Unidos
The Puerto Rican Student Organization at UMASS Amherst
presents
PUERTO RICAN HERITAGE WEEK
November

Monday 13 — Puerto Rican Identity Up in the Air; Film / Lecture; Professor Alberto Sandoval Sanchez, Mt. Holyoke College; Place: Latin American Cultural Center; Time: 7:00 p.m.

Tuesday 14 — Polytechnic University of Puerto Rico Choir; Place: Bezanson Hall (adjacent to the Fine Arts Center); Time: 8:00 p.m.; Reception to follow at the Latin American Cultural Center.

Wednesday 15 — Workshop on typical/folkloric Puerto Rican music by the Choir; Place: Latin American Cultural Center; Time: 7:00 p.m.

Thursday 16 — Puerto Rican Women's Discussion; relationships between men & women (men encouraged to attend); Lysvette Bleiw, I.I.C.S.W., University Health Services; Place: 174 Campus Center; Time: 6:00 p.m.

Friday 17 — Puerto Rican Heritage Dinner & Dance; Featuring: poetry, typical music/dance; Place: Campus Center Auditorium; Time: 6:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

PUERTO RICAN HERITAGE WEEK CO-SPONSORS: AASA, AHORA, Am Council Bilingual Collegiate Program, Casa Dominicana, Collegian, Concepto Latino, Latin American Cultural Center, Latin American Studies, Office of ALANA Affairs, Student Activities Cultural Enrichment Fund, SGA Finance.

TOC LOUNGE
50¢ Pizza Slices at Halftime
Cleveland at Pittsburgh Tonight at 9pm
FREE Popcorn
Catch All Your Sports At The Top!
Lounge Hours:
Mon-Sat: 4:30pm - 12:30am
11th Floor Campus Center

SEX is...natural ..fun ...best when you can come .. to the:
NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS
nov 8
nov 15
dec 6
dec 13
Mary Lyon
Coolidge
Dickinson
Patterson
8 PM
For more information, call the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

Open Hearing

The Task Force on International Graduate Student Needs and Concerns invites you to an open hearing. Come and share your stories, your ideas, and any suggestions that you may have about campus services for International Graduate Students. All members of the campus community are invited to attend and particpate.

DATES: Thursday-November 16, 1995
Friday-November 17, 1995.
Place: Campus Center Rm. 1009 (Thurs.)
Campus Center Rm. 804-08 (Fri.)
Time: 12 Noon to 1pm

'Niners shock Dallas, move into a first place tie in NFC West

By Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — The defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers aren't dead. Just ask the shocked Dallas Cowboys after the crippled 14-point underdogs whipped them 38-20 Sunday on their home field.

The 49ers, who had lost the last two games, even moved into a tie with St. Louis and Atlanta for the leadership in the NFC West with a 6-4 record. Dallas dropped to 8-2.

This was supposed to be a big revenge game for the Cowboys against the 49ers, who didn't have quarterback Steve Young for a fifth straight week because of a shoulder injury. It was a rout, just as many predicted. Only it was the Cowboys who were outplayed and outcoached.

Second-string quarterback Elvis Grbac and wide receiver Jerry Rice devastated Dallas on the game's first possession.

San Francisco stunned the Cowboys early, much as it did in the NFC championship game when the 49ers built a 21-0 lead in the first 6:25 of the game. The 49ers went on to win 38-28 and eventually defeat San Diego in the Super Bowl.

Rice slipped open behind linebacker Darrin Smith for a slant pass over the middle from Grbac and steamed 81 yards for a touchdown on the second play of the game. Rice confused the Cowboys by lining up in the slot and nobody could catch him until safety Darren Woodson tackled Rice at the goal.

The 49ers struck again 13 seconds later when Michael Irvin fumbled the ball away to Merton Hanks, who scooped it up on the run and dashed 38 yards for a touchdown.

Linebacker Rickey Jackson intercepted a pass off Troy Aikman at the Dallas 27 and the 49ers cashed the mistake into a 26-yard field goal by Jeff Wilkins, a free agent who was picked up during the week. It gave San Francisco a 17-0 lead with only 4:58 expired.

Marino sets record, but Pats win

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Two deflected passes bounced New England's way, and the Patriots spoiled Dan Marino's record-setting day. Marino threw for 333 yards and broke Fran Tarkenton's NFL career record for passing yardage Sunday, but Ben Coates caught a pass deflected by a teammate for the tie-breaking score to help New England beat the Miami Dolphins 34-17.

Marino's last chance to tie the game ended early in the fourth quarter when he caught his own pass — his first career reception — for a 6-yard loss on fourth down after the throw was deflected by Chris Slade.

Two late New England scores, one following a Marino interception, clinched the Patriots' first victory at Joe Robbie Stadium since 1988.

"We had some good fortune today, but we played well," Patriots coach Bill Parcells said. "That was by far our best performance of the year."

New England improved to 4-6. Miami fell to 6-4, one game behind first-place Buffalo in the AFC East.

"We had high expectations coming into today," Miami coach Don Shula said. "We felt healthy and we were playing well, but we didn't do it."

Marino completed 27 of 37 passes and threw for two scores, but he was intercepted twice and lost a fumble on a sack to set up Coates' 8-yard score. Bernie Kosar replaced Marino for the final three minutes of the game.

"Breaking Fran's record, one of the all-time great passers, is something special to me," Marino said. "Unfortunately, the thing is, you want to win the games that you're playing when you're breaking records."

Marino surpassed Tarkenton's career record for completions earlier this season, but Miami lost that game, too. He needs three touchdown passes to top Tarkenton's record of 342 in that category. While the Dolphins had a record-breaking quarterback, New England had rookie Curtis Martin and veteran Matt Bahr. Martin rushed for 142 yards against the NFL's second-best run defense, and Bahr kicked two field goals, including a 55-yarder, the longest of his 17-year pro career.

Drew Bledsoe threw two touchdown passes, increasing his total this season to five. A 47-yarder to Vincent Brisby — Bledsoe's longest completion of the year — gave New England a 17-10 lead in the third quarter.

Later in the period came the scoring pass that put the Patriots ahead to stay. On third down from the Miami 8, Bledsoe threw over the middle to Dave Meggett at the 4, and the ball slipped through his hands to Coates, who was a yard deep in the end zone to give New England a 24-17 lead.

"We practice that," Parcells joked. "We work on it." "These things are going to happen," Shula said. "We have to overcome them."

The score came after Troy Barnett recovered a Marino fumble at the 7 forced by Willie McGinest. Miami tried to come back, driving to the New England 29. But on fourth down, Brown batted Marino's pass back to the quarterback, and he was immediately tackled for a loss by McGinest.

The Patriots then mounted an eight-play drive capped by Martin's 1-yard run. Bahr clinched the victory with a 47-yard field goal after Myron Guyton's interception.

The Patriots had failed to score a touchdown in their past two games versus Miami. But Martin scored twice in the first 100-yard rushing effort against the Dolphins this year.

"Early in the week I said he wasn't in the same class as Marshall Faulk," said Miami defensive end Jeff Cross. "Ask me about him now."

Bahr gave New England momentum with his 55-yard field goal, which came on the final play of the first half to make the score 10-10. "It's like a pitcher batting," said Bahr, 39. "No one expects you to hit it, so you just swing hard."

The kick followed Meggett's 62-yard kickoff return with 14 seconds left. An ill-advised timeout by Marino one play before the kickoff gave New England time to score.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect. You dial 1 800 CALL ATT. Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.®
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.™

AT&T
Your True Choice

© 1995 AT&T

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$140	$280
PARIS	$175	$350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$220	$439
TOKYO		$859

Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs/immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e)/1 Waivers
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
National Interest/Extraordinary Ability
Reliance Petitions
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1500 Main Street, 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01115 — 413-781-6770
10 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060 — 413-586-3535

■ women's soccer

continued from page 12

LeDuc and Karin Johnson flashed to the front of the net to where they anticipated the ball landing, as did Rotondi. It was LeDuc who won the race as the ball glanced off her head, and in what seemed like slow-motion, rolled into the far corner with 1.4 ticks left on the clock.

"Unbelievable. Amazing," the Longmeadow native said after scoring her 12th game-winner of her collegiate career. "I'm so happy we won. I think I would have been scarred for life [if we lost]."

It was LeDuc's 18th goal of the season. That eclipsed Natalie Prosser's record for most goals in a single season by a Minutewoman. The senior downplayed her accomplishment. "The goals don't matter," she said. "As long as we win."

From the get-go, UMass controlled the majority of action outshooting the Hawks 7-3. Danielle Dion didn't have to make a save in the UMass net all half. That was not the case for Rotondi.

LeDuc, Lynch and Myers all had scoring chances early in the contest while the Hartford netminder turned them away, then caught a break when UMass appeared to take the lead.

Johnson found Lynch streaking down the right flank, and after beating two Hartford defenders, Lynch sent a shot to the far post. The low, line-drive beat Rotondi, but Myers was offside on the play and touched the ball before it crossed the goalline, nullifying the play. The called back goal did not dampen UMass' spirits, as the Minutewomen continued their assault on the Hartford defense. Eight minutes later, UMass got one that counted.

On what seemed to be a harmless play, LeDuc attempted a cross that was deflected by McKensie. The Hartford defender header was intended to clear the crossbar, but the wind played havoc with the ball, and it dropped just under the bar. The game then was left in the hands of a more than capable UMass defense.

The winning formula for UMass has been strong play from the backfield of Lynch, Nikki Ahrenholz, Erica Iverson and Amanda Thompson. The four defenders kept the potent trio of Churma, Jessica Reifer and Irene Stelling to just one quality scoring chance in regulation. Unfortunately for UMass, that one chance beat Dion in the final minute.

Reifer attempted a pass that Iverson blocked, but could not control. Churma took the ball away from the sophomore, turned, fired and deposited the ball just inside the left post.

"I didn't even stop to look," Churma said. "I just knew I had to get it close to the net and it went in."

In the first extra session both teams exchanged golden scoring opportunities, but Dion and Rotondi were up to the challenge. During the second overtime with the absence of Myers in the middle, Hartford nearly broke the tie.

Reifer took a pass out of the midfield and made a run to the top of the box. From there, she let go a cannon that hit the right post flush, sending the ball straight back out in the pitch in front of Dion. The ball was cleared away, but the Hawk halfback would be heard from again.

With Myers hobbling in her return to action, Reifer collected a loose ball 22 yards out and sent a shot toward the UMass goal. Dion appeared to jump too early, but with her second effort, got her fingertips on the ball, sending it just over the crossbar, which set the stage for LeDuc's heroics.

As the Minutewomen celebrated, the final chapter of the Hawk's season had been written, and UMass has at least one more scene in its script.

■ LeDuc

continued from page 12

take a lot out of any player, including LeDuc, whose calves started to tense up midway through the second overtime period. But the Longmeadow native wasn't about to let it affect her game.

"That's what usually happens during those tense situations, my calves start to tense up," LeDuc said. "But it was all or nothing at that point, so I just went for it."

Watching LeDuc constantly attacking the ball, one wouldn't think that she was tired at all.

"I watched her out there, she probably slid-tackled more than any of our defenders did," Rudy said.

"This [was] everyone's last game on Garber Field considering they're going to build a new stadium next year, and I knew this was my last collegiate soccer game at UMass, so it was all or nothing," LeDuc said. "I think I would have been scarred for life [if we lost]. We totally dominated that game."

The domination by the Minutewomen was apparent, but without LeDuc, it could have went for naught.

"She has that knack. I'd like to go back and see what we've had for game-winning goals for her career, it would be interesting," Rudy said. "She's just one mentally tough kid. Anyway you spell it, she's a winner, big-time winner. She knows how to win. She lays it all out and when it's done, it's done. Win or lose, you know you've gotten 120 percent out of Rachel LeDuc."

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

[From left to right] Erica Iverson, Amy Powell, Karin Johnson and Erin Lynch celebrate their thrilling 2-1 overtime victory over Hartford on Saturday.

Because today is mystery meat day.

It's everywhere you want to be.™

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995

RUSH ΒΘΒ

The only fraternity on campus that lets you haze yourself!

- Beta Theta Beta -
103 Campus Center

"I HATE MONDAYS" SPECIAL
Bring in this ad to receive
$4off HAIRCUTS
(REGULARLY $14-17)
ON MONDAYS DURING NOVEMBER ONLY!
256-0138
103 N. Pleasant
AMHERST
(next to Bart's)
HAIR EAST

Surviving the Holidays:
Two support Groups Offered by the Mental Health Division of the University Health Services.

Eating, Body Image, and the Holidays
This 4 session support group meets
Mondays 12:30 - 2:00 PM
November 13, 20, 27 & December 4
Meetings will be held in the Campus Center.
Family problems, numerous food centered events, expectations to "look good" and feel joyful all contribute to the pressures many feel at this time of year. If you find that negative feelings about food and body image intensify around the holidays, this is a group where you can share your concerns and learn some coping strategies.

Which Home For The Holidays?
This 4 session support group meets
Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 PM
November 15, 29 & December 6, 13
This group for students from divorced or separated families will examine coping strategies to deal with the particular stresses that occur at the holidays when families are no longer together. Attendance at all 4 sessions is expected.

Preregistration required for both groups.
To register call 545-2337
8:00AM - 5:00 PM, Monday - Friday

■ football

continued from page 12

catch him. That's the way we feel by it."

Alessio, like another running back in the UMass backfield has done in the past, downplayed his record-setting effort, and was more pleased with the victory.

"I'm glad we won this game, we needed this game," Alessio said. "We needed our sixth win, it guarantees us a winning season. I was lucky today. They were stuffing inside all day and a couple of long runs, it adds up quickly. Nothing fancy, it was just straight out running."

Alessio's third touchdown of the day, the 75-yard score, put the Minutemen up 28-16. On the very next drive, BU quarterback Kevin Foley culminated a 55-yard drive with a one-yard touchdown to move the Terriers to within five points. The Terriers had two more drives, but were unsuccessful in both attempts.

The first half was more back-and-forth, due to turnovers. Fumble BU recovered by UMass. UMass pass intercepted by BU. Fumble UMass, recovered by BU. A pass by BU, intercepted by UMass. UMass pass intercepted by BU. All in the first half alone. However, two of Alessio's three game- breaking runs came in the first two quarters, thus giving the Minutemen the momentum.

Boston University coach Dan Allen saw one possible way his Terriers, now 2-8 overall and 1-7 in YanCon play, could have beaten UMass.

"Maybe if we had a 12th guy," Allen said. The Terriers offense rode behind the arm of Kevin Foley (brother Glenn is current NY Jet quarterback), who completed 33 passes on 49 attempts for 375 yards and a touchdown. Sophomore Julian Dale also managed to rush for 102 yards on 23 carries.

But in a game of big plays, the Minutemen had the edge.

"Everytime they earned a touchdown, we just turned the ball back with our offense and found a way to put it into the endzone," Hodges said. "Every time we gave up a touchdown, we responded offensively."

Minuteman notes: Alessio's big day got him both the ECAC and Yankee Conference Player of the Week awards ... The Minutemen, ranked 119th in Division I-AA in passing (out of 119 teams), attempted seven passes, as sophomore Anthony Catterton went 3-7 for 15 yards and two interceptions.

UMass' rushing attack keys another victory

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Throughout the 1995 Massachusetts football campaign, the Minutemen have based its offense on running the ball. Each week, a UMass running back will do something spectacular.

"We have had great depth in the backfield all year long," UMass coach Mike Hodges acknowledged. "We bring a different guy in there every time and we win, it seems like."

Usually, it is senior Rene Ingoglia who has done just about everything possible in a four-year collegiate career. He is a co-captain, the all-time UMass and Yankee Conference rushing leader, he holds 10 UMass records, and will be playing in the Hula Bowl with the best college football players in the country — regardless of division.

In a nutshell, Ingoglia has rushed for over 1,000 yards for the third straight season and has 19 touchdowns. The numbers speak for themselves.

Three weeks ago in a victory over Lehigh, redshirt freshman Matt Jordan set a school record for yards per carry. He carried the ball six times and amassed 174 yards, averaging 29 yards per carry. With Ingoglia graduating and pursuing his NFL dream, a UMass football fan can feel comfortable with Jordan filling the void left by the UMass legend.

In a game last season, Ingoglia ran all over a Rhode Island defense piling up an astronomical total of 313 yards. The number set a new mark breaking the old record, which stood for 42 years. Running that many yards in a single game would not enter the thoughts of any back at any level. Saturday, junior tailback Frank Alessio did the unthinkable.

The Minutemen went to the turf of Nickerson field to face the Boston University Terriers, in a game between two differently styled offenses. Each team possessed a key ingredient which the other team was looking to contain. UMass won the battle, edging the Terriers 28-23 in front of the 6,095 in attendance.

BU boasts an excellent passer in Kevin Foley (younger brother of former BC Eagle and current New York Jet, Glenn Foley). Foley and the Terriers had been averaging 280 passing yards per game prior to Saturday, and the Minutemen focused on stopping the aerial assault.

UMass has the ground game, led by Ingoglia.

"The ball was in the air all day and when they do that, you will make some plays," Hodges said. "The defense hung in there and made the plays we had to make."

With the Minutemen expecting the pass all day, BU looked to other offensive options like its fullback Julien Dale. He often times caught UMass off-guard and rushed for 102 yards on the day.

The Terriers zeroed in on Ingoglia and were able to contain him. When Hodges looked for other ways to get downfield, he did not look to the pass, he looked to Alessio. The junior tailback responded by putting on a show.

"I think they concentrated on stopping one thing and it's tough to stop all the weapons," Ingoglia said. "You can take one thing away but it's hard to take two things away. We got Frank outside and he was off to the races."

"We talked about putting Rene at the tailback spot, but again, people concentrate on him so much," Hodges said. "They were sucking him up in the middle, so we used the option to Frank. We got it outside and off you go."

Alessio touched the ball 21 times, and the results were unbelievable. He broke Ingoglia's school and Yankee conference record rushing 337 yards. He also scored three touchdowns, which all came on long sprints to the end zone. Alessio displayed his jet-like speed on TD runs of 75, 76 and 84 yards.

"I have always said that records were meant to be broken," Ingoglia said. "I'm just glad a UMass guy broke it. Let's keep those 300-yard games in Amherst."

"I'm not big on numbers," Alessio said modestly. "I was lucky today because they were getting Rene up the middle. A couple of long runs and the numbers add up. When you have a great offensive line, it's an easy job."

Volleyball defeats A-10 foes Xavier and Dayton

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Early in the season, the Massachusetts volleyball team looked to the Atlantic 10 tournament with high hopes.

Knowing the contest will take place on the Minutewomen's home court in the Curry Hicks Cage on Nov. 24-25, shagging balls on the sideline Thanksgiving weekend was not an option.

This weekend, UMass made sure that this would not be the case as the Minutewomen returned from an Ohio road trip victorious, ensuring a spot in the A-10 Tournament.

The Minutewomen opened the weekend with a win over Xavier 3-1 (16-14, 13-15, 15-9 and 15-13). This four-game match was a switch from the last time UMass faced the Musketeers, when the Minutewomen dropped them handily in three straight games (15-8, 15-6 and 15-10).

UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny's squad displayed its offensive consistency again with three players floating around the 20 kill mark for the game.

Junior outside hitter Giza Rivera proved once again why she is the offensive leader for Massachusetts, posting an impressive 20 kills on the evening. Going the other way, Rivera recorded 15 digs, a prime example of her diversity on the court. It is this offensive and defensive intensity which Rivera brings to the game that the team has relied on throughout the season.

The Minutewomen's other offensive gun junior outside hitter Dionne Nash, who recently became the first athlete in school history to earn 1,000 career kills, was right behind Rivera with 19 kills for the night.

Other UMass standouts were sophomore Lesley Nolan with 18 kills and sophomore middle blocker Michelle Pacitorek with 11 kills.

The win dropped Xavier to 16-14 overall, 9-8 in the A-10, thus ensuring that the Musketeers will not be returning to Amherst until next year.

After sealing the fate of Xavier, the Minutewomen needed a Rhode Island victory over Dayton on Friday, or a victory over the Flyers (17-12 overall, 10-8 in A-10) themselves to guarantee a spot in the A-10 Tournament. They got both.

This meeting was won with as much ease this time around as it was earlier in the season, with UMass sweeping again in three games 15-8, 17-15 and 15-5.

Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky led the charge on all fronts for the Minutewomen totaling 11 kills on offense while leading the team in digs (12) and blocks (five).

Freshman setter Katie Pearce controlled the ball well, earning 40 assists and 10 digs. As a new player in the A-10, she has proved that she will be a force in the coming years.

The weekend's victories earn UMass an overall record of 23-10, 14-5 in the A-10. The only match left for the Minutewomen is Nov. 16, when they will find themselves staring through the net at the A-10 leading Rhode Island Rams. This match should be a great warm up for the A-10 Tournament which will consist of Rhode Island, George Washington, UMass and Virginia Tech. This will be the last time Massachusetts will have the chance to hone its skills before the tournament.

With the prospects of a UMass/URI finals match-up, the Minutewomen will need to play hard.

The Bluewall

WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY, NOV. 13TH
9:30PM - 12:00AM

"Last Chance To Dance"
with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

COMPLIMENTARY PASSES
EXCLUSIVELY FOR AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARDMEMBERS.

WHEN & WHERE
November 16, 7:20pm
AMC Hampshire 6 Theater

WHAT.
Cardmembers get two complimentary passes to Universal Pictures' blockbuster Casino.

HOW.
Just bring the American Express Card or Optima® Card and your student ID to the location listed below to pick up your passes.

NOW.
If you're not yet a Cardmember and would like to take part in our exclusive previews, it's easy to apply for the Card. Just call 1-800-942-AMEX, ext. 4114.

MORE TO COME.
Casino is one in a series of five major motion pictures to be previewed on your campus this year, compliments of American Express.

PICK UP YOUR TICKETS HERE.
UNIVERSITY STORE
November 15 - November 16

The American Film Institute
Entertainment

©1995 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

Lack of respect fires up Minutemen

BILLERICA — When UMass-Lowell tasted its first loss of the season Saturday night, it also tasted something else, a big slice of humble pie.

Coming off a Friday night defeat of Massachusetts on the road, the River Hawks packed the house in expectations of another defeat of their in-state rivals.

It didn't happen.

It all started with the pregame introductions.

"Now the starters for UMass-Ammmhhhherst," the public address announcer said with distaste usually reserved for Dan Quayle and Brussels sprouts. He continued, deadpanning each of the six starters names.

Switching to the home River Hawks, however, the same public address announcer suddenly became that annoying PA guy for the Orlando Magic.

"Starting for YOUR UMass-Lowell River Hawks," he bellowed, "number eight Brennnndaaaaaaaaaaaaannnnn Commmmmmmccaaaaaaaannnon."

What this Monster Truck-like announcer neglected to realize that however much this buffoonery fired up the hometeam, he had an even bigger effect on the visitors.

"That showed a lack of class on that guy's part," said senior forward Sal Manganaro. "It's just disrespectful. It definitely got us fired up and we came out and let 'em have it."

So while the Lowell announcer could talk the talk, it was the Minutemen who walked the walk, opening up a 5-0 lead on the stunned River Hawks.

What this Monster Truck-like announcer neglected to realize that however much this buffoonery fired up the hometeam, he had an even bigger effect on the visitors... So while the Lowell announcer could talk the talk, it was the Minutemen who walked the walk, opening up a 5-0 lead on the stunned River Hawks.

Matt Vautour

It would be like that all night long. Less than halfway through the second period, Lowell tough guy Ed Campbell dumped Rob Bonneau on his backside and gave him an earfull about it.

Ignoring him, Bonneau got back up, collected a pass from Dale Hooper, beat Campbell and flipped it over goaltender Martin Fillion for the ultimate payback.

The PA guy tried to do his part by begging the fans for noise, but the loudest response he got was boos when the River Hawks gave up the sixth UMass goal.

Goaltender Dave Kilduff, who picked up a win in his first outing of the season, chalked up the lack of class to ol' fashioned envy.

"When they came to our building, we didn't ridicule them in any way," he said. "They're jealous of us because we have such a great program. We have such a great building. We have great fans. We got great everything and they're jealous of us. That's all that was."

The rivalry is enhanced this year by the addition of some hardware. This is the first year that the Alumni Cup will be awarded to the winner of the season series between the two clubs. The two teams will battle for the trophy Feb. 10 at the William D. Mullins Center.

"The cup was on the line tonight," said junior forward Rob Bonneau, who collected a hat trick. "That was a big thing. We were playing for some hardware."

The hatred that UMass-Lowell has for the flagship campus is deep seeded. Since the Minutemen joined Hockey East, the Lowell fans and players have complained that the word Amherst doesn't appear anywhere on the UMass jerseys.

As is traditional in all of the HE arenas, banners of each different conference institutions hang in Lowell's Tully Forum. All except one... UMass.

Lowell's insistence on being called UMass-Lowell is almost hypocritical. The front of both the home and away jerseys display just one word... Lowell. The same is true of the banner. Even the cheerleaders use only Lowell in their cheers.

The UMass-Amherst players find the controversy silly.

"They're always making a big deal out of it," Manganaro said. "We don't make a big deal out of it, because we are UMass and that's just the way it's going to be."

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

moves him into third place on the all-time Massachusetts goal scoring list with 47 in his career. He needs three more to pass Russ Kidd who is in second place. Pat Keenan is the all-time leader with 105.

Bonneau also moved into sixth on the career point chart with 84 in his three years at UMass.

• The seven-goal output ties the greatest goal production by UMass against a Division I opponent (Jan. 20 at Providence).

• Sophomore Keith O'Connell and freshman Steve MacKinnon saw their first action of the season Saturday night. While O'Connell saw a regular shift and was used as a penalty killer, MacKinnon was used sparingly in his first collegiate action. Both players were each assessed one penalty.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN
Jon Jacques (11) and the Minutemen won their third Hockey East game of the season, equalling the number of HE wins a year ago.

COLLEGE SKI & SNOWBOARD FROM $18 a day STUDENTS
Killington
Mount Snow
Haystack
sugarloaf/usa
Waterville Valley
BROMLEY
a free lift ticket is just the beginning
When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement.
With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.
And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.
the extra credit card is now valid every day!

	Monday thru Friday	Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington	$25	$30
Mount Snow	25	30
Haystack	18	25
Sugarloaf/USA	25	29
Waterville Valley	20	29
Bromley	18	28

Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996

If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.
So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.
Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Golden Key National Honor Society
General Membership Meeting
Tuesday, November 14
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center 904-08
New officers will be elected...
...Program for the year will be discussed!

Decide for Yourself!
If your dream is to become a medical doctor, don't let someone else decide you can't do it. Decide for yourself! Call us today to find out what your options are at the UAG.
800-531-5494
Universidad Autónoma de Guadalajara
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wed. October 18 room 174 or Tues. November 14 room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

SHOPPING FOR PRICE? Northampton 584-4112 • 535-1888 SAME DAY DELIVERY
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:00pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Attn: Ansci/Pre-vet club Don't miss out on the Hadley Farm Barn clean up & BBQ! Sat. Nov. 11 at 9:30 am. Questions, rides: Call 549-5851 or 546-4372.

Attn: Ansci/Pre-vet club General meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 12th @ 7pm in Page 202. Questions? Call 549-5851. Don't forget t-shirt orders.

Barrucuas Unidos Puerto Rican Heritage Week. Puerto Rican identity up in the air film/lecture with professor Alberto Sandoval Sanchez from Mt. Holyoke call Plaza Latin American Cultural Center. Time: 7:00 pm

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Alpha Chi Omega invites all University women to come to open rush on Monday, November 13 at 5:30. If you have any questions please call Patrice 549-5205.

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am

Do you want to see more bands at U Mass? Would you like to help put on a concert? If so get involved with University Productions & Concerts! General commitee meeting tomorrow night.

University Productions & concerts! Wa need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 8:00 in room 162. Come get involved!

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9819

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Subaru 1800 DL One owner. Runs great. Reliable transportation. Clean inside/outside. $1200. 323-0785.

Convertible '85 Dodge 600 Beautiful, rust free car. $2700 obo. 549-9240 Brian

1985 Chevy Blazer Good condition. New engine. $2700 obo. 549-0826.

'83 BMW 181S Coupe excel cond alarm & remote start. Call David 585-5284

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialities taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50,000. Fax resume (212) 566-2030

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000-$10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-569-8928

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec. 16 - Jan. 10. $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-6289

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise Ships Hiring! $$$+ free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent. No experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext. C1040

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N-5012

Phish Phans! Want to make money and meet other phish phans? Become a campus distributor of the phamer's almanac, the unophical guide to the band. Call Andy at (718) 398-4442

We want you! Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $32,400 first year! 941-768-9001

You can earn $500 to $7000 between now and Christmas. Call Holly 1-800-851-1985

$25,000/yr income potential Reading books. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext B-1732 for details

FOR SALE

Guiter & Amp For Sale brand new Epophone LesPaul gold top and Marshall TTM30 tube amp $450 each. Call 586-5626 for details.

Fish tank 30 gallon tank w/ complete set up. Includes tank, hood, stand, heater filter, pump & gravel. $100 or bo 256-8223

Magic: The gathering from the game connection boxes, packs, singles. Great selection lowest prices. All games available. Visit us Sunday at Jackson's Flea Market. Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. 1 413 436-7505

Wanna see Lisa Loeb in Boston Tuesday, Nov. 14th? Call 546-1256

Word processor Brother 2600G INC Spellcheck, thesaurus, tetris, lotus 1-2-3

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

IBM-pc compatible $175/bo. 259-1680

Brookie Happy 21st! Love your favorite housemate.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5283

LOST

Brown cloth wallet contains IDs Reward!!! 253-2608

Lost keys on red fabric key holder between Bartlett and library. 545-3560 reward

Silver ring w/ blue stone & silver frog ring very sentimental - reward! Call Kristen 548-8985.

PERSONALS

Andrew Bryce You are the biggest doobird on the face of the planet. You can't yourself the master of your domain, give me a break! Wake up and smell the roses you sneepersnaw! Smell you later! Signed, Joe Rockhead

Attn: Chi Omega Pledges! Jaime Elizabeth, Jody, Lauren, Amanda, Jamie, Amy, and Amanda you're doing a great job. You're halfway there. Keep up the good work! We love you! Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

Meghan- Enjoy 1 week! Have you figured me out yet? Final clue - I am old enough to go uptown. In Sigma Love, Your Guardian Angel

Nick Welsh You are the biggest gun master in the world. You are winning, how many? Colossal A.C. in golf? That's huge! Winnaar!

Pasquale, You big dork! Happy 21st birthday! I'm right behind you and I expect nothing but fun. After all, queens deserve the best! Love, Doyni

Wanted Sexy Tri-Sigma roommate for winter break, spring semester, and summer. If interested contact -Bo The Crow

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jaeger 548-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommates needed to share town house for spring semester. 2 min from campus. Frank Day 413-568-9151ex 1275. Night 413-733-8079

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail 11/95 One room in large 3 bedroom w/pets $/25+. Bus line. Extras! Linda 665-2572.

SERVICES

Child care Subsidized slot available for toddler at quality center, route 63 Leverett, 4 miles north of U Mass. Call Brian, Hampshire Franklin Day Care. 549-3614.

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 546-7764.

Going to Florida during winterssssss? I'll bring your car to you. Call Omri- 546-1579.

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-7271.

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silvercage Designs 294 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

Take over our lease 1/1/96 Putnam Village $505/month heat/hot water inc. Call 549-0578.

TRAVEL

Free Travel Spring Break '96 Sunsplash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Parties! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710.

Port Antonio, Jamaica Ocean view cottages great neighborhood. Walk to beaches, restaurants, dance, hall clubs $150/week. 413-367-9350.

Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399, Jamaica from $439, Florida from $99. Organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800-648-4849 for more info. Or a campus contact Liz at 546-7148, Jason at 548-5329 or Catherine at 549-7594.

Winter Break Special Killington week $788. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437.

2 Save 2 today guitars vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable food/drink included with hotel by arrgmnt $300/ea. Call Eric @ 549-3788.

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted 3 or more bedroom apt. or house near uptown or campus. For spring semester. Call 549-7403.

Wanted to rent a 2,3,or 4 bedroom in Amherst. Call 549-8618.

WANTED

Wanted 100 students to lose 8-100 pounds. Call (303) 572-7975.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day to study and evaluate a controversial plan. Go through channels if you want to register a complaint or criticism. Others are willing to hear your ideas. Kind gestures forestall problems with the neighbors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A lucky meeting could lead to a financial bonanza. Attitude plays a key role in your success; stay upbeat. Shared experiences are binding. Spend more time with your parents or children.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Civic duties take priority today. Later, discuss an important with relatives or neighbors. Improvisation is the keynote when an unexpected visitor drops by. Get moving on a business matter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer clear of business operations in which you do not have an assigned role. Overheard conversations should be cooled! Guard your professional reputation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The next few days could be crucial for a partnership. Avoid demanding more than you are willing to give in return. Entertainment at home enjoys favorable influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new relationship needs more time to mature. Stop dwelling on the past. Give your heart a chance to mend. Financial gains come through wise investments. Set aside some money for your retirement years.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22): Collaborative efforts and contactual relationships are favored. Say yes to any reasonable propositions. You sense your mate or partner's needs. Change negative spending patterns; do not enrich others needlessly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Although travel could be expensive now, there may not be an alternative. Do what you must to expand a business. Your excellent reputation will give you advantages your competitors do not enjoy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Rendering someone a service deepens your understanding of their plight. Note publications dealing with diet, nutrition and exercise. Someone decides to share a secret; you could benefit both emotionally and materially.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A better day for research and study than action. Proceed with your plans for counseling, organizing and scheduling. Take any disappointments in stride; they could end up working in your favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Resist the temptation to divulge secrets. A friend is well intentioned but misguided. Someone's services may not meet your expectations. To protect your good name, keep your comments civil.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take care of routine tasks in the morning, emphasizing your desire to be of service. Romance keeps you guessing. Moderate your demands on a partner. Follow precedent at work, acknowledging the important role traditions play.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

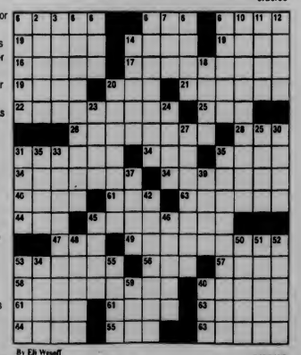
ACROSS
1 — Flow, Scotland
6 Snakelike swimmer
9 Sporting event
13 Put a — stop
14 Ms. enclosure
15 Dirty Harry, to Eastwood
16 Family of violin makers
17 Soon
19 Ger. car
20 Chum
21 Darrow defendant
22 Cook's mitt
25 Oklahoma native
26 Follower of a Swiss theologian
28 D.C. body
31 Poplars
32 Chunk of cheese
34 Bio. or chem.
35 Victim
36 Hangouts for family skeletons?
38 Like the Monitor
40 Spouse
41 Dawn goddess
43 Morning prayer
44 Decrease
45 Hidden danger
47 Part of IOU
49 Type of fishnets
53 Actress Talia and others
56 Left eyes, in prescrips.
57 Centennial st.
58 Heavenly
60 Picabo Street
61 Exploits
62 Away from the wind
63 Do a hitch
64 Tailor's tuck
65 Turf
66 See 31 Across

DOWN
1 Scalawag
2 Brief appearance
3 Separate
4 Smearcase
5 Cuckoo
6 Lobe ornaments
7 Opp. of WNW
8 Minus
9 Whether —
10 Mixture
11 Palindromic magazine
12 Wellington adversary and family
14 Mining nails
18 Concern for Clinton: Abbr.
20 — of paris
23 Author Jewett's middle name
24 Costa —
27 Atmospheric phenomenon
29 Perceived
30 Nicknames for Poitier and Greenstreet
31 Zenith
32 Large piece of cheese
33 Literary hack's effort
35 Cooking dregs: Var.
37 Sudsy stuff
39 Bull or buck
42 Billed and cooed
45 Golf gadgets
46 N.J. town on the Hudson
48 Take by force
50 Bete —
51 Student, in Sedan
52 Roses, another way
53 Slight sudden shower
54 "For — jolly..."
55 R.R. stops
59 Workers' org.
60 Fast flier

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	A	L	F		P	E	T	A	L		A	V	O	W
E	M	I	R		R	E	A	D	E		P	A	G	E
A	U	D	I	T	O	R	I	U	M		E	U	R	E
P	R	O	D	I	G	Y		E	M	E	N	D	E	D
			G	A	R			O	R	N	E
T	E	H	E	R	A	N		E	N	D	I	V	E	S
A	L	I		A	M	E	N	T		A	N	I	M	A
L	I	P	S		S	I	E	N	A		E	L	M	O
C	O	P	T	S		G	O	A	L	S		L	Y	N
S	T	O	R	A	G	E		S	I	A	M	E	S	E
			O	I	V	A			E	R	A
C	A	R	P	E	T	S		G	N	A	R	L	E	D
A	L	O	P		O	P	E	R	A	H	O	U	S	E
D	I	M	E		R	E	M	I	T		O	L	P	E
I	T	E	R		S	C	U	T	E		N	U	Y	S

5/20/95



By Eli Wessff
©1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

5/20/95

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

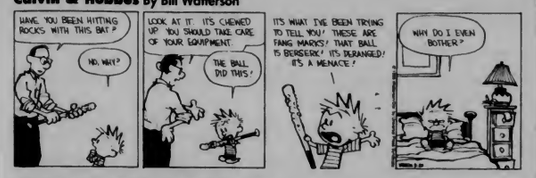
ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



HAVE YOU BEEN HITTING ROCKS WITH THIS BAT?
NO. WHY?
LOOK AT IT. IT'S CHEWED UP. YOU SHOULD TAKE CARE OF YOUR EQUIPMENT.
THE BALL DID THIS.
IT'S WHAT I'VE BEEN TRYING TO TELL YOU! THESE ARE FANG MARKS! THAT BALL IS BERSERK! IT'S DERANGED! IT'S A MENACE!
WHY DO I EVEN BOTHER?

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

HIS CASE IS STUFFED WITH OLD NEWSPAPERS! HOW PATHETICALLY UNORIGINAL!
I DON'T KNOW HOW YOU EXPECTED TO GET AWAY WITH THIS, BUT I'LL TELL YOU ONE THING-- YOU WON'T LEAVE HERE ALIVE!

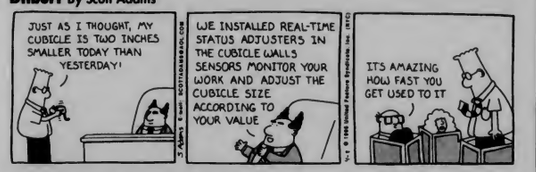
Garfiled By Jim Davis

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY CUTIE, WHAT'S HAPPENING? I SAW YOU OVER HERE ALL ALONE AND THOUGHT YOU MIGHT WANT COMPANY.
LISTEN TO THIS..."BUT WHY DO THEY LOVE ME SO MUCH, IF I'M NOT WORTHY OF SUCH LOVE? OH, IF ONLY I WERE ALONE AND NO ONE LOVED ME AND I, TOO, HAD NEVER LOVED ANYONE."
I'LL LOVE YA BABE
BWRRMPP ON I'M SORRY, WRONG ANSWER. THANKS FOR PLAYING THOUGH

Dilbert By Scott Adams



JUST AS I THOUGHT, MY CUBICLE IS TWO INCHES SMALLER TODAY THAN YESTERDAY!
WE INSTALLED REAL-TIME STATUS ADJUSTERS IN THE CUBICLE WALLS. SENSORS MONITOR YOUR WORK AND ADJUST THE CUBICLE SIZE ACCORDING TO YOUR VALUE
IT'S AMAZING HOW FAST YOU GET USED TO IT

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

CAMPUS RALLY
WHAT'S WRONG WITH UNCLE SAM?
IT'S LIBERALS... GIVING WOMEN ABORTION RIGHTS TO KILL UNBORN AMERICANS!
IT'S THE CONSERVATIVE RIGHT... GIVING EVERYONE GUNS TO KILL INNOCENT PEOPLE!
'LIFE IS FUNNY. BEES MAKE HONEY. 'ELL, WE HAVE NO SANITY.
IF, IT WASN'T FOR MY "FREEDOM ROCK" COLLECTION, I'D BE LOST AT THESE THINGS.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

WHAT THE HECK IS THAT?
ALL-NATURAL TOOTHPASTE. NO CHEMICALS.
WHAT'S MATTER WITH YOU? NATURAL TOOTHPASTE, HERBAL TEA, OATMEAL SOAP... WHY CAN'T YOU JUST USE TRADITIONAL PRODUCTS LIKE EVERYBODY ELSE?
DO YOU KNOW THAT THE BRAND YOU USE ALSO PRODUCES OUR LAUNDRY DETERGENT?
"TOMTE"... HUH?

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

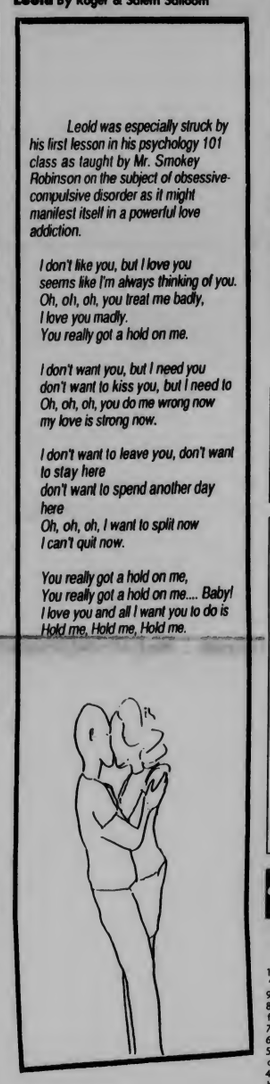
Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

WELL, IT'S THE END OF YET ANOTHER SEMESTER OF B.M.O.C.
YOU'RE ALL GONNA HAFTA WAIT 'TIL SEPTEMBER TO LAUGH AT MY PATHETIC ATTEMPTS AT HUMOR.
KONG!
FIGURED I'D GIVE 'EM ONE FOR THE ROAD.
SCHNEIDER BIKE

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



Leold was especially struck by his first lesson in his psychology 101 class as taught by Mr. Smokey Robinson on the subject of obsessive-compulsive disorder as it might manifest itself in a powerful love addiction.
I don't like you, but I love you seems like I'm always thinking of you.
Oh, oh, oh, you treat me badly,
I love you madly.
You really got a hold on me.
I don't want you, but I need you don't want to kiss you, but I need to Oh, oh, oh, you do me wrong now my love is strong now.
I don't want to leave you, don't want to stay here
don't want to spend another day here
Oh, oh, oh, I want to split now
I can't quit now.
You really got a hold on me,
You really got a hold on me.... Baby!
I love you and all I want you to do is Hold me, Hold me, Hold me.

Close to Home By John McPherson

At last, help for chronic oversleepers.

GeoFrey By Embryo

PHEW! THIS GUY SMELLS!
DEEP THOUGHTS AT THE DRIVE IN
I HOPE SHE LIKES MY NEW COLOGNE
I WISH GEOF COULD GET ME SOME MORE YUMMY CHOCOLATE
I NEED A BEER... ZZZZ
Embryo 95

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Heltner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Dan Bergeron
Jeff Hodge

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Meatball Grinder
Grilled Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil Chili
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Meat Loaf
Chicken Tenders
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Beans & Rice
Chicken Tender

Tomorrow

LUNCH
Fish in Batter
Tri-County Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Fish in Batter
Lemon Grill Burger

DINNER
Chicken de Carlos
Spiced Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Chicken de Carlos
Spiced Shrimp

Wednesday

LUNCH
Hot Hero Sandwich
Chicken Pucks
BASICS LUNCH
Bacon, Corn, Tomatoes
Chicken Pucks

DINNER
Roast Pork
Chicken Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Potato Mushroom Delight
Tofu or Chicken Fajita

Top 10

Top 10 Signs That You've Had Too Much to Drink

10. You are actually unable to utter the word "when."
9. You start hitting on mannequins.
8. A nervous EMT keeps following you around with fibulators and an IV.
7. (Insert own urination joke here).
6. You actually believe in the talking dolphin.
5. Breathing takes a seemingly enormous amount of concentration.
4. Ted Kennedy pulls you aside and says "Whoa buddy! Don't you think you should slow down?"
3. You start to think that Natural Light is a great tasting beer.
2. People cut you so they can get drunk off your blood.
1. Three words: Vomit vomit vomit.

Quote of the Day

"Some people have hopes and dreams, and some people have ways and means.

–Robert Nesta Marley"

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- The men's and women's swimming teams hosted Northeastern this weekend. For complete results, check out tomorrow's Collegian.
- Rebecca Donaghue qualified for the 1995 NCAA cross country championships on Saturday after running a personal– record time of 17:28 on Saturday at the ECAC Championships. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The men's cross country team placed 23rd at the IC4As Championships. Check out tomorrow's Collegian for the story.
- The volleyball team defeated Xavier and Dayton over the weekend. See story, page 8.

UMass defeats Hawks in double overtime thriller

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

If Steven Spielberg were to direct the perfect game to end women soccer's tenure at Richard F. Garber Field, it would have been scripted almost exactly how the NCAA first round match between Massachusetts and Hartford played out on Saturday. For UMass fans, it was a good thing it wasn't a Stephen King ending.

After all but dominating the first 89 minutes of action, the Minutewomen only had a one goal lead, then Hartford's Stephanie Churma horrifyingly tied the game with just 51.4 seconds remaining in regulation.

Massachusetts	2
Hartford	1

In the end, it was the Hawks left trying to sleep with the nightmare of losing, as Rachel LeDuc's game–winning goal with less than two seconds left in the second overtime period allowed UMass to prevail 2–1 in front of 1,327. The win brought the Minutewomen's record to 14–3–2, but more importantly, extended their season for at least one more week, as Sunday UMass will travel to Storrs, Conn. to take on Connecticut.

Churma's goal, along with an injury to midfielder Rebecca Myers, could have broken the spirit of the Minutewomen, but the resiliency of co–captain Rachel LeDuc was paramount in a do–or–die game.

"It was all or nothing," LeDuc said. "Midway through the second overtime my calves started to tense up, but it was all or nothing at that point and I just went for it."

About halfway through the second extra session, Myers strained her hamstring attempting a shot on Hartford's goaltender Danielle Rotondi. The play evoked memories of last year's NCAA tournament loss to the Hawks.

"We had controlled most of last year's match," Rudy said. "When Becca went down last year, that's when it got away from us."

Myers returned, and it was her presence, as well as LeDuc's flare for the dramatic, that led to the winning goal.

"We knew she wasn't going to stay out," Lynch said. "We knew she'd be right back in giving everything she had."

With less than 30 seconds remaining in the second overtime, Hawks defender Michelle McKensie cleared the ball out of the Hartford goal mouth. Myers won a air ball over a Hawk midfielder and Erin Lynch collected on the right wing. Lynch settled the ball and lofted it to the top of the crease.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Senior forward Rachel LeDuc (6) heads in the game– winning goal with 1.4 seconds left, propelling the Minutewomen to a 2–1 overtime win over Hartford.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rachel LeDuc's goal that advanced UMass to a second round match–up with UConn was her 12th game–winning goal of her career.

Rachel LeDuc does it again

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Hartford had just tied it with only 51 seconds to go in Saturday's NCAA first round game at Richard F. Garber Field, and the momentum had shifted.

The Hawks, who seconds earlier seemed to be as good as dead, were now hopeful and full of life. The Minutewomen, who were in complete control of the game only seconds earlier, now looked lost.

Senior forward Rachel LeDuc, however, didn't look lost.

"It was like a morgue [on the sidelines], except for Rachel LeDuc, who was frothing at the mouth, talking to herself. I think she was barking," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "I didn't want to get close to her, she was just beside herself. There was steam coming off of her. She looked like an aberration."

LeDuc seemed ready to take matters into her own hands, just like she had so many other times in her illustrious career. So she went out and did what she has done seven other times this season — win the game.

In 1995, she's already beaten St. Bonaventure, George Mason, Texas A&M, Fordham, Cornell and George Washington — twice.

So many times in her career, LeDuc has won the big game. In 1992, it was in the first round of the

> "It was all or nothing at that point, so I just went for it."
> –Rachel LeDuc

NCAA Tournament where against Connecticut she scored the game–winner with 5:39 left in the second overtime, propelling the Minutewomen to a 2–1 victory.

In 1993, it was in the NCAA Northeast Regional Final where yet again she broke UConn's back. This time she scored the lone goal to win the game for the Minutewomen and send them to the Final Four.

So with 1.4 seconds to go in the match against Hartford, LeDuc made history again.

Rebecca Myers started it all with a header up to the right side of the field which Erin Lynch controlled and then served to the goal. Both LeDuc and Karin Johnson collided going for the ball, but it was LeDuc who dove and got her head on it, projecting the ball past Hartford keeper Danielle Rotondi and giving UMass the thrilling victory.

"I knew we only had about 10 seconds left in the game and I saw Erin breaking down the flank," LeDuc said. "So I tried to stay out wide to make a run to the near post and I was a little to far out, so I had to dive to make the header and it went in. If I didn't make it, Karin would have been right there to put it in. So it was a sure shot, a perfect cross by Erin."

LeDuc's game–winner was the 12th of her career, tying the old UMass record of 12, held by April Kater and Nicole Roberts. Her eighth game–winning goal of the season broke the previous UMass record of seven, held by Kim Eynard (1992) and Jolie DeFauw (1984).

Playing 120 minutes of soccer can

Turn to LEDUC, page 7

Alessio sets record in UMass' victory

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Massachusetts junior tailback Frank Alessio was walking off Nickerson Field immediately following the Minutemen's clash with Boston University on Saturday afternoon, seemingly having a difficult time getting back to the lockeroom.

There were sporadic hugs from family members and those Minutemen fans who made the drive to watch the game. There was another embrace from athletic director Bob Marcum. There were congratulatory remarks and compliments. Alessio was having a tough time finding holes toward the lockeroom as the admirers were approaching him.

Massachusetts	28
Boston Univ.	23

See Related Story, page 8

How surprising, since the 5–foot 7–inch tailback blew straight past the Boston University defense with more ease and greater speed for a Yankee Conference record 337 yards just minutes before, leading the Minutemen to a 28–23 victory.

Irony came into play as the conference record Alessio broke was a 313–yard effort by teammate and fellow backfield mate Rene Ingoglia, who did it against Rhode Island on Oct. 1, 1994. Truly ironic, though, was how the Terriers' plan looked to stop the All–America Ingoglia (27 carries, 88 yards) from having that type of game, knowing the Minutemen (6–4 overall, 3–4 in YanCon) are particularly effective with him leading the way.

"They played an extra man inside," said Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges. "That opened up our outside game and we took what they gave us."

The game was played on the Terriers' home turf of Nickerson Field. By the end, though, the 6,095 in attendance came to the realization the turf belonged to Alessio. For the amazing 337–yard total, Alessio carried the ball 21 times for an average of 16 yards per carry.

It wasn't that he reached the endzone three times — it was the way he did it. Alessio scored an 84–yard touchdown, along with a 76–yarder and a 75–yarder.

"This guy, he loves the turf, I've got to admit that," Hodges said. "He had a twinkle in his eye when he went out there, maybe because we practiced in ankle–deep mud all week. Coming down here, and he feels like he's got great wheels, I guess, because he sure does.

"That's an awful nice feeling when he breaks the line of scrimmage to just start looking for clipping penalties because you know nobody's going to

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Hockey splits weekend series with UMass–Lowell

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

BILLERICA — During the 1994–95 season the Massachusetts hockey team collected three wins in Hockey East (HE). During the 1995–96 season that same squad has three wins in four games in HE as the Minutemen split a weekend series with the UMass–Lowell River Hawks.

Massachusetts	7
UMass Lowell	4

See Related Story, page 9

After some sloppy play caused the Minutemen to drop a 7– 5 decision on Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center, they turned in a solid performance Saturday night to drub the River Hawks 7–4.

Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen is excited about his team's performance so far.

"In the first two weekends of Hockey East, we've already tied the number of wins from all last year. That's a monumental step for us," he said.

The win improves the Minutemen to 4–1 on the season, 3– 1 in Hockey East. UMass is tied for the Hockey East lead for fewest losses as no school in the conference is undefeated.

The win was big in terms of rivalry because it evened the season series. The winner of the season series between the two University of Massachusetts schools will capture the first annual Alumni Cup.

Massachusetts never trailed in the game as it opened up a 5–0 lead early in the second period.

"We certainly came out of the chute tonight," Mallen said. "That Alumni Cup is on the line and now it's even. It will make that third game even bigger."

Rob Bonneau led the way for UMass notching three goals in the game to complete the first hat trick by a Minuteman since they joined Division I.

"I told Robby that I don't think he played consistently in [Friday's game]," Mallen said. "I think as a result of that he came out with a lot of jump in his legs and a lot of smarts around the net."

Sal Manganaro added two more as the two players continue to sit atop the Massachusetts scoring chart. Sophomore Brad Norton got his first collegiate goal in the game as well.

Senior goaltender David Kilduff got his first start of the season and responded with a solid performance making 37 saves.

UMass Lowell	7
Massachusetts	5

Lowell cut into the early Massachusetts lead, but never got closer than three goals.

Lowell coach Bruce Crowder was frustrated after the loss.

"Tonight, their forwards played better than our forwards. Their defensemen played better than our defensemen. Their goalie played better than our goalie, and their coach outcoached our coach," Crowder said.

* * *

The Minutemen displayed an impressive knack for cutting into deficits on Friday night, but in the end UMass ran out of time, as the Riverhawks prevailed 7–5.

Neil Donovan provided the spark for Lowell with four goals in the contest, including the two biggest goals of the game.

After Massachusetts had battled back from being down 3– 1, knotting the game at three towards the end of the second period, Donovan beat UMass goalie Brian Regan to take some momentum into intermission.

That momentum carried into the third period, when Donovan scored again less than a minute in, giving Lowell a lead UMass couldn't recover from.

* * *

The Minutemen return to action this weekend when they will play a

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

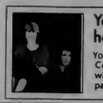
Volume CV Issue 49 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, November 14, 1995

Donaghue qualifies for Nationals

Sophomore Rebecca Donaghue will be competing in the NCAA women's cross–country Championships next Monday. (See Sports, Page 12.)

Six people killed in bombing

Six people, including five Americans, were killed in a terrorist bombing in Saudi Arabia yesterday (See story, page 3).



Yo La Tengo have got it!

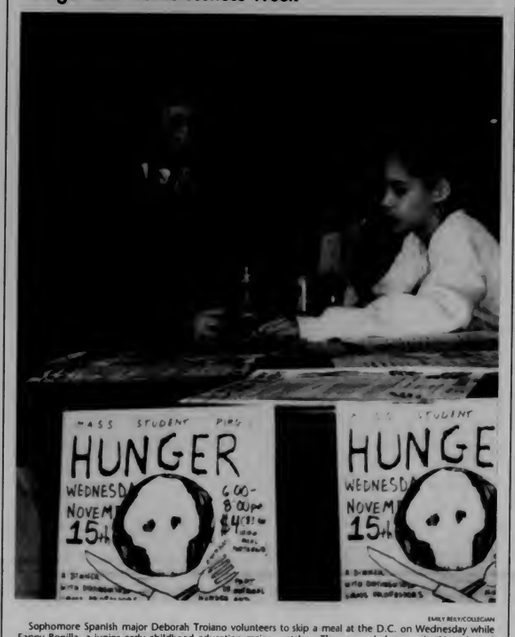
Yo La Tengo will appear at the Amherst College Frontroom tomorrow night with the Pastels (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

Light snow, which may reach up to an inch, will continue throughout the early part of the day. Tomorrow the snow will likely turn to rain with temperatures reaching the 40s.

today				tomorrow
HIGH: 35	LOW: 30	HIGH: 40	LOW: 30	HIGH: 40	LOW: 301

Hunger and Homelessness Week



EMILY BEEK/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Spanish major Deborah Troiano volunteers to skip a meal at the D.C. on Wednesday while Fanny Bonilla, a junior early childhood education major, watches. The proceeds from each skipped meal will be donated to the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts, and the students will then attend a Hunger Banquet. Other events are a supermarket sweep, a "Band–Aid" benefit concert, and a sleep out, where students get the feel of being homeless.

Clinton vetoes twin bills; looks to avert shutdown

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton vetoed twin spending and borrowing bills Monday but then met late into the night with congressional leaders to explore ways of averting a partial government shutdown.

Republican leaders requested the 11th hour talks with the president just hour before the expiration at midnight Monday of most of the government's spending authority.

"We're willing to go down and talk to the president about how to keep the government open," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said. "He set no preconditions. We set no preconditions."

The late-night drama with congressional leaders began after Clinton vetoed a temporary spending bill to keep the government operating.

"This legislation would raise Medicare premiums on senior citizens and deeply cut education and environmental programs as the cost for keeping the government running," Clinton said.

Earlier Monday, Clinton vetoed another emergency bill to extend the government's ability to borrow money beyond its expected expiration Wednesday. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin took immediate steps to raise cash and prevent a first-ever default, which could cause financial tumult.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and Gingrich had "reached out to the president."

"They must have something new to say," McCurry said.

Also attending the Monday night Oval Office meeting with Clinton were House and Senate Democratic Leaders Dick Gephardt and Tom Daschle.

In vetoing the bill to extend the government's ability to borrow money, Clinton said the GOP budget priorities attached to it would "rob the American dream from millions of Americans."

Anticipating the vetoes, congressional leaders planned to keep the House and Senate in session until midnight or later in case the president and Republicans could find middle ground.

But with most agencies' power to spend money set to expire at the start of business Tuesday, failure to break the political deadlock meant that 800,000 federal civilian employees — 40 percent of the workforce — could be sent home, the first federal shutdown in five years.

Alice Rivlin, director of the Office of Management and Budget, told heads of federal agencies to have their employees report for work as usual Tuesday morning. If it looks like a temporary budget measure acceptable to the president will clear Congress on Tuesday, agencies will operate normally. If the prospect for such legislation is dim, the White House will initiate the partial shutdown.

Government shutdown could hit pocketbooks of taxpayers

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — About 800,000 workers stay home. No one answers the IRS hot line or gives White House tours. Even garbage collection pauses in the nation's capital. Sounds like a government shutdown would save the United States some money.

No, it would probably cost millions. Even hundreds of millions.

Shutting down the elephantine U.S. government isn't cheap or easy. For one thing, many jobs — from manning military bases to cooking for the president — are considered too important to suspend. So 60 percent of the 2.1 million civilians in the federal work force would remain on the job.

Employees whose work isn't considered essential, including those who answer calls to the IRS and Social Security hot lines and staff museums and monuments, would be sent home. But traditionally, Congress has awarded them back pay for time missed through no fault of their own.

That means taxpayers pay for work that wasn't done.

The government also loses money it would have made from uncollected fees and fines, gift shop sales at museums, camping fees at national parks and other sources. And there are late charges if the government fails to pay its bills on time.

So when Congress and the president deadlock over how to spend tax dollars, they end up spending even more.

"It is stupid. It is unnecessary," White House budget chief Alice Rivlin told reporters. She blames the Republicans; they blame President Clinton.

The last time budget wrangling caused a federal shutdown, in 1990, it cost the government almost $3.4 million in lost work and revenue, according to the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

That's nothing.

A shutdown beginning Tuesday would cost hundreds of millions of dollars, GAO estimates suggest. The 1990 shutdown fell on the

Turn to GOVERNMENTpage2

Peres determined to restore 'restraint, civility' to Israel

By Dan Perry
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel handed over the West Bank town of Jenin to PLO rule a week early Monday, in a sign of Prime Minister Shimon Peres' determination to pursue and even accelerate his slain predecessor's peace policies.

Peres met with his main right-wing rival Monday and the two promised to restore "restraint and civility" to the bitter political debate that cost Yitzhak Rabin his life.

Thousands of Palestinians lined the streets of Jenin to welcome arriving busloads of PLO troops as Israel's army pulled out under the autonomy accord that Rabin signed with Yasser Arafat in September at the White House.

The move indicated Peres may press even more vigorously than Rabin toward a final Palestinian settlement and peace with Syria. That could require Israel to give up the strategic Golan Heights, captured in a 1967 war.

"We must continue with the peace process. This is what Yitzhak wanted," Peres told the Knesset, Israel's parliament, at a special session to honor Rabin. "We will make a deep, truthful decision."

Addressing a plenum that was full except for Rabin's empty seat, Peres said: "Only a difficult choice for our generation will (enable) a democratic and Jewish Israel for the next."

"There is no peace for free."

A unanimous vote by more than 1,000 members of the ruling Labor Party's central committee gave Peres the go-ahead Monday evening to form a new government.

Finance Minister Avraham Shohat said Peres, widely seen as the true architect of peace with the Palestinians, is "the best qualified person the Labor Party has."

Peres was likely to promote Interior Minister Ehud Barak to foreign minister, the No. 2 position in the Cabinet, party sources said. Barak, a popular and articulate former army chief who is Israel's most-decorated soldier, would give the Peres Cabinet the kind of security credentials that enabled Rabin — who led Israel's army to victory in 1967 — to take risks for peace.

Peres has strong political support for his return to the position he held in 1984-1986. Even the Likud opposition has pledged tacit consent when he presents his government to the Knesset.

Rabin's slaying sparked an outpouring of national grief and, according to polls, at least temporarily galvanized public support for the peace process and the government.

On Sunday night, about 250,000 Israelis gathered in the newly-renamed Yitzhak Rabin Square in Tel Aviv, where he was gunned down at a rally Nov. 4, to sing peace songs and honor the warrior-turned-peacemaker.

Right-wing leaders had branded Rabin a traitor and oppressor for trading land for peace, leading to charges they inspired his assassin. After the killing, they took pains to tone down the rhetoric.

"This debate must continue for the sake of Israeli democracy, but ... within the bounds of restraint and civility," Likud head Benjamin Netanyahu said Monday after meeting with Peres in Jerusalem.

Netanyahu said extremists like confessed assassin Yigal Amir have "nothing to do with the mainstream political parties in Israel."

Amir will be charged with first-degree murder within 10 days, Israel television reported Monday.

Amir insists he acted alone when he killed Rabin. But police suspect he was part of a group that plotted the assassination for more than a year. At least six suspects in addition to Amir, all religious men in their 20s, are under arrest.

On Monday, a Tel Aviv judge ordered 23-year-old Ohad Skornick, a friend of Amir, held for three more days. Police said Skornick knew about the plot to kill Rabin and expressed approval. Skornick's lawyer insists his client did not take Amir's talk of killing the premier seriously.

MassPirg mobilizing to help pass Rivers Act

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Amherst branch of MASSPIRG is mobilizing its efforts against state representative Thomas Finneran (D– Mattapan), who is providing an obstacle in their efforts to see the passage of the Massachusetts Rivers Act. The bill has been stalled in the Means and Ways Committee for the last five years.

The bill would create a "buffer zone" of 155 feet along the rivers in the state, where all construction would be restricted. The intent is to prevent erosion and the seepage of chemicals into the water. These buffer zones provide a filter for pesticides that run from developments, or a non– point source, where it is carried to the banks and into the river.

The bill also provides for a limitation of additions to buildings lying within the buffer zone up to 25 percent. However, cities with populations of 75,000 or more are exempt from these restrictions. Environmental groups cite this as a necessary compromise to get the bill passed.

MassPirg is feeling the crunch of a Nov. 15 deadline for Finneran to approve the bill. If he does not do so by that time, House government goes out of session and the bill remains inactive until January. Governor William Weld has said that he would sign it when it reaches his desk. However, it is up to Finneran to put it before him.

Paige Skiba, a member of the Amherst chapter of MassPirg, said that 68 percent of the rivers in Massachusetts are polluted, meaning the water is not fit for fishing, swimming or drinking. Four million residents get their water from these bodies of water.

Skiba and her group have been "working very hard" to change Finneran's mind. From a table on the Campus Pond, they collected approximately 375 messages written on yellow paper ducks, trying to convince the representative to okay the bill. The ducks were then sent to Finneran's office.

Amy Bartlett, also a member of MassPirg, said the reason why Finneran is turning a deaf ear to their environmental concerns is due to a conflict of interests.

"He doesn't feel environmental issues are a priority," Bartlett said. "He supports the businesses and malls which build on the banks."

MassPirg attended a rally on the steps of the Statehouse on Oct. 25 in support of the bill's passage. Bartlett said the yellow ducks were noticed and made them feel as if their efforts had paid off. MassPirg also continues to write letters to the editors of various newspapers, including the Optimist, Union News and Hampshire Gazette.

MassPirg's Jay Rasku said there is more than enough support to pass the bill, however it remains deadlocked with Finneran.

"Enough people recognize its importance," Rasku said. "As the rivers have gotten worse over the past five years, more representatives support it."

Rasku and his group urge people to call Finneran's office and their own local representatives to call attention to the bill's importance.

"This is the biggest assault on Finneran at one time," Rasku said. "There's still a chance. He's feeling the pressure."

State representative Tom Finneran's phone number at the State House is (617)722–2990. MassPirg is located in Rm. 423 Student Union.

Red ribbons spread awareness

By Elsa Allen
Collegian Correspondent

In an effort to help save lives this holiday season, the Hampden County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), has kicked off their Project Red Ribbon "Tie One On For Safety" campaign.

Through this campaign, thousands of red ribbons are distributed to motorists in area communities to promote sober driving during the holiday season. Motorists are encouraged to tie a ribbon to their car to display their awareness of the dangers of drunk driving.

In the United States in 1994 nearly 17,000 people were killed in alcohol related crashes. 1,771 of those deaths occurred between Thanksgiving and New Year's Eve. MADD created Project Red Ribbon to serve mainly as a holiday awareness program, and today the program has become MADD's largest public awareness campaign.

Since 1984, there has been a 30 percent decrease in alcohol related traffic fatalities, but MADD members still feel there is a need for widespread awareness, especially during the holidays.

"While statistics are enlightening, we must remember each person who was either killed or injured as an unique and irreplaceable individual with a name, a family and dreams that must now go unfulfilled," said chapter president Barbara Griffin. "Each represents far more than a faceless number or statistic to his or her family and friends, who are now caught in the tragic ripple effect of grief and despair set off by a drunk driving crash."

MADD's Hampden County Chapter said they would like to see red ribbons on every car in Hampden, Hampshire and Franklin counties. Last year the group distributed over 66,000 red ribbons, and this year, only a few days into the campaign, there were requests

Turn to RIBBON, page 2

Doctors speechless over birth of green tinted cat

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Something's green in the state of Denmark.

It's a kitten, much to the puzzlement of veterinarians who have tried to wash out the cat's grass-green tint.

"Experts from the university hospital said that the color also appears in the hair follicles," Pia Bischoff, the kitten's owner, said Monday. "It could be a metabolism defect."

> "Experts from the university hospital said that the color also appears in the hair follicles, It could be a metabolism defect."
> -Pia Bischoff

The two-month-old feline, called Miss Greeny, is all green except for a gray spot on the back, she said. Samples of the kitten's green hair have been sent to Copenhagen's university hospital for testing.

Other than the unusual shade, Miss Greeny is a normal, frisky feline.

"She is bobbing around, playing and being adorable like all other kittens," said Bischoff who lives in Dybvad, 160 miles northwest of Copenhagen.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Nov. 14

Meeting — The TEAMS Project is having a recruitment meeting this evening, 4:30 p.m. – 6 p.m. in Campus Center Room 165–169. Also visit the TEAMS table on the Campus Center Concourse today through Thursday. For more information contact Robyne Jenkins at 545–1118 or 545–0945.

Supermarket Sweep — MASSPIRG will be distributing "wish lists" at local supermarkets and collecting items upon exiting the supermarket. The wish lists will contain items needed by local shelters and soup kitchens. For more information call 545–0199.

Food Drive — As part of MASSPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Week activities, food drive begins today running through Friday. For more information call 545–0199.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program, will be discussing "Holidays and Anniversaries." The group meets in the Psychological Services Center on the first floor of Tobin at 7 p.m..

Reception — The Latin American Cultural Center presents a reception for Coro de la Universidad Politecnica de Puerto Rico this evening.

Concert — Boricuas Unidos, the UMass Puerto Rican Student Organization presents The Polytechnic University of Puerto Rico Choir at Bezanson Hall in the Fine Arts Center at 8 p.m.. There will be a reception afterwards at the Latin American Cultural Center.

Wednesday, Nov. 15

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for anyone interested in a 1996 Peace Corps position. The meeting is at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 165. For more information contact the Peace Corps Office at 12 Draper Hall, 545–2105.

Forum — The Chancellor's Commission on Civility will be holding a forum on past and current recipients of funding for Campus "Bridge–Building" Projects. The forum is at noon in Campus Center Room 917.

Meeting — For anyone interested in studying France next year, students and faculty who have participated in UMass' Academic Year in Paris/Rouen program will talk about their experiences and answer questions. 6:30 p.m., 301 Herter Hall. For more information contact Jenny, 546–7361.

Women's Studies — Women's Studies students are invited to attend an event focusing on course offerings for the spring semester. Faculty will give brief presentations on upcoming courses and the course offerings guide will be available. 4:30 p.m. – 6 p.m. in the Women's Studies Lounge in Bartlett 208A. For more information call 545–1922.

Skip–A–Meal — MASSPIRG is encouraging students on the University meal plan to volunteer to skip dinner at the Dining Halls. Food Services has agreed to refund each skipped meal and donate the proceeds to a local soup kitchen.

Hunger Banquet — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a banquet held at Earthfoods at 6 p.m. illustrating the pattern of global food distribution. Speakers will be present as well as live music. Cost is $4. For more information call 545–0199.

Musical — The UMass Theater Guild presents Chess, an '80s pop–rock musical by Tim Rice, Bjorn Ulvaeus, Benny Anderson and Richard Nelson. The show will be in Bowker Auditorium through Nov. 18 and the curtain is at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or at the FAC box office. $4 for students and $6 for the general public.

Games Night — There will be dominoes & Bricas at the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. this evening.

Lecture — The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series will present Professor Raymond S. Bradley in "Climatic Changes: Past, Present, and Future" at 4 p.m. in Thompson Hall Room 104. The event is free.

Workshop — Boricuas Unidos presents a workshop on typical/folklore Puerto Rican music to be given by the Polytechnic University of Puerto Rico Choir at the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m..

Thursday, Nov. 16

Exchange — British Universities North America Club (BUNAC) representatives from London and Dublin will be present to talk about student exchange employment programs in England and Ireland. The event will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 903. There will also be an informational table on the Campus Center Concourse. The event is sponsored by the Mather Career Center Office, for more information call 545–6011.

Workshop — Alex Deschamps and a panel of senior Teaching Assistants from various departments will present "Managing the Classroom as a TA." The seminar will address the difficulties graduate instructors face in their intermediary positions. The workshop is free and open to the public, to register, find the room location, and additional information contact the Center For Teaching at 5–1225.

Brown Bag Luncheon — The Stonewall Center presents Hampshire College Professor Margaret Cerullo speaking on "Families That Matter — Family Values, Queer Families, Queer Politics." The event is at noon in Campus Center Room 803 at noon. The event is wheelchair accessible and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5 p.m. – 6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions Should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mungers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA. 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8 p.m. – 10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Yeltsin recovering from illness

Opponents worry election may not take place on time

By Vladimir Isachenkov
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin increased his workload in the hospital Monday, and tried to counter the latest political rumors by vowing that elections will go ahead as scheduled. Yeltsin held several official meetings and phone conversations from the hospital room where he is recuperating from a heart ailment, officials said.

The president's work schedule now "practically corresponds" to his daily routine in the Kremlin, said presidential spokesman Sergei Medvedev.

Yeltsin, 64, is not expected back at work in the Kremlin before December. His aides have released few details of his illness. In addition to close aide Viktor Ilyushin, who has been a regular visitor, the president met Monday with three top assistants he hadn't seen since he was hospitalized Oct. 26 with his second bout of heart trouble in four months, the Interfax news agency reported.

On Monday, Yeltsin discussed the election campaign and other issues with chief of staff Sergei Filatov, political adviser Georgy Satarov and Vladimir Shevchenko, his chief of protocol.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled for Dec. 17 and campaigning is heating up. Presidential elections are to follow in June.

Speculation has increased that the vote may be delayed. Several lawmakers, claiming the current election law violates the constitution, have filed an appeal to the country's highest court. The court is expected to take up the issue later this month. Both Filatov and Satarov told Interfax that the president wants the elections to proceed as scheduled.

Despite Yeltsin's statements, there is widespread speculation that members of his inner circle may try to delay the presidential election to keep Yeltsin in power.

Other reports say top aides have lobbied for the parliamentary vote to be postponed for fear that hard-liners could score a sweeping victory. Current polls show the Communist Party in first place.

Yeltsin has said he will announce after the parliamentary election whether he will run again for president.

On Tuesday, Yeltsin was expected to meet with visiting Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev, Medvedev said.

■ government

continued from page 1

long Columbus Day holiday weekend, when most offices were closed anyway. A similar shutdown on three weekdays would cost $240 million to more than $600 million, the GAO estimated in 1991, counting only the toll on the government's 22 largest agencies.

"The costs would likely be considerably higher today," said John Tavares, an analyst who worked on the 1991 report.

How much? No one knows. There's just not enough information to guess, Tavares said: "Nobody's crazy enough to try it."

Shutdowns occur when Congress and the president can't agree on legislation to extend the spending authority of government agencies. For most federal agencies, that spending power was set to expire at midnight.

It's happened on a sweeping scale four times since 1980, when a U.S. attorney general's opinion made clear that the agencies couldn't keep spending money without official permission. The 1990 shutdown was the only one not resolved within one day. But this time, the disagreement is especially bitter.

Several people who braved a cold drizzle Monday to see the museums and monuments along the National Mall weren't happy with the impasse between Clinton and congressional Republicans.

"It's ridiculous and very childish," said Janice Morse of Lake Worth, Fla., who arrived Sunday night and was angry that the shutdown might spoil her four-day visit.

"I'm trying to see all I can today," said Morse, who had raced through three Smithsonian museums and was headed to a fourth by midday.

As the deadline for compromise drew nearer, museum volunteer Estelle Keren told tourist after tourist that she didn't know whether the Smithsonian would be open Tuesday.

"I think it's a bunch of politics," Keren said from behind the information desk at the Museum of Natural History. "Sickening politics."

Anxious would-be travelers packed passport offices Monday.

"I've planned on spending the whole day here," said Dianna Castro of Culver City as she waited in a passport-application line that stretched outside and around a corner at the federal building in downtown Los Angeles.

Applicants at the passport office in San Francisco faced delays of up to three hours. "There's a certain desperation that you can feel in the air," said Robert Schmidt of Pleasanton, who needed a passport for his honeymoon.

Nationwide, government workers were making last-minute plans for the shutdown. Most were told to come to work Tuesday as usual, even though they might be sent home. Their bosses couldn't tell them whether they would be furloughed, or how long it would last.

■ ribbon

continued from page 1

for over 70,000 ribbons from local banks, supermarkets, businesses, medical centers, hospitals, state and municipal police, community groups and many others.

The campaign, now in its ninth year, is being co–sponsored by Big Y Foods Inc., Massachusetts State Police, local police departments, MADD members and supporters.

"The holidays are an especially painful time for those who lost a loved one," Griffin said. "We encourage motorists to help us save lives this holiday season by tying a ribbon to their vehicle as a reminder not to drink and drive."

Project Red Ribbon "Tie One On For Safety" will continue through January 1.

edge

EDGE SALUTES INTRAMURAL EXCELLENCE

1995 - 1996 MEN'S SWIM MEET ORDER OF FINISH

200 Yard Medley Relay
1 Omar Candelas, Carlos Romero, Alex Mergarejo, Javier Gonzalez — Los Balbinos — 2:03.10
2 James Lawrence, Nick HAdjis, Adam Berwid, James Goodrow — Delta Chi — 2:06.44

50 Yard Freestyle
1 Javier Gonzalez — Los Balbinos — 24.22
2 Andrew Cotter — Lazy Lifeguards — 24.69

50 Yard Butterfly
1 Ben Happ — Lazy Lifeguards — 26.28
2 Jeff Leake — Lazy Lifeguards — 27.13

100 Yard Freestyle
1 Jeff Leake — Lazy Lifeguards — 54.95
2 Brad Capran — Lazy Lifeguards — 57.92

Team Order Of Finish
1 Lazy Lifeguards 63 — 2. Los Balbinos 39 — 3. Delta Chi 37 — 4. Sigma Phi Epsilon 16 — 5 Delta Upsilon 15

50 Yard Backstroke
1 Ben Happ — Lazy Lifeguards — 29.84
2 Andrew Cotter — Lazy Lifeguards — 29.83

50 Yard Breaststroke
1 E.J Villamano — Independent — 30.48
2 Alex Mergarejo — Los Balbinos — 31.79

200 Yard Freestyle Relay
1 Brad Capran, Andrew Cotter, Jeff Leake, Ben Happ — Lazy Lifeguards — 1:40.29
2 Omar Candelas, Carlos Romero, Alex Mergarejo, Javier Gonzalez — Los Balbinos — 1:51.41

1995-96 WOMEN'S SWIM MEET ORDER OF FINISH

200 Yard Medley Relay
No Entries

50 Yard Freestyle
1 Katie Fickinger — Lazy Lifeguards — 30.87
2 Kathy O'Dette — Lazy Lifeguards — 36.73

50 Yard Butterfly
1 Margaret Hitschanich — Lazy Lifeguards — 33.89
2 Katie Fickinger — Lazy Lifeguards — 38.89

100 Yard Freestyle
1 Jen Del Colle — Lazy Lifeguards — 1:18.75
2 Kat Grenis — Lazy Lifeguards — 1.23.83

50 Yard BAckstroke
1 Carolyn McGonagle — Lazy Lifeguards — 42.89
2 Jen Del Colle — Lazy Lifeguards — 43.26

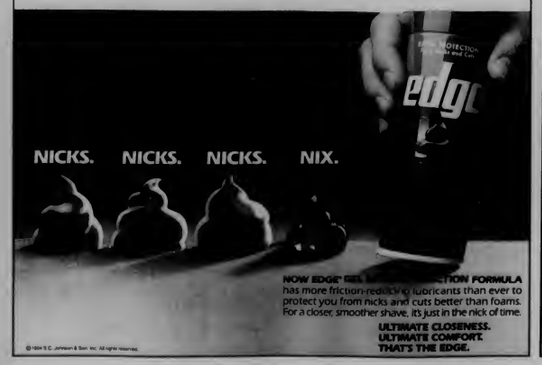
50 Yard Breatsroke
1 Margaret Hitschanich — Lazy Lifeguards — 37.70
2 Carolyn McGonagle — Lazy Lifeguards — 46.39

200 Yard Freestyle Relay
1 Jen Del Colle, Kat Grenis, Carolyn McGonagle, Katie Fickinger — Lazy Lifeguards — 2:16.35

Team Order Of Finish
1 Lazy Lifeguards — 74

1995-96 GRADUATE-FACULTY-STAFF MEN'S SWIM MEET ORDER OF FINISH

100 yard Freestyle
1 Jeff Conwin — Independent — 1:12.21



NOW EDGE ... has more friction-reducing lubricants than ever to protect you from nicks and cuts better than foams. For a closer, smoother shave, it's just in the nick of time.
ULTIMATE CLOSENESS. ULTIMATE COMFORT. THAT'S THE EDGE.
©1994 S.C. Johnson & Son, Inc. All rights reserved.

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.
• NEED CAR
• CALL RYAN AT
545-3500

EMILY BERRY/COLLEGIAN

I Can't Decide

Sophomore Rachel Panetta, left, and Kris Koenig, a Sophomore Apparel Marketing major view the wide array of class rings at the Josten's display table in the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

Six dead in Saudi bombing

By Adnan Malik
Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — A bomb ripped through a building filled with American and Saudi military personnel on Monday, tearing off the facade and engulfing the wreckage in flames. Six people were killed, including five Americans.

At least 60 people were wounded, including more than 30 Americans. It was not clear whether the attack was aimed at the Saudis, the Americans, or both.

Two groups claimed responsibility for the attack, but neither could be verified, said Raymond Mabus, U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

One group was the little-known Islamic Change Movement, which demanded last spring that Western forces leave Saudi Arabia or it would "exert all available means to evict these forces." The second group was the previously unknown Tigers of the Gulf. Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, has been a close ally of the United States for decades and the two countries have extensive military ties. Some Muslim fundamentalists oppose the presence of the U.S. military and other Western forces in Saudi Arabia, home to Islam's holiest shrines.

While open opposition to the ruling al-Saud family is not permitted, some underground groups have threatened to strike against the deeply conservative Saudi leadership and the Westernforces.

At least 60 people were wounded, including more than 30 Americans. It was not clear whether the attack was aimed at the Saudis, the Americans, or both.

The U.S. Embassy spokesman, Jeff Thomas, said late Monday the death toll among Americans had risen to five after one of the critically injured victims died in the hospital. He said a number of Americans were listed in critical condition, but gave no specific figures.

Earlier, a Pentagon official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 34 Americans were injured and some were taken to hospitals.

Another Pentagon official said two of the dead Americans were non-commissioned officers in the U.S. Army.

King Fahd convened his Cabinet, which "expressed its condemnation of this criminal act, which is foreign to our society, beliefs and religion," the Saudi Press Agency reported.

President Clinton pledged to "devote an enormous effort" to bring those responsible to justice, calling it "a hideous act" of terrorism. A dozen FBI agents and evidence specialists were being sent to Saudi Arabia to help with the investigation.

Mabus said the blast was caused by "an explosive device." "We are outraged by this act," he said.

Supreme Court refuses to kill inmates lawsuit

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today refused to kill a lawsuit in which black and Hispanic prison inmates in New York say denying them the right to vote in political elections illegally dilutes the clout of all minority voters in the state.

The justices rejected an appeal by New York Attorney General Dennis Vacco aimed at squelching the inmates' 1993 lawsuit, which contends that denying them the vote violates the federal Voting Rights Act.

U.S. District Judge Vincent Broderick threw out the class-action lawsuit filed by nine minority inmates, but the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated it last May.

The appeals court noted that the inmates' contention that denying them the vote has a disproportionate effect (by) diluting the voting strength of all minorities including those law abiding or otherwise-unincarcerated minority citizens who are registered to vote."

The appeals court said that claim was enough to qualify for a potential Voting Rights Act violation, and sent the inmates' case back to Judge Broderick for further study.

Opinionated?
People tell you to mind your own business?
Can't help but have a view about everything?

Then come submit your thoughts to the Editorial/Opinion Desk

Contact Geri Sahn
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families

Wed. October 18 room 174 or Tues. November 14 room 804

6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass

I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?

If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call University Health Services 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to ZZ Top & Everything in Between
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

Go through law school in one day.

Prospective students can expect to have a very satisfying day at the Western New England College School of Law Open House.

In the most recent Princeton Review/National Jurist survey of law students across the country, we were rated in the top 10% for student satisfaction. The environment is supportive yet academically challenging. Our faculty are deeply committed to teaching and have outstanding legal credentials. In fact, the most recent Chicago-Kent Law Review faculty scholarship survey ranked our law school among the top 50 in faculty publications.

We invite you to our Open House where you can tour the campus, speak with faculty and current students and attend a mock law class.

There is no charge to attend and free childcare is available for children over three.

Advance registration is preferred.

OPEN HOUSE
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1–4PM
S. PRESTLEY BLAKE LAW CENTER
• Mock law class and group discussion
• Application process and financial aid seminar
• Reception following Open House:4–4:30pm, with law school faculty, staff and students
• Tours from noon–1pm
• Curriculum and career planning sessions

To register call 413-782-1406 or email to lawadmis@wnec.edu

The School of Law is fully accredited by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools. We invite applications from all persons, regardless of gender, race, sexual orientation, or physical ability

Western New England College School of Law

1215 Wilbraham Rd., Springfield, MA 01119-2689 413-782-1406 Visit us on the World Wide Web at http://www.law.wnec.edu

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Mami Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk. Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Ruzemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Of clown heads and e-mail

There is a force out there which has been destroying our way of life for decades now. It has been eating away at the very foundation of our social institutions, and we have hardly taken notice. The enemy is not considered a menace to society like communism or racism. In fact, we have welcomed it with open arms. It is technological advancement in the name of convenience; replacing people with machines and otherwise destroying the social interactions which make our lives so interesting. If not brought to a halt, this movement could alter considerably the very concept of what it means to be human.

Why even leave your room? I'll tell you why. When your best friend is a bunch of wires and circuits, I think it is safe to say that you may have a problem.

Mark McGrath

The invasion of the machines began quite innocently. People hardly noticed when they had to start giving their fast food orders through a clown's head instead of a cashier. Here were grown adults talking to an inanimate object, a ridiculous object at that, not even seeing what they were doing as absurd. Yes, there was a living, breathing human somewhere behind the clown head, but the precedent of talking to things not human was established.

Then came answering machines. Answering machines took the concept of talking to an inanimate object even farther, because there was no person behind them. Once people started talking to these machines, there was no turning back. The fact most of us are now comfortable leaving messages on them, and actually rely on them, shows how machines have established their importance in everyday life.

Nowadays, there are new culprits. One group of such culprits is ATM machines. Let me tell you a story about a particular one. A few days ago, I needed to get some money. I went to an ATM that was built into the front of a bank. Even though the bank was open and there were no lines in front of the tellers, I waited to use the ATM. The poor tellers were bored. Wondering why I was waiting, I realized I was actually more comfortable doing business with a machine than an actual person. That truth, while sickening, is the very root of the problem.

The same can be said of today's computers. The typical computer has enough fun on it to keep a person entertained for weeks. You can shop, mail, read a book or even get a date over the internet. Why even leave your room? I'll tell you why. When your best friend is a bunch of wires and circuits, I think it is safe to say that you may have a problem.

Technological advances have a way of sucking people in. Most will come in the name of convenience. They don't take the time to consider what is happening to them each time they deal with a machine instead of a live person. People are more and more often turning what used to be social exchanges with other people into interactions with machines. We are becoming dependent on them because they are so convenient.

When you interact with certain people every day, you tend to absorb some of their habits. Unfortunately, many are becoming more like their computers. I have a friend who immediately upon learning someone's name asks for their password. It's really quite sad. The worst part is that while people are becoming more like their computers, their computers are becoming more human.

In the future, I can see computers not only making the calculations of today, but dominating every facet of our lives. Out of human pride, we ought to try and reverse this trend. While certain machines may make life easier, they do little in the way of actual gratification. An ATM may be able to print "Have a nice day," on a receipt, but when was the last time you saw an ATM smile while it printed? On the internet :-) may represent a smile, but it falls far short of the one you can get from a real live person.

I'm not trying to say computers and their mechanical friends are bad. It's just the idea of losing certain aspects of our humanity to them disturbs me. In order to stop the process certain steps must be taken. While these steps may be more difficult and time consuming, they will also be more gratifying.

Write a letter. Engage in a discussion with someone you've never met before. Get off that stupid internet and socialize, damn it! Smile at strangers and let them smile back. It may just lead you to something you've never had before — a life.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Caucus represents sexist attitudes

On Nov. 8, 1995, two white male senators from the Student Government Association proposed a motion that read:

Whereas, Title II, Chapter 3, Section 4 of the SGA Constitution & By-Laws states: "The Senate shall, upon a majority vote of its membership in attendance at a scheduled meeting, provide for the procedures for the creation of a caucus," and

"Whereas, women students are underrepresented in the Undergraduate Student Senate,

Be It Resolved, that the Undergraduate Student Senate support the establishment of a Woman's Caucus."

Lisa Chiu

The presenter of this motion said he was representing his constituency. He said a woman approached him about this issue and he was doing his job as a senator to bring the request in the form of this motion before the senate.

He and a small group of supporters were speaking on behalf of this woman and all women in general. This woman was supposedly working on a charter for the Woman's Caucus and that, for whatever reasons, couldn't come to senate to present the motion herself, so being the devoted senator that he is, he had to speak for the woman.

Here was an issue that directly affected women both inside the senate and outside the senate, and with the exception of the woman he alluded to, no other woman was informed about it.

Wouldn't it have made sense to ask other women what they thought about it? Wouldn't it have made sense to see how the women in the senate felt? Wouldn't it have made sense for the women of the senate to be told and asked to help with such a motion. I mean after all they have female constituents as well, don't they? Wouldn't it have been feasible to call an informal women's caucus made up of the 27 female senators in senate to discuss such issues? Yes, it all would have made sense, but none of this was done.

Not only is it offensive that women were not informed about the motion, but it is even more offensive that he felt this one woman's charter and opinion would constitute, serve and address all women's issues, by expecting that all women would vote for this because they are of the are the same gender. It is even more offensive still that the senator presenting the motion felt he could present and debate on behalf of women.

It is disturbing that just minutes prior to his motion was to go before senate one woman, who was against it, was approached, and in this "discussion" the woman who was prepared to argue against the motion was badgered in such a way as to shake her off balance. She was bombarded with accusations, that combined with the physical stance of these men who were surrounding her, re-created the traditional structure of men using force and aggression to get what they wanted.

It was disturbing to see that when the motion did fail 24 for and 29 against, with a few abstentions, one woman who was against it was approached in a similar manner by being accused of being against women. The faction of men behind the motion approached the woman with the aggressive stance again of several men surrounding one woman.

In the days following this senate meeting, chalk writing was seen on the walkways outside the Campus Center and Thompson saying the SGA hates women, and women are being discriminated against the senate. One woman who spoke against the motion received three telephone hang-ups that may or may not have been related to what occurred in senate, but we'll never know because the cowards never said anything.

Women Studies classes were approached presenting the motion with no presentation on the women's side of the debate, thus successfully coercing the women who were not aware of what occurred in senate to sign a petition, that on the surface sees good. Once again women are marginalized by not being informed there was significant dissent against the motion by women.

If these men truly believed they were helping women, they would be receptive to what the women in the senate had to say. Instead, they resorted to kindergarten tactics by calling names, getting angry and aggressive, getting others on their side by not telling the whole story, and by anonymously writing in chalk all over the campus.

If these men truly believed they were helping women, they would know a motion that concerns women, needs to be written, consulted, presented and debated by women, and women alone. They should understand that as an ally they can talk and advocate for women's issues, but when it comes to the creation, the presentation and the discussion about womens' agenda, they should stay away from something they have no first hand knowledge about.

When I told the presenter this, he stated it was sexist. There is no sincerity nor integrity behind his motion. What is really behind this motion is a group of men who are finding all sorts of different ways to control the makeup of the senate. This group of men have, in previous meetings, talked about creating a process to create caucuses. What this group is doing is appealing to various underrepresented groups like women, the GLBT community and even the physically impaired to find ways to stack the senate, and ultimately to create a caucus that will serve their needs, not those they are claiming to support.

What are their needs? Last year, some of these members successfully stacked the senate so the majority were from the Greek area, and when it came down to budget time, it was the Greek area, and other Greek affiliated groups that got a lot of funding. It's a pity they are using other people's trust to watch their ulterior motives become a reality. What is most insidious about this is that the groups they are "supporting" really feel emotions on these issues. They feel it, because it directly affects them.

When I left that senate meeting, I was ready to either quit and burst into tears. For them, it wasn't a big issue, they can co-opt any of these groups, speak for them and not feel any emotional ties at all. They have nothing to lose, because none of the issues involve them. To them, it's just another day in senate.

Winona La Duke, a Native American activist, said it best when she spoke at UMass last month about issues affecting Native Americans and Native American women.

"What befalls mother earth befalls her daughters on earth...Long term self-determination is the prerequisite [so] that we [can] determine our own bodies...All people have a right to self-determination."

As a woman of color I see self-determination, the ability to determine for myself and my community what our own destiny should be as one of the most important rights that both white women, and especially women of color, must utilize in order to allow for true equality. The only way we can create policies, organize activism and present accurate solutions is if the makers, organizers and presenters of such projects are from every group it is striving to serve and protect.

Lisa Chiu is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

THE FRESHMEN ARE MAKING IT REALLY TOUGH FOR ME TO COMPROMISE ON THIS.
DEFAULT, DEAR NEWTUS, LIES NOT IN OUR UNDERLINGS, BUT IN OURSELVES, THAT WE ARE STARS.
OK, THIS IS STRESSFUL FOR ME, TOO.
DEBT CEILING
ET TU?
— STOP IT!
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Your columnist, Mr. Pugh recycles examples of what the supremely authoritative and objective Limbaugh Institute for Advanced Conservative Studies (SIC) calls "Liberal hate speech." Ironies and follies abound here.

When did the Washington Times, Rev. Moon's contribution to American journalism become a snake pit of liberal piety? That's where most of Pugh's examples originated. Whatever the source, the examples are hardly persuasive. While it is true that Newt Gingrich, though from Georgia, has never been proved to have actually "lynched people," and that it is unkind to wish hardening of the physical arteries (way too late for his intellectual or moral arteries), on Clarence Thomas, what about the rest is hateful or inaccurate?

They are simple descriptions, not of what Gingrich's minions say they will do, but of what they have already begun. Mr. Pugh and that fat charlatan Limbaugh needs to distinguish between "hate speech" and factual, accurate descriptions of an unthinking, near sighted, morally bankrupt hate politics in action.

M. Thelwell
New Africa House

Disappointed in SGA decision

To the Editor:

In a terrible display of politics at its worst, the Student Government Association senate defeated a pro student motion to create a Women's Caucus. Historically, women have been underrepresented in the SGA and in campus political activism in general. The creation of a Women's Caucus would empower women across campus, and help mobilize women to fight for the issues that concern them. Most importantly a Women's Caucus would help women gain the representation in the political process at UMass.

Unfortunately, the motion was attacked by the Senate because the senators presenting the motion were men. To often, the SGA divides itself into groups based on race, sex and politics. We can never have student unity if we separate and segregate ourselves. As students, we must refrain from judging each other's abilities based on sex or race.

Martin Luther King said we should not be judged by the color of our skin, but by the content of one's character. Thus, let us judge each other by the content of our character and the merit of one's abilities. In defeating the Women's Caucus, the SGA has lost some of its credibility as a representative of the entire student body. The theme of the SGA should be "putting students first," not putting politics first.

In ending, let's put students first by building unity, breaking down the barriers of segregation and separation by supporting pro student ideas.

Peter Luongo
Amherst

Smoking policies are necessary

To the Editor:

This is in response to Jeremy Hurewitz's article "A government smoke screen," which described America's anti- smoking policies as unfair.

The author stated that, "In America, every tight-assed fiber-eating health nut wants to criminalize tobacco and convert us to their cult in which they all live to be 100, eat rice cakes and excrete pebbles with smiles of excitement long absent from their gaunt sagging cheeks."

The amusing images produced by this statement do not make up for its wild inaccuracy. The legislation banning or limiting smoking in public places is justified. That doesn't mean I want to criminalize tobacco. If people want to smoke, that's their business. They have the right to enjoy cigarettes as long as they don't interfere with the public's right to breathe clean air.

He compared current anti-smoking legislation to the government's criminalizing of marijuana 50 years ago. He stated that the studies and the surveys that the government cited were fabricated by the timber industry, which felt threatened by hemp's wide ranging possibilities. He said that the government "played whore to big business and big money."

This is quite plausible. However, his suggestion that the government is misleading the public the way it did 50 years ago makes no sense. What industry fabricated the studies that show second hand smoke is dangerous? Why? What big business is the government playing whore to today?

The list of big businesses that benefit from the use of tobacco is endless. A mountain of evidence shows that tobacco companies knew second hand smoke was dangerous and covered it up for decades. Jeremy Hurewitz's argument doesn't support his position, it weakens it.

The government is protecting our right to breathe clean air. It is not taking away our right to enjoy cigarettes.

Adam Sherson
Leverett

SGA's decision misinterpreted

To the Editor:

As Speaker of the SGA Senate, I feel the need to react to recent events following last Wednesday's Senate meeting. First, I need to clarify the headline from Friday's Collegian which read, "Senate rejects Women's Caucus." This is not what happened. The motion actually read "to support the establishment of a Women's Caucus," not to actually create the caucus.

There is currently no proposal, charter or plan, leaving numerous unanswered questions over how the Women's Caucus would be put together. The majority of Senators that dissented from this motion (half were women) expressed their concern about there being no plan, and questioned the process of Senators Dave Gafney and Bill Ramsey trying to create the Women's Caucus without involving any women on the Senate and only one named individual from the Everywoman's Center.

A rushed Women's Caucus will lack the necessary structure to truly empower the women of this campus, and its long-term survival would be put into question if the appropriate people are not involved in its' creation. Gafney and Ramsey's motives for trying to speed up the process without involving women from across campus was put into question and remained unanswered. The Senate vote against the motion was more of a statement against Senators Gafney and Ramsey and their tactics than the actual motion itself.

In addition, action was taken by the defeated parties and their associates to chalk up the campus with messages like "SGA does not support women's rights" and "No Women's Caucus." These are complete misrepresentations of the SGA and what we have sought to accomplish this year. The SGA is led by President Christine Lopes and there are now 29 women on the Senate, compared with nine last year.

The Senate has already passed motions supporting an increase in call boxes across campus, an issue of importance to the safety of all students, particularly women. The SGA is also currently working on getting more escort vans and better escort service, because it is preposterous that a University as large as ours has only one escort van in service.

The SGA is committed to women's rights and the struggle is not relegated to just the women of the SGA. I challenge anyone to prove to me that the SGA does not support women's rights, and invite anyone who does feel that way to come in to the SGA and get involved yourself.

Dan Castellano
Speaker of the Senate

Senators try to empower student government

To the Editor:

I must begin this by stating that we as a student body must be engaged in constructive discussion about the lives of students on this campus, so it upsets me to no end to see a group of people who do nothing but dissolve the important conversations of the Student Government Association in to polemics. So as we debate motions that effect a small group of people, these white men, the larger issues campus-wide, go unheard.

So why did the SGA vote down a motion to support a Women's Caucus? Well, all I can tell you is the perspective of a male of color. This discussion about a caucus was never an authentic one. Being a part of the leadership in the SGA, the Speaker or the President nor I were approached about the issue and asked to take part in the discussion about the idea.

This is mostly perplexing because our SGA president is a woman. Who better to propose the idea but Christine Lopes, one of the most powerful woman on campus? Well, the reason for not consulting Christine is that she had already begun to conceptualize and organize a caucus focused on women's issues. Her ideas did not, however, fit with the needs of the men involved in the motion that went before the Senate.

Here is what is at the heart of the issue, "The Zero sum game." This energetic group of white men are not at all powerful in a Senate that is diverse and integrated with women or people of color. Big surprise that they would try to engage us in the disabling conversation of, "why should you have something I don't." The events of that evening reflect the quality of our Senate. Only a Senate that is strong in its purpose to empower students and represent students could have seen through this smoke screen that was that sad motion.

We need to congratulate the Senators who voted against it, because they did not fall into that trap of "the zero-sum" game that is used to often in questions about justice in this country. I hope the fact the motion was brought forward by men, with little to no input by women, is not lost on people.

Finally, to those well meaning white men who seem to have all the time in the world speaking for women, your time could be better spent. Funny how I haven't seen many of them on Beacon Hill with us lobbying against raising the raising cost of this institution. Maybe they have the means to attend the second most expensive public University in the country, and maybe that is another issue all together. Join the Debate club, or the College Bowl, or some other organization that may allow you to posture and feed your egos. For the Senate and the SGA are places of problem solving, not childish, self-serving bickering.

Daniel Rivera
Trustee

Black Affairs

Tuesday, November 14, 1995

The UMass Experience, Indeed!

Age, gender, race or previous condition of intelligence do not seem to matter. As every writer learns early on, as soon as the title editor is placed next to one's name, bad things intellectually speaking (conceptual fuzziness, linguistic inanity) invariably happen. Even students are not exempt; witness:

"Prof. Thelwell, can you do a piece for us on the 'UMass Experience?'"

"And what the (deleted) might 'the UMass Experience' be," I asked. "Where will I find it and how will I recognize it?" The answer was unintelligible but in its vagueness strangely familiar. A light dawned.

Michael Thewell

"Are you sure you don't work in Whitmore? Or the President's Office?"I wondered aloud.

Apparently offended by an innocent and logical association, the editor uttered something unkind and hung up, ending, as I thought, the matter.

But as I was to discover when my phone rang not five minutes later, I was wrong. I had grievously misspoken and with a remorseful and contrite heart offer apology.

For there is indeed an entire class of phenomenon that can be described as the "UMass Experience." One recurrent aspect of which seems to be the inability to resist any charlatan demanding extortionate fees to come here to deliver dubious and provocative messages calculated to ignite a media firestorm of high intensity but little significance.

According to my second caller, the Distinguished Visitor Committee at their last meeting voted to invest some $15,000 of student moneys to contract with Charles Murray to speak on campus. Moreover, said the caller, the committee in its wisdom and courage, had also decided to withhold announcement or publicity of the event as long as possible, presumably to avoid potential protest, controversy or even discussion from the constituency whose money it is proposing to spend in this manner.

Mr. Murray is, of course, the surviving co-author of The Bell Curve, only the latest in a long historical tradition of American "scholarship" purporting to prove "scientifically," the innate, genetically transmitted, intellectual inferiority of Black people as a race. This aspect of the book has been dismissed by just about the entire scholarly community investigating human intelligence as "pseudo-science," the patently fraudulent manipulation of statistical data.

What is in the book is even more pernicious—and revealing— the ideological agenda of the authors, the political arguments deriving from these alleged "findings."

Murray's argument, once one cuts through the rhetorical underbrush, could not be more transparent or more crude. Whatever contemporary conditions of social, educational and social inequity afflict the Black community are not, as one might naively assume, the consequence of historical social policy, corporate behavior or a generally discriminatory political culture. No indeed! The Black community's problems are self-generated; the sad but inevitable result of the genetic, intellectual disability of Black people themselves. Consequently, misguided social interventions like educational enhancement or fair employment policies which seek to ensure equality of opportunity for all Americans are doomed to failure. So far as black people are concerned a waste of taxpayers money and misguided compassion. No kidding that's the argument.

One has to wonder, therefore, if the committee really understands the intellectual value beneath the packaging that they are renting at such inflated prices.

Do they indeed understand how tired, shopworn, dingy, moth-eaten, tattered and how very old the merchandise is? This racist impulse in American scholarship has a long, dismal history.

In the 1820's, Thomas Jefferson in his Note on Virginia offered his observations on the intellectual limitations of the race. Course, Mr. Jefferson omitted to mention whether his sample included the IQ scores of Ms. Sally Hemming and the black family she bore him. Nor do we know how he accommodated the accomplishments of his acquaintance Benjamin Banneker, the self-taught mathematical genius who was black.

As late as the 1930's, another Southern gentleman, a professor of education whose name escapes me, published a volume "proving" that any effort to educate Negroes beyond the junior high level was misguided. Why? Because as he proved "the Negro mind reaches full development by age 14 after which further development ceases."

During World War II a committee of the U.S. Senate released a "scientific" study proving that Negroes lacked the basic intelligence to operate sophisticated mechanical equipment. That being so, the juxtaposition of the words "Negro" and "aviator" was an absurdity. The "experiment" attempting to train Black fighter pilots could only damage the war effort by wasting badly needed military equipment. That argument did not prevail, however, and subsequently the 332nd Fighter Group—the Black air wing—became the most highly decorated air force unit of the war and the only one never to lose a single bomber under its protection to enemy fire.

So it is not Mr. Murray's "science" that engages me here. (Though I must confess to a certain heart-sickness whenever I consider that regardless of the most strenuous mental effort on my part, I'm genetically doomed to be less intelligent than my white colleagues. A truly sobering thought indeed.).

No, what concerns me it is not the substance of the event but its meaning, and the atmospherics likely to surround it. What I feel is a sense of deja vu, of having seen this or something very like it before. What can it be about "the UMass Experience" that renders groups of our students so vulnerable to snake oil salesmen with dubious and provocative messages, high price tags and a press agent?

What can it be about "the UMass Experience" that renders groups of our students so vulnerable to snake oil salesmen with dubious and provocative messages, high price tags and a press agent?

I distinctly remember another conversation with a group of Black students not so very long ago.

"How can you possibly justify spending that much money (a reported $25 grand) to bring Farrakhan here?" I asked.

"Because he has an important message for Black folk."

"Really? A message worth $25 grand and the aggravation and hard feelings bound to follow? How is the Jewish community likely to feel?"

"But he is not coming here to talk about Jews," they assured me. "Only about us."

"Maybe," I said. "But how will you feel when some group digs up some hoary old racists and brings them here?" I don't recall what the answer was then.

Now, in any event I'm likely to get an answer soon. Because I doubt seriously that Mr. Murray's subject is likely to be Peace in Bosnia or the presidential campaign. His sole stock-in-trade and latest meal ticket is the alleged intellectual inferiority of Black people. I presume therefore that will be his subject. A subject presumably worth fifteen grant to the Distinguished Visitors Program. I will dearly love to hear them explain their thinking and expectations for this selection.

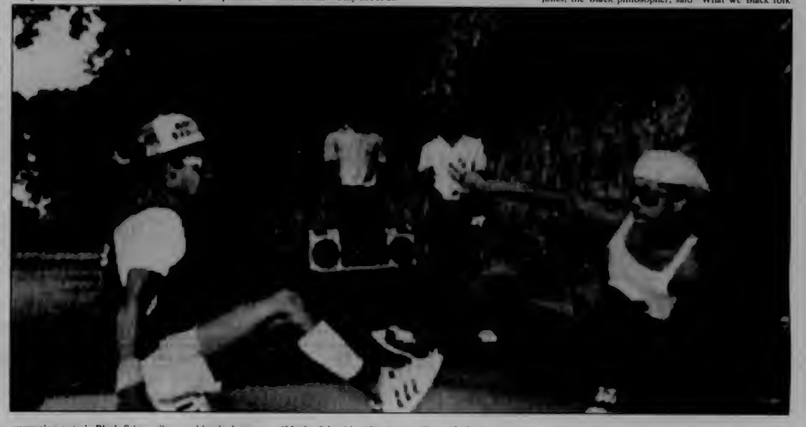
Then again there is the administration. Who can forget the circus of the absurd that unfolded around the Farrakhan visit? Will the administration undertake the same furious round of damage control again? Will they mobilize the seminars, discussion groups, public statements, etc. designed to "lessen the pain" and distance themselves from an event with which they were not associated in the first place? Will there be the same appeals for healing, compassion, tolerance this time? Will they this time "feel" my "pain" also? Will assorted campus groups and individuals again fill the press with principled statements "repudiating" Murray's perceived message? What, if anything, will the student majority say and do? It all promises to be mightily interesting and instructive. The UMass Experience indeed!

Then again there is the administration. Who can forget the circus of the absurd that unfolded around the Farrakhan visit? Will the administration undertake the same furious round of damage control again?

To the Black community I would counsel a mature thoughtfulness and masterly restraint. As Junebug J. Jones, the Black philosopher, said "What we Black folk need most is a lot of patience and a sense of irony." The absolutely last thing we need to be doing is helping create the public controversy and hysteria on which the media feeds and provocateurs like Murray need if they are to prosper. Perhaps we ought to meet to determine whether any formal response from the community is even necessary and if so, what form it should take.

My very strong sense is that there is a response that would speak volumes about the intellectual maturity of this entire community which would be to not dignify the event with an audience. What if they gave a fifteen thousand dollar speech and nobody came? I have a vision of Mr. Murray delivering his address to an audience consisting in its entirety of his employers: the committee who invited him and those media people unfortunate enough to be assigned to be there. That would restore my faith in the "UMass Experience."

Michael Thewell is a UMass Professor.



Correction

After the story was already in press, Professor Thelwell was able to make contact with a D.V.P. representative who corrected the information from his original source. This clarification, which shed a somewhat different light on the affairs, is as follows. Charles Murray has indeed been invited. However, he will be debating the issue with Dr. Alvin Puissaint, a Black psychologist from Harvard University. The speakers fee is 15,000 dollars as reported. But this is to be split [unequally] between the two speakers. Also, there was no discussion on the part of the D.V.P. to delay the announcement for any reason. Prof. Thelwell asked us to feature this clarification promantly and regrets any previous inaccuracies.

Editorial Insight On Ignorance

The Black Affairs page discovered in Sunday's New York Times interesting information on the funding of Murray's attack on Black intelligence. The Harry Bradley foundation (with assets of 450 million) has been subsidizing conservative Intellectuals. According to the Times, the foundation has "a beneficiary list that runs from the center right to [way] out there. The foundation paid Charles Murray nearly 500,000 dollars over the four years he researched his book on race, I.Q. and genetics. It subsidized David Brooks attack on Anita Hill and the legal work Clint Bolick, who's Wall Street Journal piece was the first to dub Lani Guinier the 'quota queen'." So apparently, Mr. Murray's "objective scholarship" was committed, bought and paid for by right wing funding sources. If the Times account is accurate he hardly needs the University of Massachusetts student's money.

The foundation paid Charles Murray nearly 500,000 dollars over the four years he researched his book on race, I.Q. and genetics.

Chris Byrd

UMass's "BustedFro" Representing the Real Hip-Hop

EMILY REEVE/COLLEGIAN

In the Amazon we grow strong - Whistle'n the Revolution Song - My man he understands, the sh*t I'm on.

Arts & Living

FAC Director performs tonight

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Fine Arts Center Director, Dr. Frederick Tillis, will read poetry and perform solo on the saxophone tonight at the Augusta Savage Gallery. The performance, taking place at 7 p.m., will be a first for the Hampshire Valley.

Born in Galveston, Texas, Dr. Tillis graduated cum laude from Wiley College and earned both his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Music Composition from the University of Iowa.

His compositions incorporate rhythm and structural influences from African music, as well as elements of jazz and other styles from around the world. He has written over 100 pieces of music in various media, including orchestral, jazz, instrumental, choral, chamber music and vocal. In addition, he is also the author of Jazz Theory and Improvisation. His talents don't lie solely in the realms of music however.

Tillis, an accomplished poet, explores themes of the spiritual world, nature, peace, time, love, dreams and fantasy. His poetry reflects the balance that he has found in the arts, philosophy and in his own life. His published poetry includes In the Spirit and the Flesh; Images of Mind and Heart; In Celebration; Of Moons, Moods, Myths, and the Muse. Currently, Tillis is working on a fifth publication, Harlem Echoes.

In a statement, Tillis remarked that "Music and all of the other arts belong to one family that nurtures the human spirit and soul."

Tillis is the recipient of numerous awards. Notable grants come from the Rockefeller Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

This performance is free and open to the public. The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the Central Residential Area. For more information, please call 545-5177.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Fred Tillis will appear at the Augusta Savage Gallery tonight.

Ian performs emotion filled show

By Josh Wardrop
Collegian Staff

JANIS IAN
Iron Horse Music Hall
Nov. 11

One of the most beautiful and eloquent voices of the last few decades returned to the Valley this weekend. Singer/ songwriter Janis Ian played to a capacity crowd at the Iron Horse Music Hall Saturday night, alternately tickling funnybones and touching the depths of the human heart.

Ian's name may be unfamiliar to most Generation X'ers, but during the '70s she set a standard for singers as socially conscious artists, and particularly for women as solo performers. Still in her teens when she had her first hit, "Society's Child," Ian displayed, even then, a maturity and sensitivity well beyond her tender years. The '80s were less commercially rewarding, but Ian has recorded steadily throughout the good and bad and has just released her 15 album, Revenge.

The Iron Horse was the last stop on Ian's eight-month national tour to support Revenge, and she finished in brilliant captivating form. She performed alone, with an acoustic guitar as the only accompaniment to a single voice. But what a voice: powerful, defiant, triumphant, heart- rending. Armed with a collection of great songs, Ian seemed to draw off the love of the crowd, resulting in one of the most comfortable and intimate shows this reviewer has even attended.

Ian mixed old classics like "At Seventeen," a poignant song about the heartaches faced by adolescents, "Plain Janes" and songs from Revenge. One of these, "Ready For the War," was preceded by a lengthy, tongue-in-cheek hysterical account of Ian's desperate attempts to sell out. Indeed, Ian struck a curious but effective balance between some emotionally charged materially and her warm onstage chat, which skewered (among others) Michael Jackson, K- Mart and people from Tennessee, where she now makes her home. Publically out as a lesbian since 1974, Ian performed a new song about the experience of being gay and living in the deep South that was pointedly funny and thought- provoking.

Ian's greatest strength, though, undoubtedly lies on her ballads — many of which dealt with the company of social issues she is famous for. "Society's Child" — a song about an interracial relationship between teenagers — seemed to genuinely move Ian as well as her audience. Considering how many times she has played this signature tune over the past 25 years, it seemed a true testimony to the artist and her work. Ian closed with a song about a "four-letter word" that referred very clearly to AIDS, and which can't have left a dry eye in the house. This tour may be over, but an artist still so obviously vital and talented as Janis Ian will surely grace us with her presence again — and the sooner the better.

Opening for Ian was local singer/songwriter Ellen Cross, a future star, and a talent to be reckoned with. Her angelic voice was well complemented by introspective acoustic songs like "The Virgin of Guadalupe" and "My Alibi."

~ MOVIES ~

Nature Calls, Carrey answers

Ace Ventura returns as the insane & wacky pet detective

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

ACE VENTURA: WHEN NATURE CALLS
Directed by Steve Oederek with Jim Carrey
Playing at Hampshire Six

America's favorite pet detective is back with more inane humor to tickle, or rather jar, your funny bone.

Jim Carrey returns in the sequel to his million dollar-grossing Ace Ventura: Pet Detective as the animal-loving, wise-cracking, butt-talking Ace Ventura.

This time around, nature calls Ace to the jungles of Nibia, where a tribal feud is brewing over the theft of a sacred Great White Bat.

Ace had been spending his time meditating in an ashram, devastated by a failed attempt to rescue a raccoon in a Cliffhanger-like opening scene, when a British tribe interpreter seeks out the pet detective for assistance in the investigation of the missing bat.

Ace's antics begin as the mystery starts to unfold. He sneaks around a the jungle, disguising himself as various animals, trying to locate the man who has stolen the religious, and very valuable bat.

These comedy bits in the beginning of the film, where Ace spits food out of his nose, and makes fun of the aristocrats who wear fur wraps and drives in his lunatic fashion are funny. A particularly hilarious scene involves Ace hiding inside of a mechanical rhinoceros.

Once the first half-hour of the film passes, the peals of laughter from the audience change to yawns. Carrey's array of funny faces becomes dull, and his Ace witticisms become tiresome. There are only so many ways he can vary the way he says, "Reeeeaaaally!"

There are no surprises in this Ace Ventura movie, unlike the first one, which had the Crying Game-esque ending. Ace does not have a love interest this time around (Courtney Cox has moved onto bigger, friendlier things). Ace regurgitates all of his old jokes and lines, he just exaggerates them even more, and they become stale very quickly.

Audiences love Jim Carrey, though. They love him enough to sell out every two-screen showing at the local theater this weekend. Hollywood loves him, too. The big producers love him enough to pay him $20 million per film — that's in the Mel Gibson/Sly Stallone range.

The question is though, is Carrey worth it? Does he have staying power, or is he just going to be a four-hit wonder? His fate may change when the Dumb & Dumber and Mask sequels have run their course, and the "stupid" fad fades out of comedy.

A recent episode of "Entertainment Tonight" compared the career of Jim Carrey to that of fellow comedy actor, Robin Williams. To say current Hollywood fave Carrey is comparable to the multi-talented and successful Robin Williams is like saying New Kids on the Block were similar to the Beatles.

Carrey, though he may be the biggest box office draw of the year, is typecast. How much range could it possibly take to go from "In Living Color's" Fire Marshal Bill to Ace Ventura, the Mask or the Riddler?

Sure, they both started out on television and doing stand- up, but Williams has a spontaneity and an insane sense of humor that comes naturally to him. Carrey can make some wild faces, but he places a large reliance upon special effects, costume and make-up.

It's possible we may see him narrate an animated film like Williams did with Aladdin, but it is fairly doubtful that we will see him doing moralistic family films, like Mrs. Doubtfire. You can clean up Carrey's mouth, but how can you instill morals in an actor whose forte is talking out of his butt?

It is also highly unlikely that Carrey will be receiving the Academy Award nominations Williams did for his dramatic roles in Dead Poet's Society and The Fisher King. Carrey in Good Morning Vietnam part II? Not gonna happen.

As for the present, though, Carrey's career is sky rocketing, and not even close to crashing and burning yet. As for the actor, he is so hyper, somebody better get him some ritalin before he burns out.

The jokes come fast and furious in the beginning of Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls, and Carrey tires out the audience. The problem is, we have seen the stuff before, and it is only funny for so long — but not as long as it will take for you to wait in line for a movie ticket. C+

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

The Daily Collegian, we bring you the weather

Surviving the Holidays:
Two support Groups Offered by the Mental Health Division of the University Health Services.

Eating, Body Image, and the Holidays
This 4 session support group meets
Mondays 12:30 - 2:00 PM
November 13, 20, 27 & December 4
Meetings will be held in the Campus Center.
Family problems, numerous food centered events, expectations to "look good" and feel joyful all contribute to the pressures many feel at this time of year. If you find that negative feelings about food and body image intensify around the holidays, this is a group where you can share your concerns and learn some coping strategies.

Which Home For The Holidays?
This 4 session support group meets
Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 PM
November 15, 29 & December 6, 13
This group for students from divorced or separated families will examine coping strategies to deal with the particular stresses that occur at the holidays when families are no longer together. Attendance at all 4 seasions is expected.

Preregistration required for both groups.
To resister call 545-2337
8:00AM - 5:00 PM, Monday - Friday

DELANO'S
57 North Pleasant Street
253-5141 Proper Identification A Must Bud Bar Hopper Night
HATS, T-SHIRTS &
ASSORTED PRIZE GIVE-AWAYS
FREE TACOS
STARTING AT 9PM

Distinguished Visitor's Program Proudly Presents
Katie Koestner
"No-Yes"
Koestner will speak of her personal experiences with date rape, including her campus hearing and post-rape encounters with college administrators, police, health officials, and Congress. She will also discuss facts about rape - its prevalence among college students and its relationship to drugs and alcohol - and suggestions for prevention.
Wednesday, November 15
8:00 P.M.
UMass Student Union Ballroom
Admission: Free to UMass Undergrads, $2 all others.

Distinguished Visitors Program

November 17th
in the Student Union Ballroom
8:00
311
with Shootyz Groove!
presale tix: $15 for UMASS students, $16.50 for general public
Tickets are sold at Tix Unlimited (at UMASS), Northampton, Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record (in Amherst).
For More Information, Call UPC at (413) 545-2892
Event Sponsored By: Rolling Stone FILA

Japanese dance mixes old & new

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

SAEKO ICHINOHE & CO.
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 9

Saeko Ichinohe and Company were in town Thursday, performing at Bowker Auditorium with co-sponsorship from the Asian Dance and Music Program.

What makes this dance company different from so many others is its ability to blend both Old and New, as well as East and West, in a delicate and yet powerful way. The company began its activities in 1970 and has since gone on to perform at many prestigious events including the New York Dance Festival, Artpark, Wolftrap and the Lincoln Center Out-of-Doors Festival.

The first act, titled Chidori, was based around one solitary female dancer who utilized a traditional Japanese fan. The music and dance were traditional and Saeko Ichinohe herself was the star.

Miyabi was the name of the next act which was far more contemporary with a distinct emphasis upon ballet and classical music. Again traditional fans were used and served as a delightful contrast to the previous traditional piece.

The third scene, Dosijin,– was a long and elaborate piece performed by a variety of dancers. The focus was upon the masked guardian (or dosijin) who in former times was the expeller of evil spirits; in contemporary times he serves as god of marriage and birth. The piece was a mix of traditional dance and drama but with a comical, contemporary twist, adding color and meaning to the scene.

Goza, the fourth act, was a humorous and witty dance in which Saeko Ichinohe illustrated new uses for the traditional Japanese rug (goza). The act opened with what looked like a cylindrical rug in the center of the stage but out popped Ichinohe and soon a whole quartet of goza-wielding dancers were performing alongside her — laughter and merriment ensued from the audience.

After the intermission the company performed an excerpt from the Tale of Genji. This consisted of five scenes based on chapters from the book which was written by Lady Muraski in the 11th century. All five scenes were enchanting but the final one, titled Return of Genji, was perhaps the most memorable. It bordered on the surreal and was a mix of drama, ballet and traditional dance.

Saeko Ichinohe and Company had delighted the audience and had offered an exciting performance based on old and new. The dancers were from mixed ethnic backgrounds and helped illustrate the cross-culturel theme that is central to the company's style.

Yo La Tengo to storm into the Valley

Amherst College hosts impressive double bill tomorrow night

COURTESY BAR NONE

Georgia Hubley and Ira Kaplan of Yo La Tengo.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow night at the Amherst College Frontroom two well established underground acts will take the stage in what will truly be a remarkable show.

Headlining the show are Yo La Tengo, a multi-talented trio hailing from Hoboken, NJ who are known for their imaginative albums and energy packed live shows. Opening up, in a rare Stateside appearance will be the Pastels, one of the finest Scottish pop bands of the past two decades.

Describing Yo La Tengo is a difficult task which may explain why lead singer/guitarist Ira Kaplan refuses to pinhole the band. By combining Sonic Youth like noise attacks, moog synthesizers, country-ish tunes, experimental noise and straight ahead pop melodies, Yo La Tengo produces a sound unlike anyone else. Their live shows are spectacular as the audience witness Kaplan's rock star antics featuring crazy energetic Hendrix-like guitar solos while the rest of the band maintains their mellow selves.

While Kaplan is off soloing in his own world, Georgia Hubley, Kaplan's wife, pounds the skins while James McNew plays bass, keeping the band intact. McNew has been with the band for the last five years and has helped the band progress greatly. According to Kaplan, the addition of McNew, "made us a band and it provoked more interest in writing songs as a band." When not with Hubley and Kaplan, McNew records as a one man band entitled Dump.

Their live shows have brought the band from appearances on the second stage at Lollapolloza to co-headlining a tour with Stereolab across England which produced a limited edition split single of the bands on Duophonic.

Often performing without a set list the band is known to play a wide range of material from old tunes off early albums such as President Yo La Tengo to more recent songs and even an occasional popular cover such as "Speeding Motorcycle." At a recent gig in Seattle the band played a 25 minute version of the Daniel Johnston classic in defiance of the unfriendly club owners. The song ended only when the club shut off the energy to the stage.

Don't expect such problems tonight though, as Yo La Tengo will likely concentrate on their more recent releases, ElectroPura, Painful, and the brand new EP Camp Yo La Tengo. The band's progress has been continuous since their humble beginnings with every release the band grows in a new direction which will be most apparent live.

Kaplan commented on the band as to whether they were a studio band or a live band, "I think they both show different sides of the band and together they bring the songs together." On a good night, Yo La Tengo are one of the most creative and exciting bands you are likely to come across.

From a special request by Yo La Tengo, the Pastels have crossed the Atlantic from Scotland to open several dates on Yo La Tengo's tour. This brief trip marks only the third time the legendary pop band from Edinburgh has toured America.

Yo La Tengo and the Pastels appear at the Amherst College Frontroom located in the Campus Center.

Kentucky is voted No. 1 in AP poll

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

Kentucky was voted No. 1 in the preseason college basketball poll for the first time Monday, and big conferences again dominated the Top 25, with the Big East having three of the top six teams.

The Wildcats, who reached the round of eight in last year's NCAA tournament and return three starters, received 34 first-place votes and 1,550 points from the national media panel.

Kansas was just two points behind after receiving 24 No. t votes. The Jayhawks have four starters back from the team that lost in the regional semifinals last season.

Then came the Big East — No. 3 Villanova followed by defending champion UCLA of the Pac-10, Georgetown and Connecticut.

Villanova, which had 1,369 points, and UCLA were the only other schools to receive first-place votes with two and four, respectively.

The Top 10 was completed by Massachusetts, Iowa, Mississippi State and Utah.

The next 10 spots went to Wake Forest, Louisville, Memphis, Missouri, Maryland, Arkansas, Michigan, Stanford, Virginia and North Carolina.

The last of the preseason ranked teams were Cincinnati, Virginia Tech, Indiana, Purdue and California.

Kentucky becomes the second straight Southeastern Conference team to be selected the preseason No. 1. Arkansas, then the defending champion, had that distinction and reached the title game last April.

The Wildcats lost two starters from last season — Rodrick Rhodes and Andre Riddick — and have added consensus national prep player of the year Ron Mercer and Ohio State transfer Derek Anderson.

"We think we have a good basketball team, and if we do the right things defensively, maybe we can develop into a great team," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said.

The Wildcats will find out a lot right away as they open the season with neutral-site games against Maryland and Massachusetts, then play at Indiana.

"I don't feel a lot of pressure when you have the basketball team we have," Pitino said. "Pressure is when you don't have a bench, you don't have much quickness, you're short and slow."

The previous 14 preseason No. 1s have gone on to considerable success. None has ever finished out of the Top 10 in the final regular-season poll and each has made to at least the second round of the NCAA tournament with eight getting to the Final Four, including national champions North Carolina in 1982, UNLV in 1990 and Duke in 1992.

The Big Ten and the Atlantic Coast Conference led in the preseason poll with four representatives each — Iowa, Michigan, Indiana and Purdue of the Big Ten and Wake Forest, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina of the ACC.

Four leagues had three teams each — the SEC, Big East, Pac-10 and Conference USA, which starts its inaugural season with Louisville, Memphis and Cincinnati as ranked teams.

The preseason poll has representatives from nine conferences.

Mississippi State, the third ranked team from the SEC, cracked the Top 10 for the first time since the mid-1960s.

The Bulldogs were ranked for six weeks last season and return the inside-outside combination of Erick Dampier and Darryl Wilson.

Virginia Tech, last season's NIT champion, is now part of the Atlantic 10 and is ranked for the first time since the 1985-86 season.

Maddux receives Cy Young award

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For Greg Maddux, winning the Cy Young Award — even unanimously — is just another part of his routine.

"We might have a little party tomorrow night or something," he said Monday after capturing his fourth consecutive NL Cy Young, his second straight by a shutout vote. "After winning the World Series, we're pretty much partied out."

Maddux, at 29, perhaps not even halfway through his career, continued to put up numbers that can be compared only with baseball's greats. Steve Carlton is the only other pitcher to win four Cy Youngs. He did it for Philadelphia in 1972, 1977, 1980 and 1982. Sandy Koufax is the only other pitcher to win the award unanimously in consecutive years — in 1965-66 for the Dodgers. "It's really hard for me to talk about the history of the game because my history goes back 10 years," Maddux said during a telephone news conference from his home in Las Vegas.

"When I heard comparisons about people who pitched in the '50s or '60s or '70s, I can't really relate to it. I didn't really watch baseball a whole lot back then. I really wasn't the fan then I am now. I just take it as a nice compliment on move on."

Maddux, who led the Atlanta Braves to their first World Series title, received 140 points in balloting announced by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Maddux led the NL in wins with a 19-2 record, and was tops in the league in ERA (1.63) and complete games (10). He became the first major leaguer since Walter Johnson in 1918-19 to have an ERA under 1.80 in consecutive seasons.

Cincinnati's Pete Schourek was second in the voting with 55 points, followed by Braves teammate Tom Glavine with 30. Los Angeles rookie Hideo Nomo was fourth with 19 and Dodgers pitcher Ramon Martinez had eight.

Many say Maddux already is a lock to make the Hall of Fame. His career record is 150-93 with a 2.88 ERA.

"That's something you don't think about," he said. "If it happens, great. I'm going to do what I've always done. I'm going to go out there and makes as many good pitches as I can. That's good enough for me. Whether I'm 20-0 or 0-20, it doesn't much matter." Maddux has won the Cy Young in each of his three seasons with the Braves. He says he's a much better pitcher than when he started with the Chicago Cubs.

"Back then, I was pretty much brain dead heaver," he said. 'Now I'd like to think I know a little something about pitching that I can apply on the field."

Last year, Maddux became the first player to win any of baseball's major awards three straight times. He's also a strong contender in this year's NL MVP race.

"If it happens, great," Maddux said. "Who wouldn't want to win an MVP? I'm probably excited more about what our team accomplished this year than winning the Cy Young, as much of an honor as it is to win the Cy Young."

By winning the award, Maddux gained a $750,000 bonus added to his $5 million salary. Glavine gets a $75,000 bonus added to his $4.5 million salary.

Biggio declines Astros' offer

HOUSTON (AP) — All-Star second baseman Craig Biggio became available to negotiate with other teams Monday after declining a $20 million, four-year offer from the Houston Astros.

"Craig has been an invaluable part of this organization and we're just very disappointed that we weren't able to get it done," Astros vice president Bob McClaren said.

McClaren said it's possible Biggio could get the offer back, "but we're going to have to start making plans ourselves to address other needs on the team. We can't wait until this whole matter is resolved to look to better our team for 1996."

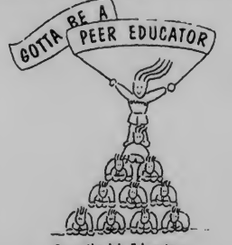
McClaren said Astros officials wanted to sign Biggio on Friday, when the second baseman met with Astros owner Drayton McLane and president Tal Smith.

"We were hoping to try to wrap this matter up on Friday or this weekend in hopes of avoiding entering into this unrestricted free agency climate, and we weren't able to do that," McClaren said. Smith added he's worried about the team's marketing efforts since McLane has said he may try to sell the club. The owner said next season's attendance must increase dramatically or the Astros could try to move as early as the 1997 season.

"It would have really helped the momentum in the drive to sell tickets, which began Friday with the announcement that the club was staying," Smith said. "The longer this goes, from a marketing standpoint we lose the added benefit."

The Houston Chronicle has reported that Biggio was seeking a new contract in the range of $5 million a year. First baseman Jeff Bagwell, 1993's National League MVP, has asked to be traded if the Astros didn't re-sign Biggio, who made $4.5 million last season. Other Astros among the 138 major leaguers who have filed for free agency are catcher Pat Borders, third baseman Dave Magadan, relief pitcher Mike Henneman and outfielders Milt Thompson and John Cangelosi. Biggio hit .302 last season with 22 home runs as the Astros finished one game behind the Colorado Rockies for the league's wild card playoff spot.

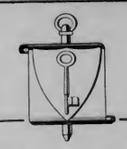
CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!



Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

PEER HEALTH EDUCATION II & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 549-2671 Ext. 181.
Class will meet on Wednesdays from 2 - 4:30 PM.
Priority is given to those who meet with the instructor before November 17th.

THE UMASS THEATER GUILD PRESENTS
Three
Nov. 15 - 18th in Bowker Auditorium 8pm
Tix Available at FAC box office or door
$4 for Students $6 General Public



Golden Key
National Honor Society
General Membership Meeting
Tuesday, November 14
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center 904-08
New officers will be elected...
...Program for the year will be discussed!

Voted BEST in the Valley
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS

PELE'S
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED.
CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

Deliberations begin in King's insurance fraud trial

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The jury in the insurance fraud trial of boxing promoter Don King began deliberations Monday after lawyers finished closing arguments.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence McKenna instructed the jury on the law, then the jurors deliberated about an hour before going home. Earlier, the judge took the unusual step of letting the defense provide a 15-minute response to the government's rebuttal. The prosecutor was then allowed another five minutes. The additional arguments were permitted by McKenna because jurors were returning from a three-day holiday weekend and the judge feared they were too far removed from last week's arguments to allow only a prosecutor to speak.

King, 64, who did not react to prosecutors throughout the six-week trial, shook his head slowly several times to protest statements by Paul Gardephe, the assistant U.S. attorney. Gardephe said King's testimony was "riddled with lies."

"I submit to you his story made no sense. He did not tell the truth," he said of King's three days on the witness stand. The promoter had testified he had nothing to do with the filing of a fake contract that convinced Lloyd's of London to pay King $350,000 to reimburse him for training expenses for a 1991 bout that was canceled. The fight between Julio Cesar Chavez and Harold Brazier was scrapped after Chavez cut his face while training. Chavez testified he never saw the fake contract and was never given $350,000 for training fees.

Carr named permanent Michigan football coach

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Lloyd Carr, the interim coach who has guided Michigan to an 8-2 record and a No. 12 ranking, was hired today as the Wolverines' permanent football coach.

Athletic director Joe Roberson, who made the announcement at a news conference this morning, said the length and terms of the contract would be decided after the end of the season.

Carr was told Saturday after guiding Michigan to a 5-0 victory over Purdue. The players were told Sunday afternoon, Roberson said. "I can't tell you how thrilled I am," Roberson said. "If you think I'm thrilled, you should have been here yesterday when I told the team. The whole room just exploded in applause."

Carr was given the job last spring after Gary Moeller was forced to resign following a drunken incident in a suburban Detroit restaurant. Roberson said he decided to make Carr's job permanent after Michigan's 23-13 win over Boston College on Sept. 16.

"Everybody at Michigan expects you to win. It's fun, but it is not easy," Carr said.

He called his appointment and the team's response "a very special moment in my life."

"My mother taught me you don't want to be somewhere you're not wanted. I feel wanted here," Carr said.

Under Carr, the Wolverines opened the season by defeating Virginia 18-17 in the Pigskin Classic on Scott Dreisbach's 15-yard touchdown pass to Mercury Hayes on the last play.

Michigan steadily moved up through the rankings. Then Dreisbach broke his right thumb and was replaced at quarterback by Brian Griese in the fifth game.

The Wolverines have won four of six since. A startling 19-13 loss at home to Northwestern was accepted with polite skepticism. But a 28-25 upset at Michigan State prompted talk Carr wouldn't get the permanent job.

Roberson, however, apparently liked the way Carr handled himself in adversity. Roberson also might have been swayed by the high regard the players have for Carr.

It started during early camp in August when practice became almost a nightmare. Carr moved practice sessions to early evening when temperatures cooled.

On one particularly hot and sultry day, Carr stopped practice as a delivery truck arrived. The truck was full of Popsicles he had ordered. The players have talked about that afternoon since. Roberson also had to be impressed with the way Carr handled himself immediately after the loss at Michigan State. A disputed spot gave the Spartans a crucial first down on their go-ahead touchdown drive.

Carr handled the referee's decision without fanfare.

"He spotted it where he saw it," Carr said. "An inch or two the other way and the game is over."

Carr also showed just the right touch Saturday, guiding the Wolverines (8-2, 4-2 Big Ten) past Purdue in some of the worst weather conditions ever seen at Michigan Stadium.

The field was a sea of mud, and winds gusting to 50 mph created a wind-chill that made the temperature seem like minus-5. Instead of trying to force plays that could only succeed on a dry field, Carr played the game like a chess master.

He instructed his captains to get the wind at their backs if possible at the coin-toss. They did, and it paid off in a 25-yard field goal. As the game wore on, that score became ever more critical. The Wolverines tacked on a fourth-quarter safety for the final margin of victory.

After the game, Carr defended Griese, who had trouble adjusting to the conditions.

"Let me say this first," Carr said. "Brian Griese is a 3.0-plus student at the University of Michigan. He has done a tremendous job of representing the university, this football program and everybody else associated with this university. "He's 21 years old, and he's worked hard. He's competing at the highest level of intercollegiate athletics in his first year, and for anyone to describe his performance as awful is wrong. I'm very proud of him this year."

It was exactly the kind of support a Michigan coach would be expected to give one of his players. Leadership, especially at a school like Michigan, has always been about more than wins and losses.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect. You dial 1 800 CALL ATT. Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.®
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.℠

AT&T
Your True Choice

* For interstate calls. Promotions excluded.
1-800-COLLECT® is a registered trademark of MCI.
© 1995 AT&T

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $140 $280
PARIS $175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
Roundtrip
TOKYO $859
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. INTL student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

Auto Glass Center
Lifetime Warranty
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
One Mile from UMass bus route

Playoffs are possible again for Pats

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots "stink." That's what their distraught coach said five weeks ago. Now Bill Parcells is smiling and saying the playoffs are possible.

The Patriots have come a long way from a 37-3 humiliation by Denver on Oct. 8 — "this is a joke," Parcells said afterward — to Sunday's impressive 34-17 victory at Miami.

"That win does a lot for us," he said Monday. "We're going to have to play really good football for a long, long period of time to get out of this hole were in.

"But the way it looks to me in this AFC, you may be even be able to take another loss and still get in (the playoffs), provided it wasn't a division game."

Ten of the 14 AFC teams are 6-4, 5-5 or 4-6. The Patriots are 4-6, but their 3-1 record against division opponents — an important tie-breaker for a wild-card berth — is the best in the AFC East. Four of their remaining six games, starting Sunday at home against Indianapolis, are against division rivals.

Five games into the season, the Patriots were 1-4 and had an NFL-low 43 points. They nearly scored that many on Sunday and are 3-1 in their last four games, losing only in overtime to Carolina. "Early in the season, we just had a bunch of guys playing like individuals and now we understand the importance of teamwork," linebacker Chris Slade said. "I think it's a chemistry thing now, whereas we didn't have it before."

The Patriots excelled in every aspect of the game against the Dolphins. On special teams, Matt Bahr kicked a game-tying, career-long 55-yard field goal on the last play of the half. It was set up by a 62-yard kickoff return by Dave Meggett, who is second in the AFC in that category.

On offense, Curtis Martin rushed for 142 yards, and Vincent Brisby caught six passes for 118 yards. Martin is second in the AFC in rushing.

On defense, the Patriots had two sacks against Dan Marino, who had been tackled only six times in his other seven games, and forced him into a fumble and an interception that led to 10 second-half points.

"We have improved in the last month," Parcells said, "but I'm not convinced, based on what I saw prior to that, that necessarily we'll continue to go that way."

In his other two seasons as their coach, the Patriots improved in the second half of the season. In 1993, they went from 1-7 to 4-4. Last season, they were 3-5 at the midpoint and 7-1 afterward as they won their last seven games to reach the playoffs.

Parcells said that doesn't mean much this season since he has different players and a different schedule. And the Patriots are just two games into the second half.

"We have to get down the road another four to five weeks," he said.

Barely a month after the Patriots hit bottom, linebacker Vincent Brown also took a cautious approach when asked about their playoff chances. "That is the furthest thing from our minds right now," he said. "We are in such a deep hole it would be crazy to think about that."

But the toughest part of New England's schedule is over. Their first six opponents were Cleveland, Miami, San Francisco, Atlanta, Denver and Kansas City. Their last six are Indianapolis, Buffalo, New Orleans, the New York Jets, Pittsburgh and Indianapolis again. "It could be too late (to make the playoffs). We could be in too much of a hole," Parcells said.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

They call the Rose Bowl the "Grandaddy of them all," a phrase that could apply to Roy in another respect. He opened the floodgates for a wave of goaltenders who were bred in the Quebec province and played in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League (QMJHL). These luminaries include Martin Brodeur, Felix Potvin, Stephane Fiset, Dominic Roussel and Jocelyn Thibault. They will all tell you they were glued to the tube watching Roy when he was reaching new heights in netminding for the better part of a decade. They wanted to be like Pat.

They're all in good position to rival his accomplishments. Brodeur has already won a Cup and Potvin has reached two conference finals. But their mentor might not be done adding to his trophy case. He too has been a brilliant key to the Canadiens comeback, so Farber can stop worrying about Montreal's need for a backup who can play 35 games. 35 games! Roy will play no less than 60 this year, and it's not because they don't have anyone else. They don't need anybody else.

Sunday night served as a fine showcase for the Roy of today. Montreal was in Vancouver, leading 2-0 in the first. Alexander Mogilny, skating without fellow Russian Rocket Pavel Bure (more on him later), broke the speed limit down the right wing, offered some fries with the shake he put on the defense and put a backhanded pea past Roy's stick.

It was the type of shot that Mogilny can expect to beat most goaltenders, but it really handcuffed Roy, who's made a living denying such extraordinary bids.

Roy let in just one more while making 31 saves in a 4-2 win. Just another day at the office for a future Hall of Famer.

Roy has never been popular in Boston. Colleague Matt Vautour gave us a colorful reminder of those t-shirts worn by many Bruins fans at Boston–Montreal playoff games that read "Canadiens suck" on the front and "Roy swallows" on the back.

During their 1990 series, Roy said in the press that the way to beat Boston goalie Andy Moog was to shoot high. The Bruins proceeded to oust Roy, who had a super 1989–90 season, in exactly that way.

But whether or not he is liked, he commands total respect.

• When Montreal acquired Pierre Turgeon from the Islanders, it assured its next Cup wouldn't be won with any help from the man second in value only to Roy for the 1993 champs: Kirk Muller. Well, he won't be doing anything at all at the Nassau Mausoleum anymore, because GM Don Maloney and coach Mike Milbury want him gone.

Keep your eye on Muller, because he may go back to Montreal, where he enjoyed playing so much, though I think he'd look pretty good in Bruins' black and gold.

Hard to say what either club could give for the gritty, all- purpose center. Montreal has little use for Vincent Damphousse, but he doesn't seem Milbury's type; Boston would love to lose Al Iafrate, and I could see Milbury having patience with him. He's got to get rid of Muller soon, because he's doing no good and costing Maloney money out of uniform. (Milbury has said without mincing words that Muller will not wear a visually displeasing Islanders' uniform ever again.)

• The burden is now Mogilny's to light up Vancouver's new GM Place, because Bure won't be lifting off anytime soon due to injury. The NHL is starting to suffer from NFL syndrome—too many stars injured for too long—but the way this sport is covered in this country, you might never know it.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

Atkins benched after heated exchange; Aikmen may be ready for this weekend

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — Following a heated exchange with safety Gene Atkins, Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula had the last word Monday. Shula said Louis Oliver will likely replace Atkins in next Monday's game against the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers. It would be the first lineup change this season for the Dolphins' defense.

Miami was burned deep down the middle — Atkins' territory — for the second consecutive week in Sunday's 34-17 loss to New England. The latest breakdown left both Atkins and his coaches fuming. Following Vincent Brisby's 47-yard touchdown reception, Shula and defense coach Tom Olivadotti yelled at Atkins on the sideline. He yelled back, pointed at Olivadotti and was restrained by teammates.

The dispute offered a public sample of the season-long griping and squabbling that have plagued the disappointing Dolphins (6-4). Shula and Atkins visited privately about the exchange Monday. "He was upset about that, that it happened," Shula said. Did he apologize?

"He was upset about it," Shula said.

Shula remained upset about the coverage breakdown, especially with Jerry Rice coming to town.

"We've made some mistakes in our secondary, and we're very concerned about that," Shula said. "We're considering giving Louis Oliver the opportunity to step in and do the job for us."

Atkins left the locker room Monday without talking to reporters, so it's uncertain how he'll respond to the benching. Ironically, he threatened to sit out a game last month if the coaches replaced strong safety Michael Stewart with Oliver. That switch was never made.

Cornerback J.B. Brown said he had expected help from Atkins on the play that prompted Sunday's sideline disagreement. Brisby beat Brown by two steps to make his touchdown catch in an area vacated by Atkins, giving New England a 17-10 lead.

"That was a three-deep zone, and Gene is responsible for the deep middle of a three-deep zone," Shula said.

Atkins felt otherwise.

"He was upset about what he thought was the way that it should be played," Shula said. "But I don't know a three-deep zone where the weak safety isn't responsible for the deep middle."

San Diego's Tony Martin beat cornerback Troy Vincent on a similar play a week earlier for a 50-yard touchdown.

Vincent defended Atkins' contribution to the defense.

"I don't think we need to change, personally, just yet," Vincent said. "As a safety, you're the quarterback of the defense. You can't ask a man to help me on one sideline and on the other sideline help J.B. Brown, and stop (New England running back) Curtis Martin for a 2-yard loss."

Atkins, a nine-year pro, has started all but one game since 1990. Oliver was a starter in his first five NFL seasons with the Dolphins, spent last year with Cincinnati and returned to Miami this year.

Oliver has been vocal in the past about his desire to start. But Oliver said he hasn't been told of any plans for him to replace Atkins.

"He's been playing hard. He's been trying to play well," Oliver said. "I don't want to go in because a guy was injured or didn't play well. I want to play because I can do the job."

* * *

IRVING, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys needed some good news and they got it Monday when quarterback Troy Aikman's knee injury was diagnosed as a bruised tendon, meaning he could play this weekend at Oakland.

"There is swelling and soreness but there is a good chance Troy could be ready this week," team trainer Kevin O'Neill said. "We're very excited about it. This is a great result."

Aikman was injured in the first quarter of Sunday's 38-20 loss to San Francisco and had an MRI the next day.

"Troy was lucky," O'Neill said. "He bruised a tendon that's part of the hamstring muscle. It's not a very common injury. We're treating it with ice."

Defensive tackle Chad Hennings has a sprained right knee. He is wearing a brace and is listed as questionable for Sunday's game against the Raiders.

Battered physically and psychologically, the Cowboys were still trying to figure out how the 49ers outwitted and outplayed them for the third consecutive game. "Dumbfounded," was the way Dallas coach Barry Switzer described his mood.

"I have no explanation how it could happen to us again," Switzer said. "We'll never beat San Francisco if we do what we've done the last three games. The turnover rate is 12-to-1." Dallas lost to San Francisco 21-14 during the regular season last year and fell 38-28 in the NFC championship game.

The 49ers baffled the Cowboys with the simple move of putting wide receiver Jerry Rice into the slot position. Dallas tried to cover Rice with linebackers until the third quarter and the results were disastrous.

■ women's x-country

continued from page 12

Donaldson and Martin. "I think that it could have something to do with how long it is taking some of these women to recover from A-10's.

"They held together enough to make me happy, though. And they helped place us where I thought we should be in the overall results," she said.

Molly Dunlap and Jen DelColle, running strong for the Minutewomen in the sixth and seventh slots, closed out the year on good notes. The two ran what were perhaps the best races of their seasons, with DelColle's being a fitting way to end her collegiate career.

"I was very happy with Molly and Jen," LaFreniere said. "Molly had a faster time at A-10's, but for an overall race performance, there's no question that this was her best.

"Jen is a fifth-year senior, and it's always nice to end your career with a strong performance. Jen ran well, and I am very proud of her," she said.

"Overall, I am pleased with our performance," LaFreniere said. "We were right where I though we should be. St. Joe's squeaked ahead of us, but we were able to squeak ahead of Boston University, so everything worked out well."

* * *

Donaghue is the first Massachusetts woman runner ever to qualify for the NCAA Championships. She will travel to Ames, Iowa to compete in the national meet on Monday.

Making appearances as team entries will be the top five ECAC finishing schools, in order: Providence, Villanova, Dartmouth, Georgetown and Boston College.

■ swimming

continued from page 12

best efforts with Rodriguez taking second place in both the one and three meter diving events.

UMass improves their record to 2–0 while Northeastern drops to 0–2. The Minutewomen return to action next weekend as they will take on Boston University in an attempt to make it three wins in a row. The meet is scheduled for 4 p.m..

■ men's swimming

continued from page 12

kers. They've got to step up to the plate and swing a little harder."

With two wins and momentum under their belt, the Minutemen plan to practice long and hard for this weekend's dual meet at home with Boston University.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a mind of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

Collegian Sports

The Collegian sports page needs writers. If you want to write sports, then come down to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center basement, or call Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

COLLEGIAN, a News Source

PEACE CORPS
Besides a remarkable experience, solid benefits.
25th ANNIVERSARY 1961-1986

Peace Corps volunteers enjoy the experience of a lifetime while making a difference in the world...all expenses paid.

Volunteers receive intensive training, complete medical and dental care, and a $5,400 readjustment allowance at the end of 27 months of service.

Partial cancellation or deferment of student loans, non-competitive status for federal employment, and graduate school fellowships and scholarships are also available.

UMASS INFO MEETING
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 7:00 PM
CAMPUS CENTER, ROOM 165

Attend our on-campus information meeting or visit us at 12 Draper Hall, UMASS

CALL 545-2105

UMass Division of Continuing Education

• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996

• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog • (413) 545-0107
e-mail: continued@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Amn Assoc/Pre-vet club General meeting on Tuesday Nov. 12th @7pm in Paige 101. Questions? Call 549-5857. Don't forget petitions!!!

Smith College ASA conference Examining Asian Pacific American historical legacy. Nov 18 Registration @ Wright Hall. 8am. party after. Info 585-4808. Fee to college limitations!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

University Productions & concerts! We need you!! Come see what concert productions is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center Hadley at 8:00 in room 162. Come get involved!

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt. Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9919.

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Subaru 1800 DL One owner. Runs great. Rs 185 a transportation. Clean inside/outside $1200 323-0285

Convertible 85 Dodge 600 Beautiful gun free car. $1700 obo. 549-9240

1985 Subaru GL 5 spd 83K all options. $1600 obo. 549-1895

83 BMW 318 i black coupe automatic. Asking $7,500. Negotiable. call David 585-1264

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialties taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50,000 Fax resume (212) 564-2030

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring reps for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000 $10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-568-8926

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16 - Jan 10. $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-6289.

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise Ships Hiring! $$$+ free travel (Caribbean, Europe Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent. No experience necessary. Guide @(919) 929-4398 Ext. C1060

Quick $ for creative motivated people. Two 800 #s for rent. Call 253-5763, ASAP.

Looking for adventure? Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expenses paid travel. Fax resume to (617) 736-4713. Ami Tricia or call (800) 783-4737 x 334.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 ext. N 50072

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retail is for $200. Inventory required $7500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $32,400/first year! 947-760-9001

You can earn $500 to $1000 between now and Christmas. Call Holly 1-800-691-7089

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn. Big money. Call 253-5763.

FOR SALE

Gemini mixer Two slides plus cross fader orig. price $100. Asking $75 b/o Call John 549-5797.

Guitar & Amp For Sale brand new Epiphone LesPaul gold top and Marshall 1/1/M50 tube amp $450 each. Call 586-5526 for details.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Mariah! Hope you had fun. J.A.M.C.J.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Emily after semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5283

LOST

Silver ring w/ blue stone & silver frog ring very sentimental - reward! Call Kristen 549-6965

PERSONALS

Andew Bryce You are the biggest dodo bird on the face of the planet. You call yourself the master of your domain, give me a break! Wake up and smell the roses you snapperhead! Smell you later! Signed, Joe Rockhead

Attn: Chi Omega Pledges!! Jaime, Elizabeth, Jody, Lauren, Amanda, Jamie, Amy, and Amanda you're doing a great job. You're halfway there. Keep up the good work! We love you! Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

Jeff M. You are a hotty (You asked for it!) Guess Who!

Nick Walsh You are the biggest pull master in the world. You are winning, how many? Colossal A C-ii- golf? That's huge! Winman!

Pasquale, You big dork! Happy 21st birthday! I'm right behind you and I expect nothing but fun. After all, queens deserve the best! Love, Doyle

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jesper 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommates needed to share townhouse for spring semester. 2 min tram campus. Frank Day. 413-568-9151ex 1225. Night 413-733-8078

SERVICES

Child care: Subsidized slot available for toddler at quality center, route 63 Leverett; 4 miles north of U Mass. Call Brian, Hampshire Franklin Day Care, 549-9674.

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 546-1794.

Foreign Students DV-1 greencard program available 1-800-660-7167

Going to Florida during winter session? I'll bring your car to you. Call Omri 546-1579.

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$20. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the student union 545-2701.

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 254 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

They're almost gone Act now to rent Two 900 #'s before they are no longer made! Call 253-5762

TO SUBLET

Take over our lease 1/1/96 Putton Village $505/month heat/hot water inc. Call 549-0578

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 rt. San Juan $245 rt. California $175 o/w Europe from $229 rt. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0001. Air Tech Nsw England

"Free Travel Spring Break '96" Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

2 sets 2 cedrip airfare vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable. Food/drink included with hotel by airport $300/set call Erik @ 549-3788

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted 3 or more bedroom apt. or house near uptown or campus. For spring semester. Call 549-7403

Wanted to rent a 2,3 or 4 bedroom in Amherst. Call 549-8618

COLLEGIAN NEWS Because it happens everyday.

Not everyone is Straight - and neither is the Collegian!

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Needs Writers...Gay Straight, and In-Between. For News, Editorials, Arts & Living, and News Analysis.

Contact GLB Editor Wendy Darling at The Collegian, 113 Campus Center

Are you interested in writing the news?
Then contact Chris Conner, News Editor
113 Campus Center • 545-0719

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

HOROSCOPE

by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A lucky opening could lead to a financial bonanza. Attitude plays a key role in your success story upbeat. Shared experiences are rewarding. Spend more time with your partner or children.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Conditions take priority today. Later dreams are important, with reliance on neighbors. Improvement in the keynote when an unexpected visitor drops by. Get moving on a business matter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steer clear of routine operations in which you do not have an assigned role. Overheated communications should be cooled. Guard your professional reputation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The next few days could be crucial for a partnership. Avoid demanding more than you are willing to give in return. Entertainment at home enjoys favorable influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new relationship needs more time to mature. Stop holding on the past. Give your heart a chance to mend. Financial gains come through wise investments. Set aside some money for your retirement years.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Collaborative efforts and constructive relationships are favored. Say yes to basic essentials, propositions. You sense both material and partner's needs. Change logical, long-standing patterns, do not act on them needlessly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22): Although things could be expensive now, there may not be an alternative. Do what you must to expand a business. Your excellent reputation will give you advantages your competitors do not enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rendering someone a service deepens your understanding of their plight. Note publications dealing with diet, nutrition and exercise. Someone decides to share a secret, you could benefit both emotionally and materially.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A better day for research and study than action. Proceed with your plans for counseling, organizing and scheduling. Take any disappointments in stride; they could end up working in your favor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Resist the temptation to divulge secrets. A friend is well intentioned but misguided. Someone's services may not meet your expectations. To protect your good name, keep your comments civil.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take care of routine tasks in the morning, emphasizing your desire to be of service. Romance keeps you guessing. Moderate your demands on a partner. Follow precedent at work, acknowledging the important role tradition plays.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An excellent day to study and evaluate a controversial plan. Go through channels if you want to register a complaint or criticism. Others are willing to hear your ideas. Kind gestures forestall problems with the neighbors.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Slender
5 Relating to the Pope
10 Amahl's night visitors
14 Comfort
15 Mud brick
16 Very dry
17 God of war
18 Hepburn's "— Holiday"
19 Moon valley
20 Parts of place settings
22 Mexican food treat
24 Veronica of the movies
25 Grain elevator
26 Electrical unit
29 Joined Uncle Sam
33 Tommy of downhill racing
34 Club for the mentally well-endowed 36 — firma
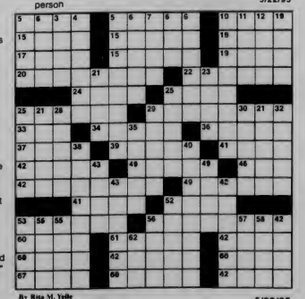
37 Tie up
39 Chores
41 Spree
42 Sea eagles
44 Sugar sources
46 In — operational
47 Backlash
49 Happy
51 Babe of the flock
52 Postman's burden
53 Tropical fruit
56 South Carolina's tree
60 Culture medium
61 18th president
63 Boast
64 Father
65 Blue planet
66 Grow weary
67 Mr. — of "Wind in the Willows"
68 Fine mist
69 Chooses

DOWN
1 Frond
2 Nobleman
3 Sailing
4 Get cozy
5 Lovebird look-alike
6 Venerate
7 Fleshy fruit
8 Desert wear
9 Hearty soup
10 Soft-furred monkey
11 Battle's effort
12 Fish feature
13 At liberty
21 On the right track
23 Landed
25 — eyes: pair
26 Yellow
27 Watered-silk
28 Keystone st.
29 Eat, in Hamburg
30 Cutthroat, for one
31 Like a leaf
32 Old-fashioned
35 Powerful person
38 Stated as true
40 Secretive
43 Mast support
45 See 1 Across
48 Pictures
50 One of the Funies
52 Sea ray
53 Gone by
54 Money exchange premium
55 Legal beginning
56 Young salmon
57 Tumble or bungle
58 Civil wrong
59 Runs up a bill
62 Boom-box music

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	C	A	P	A		E	E	L		O	P	E N
C	A	P	O	N		S	A	S	E	R	O	L E
A	M	A	T	I		P	R	E	S	E	N	T L Y
M	E	R	C	E	P	A	L		S	C	O	P E S
P	O	T	H	O	L	D	E	R		O	T	O
		E	R	A	S	T	I	A	N		U	S S
A	S	P	E	N	S		S	C	I		P	R E Y
C	L	O	S	E	T	S		A	R	M	O	R E D
M	A	T	E		E	O	S		M	A	T	I N S
E	B	B		T	R	A	P	F	A	L	L
			L	O	W	E		P	O	T	S	E I N E S
S	H	I	R	E	S		O	I	L	S		C O L O
C	E	L	E	S	T	I	N	E		S	K	I E R
U	S	E	S		A	L	E	E		S	E	R V E
D	A	R	T		S	O	D			T	R	E E S

5/22/95



By Rita M. Yelle
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate
5/22/95

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

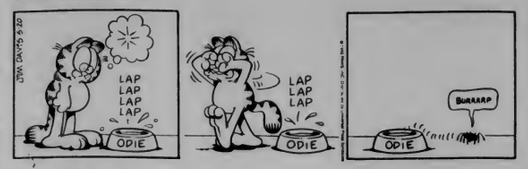
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Garfield By Jim Davis



Garfield By Jim Davis

Loser Crew By Mike Krozy

Hey Leon Trotsky, Can you tell me about your theory of permanent revolution?
WELL STEVE, I COULD DO THAT... OR WE COULD DRINK FROSTY COLD BREW INSTEAD.
THE BREW

Geofrey By Embryo

CONTROVERSIAL CLOTHING
UMASS
Do you think he'll get kicked for talking walking to class?
BIG JOHNSON
SATAN
PROJECT FLATBOY CKS
TOP TEN CONT.
#1. The guy who carries these. Es so cool!! Hi Barb!

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IF I'M IN THE PERIMETER OF WISDOM, THEN I GET TO MAKE A DECREE
A DECREE? UM, OK
I DECREE YOU HAVE TO CATCH A WATER BALLOON THAT I THROW HIGH IN THE AIR.
OH NO!
MAN, SHE PICKED UP THE NUANCES OF THIS GAME FAST.
HA! THIS IS FUN!

ATTENTION ALL CARTOONISTS & COMIC STRIP WRITERS:

There will be a MANDATORY meeting for anyone interested in drawing for the comics page on Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Collegian Offices. This includes current cartoonists. The meeting will last approximately 30 minutes. Please bring 2–3 strips with you as well as a list of the days you will be able to do strips. Dimensions for long strips are 6 1/4 inches wide by 1 1/4 inches high. Dimensions for square cartoons are 3 inches by roughly four inches. If you have any questions please contact Marni Helfner, Managing Editor at 545–0719.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

I DON'T KNOW, WITH ALL THE THINGS I HAVE TO GET DONE, GOD KNOWS IF I'LL BE THERE OR NOT.
YEAH, WELL... OH NEVERMIND
WHAT IS IT?
NOTHING, TRUST ME
REALLY, I WANNA HEAR IT...
WELL I'M NOT GONNA SAY IT.
JUST SAY IT, OK?!
WELL... THAT'S OF COURSE ASSUMING GOD IS OMNIPOTENT AND THEREFORE THROUGH PRE-ORDAINED KNOWLEDGE ASSUMES PRE-DESTINATION... WHICH IS A PRETTY BLEAK OUTLOOK, ESPECIALLY IN REGARDS TO FREE WILL BRUNO, GET OUT. TAKE A WALK. IT'LL DO YOU GOOD.
SHADDUP!

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

You know, ...
you get born and you think you've been dealt 3 queens and 2 kings.
But what you really got was a pair of 3's, 1-6, a 4, and .... a joker.....
.....but you still act as if you have 3 Queens and 2 Kings for the rest of your life.....
Who's responsible for this?
a very Lucky person

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Go down this hallway. Take the fourth left, then the third right. Go down a long corridor, up two flights of stairs and you'll see a large sign that says Wembley Chiropractic Associates."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacLean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... Marc Dionne
..... Kathryn Gracia
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Fish in Batter
Tri-County Fair Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Fish in Battter
Lemon Grill Burger

DINNER
Chicken de Carlos
Spiced Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Chicken de Carlos
Spiced Shrimp

Wednesday

LUNCH
Hot Hero Sand.
Chick Cutlet Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Bean Corn Tomato Cass.
Chick Cutlet Sand

DINNER
Roast Pork
Chicken Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Tofu Fajita
Chicken Fajita

Thursday

LUNCH
Mac & Cheese
Hamburger
BASICS LUNCH
Mac & Cheese
Black-Eyed Peas

DINNER
Glazed Chicken
Fettuccini & Sausage
BASICS DINNER
Glazed Chicken
Fettuccini & Sauceb

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Words or Phrases that Sound Dirty but really Aren't

10. Beer Balls.
9. FAC.
8. DP Dough.
7. Caesar salad.
6. Hootie and the Blowfish.
5. Goldshlauger.
4. Sloppy Joe.
3. Bursar.
2. Gingrich.
1. Duchess meat pie.

Quote of the Day

"If I'm not at home accepting what I can not change, I'm out changing what I can not accept"

–Unknown

Sports

Donaghue to compete at NCAAs

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It was a happy ending for the Massachusetts women's cross country team this weekend, when the Minutewomen closed out their season at the ECAC Championships in Boston.

But the final chapter in the storybooks will have an epilogue, as Rebecca Donaghue extended her season for one more week, by qualifying for the NCAA Championships.

Running in a field of over 80 schools, the Minutewomen toed the starting line with some of the best talent in collegiate running. Lining up against the likes of Georgetown, Connecticut and others, UMass scored 398 points to take 15th place. The meet was won by Providence College with 44 points.

Massachusetts was led by sophomore Rebecca Donaghue, who finished 11th overall, with a time of 17:28. That personal record time was over 20 seconds faster than the time Donaghue ran on the same course at New England's three weeks ago.

With a performance deemed "fantastic" by Massachusetts coach Julie LaFreniere, Donaghue qualified for the NCAA Championships. A member of the 1995 All-Atlantic 10 team, Donaghue has been the first Minutewoman across the line in every race this season.

"I was absolutely ecstatic with Rebecca's performance," LaFreniere said. "Right now she is running with national quality kids, and that is where we want her to be.

"She averaged about 5:38 a mile, and I was extremely pleased with that. What else can I say except that she was fantastic," she said.

The second Minutewomen across the line was senior Jen Waeger. Finishing in 18:04, she took 41st overall. Waeger has been an emotional leader for the Minutewomen all season, and the co-captain, and member of the All-Atlantic 10 team, ended her collegiate career on a positive note.

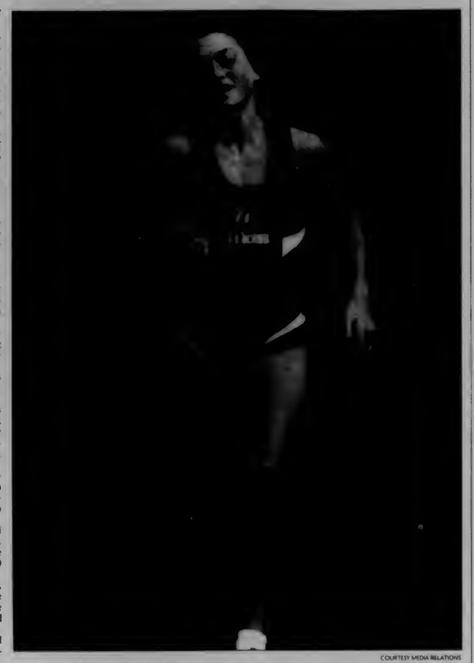
"I think Jen ran very, very well. She is really feeling good, and it showed," LaFreniere said. "She ran the best race of her season, running with some outstanding athletes. That is a very respectable way to end her season."

The trio of Katie Greenia, Kristin Donaldson and Christy Martin rounded out the UMass top five. Greenia, who had a late season surge to capture the final Massachusetts spot on the All-Atlantic 10 team, finished 105th overall, with a time of 19:08.

Donaldson and Martin took 120th and 121st, respectively, each clocking a 19:14. LaFreniere commented that the three women looked a little flat this weekend, a condition that was attributed to the effort they gave at the A-10 Championships.

"The performances were not the best effort I have seen from these women, but they were certainly not terrible," LaFreniere said of Greenia.

turn to WOMEN'S X-COUNTRY, page 9



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Rebecca Donaghue place 11th in the ECAC Championships Saturday, qualifying her for the NCAAs next Monday in Ames, Iowa.

Men's swimming enacts revenge on Northeastern

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

Thoughts of last year's loss at the hands of Northeastern lingered in the mind of men's swimming and diving coach Russ Yarworth as he prepared his team for the rematch this past weekend. It paid off as the Massachusetts men's swimming team was able to get revenge on the Huskies.

"This dual meet had a little extra significance to it for us because last year Northeastern beat us for the first time ever and they were pretty vocal about it," Yarworth said. "We wanted to show them what we thought about it."

Senior tri-captain Keith McLarty was part of last years team who suffered the loss to Northeastern and he had only one thought in mind as he and his team got ready for the match and that was to come out victorious.

"We thought it was going to be a tough match, but this year we came in a lot more prepared than last year," McLarty said.

The Minutemen came out of the blocks in high gear as they placed first in three of the first four events. Freshmen David Koritkoski and Geoff Gear and juniors Chris Martin and Greg Menton led off the meet with a close race in the 400 meter medley relay that came down to the wire before they settled for a second place finish. Freshman Brian Wisniewski, sophomore Scott Herbert, freshman Mike Dellagalla and junior Dave Dornaus followed behind capturing third place.

Koritkoski and Wisniewski each swam a strong first leg of their respective relay teams which impressed Yarworth concerning their abilities as freshman.

"I was pleased with our freshman backstrokers, I thought [Koritkoski and Wisniewski] did a good job," Yarworth said. "It shows that we're looking pretty good for the future."

Other freshman that had an impact on the Minutemen's victory were Marc Lavardiere and Gear. Lavardiere took first place finishes in the 1000m freestyle and 500m freestyle with times of 10:07.48 and 4:55.35 respectively. Gear, a highly touted recruit from Ohio posted a first place win in the 200m freestyle, with a time of 1:50.21, and a second place finish in the 200m butterfly, as well as being part of the winning 400 medley relay team.

Sophomore Sean Anderson's displayed veteran poise as he placed first in his two individual efforts, while also anchoring the winning 400m freestyle team. Anderson cruised to his individual victories in the 50m freestyle and the 100m freestyle, with times of :21.44 and :48.08, respectively.

Following Anderson's win in the 50m freestyle, the Minutemen fell into a rut as Northeastern took first place in the next three events. This momentary lapse was the result of the Minutemen's lack of intensity which Yarworth spoke to his team about after the match.

Senior Justin Murphy gave his team the lift they needed as he redeemed himself from an earlier loss in the one meter dive and paved the way to the easy victory in the three meter.

"Having Justin coming back after a not-so-good performance in the one meter to win the three meter was good," Yarworth said. "It showed that he is maturing."

Another notable performance by a Minuteman came from McLarty, who took the win in the 200m backstroke and was a member of the winning team in the 400m freestyle relay.

Yarworth was pleased with the results but also had some concerns.

"For this time of year, everyone was about where I wanted them to be," Yarworth said. "I'm also concerned about the breaststro-

turn to MEN'S SWIMMING page 9

Hockey coverage still lacking in SI, USA; Roy remains a legend

American media really slacks when it comes to coverage of the NHL. Rarely will you see a televised contest between teams from Canada or the West, ESPN's Sportcenter and the like relegate hockey highlight packages to the tail end of their broadcasts, and national sports magazines like Sports Illustrated rarely tackle more than the most cursory issues in the league.

SI did delve into the "matter" of the Montreal Canadiens, who suffered an atrocious start to the season. Montreal fired GM Serge Savard and head coach Jacque Demers, both hailed as Saviors of St. Catherine's just three seasons ago, when Les Habitants won their millionth Stanley Cup.

One of its columnists penned a piece for the "Point After" section, words to the effect that Montreal would be picking pretty high in next year's entry draft.

Oh, SI, please stick to the NFL and NBA like all your counterparts, you'll save yourself a lot of embarrassment.

Montreal is one point back of Pittsburgh for first place in the Northeast Division. And while much of the credit for its resurgence must go to some new faces—new coach Mario Tremblay, the real Mark Recchi (not that imitation playing at Le Forum last season), and Brian Savage, who simply cannot be the same man he was before he racked up 15 goals in the Canadiens' 16 games this year.

But before you start burying a veteran team just because it slows down a bit (this means you, Michael Farber), remember we can all get a second wind. And there's one man who's stuck through thick and thin for Montreal, hails from the city, and is one of the best ever to play his position. Need a hint? No less than five active NHL goalies—good ones—play in net because of what he did for that spot. He is Patrick Roy. Heard of him?

Roy has had a fascinating career marked by unparalleled success. Montreal won Stanley Cups in 1985-86 and 1992-93, perhaps Roy's two worst regular seasons. But in those playoffs, Roy was, well, St. Patrick, tough to be when you're a French-Canadian, not Irish. If his goals against average soared above 4.00 after that second championship, he'd still be hailed forever as a legend.

It never got close to that bad for Roy, though of course he felt a lot of the heat for Montreal's failure to reach the playoffs last year for the first time since the Hming Dynasty.

A 2.97 GAA and a .906 save percentage (Roy's 1994-95 totals)? Perhaps not quite Royesque, but far from indication that he's washed up.

turn to NHL page 9

Women's swim team drowns Northeastern

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

All but one swimming event was won by the Minutewomen as the team swam to a convincing 205.5 to 94.5 victory on Saturday, in women's swimming and diving action at Boyden Gymnasium.

UMass defeated the Northeastern Huskies in a duel swimming and diving meet, for their second victory in as many meets this year.

"It's been many, many years since I can remember that we have been off to a 2-0 start," coach Bob Newcomb said.

This meet saw four UMass swimmers take first place in each of their two respective swimming events on the day.

Senior Sarah Baker took first place in both of the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events with times of 24.56, and 53.60 respectively.

"She's the kind that will just get faster as the year goes on," said Newcomb.

Her teammates Jill Carrol and Amy Mullen were right behind her in capturing second and third place in the 100 freestyle. It was one of four events on the day that the Minutewomen had the top three finishers.

The other events that saw UMass placing the top three finishers, were the 500 yard freestyle, the 200 yard individual medley, and the 200 yard freestyle relay, in which 12 members were involved.

"Finishing 1-2-3 is hard to do against a school the quality of Northeastern," Newcomb said.

Sophomore Kerrin McCarthy was one of the four with two first place finishes. She won both the 100 and 200 yard backstroke.

Senior Jessica Griffith took the victory in her strong suit, the breaststroke, with first place in the 100 and 200 yard events.

Junior Jessica Farley swam well winning the 200 yard freestyle, and the 200 yard individual medley, as well as placing second in the 200 yard backstroke.

"She had a good meet," said Newcomb. "She had some pretty good swims for this early in the season."

Junior Barbara Hickey had another fine meet as she took care of the distance events winning the 500 and 1000 yard freestyle races, with over a 30 second victory in the 1000 with a time of 10:35.16.

"She went even faster this week," said Newcomb. "She experimented a little bit, and she'll get used to swimming both the 500 and 1000 yard freestyles."

UMass has been swimming very well as a team, and Newcomb is satisfied with the results.

"It was very pleasing," said Newcomb. "Being so close with Northeastern the past few years, it was good to get a win like this. They swam well. We swam much better."

Lisa McNamara swam real well, Newcomb pointed out. McNamara picked up third place in the 1000 yard freestyle, with a time of 11:11.57.

"That was an excellent time for her," said Newcomb. "I think that convinced her that she's on track now."

UMass was outscored in the diving competition however, after being outscored in only one swimming event on the day.

"Diving is such a subjective thing," Newcomb said. "Northeastern has had one of the most consistent diving programs since I've been here."

UMass did have a good showing off the boards though as divers, sophomore Angelique Rodriguez, freshman Kim Schadt and junior Krystin Carpenter put forth their

turn to SWIMMING, page 9

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Jessica Griffith took two first place finishes this passed Saturday as the women's swimming and diving team drowned Northeastern.

UMass hoop recruits now total four

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

To make up for last year's limited recruiting, the Massachusetts coaching staff continues its frenzied recruiting pace this year.

Coach John Calipari headed home to land the fourth recruit of the early signing period. Calipari, who hails from Moon, Penn. got a letter of intent from Pittsburgh native Chris Kirkland.

The 6-foot-6 forward shunned offers from St. Bonaventure, Duquesne, Villanova and several other schools to sign with UMass. He averaged 20 points and 14 boards for Stow Rox High School as a junior last year.

Stow Rox Coach Ed Goetz told the Daily Hampshire Gazette that Kirkland was "the hardest working player he ever coached," and that Kirkland "loves the UMass style of play."

* * *

Kirkland joins point guard Monte Mack (South Boston), forward Mike Babul (North Attleboro) and swingman Winston Smith (Elizabeth, NJ) as the incoming freshmen for next year.

The addition of Kirkland solidifies the small forward position which will likely push UMass out of the running for Kevin Freeman and Andre McCullom, a small forward who the Minutemen had been recruiting.

Massachusetts is still looking for a big man however, and is hoping to get one more recruit signed before the early signing period ends on Wednesday.

UMass has been in hot pursuit of Ajmal Basit, a 6-foot-9 center who plays for Bob Hurley Sr. at St. Anthony's in Jersey City.

The Minutemen are in Shamel Jones' final three. Massachusetts is in a race with Syracuse and Georgetown for the 6-foot-8 forward. The current Massachusetts squad opens season Nov. 28 at the Great Eight Tournament against Kentucky.

The curtain drops in Orono tonight
Senior Octavia Thomas and the UMass women's basketball team play in the Preseason NIT tonight against Maine. (See sports page 3)

Multi-party rule begins in Mexico
Opposition advances inelections in six states have put an end to Mexico's single party rule. (See news page 3)

Dancing the night away...
Northampton Arts Council presents a special night of flamenca music and dance. (See Arts&Living, page 5)

Extended Forecast
The weather will be a disgusting mix of rain and snow today as the temperature will continue to hover around the freezing mark. Precipitation will subside tommorrow but it'll still be cold.

today	day	night
HIGH: 38	HIGH: 40	HIGH: 40
LOW: 30	LOW: 30	LOW: 30

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 50 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, November 15, 1995

Clinton, GOP point fingers as budget accord can't be reached

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the Smithsonian's museums shuttered and federal workers sent home in droves, the Clinton administration and Republican leaders failed to reach accord on the budget Tuesday and sharply attacked each other over a partial government shutdown. "At this time, I have to tell you we are at an impasse," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said after several hours of talks with GOP leaders ended without agreement.

With the shutdown less than one day old, however, Republicans moved to shelter certain politically popular programs from disruption.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich said legislation would likely begin moving "in the next day or two" to reopen facilities such as Social Security offices to new applications could be taken, veterans' offices, passport facilities and possibly national parks. Both sides seemed to be digging in, though, on the overall issue of getting the entire government back into operation.

"Let's say 'Yes' to balancing the budget, but let us together say 'No' to these deep and unwise cuts in education, technology, the environment, Medicare and Medicaid," Clinton said in an assault on the GOP budget priorities.

Gingrich quickly retaliated, saying Clinton was accusing the GOP of "phony cuts that do not exist." He said the president's own balanced-budget proposal would perpetuate deficits forever, and he challenged Clinton to help negotiate a seven-year plan to erase deficits "without baloney."

The first effects of the shutdown were felt as the political positioning unfolded, although essential services such as the nation's defense, air traffic control system and prison operations were maintained without interruption.

"Due to the federal government shutdown, the Smithsonian Institution must be closed," read signs posted up and down Washington's Mall, home to museums where millions flock annually to gaze at exhibits of art, space exploration, natural history and more.

Mary Jo Kampe, visiting from Williamston, Mich., missed a long-awaited White House tour and was turned away at the nearby Holocaust Museum as well. "I have waited a very long time for this so I'm very upset, disappointed," she said.

Some 800,000 of the 2.1 million federal civilian workers in Washington and around the world had a place to go — home from their offices after reporting to work and being told their services were nonessential.

The American Federation of Government Employees filed a lawsuit challenging the administration's handling of the situation, including its definition of essential workers and its authority to require them to work without knowing when they would be paid. A federal judge scheduled a hearing for Thursday.

The inconvenience penetrated even the Senate's private preserve. Republicans gathering for their weekly senators' lunch dined on Domino's pizza — cheese, vegetable and sausage toppings, they said — because the Senate's restaurants were closed.

Senior White House aides met at midday with key lawmakers, the two sides arranging themselves around a green, felt-covered table in one of the Senate's committee meeting rooms. They reconvened a few hours later, but that session, like the first, yielded no agreement.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said no further meetings had been set, although staff contacts would continue.

And with the government's routine borrowing authority expiring as well, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said he would take unspecified steps "to avert the default that will otherwise take place."

The shutdown was triggered Monday night when Clinton vetoed legislation necessary to maintain regular government spending, saying he did so because it would have raised Medicare premiums. A White House meeting that lasted until the midnight hour failed to resolve the impasse.

Earlier, Clinton vetoed a measure necessary to extend government borrowing authority, citing provisions he said would restrict Rubin's ability to manage the government's finances. Despite the uncertainty, financial markets reacted calmly to the events in Washington.

At the White House, spokesman Mike McCurry replied with an abrupt "Yes," when asked if he thought the government would remain shut down Wednesday, and he said the standoff could be lengthy.

"It may be... because the president has just now told you that those priorities reflected in that budget will not be accepted and he has point-blank told them that this president is willing to give up his presidency on that proposition rather than accept those budget priorities," McCurry said.

At the Capitol, Democrats in both houses sought to pass short-term legislation to reopen the government, but majority Republicans blocked votes in the proposals.

Rythum is a heartbeat...

DAYMON SARTHY/COLLEGIAN

Tony Vacca, a member of The Rythum Mission, performs a combination of drums, bells, shakere and talking drums to create a continuously evolving world of rythum yesterday afternoon at the Cape Cod Lounge. Their music embraces traditions that are simultaneously ancient and contemporary, incorporating a range of styles from hip hop to high life, samba to salsa, jazz to ju-ju. It's music to dream to and definately to dance to.

U.S. societal problems examined by Marable

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

The consequences and ultimate success of the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s and 1970s are being put into question in the 1990s by many, and lay at the very center of a debate that shapes social relations in America.

Professor Manning Marable tackled this issue Monday as he read from and discussed his latest book, Beyond Black and White: Transforming African-American Politics, which, ideally, he would like to be taken as a modern, updated version of W.E.B. Du Bois' classic The Souls of Black Folk.

Marable gave examples of some major subjects that he looks at in his book: the Clarence Thomas controversy, the Rodney King beating and ensuing riots in Los Angeles, the debate over affirmative action and "the politics of race," California's Proposition 187 and legislation for welfare reform.

COURTESY OF RACE & REASON

Manning Marable

Relating how he began to engage in such issues, Marable spoke on growing up in his hometown, Born in Dayton, Ohio, in 1950, he experienced segregation in the same way as it was commonly practiced in the South.

"The black community existed primarily in its own world," Marable said.

Marable said that racial discrimination was an everyday factor in the lives of black people. He said his own father, holder of a master's degree, was denied job after job not for being unqualified, but simply because he was black.

"Race existed as a sort of prison" where society was separated along racial lines, and where "blacks were seen as practically sub-human," Marable said.

Taking this sentiment from over three decades ago, Marable said that this still fits into the American societal structure nowadays — from the black perspective, race is "created from within and imposed from without," because although blacks see society along racial lines, it is still whites that determine the way the society is shaped.

In 1995, after so long and hard a struggle that has brought many positive societal changes, black Americans are still not seen as equals by whites, and not treated in such manner according to Marable.

"To be black in 1995 means ... the reality of your being is still being denied," Marable said.

One of the most crucial problems facing a renewed movement for equality and justice is that the political right has a much more organized platform than the left.

"White conservatives understand strategically the power of race" in American society today, so that they can engage in a "cynical manipulation" of blacks and others, Marable said.

This is in direct connection with the fact that the gains of the civil rights era never allowed blacks to get their hands on capital, the basic element to ultimate success in a capitalist society.

The importance of access to control over capital is crucial in order to understand the problem: according to Marable, the top one percent of American households hold more material wealth than the bottom 95 percent.

This need for controlling the rise of success among American ethnic minorities has made race "a vehicle for orienting the politics of the right," Marable said.

According to Marable, another method of white conservatist control is imprisonment through manipulation of the criminal justice system. He said that 600,000

Turn to PROFESSOR, page 3

Chabad House introduces Blum as new coordinator

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is far from the concrete canyons of New York City, where residents are accustomed to seeing black coated religious Jews walking around. Thus, students often give strange looks when they see members of UMass' Chabad House walking around on campus.

Wearing a black coat and hat, and with a full beard, people like Yonah Blum, the new outreach coordinator for Chabad, are often the subject of strange stares and hastily- conceived opinions.

In fact, Blum says that is the hardest problem of his new job.

"There's a big stereotype out there about the Chabad movement, the Chabad/Lubavitcher movement. What I do is I walk around with this black hat and beard and right away people say this guy's different and don't give me a chance."

Blum said one of his major goals is to break the stereotypes by letting people get to know him and "get under the hat and beard... Let people know we're normal people."

So far the Washington D.C. native has had a lot of success. "I've been coming up for the last couple years to help out Rabbi [Chaim] Adelman. So far the response has been nice. People are very warm and open here. It's great here."

The Rabbinical College student first came to be involved with UMass several years ago when a student from the school went to his Yeshiva. Adelman set up a program, with the UMass student acting as a liaison, to bring Yeshiva students to UMass for the weekend Shabbat services.

As for how he came to be at the Rabbinical school in the first place, Blum said he was not really sure. "I wasn't religious my whole life. I grew up like most people in the whole world."

Then as he got older, he became more interested in his religion, he explained. "I went off to Rabbinical school to learn more about it, and one thing leads to another, and I got more and more interested."

Now that he is taking a break from his formal studies to work here full time, Blum said his work is "basically campus outreach." He said he spends time at a table set up on the Campus Center Concourse, as well as in the other Five College schools.

"I get people aware of the Chabad House and the programs we have there," he explained.

As for what he wants to do, Blum said he is starting with "small goals for now."

"Basically, I just want to help strengthen Jewish activities on campus, boost attendance at Chabad, get more people to come to our Shabbat services."

And for Blum to do that, he will need to get people to look under the black hat and beard to see the beneath it is a normal person, one who spends time on Sundays looking for some place to watch his Washington Redskins in their weekly game.

Officials question motives behind Middle East

By ADNAN MALIK
Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia— For thousands of Americans living in Saudi Arabia, the kingdom seemed one of the few safe havens in the Middle East, a region plagued by terrorism.

That sense of security vanished Monday when a bomb destroyed a U.S.-run military training facility, killing five Americans and a Filipino and injuring 60.

On Tuesday, a seventh person died from injuries suffered in the bombing, according to U.S. Defense Department spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Scott Campbell. The victim was not American, and further details were not known.

Some of the wounded remained in critical condition.

"We were shocked because someone we know was in that building and was badly injured," said Lee Crowley, a banker from New York who has lived in Riyadh for six years.

Crowley said his close friend underwent four hours of surgery and required more than 100 stitches. "You can imagine how badly she was hurt," he said.

U.S. embassy spokesman Jeffrey Thomas said an FBI team arrived in Riyadh on Tuesday, but declined to give further details. A dozen American investigators in red helmets and boots joined hundreds of Saudi Arabian colleagues Tuesday in lifting tangled metal, smashed concrete and other debris left by the deadly bomb. Security men cordoned off the streets, while tractors removed huge piles of rubble.

The blast occurred outside the modern, three-story building that was the headquarters for a U.S. Army program which provides American military and civilian advisers to modernize the Saudi National Guard.

Despite three claims of responsibility, it was still not clear who carried out the attack. It was also not known whether it was an isolated incident or part of a wider campaign against the ruling al-Saud family and the Americans who work for them.

While many mysteries remain, one thing is clear— the building was extremely vulnerable by Middle East standards.

Many buildings used by the U.S. government and the military in the region are notable for their fortress walls and elaborate security. But perpetrators of Monday's attack were apparently able to place a powerful bomb on the street next to the building where some 200 Americans were working.

U.S. Ambassador Raymond Mabus said the explosion was caused by a bomb, and other U.S. officials have said preliminary evidence suggests it was a car bomb.

U.S. officials have not discussed security at the site, but the embassy urged Americans in the kingdom to be "extremely cautious and vigilant."

Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, has been a close ally of the United States for decades. Tens of thousands of U.S. citizens have worked in the kingdom, and Americans played a prominent role in developing the country's oil industry.

The United States sent hundreds of thousands of troops to the kingdom during the 1990-91 Gulf crisis, and the American forces led the multinational coalition that drove the Iraqi forces out of Kuwait.

Muslim fundamentalists oppose the presence of U.S. and other Western troops on Saudi soil, but there had been no terrorist attacks against the Americans before Monday.

Two obscure groups claimed responsibility Monday, but neither could be verified, according to Mabus. Iraqi television reported Tuesday that another unknown group, the Fighting Organization of the Partisans of God, also had claimed responsibility.

Meanwhile, Middle East analysts said the Saudi Arabian government's heavy-handed policy toward its opponents was an underlying cause of the attack.

"The absence of democracy (in Saudi Arabia) is a recipe for violence," said Labib Kamhawi, a political scientist at Jordan University, in Amman, Jordan. "I think what happened ushers a new era (of violence) there and similar actions will ensue.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Nov. 15

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for anyone interested in a 1996 Peace Corps position. The meeting is at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 165. For more information contact the Peace Corps Office in Rm. 12 of Draper Hall, 545–2105.

Meeting — The Student Nursing Association (SNA) is having a meeting to discuss a blood drive and Amherst Survival Center activities. The meeting is in Morrill 4N Room 403 at 5 p.m..

Workshop — Boricuas Unidos is sponsoring a workshop on typical/folkloric Puerto Rican music by the Polytechnic University of Puerto Rico Choir. The workshop is in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Forum — The Chancellor's Commission on Civility will be holding a forum on past and current recipients of funding for Campus "Bridge-Building" Projects. The forum is at noon in Campus Center Room 917.

Meeting — For anyone interested in studying in France next year, students and faculty who have participated in UMass' Academic Year in Paris/Rouen program will talk about their experiences and answer questions at 6:30 p.m., 301 Herter Hall. For more information contact Jenny, 546- 7361.

Women's Studies — Women's Studies students are invited to attend an event focusing on course offerings for the spring semester. Faculty will give brief presentations on upcoming courses and the course offerings guide will be available, 4:30–6 p.m. in the Women's Studies Lounge in Bartlett 208A. For more information call 545-1922.

Food Drive — As part of MASSPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Week activities, food drive begins today running through Friday. For more information call 545– 0199

Skip-A-Meal — MASSPIRG is encouraging students on the University meal plan to volunteer to skip dinner at the Dining Halls. Food Services has agreed to refund each skipped meal and donate the proceeds to a local soup kitchen.

Hunger Banquet — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a banquet held at Earthfoods at 6 p.m. illustrating the pattern of global food distribution. Speakers will be present as well as live music. Cost is $4. For more information call 545–0199.

Musical — The UMass Theater Guild presents Chess, an '80s pop-rock musical by Tim Rice, Bjorn Ulvaeus, Benng Anderson and Richard Nelson. The show will be in Bowker Auditorium through Nov. 18 and the curtain is at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or at the FAC box office, $4 for students and $6 for the general public.

Games Night — There will be dominoes & Briscas at the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. this evening.

Lecture — The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series will present Professor Raymond S. Bradley in "Climatic Changes: Past, Present, and Future" at 4 p.m. in Thompson Hall Room 104. The event is free.

Thursday, Nov. 16

Exchange — British Universities North America Club (BUNAC) representatives from London and Dublin will be present to talk about student exchange employment programs in England and Ireland. The event will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 903. There will also be an informational table on the Campus Center Concourse. The event is sponsored by the Mather Career Center Office, for more information call 545–6011.

Smoke-Out Table — Turn in your cigarettes and get a survival kit at the Great American Smoke Out Table in the Campus Center Concourse, 9:30 a.m.–2:30 p.m.

Documentary — "Pack of Lies: the Advertising of Tobacco," a documentary on the marketing techniques used by the tobacco industry, will be shown on HSCN Channel 17, every hour on the hour during the Great American Smoke Out.

Discussion — "The Wildlife Society" presents a discussion on the hunting behavior of the Lynx and coyote in the Yukon. Room 203 Holdsworth Hall at 6:30 p.m. The discussion will feature guest speaker Dr. Dennis Murray.

Workshop — Boricuas Unidos is sponsoring a meeting on "Puerto Rican Women and Relationships" in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Workshop — Alex Deschamps and a panel of senior Teaching Assistants from various departments will present "Managing the Classroom as a TA." The seminar will address the difficulties graduate instructors face in their intermediary positions. The workshop is free and open to the public, to register, find the room location, and additional information contact the Center For Teaching at 5–1225.

Brown Bag Luncheon — The Stonewall Center presents Hampshire College Professor Margaret Cerullo speaking on "Families That Matter — Family Values, Queer Families, Queer Politics." The event is at noon in Campus Center Room 803 at noon. The event is wheelchair accessible and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Friday, Nov. 17

Band–Aid — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a benefit concert at 7:30 p.m. in the Butterfield basement. The concert features Essex County Greenbelt, Clovis Point, and other mystery guests. Admission is $3 or three canned goods. Proceeds benefit the Food Bank of Western Mass. For more information contact 545-0199.

Sleep Out — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a sleep out on the Butterfield lawn immediately following the Band–Aid Concert. Students are sponsored to sleep out in cardboard boxes. There will be a bonfire, with drum circle and "open stage."

Concert — UPC presents "311" with "Shoootyz Groove" at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $15 for UMass students and $16.50 for non–students. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited, the Northampton Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record.

GLBT Students of Color — A reception is being held for GLBT Students of Color in 120 Mary Lyon Residence Hall at 6 p.m. Food and beverages will be served. For more information contact Rosie at 545–0310.

Correction

In Monday's story about the Adults Only Video Store in Hadley, a protester was incorrectly identified. The name should have read Ben Zeman instead of Ben Waterman. The Collegian regrets the error.

Campus Police Log

Traffic stop
Nov. 9
Daniel P. McCarthy, 20, of 180 James St., Feeding Hills was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.
Nov. 12
Ronald J. Martel, 21, of 20 Michael St., Ludlow, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Vandalism
Nov. 9
There was chalk graffiti on the front and corner of the Student Union.
There was homophobic graffiti at Morrill Science Center.
There was homophobic graffiti etched into an elevator wall in Brown Residence Hall.
Nov. 10
The outside mirrors on a vehicle in Parking Lot 11 were broken.
There was damage to a parked vehicle in Parking Lot 50.
An individual reported that all the windows on his vehicle in Parking Lot 12 were smashed.
There was damage to a vehicle in Parking Lot 52.
Nov. 12
There was a rock thrown through a window in Coolidge Residence Hall.
There was a second report of an individual urinating on a resident's door in Patterson Residence Hall.
There was damage to a vending machine in Cashin Residence Hall.

Larceny
Nov. 9
There was a report of unauthorized use of a TMS calling card.
A cellular phone was reported to be stolen from a vehicle on Furcolo Rd.
There was a bicycle stolen from Patterson Residence Hall.
Nov. 10
An individual paid for locker rental in Boyden Gymnasium with a check that was returned due to insufficient funds.
A distributor cap and other parts were stolen from a vehicle on Stadium Dr.
Two plastic plants were stolen from Hampden Dining Hall.
Nov. 11
An individual in Pierpont Residence Hall reported that money was stolen from his wallet.

Assault & battery
Nov. 9
An individual reported that a male subject grabbed her in the buttocks area on Nov. 8 near Goodell Building. The incident is under investigation.

Fire alarm
Nov. 9
Posters were set on fire in Baker Residence Hall. The fire was extinguished by residence staff.
Nov. 11
A fire alarm on the fourth floor of Patterson Residence Hall was set off maliciously. Later, an alarm was set off in the same residence hall.
Fireworks were set off in a stairwell in Pierpont Residence Hall.
Nov. 12
There was a faulty pull station on the fourth floor of Patterson Residence Hall.

Accident
Nov. 10
A vehicle struck another vehicle by the Campus Center and left the scene. The plate number of the offending vehicle was checked.
Nov. 11
One vehicle struck another vehicle on Sylvan Dr. The offender left the scene.

Burglary/breaking & entering
Nov. 10
A vehicle in Parking Lot 22 was broken into and a stereo system was stolen.
A lock was damaged on a vehicle in Parking Lot 11.

Medical emergency
Nov. 11
An individual in Wheeler Residence Hall with stomach pains was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in Rand Theatre who was possibly having a seizure was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual passed out at the East side of Prince Residence Hall. No transport was necessary.
Nov. 12
An individual in Washington Residence Hall who had a severe arm laceration was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Assist agency
Nov. 11
A trash barrel of water poured down an elevator shaft in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Nov. 12
There was flooding, caused by a storm, on the fourth floor of Wheeler Residence Hall.
Police assisted several individuals on Presidents Drive who needed transport.

Disturbance
Nov. 11
There was a report of individuals fighting at the Southwest mall. The group dispersed.

Intoxicated person
Nov. 12
An individual in Hampden Snack Bar was checked and sent on his way.

Annoying behavior
Nov. 12
Objects were thrown from the upper floors of John Adams Residence Hall.

Health/safety hazard
Nov. 12
There was a smoke smell from the handicap access device in Bartlett Hall.

Arts & Living

So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike – you just have to do it.

LATINO SUPPORT GROUP

This group will deal with issues of identity facing Latinos as living or attending college in the mainland USA. Living in a culture where Latinos are viewed as a "minority" will be discussed in the context of how it affects Latinos self perception.
This will be a drop-in group held every week.

UMASS Campus Center
(Check schedule board for room number)
Wednesdays beginning November 8
and running until April
3:30 - 5:00 PM

ANYONE WHO IDENTIFIES AS:
- Latino/ born in Mexico, South/Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or the Dominican Republic.
- is first generation (meaning born here is the USA from Latino parent(s)
- is of Latino heritage

IS WELCOME TO ATTEND.

Please call 545-2337 to register.
The group will be conducted in English or Spanish depending on membership

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enivilling stories! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY WITH METPAY. WE'VE GOT SOME OF THE BEST RATES IN TOWN.

Getting more value from your auto insurance is easy for University of Massachusetts employees. With METPAY, you can take advantage of:
- A 5% group discount off Massachusetts state-mandated auto rates.
- The convenience of payroll deduction with no down payment, interest or service charges. This option may not be available to non-benefit-eligible employees.
- Person-to-person contact with full-time, on-site METPAY Account Consultants.
- Free Massachusetts registry service to verify your auto registration renewals or process registration forms for newly purchased cars.

Isn't it time you got more for your money? Call METPAY at 5-9465 (Amherst Campus) or visit Debbie Bowker, located at Lot # 41 trailer next to the Physical Plant. Free parking is available.

METPAY is a trade name of the Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates, West Warwick, RI
Met P&C
Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates, Warwick, RI
PEANUTS © United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

Study Japanese this Summer!
Study and live with 45 Japanese students from Waseda University at Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon! Six week program (July 18 - Aug. 24) offers Japanese language (all levels) and courses in economics, literature & history. Earn 8 sem. (12 quarter) hours of credit. Wilderness trip included. Prior language study NOT required. Scholarships available!
Oregon/Japan Summer Program
222 SW Columbia Street, Suite 1750
Portland, OR 97201
opejapan@aol.com (800) 823-7938
http://www.lclark.edu/~iso/japan/japan.html

The Great American Smoke Out
YOU CAN QUIT
GIVE IT A TRY
Turn in your cigarettes and get a survival kit.
Thursday, Nov. 16, 1995
9:30AM - 2:30PM
Campus Center Concourse Table
SPONSORED BY THE STUDENT HEALTH ADVISORY BOARD

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED.
CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

Mystery surrounds Waldholtz divorce

By Kimberley Murphy
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY— Rep. Enid Waldholtz filed for divorce Tuesday from her husband, who has been missing for three days and is under federal investigation for possible campaign financing improprieties.

"I can't begin to describe the anger and hurt over the incredible level of deception that we have uncovered in our own investigation of Joe's activities," the freshman Republican congresswoman said in a statement.

"I want this man tracked down, arrested and punished for what he has done to me, my family and the people of Utah," she said of her husband of two years.

Mrs. Waldholtz asked a court to grant her sole custody of the couple's 2 1/2-month-old daughter. She also said she would ask for permission to restore her maiden name, Greene.

Joe Waldholtz is the focus of a federal investigation into the couple's finances that apparently began when the congressional credit union complained about large overdrafts.

As word of the investigation became public, profile emerged of a man who convinced his wife he was worth millions, and spent borrowed money as though he were.

Police, congressional staffers and family members said Tuesday they had no idea where Joe Waldholtz went after he was last seen Saturday at National Airport near Washington, where his parked car was found.

Waldholtz, until Saturday his wife's unpaid campaign treasurer, was not considered a fugitive, but Kevin Ohlson, a spokesman for U.S. Attorney Eric Holder, confirmed he was under federal investigation.

A Justice Department source speaking on condition of anonymity said Tuesday that a federal arrest warrant likely will be issued, but it is at least a week away.

A trash barrel of water poured down an elevator shaft in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Mrs. Waldholtz said her initial reaction had been to stand by her husband. "I trusted him, I was wrong. My daughter has been abandoned by her father and that is unacceptable," she said. She promised a full accounting of her finances.

"We all deserve to know the truth," she said.

The federal investigation began with a complaint by a congressional credit union about large overdrafts in the Waldholtzes' accounts, a Justice Department source said.

Russ Behrmann, state Republican executive director, said Joe Waldholtz wrote at least $60,000 in worthless checks during the campaign.

Multi–party rule begins in Mexico after election

By Trina Kleist
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Opposition advances in elections in six states have put an end to Mexico's single-party rule, political observers declared Tuesday.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, stayed ahead as ballot counting continued Tuesday from Sunday's elections for state and local offices.

But voter anger over widespread economic hardship put opposition candidates in the mayor's seats in the state capitals of Morelia, Puebla, Culiacan and Oaxaca City.

"The PRI no longer is the majority party in Mexico," said Porfirio Munoz Ledo, chairman of the leftist Democratic Revolution Party. "The country is now tri-partisan."

The conservative, pro-business National Action has been the big winner in recent elections, taking three governorships this year and edging out Democratic Revolution as the No. 2 political power. "On Sunday the PAN (National Action) freed more territory from PRI oppression than Zapatista rebels have during two years of war," National Action president Carlos Castillo Peraza told business leaders Tuesday.

Castillo Peraza was referring to a simmering indigenous rebellion in southern Chiapas state since Jan. 1, 1994.

Democratic Revolution has suffered major setbacks in gubernatorial races and has lost ground to National Action. But the party continued to advance at the county level in the states of Michoacan, where it is leading the PRI, and in Oaxaca.

With 74.2 percent of votes counted for governor of Michoacan, PRI candidate Victor Manuel Tinoco Rubi led with 38.6 percent, and appeared the winner over Democratic Revolution candidate Cristobal Arias, who had 31.5 percent.

Some analysts had suggested that governor's race was a referendum on the future of the leftist party, which is plagued by disorganization and infighting.

But party leaders pointed out that Democratic Revolution received more than one-third of the vote in the governor's race and scores of mayorships around the country.

■ professor

continued from page 1

black inmates make up nearly half the total number of prisoners. Out of these, one out of four is between 18 and 29 years old.

Although clearly expressing his dismayal at such statistics — signs of continued racism — Marable said that "it is difficult but not impossible in the 1990s to talk about radical politics."

Our greatest challenge is ... to provide progressive alternatives" under the umbrella of "radical multi– culturalism," the only path left for actual advancement, Marable said.

"[Blacks] must begin the process of redefining blackness, which will ... eventually transform their world," Marable concluded.

Manning Marable, Professor of History and Director of the Institute for Research in African–American Studies at Columbia University, is one of the widest read black intellectuals of the current momcnt.

He has written numerous texts and has published over 150 articles in various journals. His political commentary series, "Along the Color Line," has appeared in over 280 different publications. He has also been a guest in many television programs. His upcoming books include Speaking Truth to Power, History and Black Consciousness: Essays in African– American History and Politics and Affirmative Action and the Politics of Race.

Marable's talk last night was held at the Unitarian Church Meeting House and was sponsored by Food for Thought bookstore in Amherst.

WANTED:

The Collegian is looking for a librarian. This is a paid position which involves a minimum time commitment of five hours per week. If you have questions or are interested in an application, please contact Marni E. Helfner at 545– 0719 or come down to the Collegian Offices at 113 Campus Center.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

The Bluewall
Quincy B. Lincoln Company Limited 175th Anniversary
"Last Chance To Dance"
with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

MONTEREY INSTITUTE of INTERNATIONAL STUDIES
SUMMER INTENSIVE LANGUAGE PROGRAM
JUNE 19 — AUGUST 15, 1996
English as a Second Language
JUNE 18 — AUGUST 21, 1996
Arabic, Chinese, Japanese and Russian
JUNE 25 — AUGUST 21, 1996
French, German, Italian, Korean and Spanish
MONTEREY INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL STUDIES
425 Van Buren Street, Monterey, California 93940
Telephone (408) 647-4115 ■ FAX (408) 647-3534
THE GRADUATE SCHOOL FOR INTERNATIONAL CAREERS

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

HISTORY CAREER NIGHT DEPARTMENT
WHAT TO DO WITH A BA IN HISTORY?
ROCK STAR? GUN-RUNNER FOR A CELL OF URBAN GUERILLAS? ARCTIC EXPLORER? STEAMBOAT CAPTAIN? EMPRESS?
DATE: THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1995
TIME: 4:00 PM - 6:00 PM
LOCATION: HERTER 601 LOUNGE

CARLIN BARTON	DIRECTOR OF UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES, MODERATOR
SUSAN HAMMOND	MATHER CAREER CENTER, ASSISTANT DIRECTOR, CAREER EDUCATION
WILLIAM JOHNSTON	DIRECTOR OF GRADUATE ADMISSIONS
BETH TERHUNE	PROJECT MANAGER IN SOFTWARE INDUSTRY
MARK BRENNEN	ATTORNEY AT LAW
STEVE BREWER	MASSACHUSETTS STATE REPRESENTATIVE
SUZANNE WILSON	STAFF WRITER, HAMPSHIRE LIFE MAGAZINE
KRISTINA LENTZ JUDD	UNIVERSITY FUND RAISING & ALUMNI RELATIONS

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY
FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE CONTACT : MATHER CAREER CENTER - 545 - 2224
REFRESHMENTS SERVED - ALL STUDENTS ARE WELCOME

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!
The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents
A Spectacular Sports Extra
The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview
Coming to a newstand near you
December 6, 1995
LOOK FOR IT!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Hellner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Tasker Community News Editor Maureen Majercwski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Taking charge of your life

The phone was always ringing in our house.

That Saturday, a few years ago now, was no different. Call after call and ring after ring would stream into our kitchen as my brother and sister secretly hoped the incoming phonecall was for them and not the other.

On March 20, 1992, a phonecall, which should have been one of our friends, shattered my perception of reality and left me in shock of how my friend Todd chose to die rather than to live.

The night before we received the phonecall, Todd committed suicide.

Three years later, the death of my good friend since second grade, still remains a mystery to me and many others. What perhaps tears at me the most is how Todd was unhappy living and thus chose death as his alternative.

No matter how bad life gets, suicide would never be an option for me. After all, don't we all learn from our hardships?

My friend didn't see it this way.

Neither did the two eighth grade Miami students who committed suicide last week together after being forbidden to date or see each other.

An Associated Press article published in the Springfield Union News on Nov. 9 said the two eighth sweethearts apparently drowned themselves in a canal, leaving suicide notes that told of their undying love, their desperation, and their hope of being together in another world.

The 13-year–old girl, Maryling Flores, wrote in a suicide note addressed to her mother and father, "You'll never be able to understand the love between me and Christian."

She also wrote "You don't let me see him in this world, so we're going to another place. Please don't cry for me, this is what I want. I want to feel happy, because I'm going to a place where I can be with Christian."

Police officer, Ramon Quintero, who knows both of the victim's families, described the deaths as a "Romeo and Juliet story." It certainly sounds this way, doesn't it?

Police officer, Ramon Quintero, who knows both of the victim's families, described the deaths as a "Romeo and Juliet story." It certainly sounds this way, doesn't it?

Laura Schmidt

Three years later, the death of my good friend since second grade, still remains a mystery to me and many others. What perhaps tears at me the most is how Todd was unhappy living and thus chose death as his alternative.

No matter how bad life gets, suicide would never be an option for me. After all, don't we all learn from our hardships?

My friend didn't see it this way.

Neither did the two eighth grade Miami students who committed suicide last week together after being forbidden to date or see each other.

An Associated Press article published in the Springfield Union News on Nov. 9 said the two eighth sweethearts apparently drowned themselves in a canal, leaving suicide notes that told of their undying love, their desperation, and their hope of being together in another world.

The 13-year–old girl, Maryling Flores, wrote in a suicide note addressed to her mother and father, "You'll never be able to understand the love between me and Christian."

She also wrote "You don't let me see him in this world, so we're going to another place. Please don't cry for me, this is what I want. I want to feel happy, because I'm going to a place where I can be with Christian."

Police officer, Ramon Quintero, who knows both of the victim's families, described the deaths as a "Romeo and Juliet story." It certainly sounds this way, doesn't it?

There is one difference though. Romeo and Juliet was a play. The suicides of Flores and 14–year–old Christian Davila was real life. To categorize the deaths of these two teenagers as a "Romeo and Juliet" type death fantasizes their double suicides, thus making it somewhat attractive.

The fact remains that two people, barely teenagers, believed the world had nothing else to offer them than each other.

It saddens me to realize people believe life could be that hopeless.

Now, it's too late for them. They will never realize the full capacity of their minds. What about graduation from high school or college? What about a career? The joy of being parents?

What perhaps frightens me the most is they will never have the chance to come to know themselves, who they are, and what they could have done for society.

It seems so cheap to say that these two kids were part of a "Romeo and Juliet story."

Weren't they, couldn't they, have been so much more?

The circumstances surrounding this tragic occurrence last week stirred up painful memories of my friend Todd who killed himself in a time and at a place which seems like yesterday.

I was with him just hours before his life was gone forever, and not a day goes by that I don't replay the entire scene over in my mind. We all miss him.

What could we have done?

I sigh to think that probably nothing I could have done would have saved Todd that night. Flores and Davilla believed the same. Another world — death, was more attractive to them than life as we know it.

I could never believe that things could become so painful for me that I would have to die to be happy.

People must begin to realize that YOU must make things happen. YOU must make yourself happy. YOU must believe in yourself, no matter how difficult it may be, despite ANYTHING that happens.

When you believe such things, you will become empowered and your life will become focused.

You will want to live.

I only wish that my friend Todd and the two children in Miami would have agreed. Unfortunately, it's too late for them.

Take charge of your life ... it's not too late for you.

Laura Schmidt is a Collegian staff member.

Zionism and assassination

In the wake of the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, among the fascinating questions that grief-stricken Zionists have been asking themselves are: How could assassination become part of the Israeli political scene, and how could one Jew murder another?

Such questions are born of either a profound ignorance of the history of Zionism, or a deep racial chauvinism, or in most cases, both.

One recalls the reaction of Rabin and his wife Leah to reporters' suggestions that Rabin wear a bullet–proof vest. "After all," the Rabins scoffed, "we don't live in Africa."

Hussein Ibish

The truth is, of course, Zionism and the State of Israel have always used political assassination, as well as terrorism, massacres and ethnic cleansing, as a primary means of achieving political goals, and a preferred method of dealing with those they dislike, pioneering the use of letter bombs and other innovative methods of assassination.

In the conflict in Palestine during the 1940's, hundreds of Palestinians and British were assassinated by the three armed Zionist organizations, which coordinated their efforts.

Among these included Lord Moyne, the British Resident Minister in the Middle East, and his driver, killed in Cairo on Nov. 6, 1944 on the orders of Yitzhak Shamir.

The future head of Mossad and Prime Minister of Israel Shamir also organized and ordered the assassination of the UN Mediator on Palestine, Count Folke Bernadotte and his aide, Colonel Serot, on Sept. 17, 1948.

Between January and May of 1948, hardly a day passed without another assassination of Palestinians by the Zionists.

Along with the hundreds of Palestinians assassinated during the 1940's, the Israeli state conducted numerous international campaigns of terrorist assassinations.

In the 1950's, Mossad carried out a series of letter bombings. In the late 1960's, under the guidance of Golda Mier, Mossad chief Zvi Zamir launched a huge campaign of assassinations, sending hit squads around the world to kill.

On June 1, 1972, Israel murdered 36–year–old Palestinian poet Ghassan Kanafani and his 17–year–old niece. Another brilliant Palestinian intellectual, Wael Zuaiter was gunned down in Rome. Mahmud Hamshari, Dr. Basil Al Kubaissi, and dozens more followed in quick succession.

In one orgy of assassination, Israeli hit squads rampaged through Beirut on April 9, 1973, gunning down Yussuf El–Najar and his wife, Kamal Nasser, and Kamal Adwan, among many others. Throughout the 1970's and 1980's scores of respected Palestinians were gunned down by Israeli hit squads throughout Europe and the Middle East.

Many Lebanese were also assassinated in cold bold, as by the Israeli helicopter gunship that tracked and murdered Sheikh Mussawi, his wife and three–year–old son.

Many leaders of the Intifada were assassinated by Rabin's death squads, and recent assassinations of Palestinian resistance leaders shows that this policy remains in effect.

Gentiles aside, Zionism has also never hesitated to sacrifice the lives of Jews in the name of the Jewish State.

As early as June, 1924, the well–respected Law Professor and anti–Zionist Dutch Jew, Professor De Haan was shot down outside his Jerusalem synagogue after prayers.

In July, 1933, Zionist Revisionists assassinated Chaim Arlosoroff, Jewish Agency Political Director. Revisionist leader Shamir later assassinated his rival, Eliyau Giladi.

Many other attacks on Jews followed, including, for example against Moussa Sabatini, murdered in 1940 as a "traitor" by the left–Hagana, and Police Constables Haim Gutevitch and Zev Flesch, assassinated in May 1944.

In a stunning example of this kind of activity, the Hagana blew up a Jewish refugee ship in 1940, the Patria. The British government placed 1,900 illegal Jewish settlers in Palestine aboard the Patria for transportation to Mauritius.

The Jewish Agency and its armed wing determined that if these refugees couldn't live in Palestine, then they shouldn't live at all and, as the Patria was leaving Haifa harbor on Nov. 25, 1940, they blew the ship sky high. 240 innocent Jewish refugees were murdered by the Zionists in this stunning but little–known action. For the insane political reasoning behind the action, as well as details of the killings, readers are encouraged to consult the account of the Hagana officer who planted the mine, Munya Mardor, in his memoirs, Strictly Illegal (London: Robert Hale, 1964).

Furthermore, once the State of Israel had been established and rid of its Palestinian inhabitants, Israel conducted acts of anti–Jewish terrorism in order to spur immigration to Israel by creating fear in Arab Jewish communities.

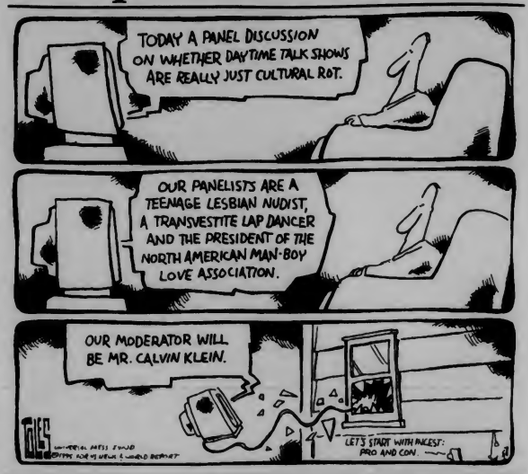
In Baghdad, for example, the Israeli government engaged in a series of bombings. In January 1951, an Israeli government anti–Jewish bomb exploded at the Massaude Shemtove Synagogue, killing one young Jewish boy. Much of the Jewish community fled to Israel in a panic.

Another chilling example of this willingness to sacrifice Jewish lives in the Zionist cause is the withholding of 30,000 certificates for entry into Palestine by the Jewish Agency at the height of Nazi persecution. They feared that these certificates might be used for transit rather than colonization and withheld them on the grounds that, as Jewish Agency head Yitzhak Gruenbaum said, "One Jewish cow in Palestine is worth more than all the Jews in Poland."

Let us have no more questions, then, about Zionism and assassination. History screams answers, even into deaf ears.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial



TODAY A PANEL DISCUSSION ON WHETHER DAYTIME TALK SHOWS ARE REALLY JUST CULTURAL ROT.
OUR PANELISTS ARE A TEENAGE LESBIAN NUDIST, A TRANSVESTITE LAP DANCER AND THE PRESIDENT OF THE NORTH AMERICAN MAN-BOY LOVE ASSOCIATION.
OUR MODERATOR WILL BE MR. CALVIN KLEIN.
LET'S START WITH INCEST: PRO AND CON.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Letters to the Editor

Ignorance can be bliss

To the Editor:

Organizations such as ALANA are contributors to the racial divide at UMass and more remotely, in America. Hernan Rozemberg discussed the issue of multiculturalism and the whites inability to take part in it or to understand it. His solution was to advocate the ideas of ALANA to facilitate the rules of race in relation to American society. Nothing could be more fatal.

As Hernan discusses, ALANA wishes to strengthen minorities within themselves to solve racial problems. As one ALANA member stated to me, "You white people had your chance." When did I have a chance? I grew up in a multi–racial family, with little knowledge that my black sister was involved in a racial battle. I did not know her rights were discriminated against. Her first position in my life was a family member, then a German, then a woman.

I never view her as black. Before someone jumps to the conclusion: "How could you understand her strife, you are white," she didn't know she was black in the loosely termed cultural sense or in the skin tone sense. My sister is retarded and has no knowledge of racial issues. One can certainly say this goes in the "ignorance is bliss" category.

How about the methods of society did not impact her? Conscience of color is not inherent, it is taught and learned by society. To suggest a black culture or a white culture is completely unjustified. The ever so popular term "multiculturalism" just means multi–colored.

When Hernan is suggesting white people who ignore the term multi–cultural are ignorant, perhaps it is because they are educated. The editor of the column admits to not even knowing what it is. So what the hell is he doing editing the section? He should also brush up on his African history.

It is a fact that Africans kept fellow Africans as slaves. Any outcasts to their society were sold in the slave trade for European goods. No one can loosely say that whites kept blacks as slaves without acknowledging that blacks kept black slaves.

This example is the very problem we face. Blacks and whites cannot look at humanity rationally. Instead, we choose our facts to fit what society has told us. Since Hernan wants white people to look at the truth, I can tell him what it is. There is no race, only racism.

The term race has been poorly used to define the color differences which are biologically, not culturally, defined. So as ALANA desires to define itself on racial unity, they are defined on nothing. The only unity that should be promoted is that of humanity. Without the constraints of society, we are not blacks, whites, or yellows, we are all humans.

Jennifer Stark
Amherst

Insulted by "Top Ten List"

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the "Top Ten List" that Brian Marchionni published in the Collegian on Nov. 10, 1995. I found this attempt at humor to be offensive because it was, in part, a personal attack on me. You see Mr. Marchionni, I am one of the people who give "The Campus Tour." In your list item number seven last Friday, you stated that my colleagues and I "lie until we are blue in the face."

I ask you, Mr. Marchionni, what gives you the right to make such a broad judgmental statement? Have you personally gone on a tour with all of the 15 tour guides that greet prospective students and their families? Have you yourself been on a tour where you heard one of us lie? I find it doubtful you could answer yes to either of these questions, yet your pen was quick to condemn us and what we do.

I understand your list simply intended to provide the campus community with a good laugh, but unfortunately the laugh was on us. Friday was Veteran's Day, and many high schools had the day off, so we greeted almost 800 prospective students that day, many of whom read your list. The effect this had on our credibility and their conception of our University was devastating.

Let me explain and enlighten you as to what it is we really do on our tours, so we can alleviate any types of false accusations you may feel compelled to make in the future due to your own ignorance. Each year, the University greets over 25,000 prospective students and their families, from virtually all over the world.

We give them a one hour and 15 minute walking tour of our campus, highlighting the many academic departments, programs and opportunities the University has to offer. From this recruitment effort, we gain an average of 18,000 applications for undergraduate admission to the University each year.

As tour guides, we all complete over 40 hours of training to learn the necessary information to provide our visitors with the best, most up to date information about our University and the college selection process.

Once trained, we attend a meeting every other week, where we gain more up to date information, and we frequently speak with representatives from other campus departments and agencies who further assist us in attaining the necessary knowledge to serve our visitors.

Throughout our tours, we provide statistical facts to assist the students in making their decision. We offer objective information about our University and we answer their questions about UMass. However, under no circumstance do we lie or share information that is not entirely true and accurate with our visitors.

Simply because you may have walked by a tour and heard a statistic you did not know, or heard a statement made that you personally, subjectively may not have agreed with, does not give you the right to attack the integrity of my colleagues and myself.

You have proven to the entire campus community that you have no problem making unsupported, unsubstantiated and unfair statements in your list, so I can see how you may find it easy to deceive thousands of people as you have here. My colleagues and I do not.

We have a University here in Amherst that we should be proud of, and we present this University with integrity, Mr. Marchionni. What I saw in print by you last Friday was nothing more than sloppy work, and this University should not and cannot tolerate this inadequacy.

One of the things we love to tell people about on our tours is the Collegian, the largest New England college daily newspaper. We tell our visitors that ours is second to none in reporting accurate, interesting and thought provoking news. If you keep printing columns that are unsubstantiated like you did last Friday Mr. Marchionni, you just might make liars out of us after all.

Jeffrey Chapdelaine
University Tour Service

Senator lacks knowledge of women's issues

To the Editor:

On the evening of Nov. 8, the Senate voted against the motion by Senator Gafney to "provide for the procedures for the creation of a caucus." Although this may sound like a repeal on women's rights and a lack of recognition that women's voices are underrepresented on this campus, it was not.

Although I am a woman and a feminist, I am also a senator. I am in the Senate to represent my constituency, but also other women's voices on this campus. There are only 20 something women, representing less than 30 percent of the vote in the Senate.

A motion could pass right through the Senate even if every woman voted against it. Hence, I feel there is a strong need for a Women's Caucus. But, on the evening of the 8th, I voted against the motion by Gafney. It was not so much because the motion, but because of the way in which it was presented to me.

About an hour before the Senate meeting was the first time I heard about this motion. I was a bit confused, first of all, about why a boy was sponsoring a motion representing this sort of caucus. I wondered what qualification does this boy have? Who is he to make decisions about women's needs when he is a male? And the most privileged kind, white.

What does he know about what women's issues are here on campus besides what he might read in a book or gather from bits of conversations? Never before had I seen these men at rallies for women's rights.

Never had I heard a peep out of them before that evening about their concern for women's issues. I was very suspicious. What were they trying to do? What was behind this? What were their motives?

Not only hadn't he asked with any woman on the Senate if they were interested in helping, but they didn't even check to see if someone had already started working on it, which Christine Lopes had.

What they did do, however, was rush to the first available woman at the Everywoman's Center and hurry her on her way to forming a caucus. There was no planning, no discussion of procedure, no input from female senators, and here were a few white males deciding what the best ways to deal with women's issues were.

Personally, I question their sincerity. If there is going to be a Women's Caucus on this campus again, then it better be done the right way. Speeding through the process, with whatever motives these men had, is not to create a strong caucus that will be around in a few years.

So, what I voted against on the evening of the 8th was not women's rights, but was the suspicious tactics of Gafney. Their incomplete and rushed plan for a Women's Caucus, and their inability to see why this motion would be offensive to women in the Senate and all over the campus. Chalkings and petitions won't hold up this faulty scheme forever.

Rebecca Filman
Central

Arts & Living

Weather doesn't stop Starship

By Robert Grover
Collegian Correspondent

JEFFERSON STARSHIP
Pearl St.
Nov. 13

They joked about the weather. The San Francisco based Jefferson Starship, who played at Pearl Street Monday night, thought the snow was fun. Despite the unseasonably cold weather, the Starship heated the hall with their charged acoustic sound.

"We hail from a land that is 48 square miles surrounded by pure reality" quipped the group's leader, Paul Kantner.

They drew from the rich Bay State musical heritage to spotlight new vocalist Diana Mangano with songs from the Great Society, a group founded by Grace Slick in the 1960s. Jefferson Starship also played selections from their rich catalog of songs but avoided performing staples such as "Somebody To Love" and "White Rabbit." Kantner said that they play those songs only "under the right condition," but Starship wants to escape the trappings of playing music that no longer presents a challenge. In keeping with this philosophy, the audience was presented with a few songs that haven't been heard live in many years.

Kantner and Company dipped back into the Airplane archive briefly and pulled out the haunting "Triad" and the Donovan penned tribute "Fat Angel." The latter contains the classic line, "Fly Jefferson Airplane, gets you there on time." The remainder of the show saw a balance of new material, including one new unreleased tune, some poetry and selections from Kantner's solo work.

While Kantner's vision and focus on the message of hope in the face adversity fuels Starship, it was Mangano's powerful vocals that drew the most attention. She recently boarded the Starship but has already shown the ability and drive to be the heir of former singer Slick. Together, she and Kanmer wove a single voice that cut though the evening's cold and warmed the room with a message that confidently proclaimed, "I'm not afraid of the future."

Historical film to be shown tonight

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center Auditorium will be host tonight to a screening of one of the most powerful and inspiring films in African–American history — Sankofa.

Sponsored by Afrik–Am and the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity, Haile Gerima's honored and critically acclaimed film about a young woman's transportation back to the time of slavery will be presented for the first time on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Sankofa, which is an Akin word meaning, "to go back and reclaim something that was lost," chronicles the story of a young African–American model named Mona. She undergoes a mystical transformation in which she is transported to her distant past as a house slave, Shola, on a sugar cane plantation..

Faced with the inhuman brutality of slavery, Shola becomes inspired by the actions of her West Indian lover, Shanga, and a field hand, Nunu. The three join forces and rebel against the slave system. Shola's determination to defy the system psychically transforms Mona, resulting in the modern black woman better understanding the present after being enlightened by her past.

Gerima, who emigrated to the United States from Gondor, Ethiopia in 1967, is a professor of directing and scriptwriting in the school of communications at Howard University. He has spent most of his life educating himself on the enslavement of Africans in the New World, and studying what he calls, "the landscape of slavery."

Sankofa, which was filmed in Jamaica and on Goree Island off the coast of Senegal, West Africa, took over 20 years to make. Prior to its recent release on video, there were approximately 10 reels in existence nationwide.

Shown at Smith College last year, this year's coordinator James Waire found Sankofa to be so inspiring, powerful and motivating he thought it needed to be presented again in the Valley.

"I have been working for the past year to bring Sankofa back to the Valley," Waire said.

The historical importance of Sankofa, according to Waire, is comparable to that of Steven Spielberg's Schindler's List.

"Similarly with Schindler's List, where every young Jewish person should see [the film] and learn and grow from it, every African–American should see Sankofa," Waire said.

Sankofa is of social and historical importance because it is about learning from, not forgetting about, the horrors of past mistakes.

The evening begins 7:45 p.m. with a production by the Bamidele Dancers & Drummers, followed by Sankofa, which will start at approximately 8:15 p.m.

Soap opera reinvents itself in New York

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — You've got to love this crazy town.

Only in New York City could TV's lowest–rated soap opera, ABC's "Loving," hope to re–invent itself — and succeed brilliantly.

Welcome to "The City," a dazzling breakthrough in daytime drama. It's a soap with a vibrant, visual energy that makes the competition look static, and positively ...down–market.

"The City" is still a soap, mind you, but it's like no soap you've ever seen.

Credit ABC for not folding the show and credit executive producer Jean Dadario Burke and head writers Barbara Esensten and James Harmon Brown (former head writing team of "Dynasty") for devising the makeover.

Gone is the sleepy college town of Corinth, Pa., home of sleepy Alden University.

Gone, too, are a half–dozen characters (and actors) who were done in by a fiendishly clever serial killer. Not only did the killer's rampage clear

Turn to SOAP, page 6

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

Form 1040 Department of the Treasury U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
For the year Jan. 1–Dec. 31, 1994, or other tax year beginning
Label Your first name and initial ... and initial ... P.O.

PAIN.

Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association/College Retirement Equities Fund
730 Third Avenue New York, NY 10017

APPLICATION FOR TIAA AND CREF SUPPLEMENTAL RETIREMENT ANNUITY CONTRACTS

Please type or print in ink and provide all information requested
PERSONAL INFORMATION

PAIN KILLER.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, based on assets under management, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, which guarantees principal and interest (backed by the company's claims-paying ability), to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Call today—it couldn't hurt.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1996. Lipper Analytical Services, Inc. Lipper Domestic Analytical Data, 1995 (Quarterly)

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, extension 5509, for a CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

©1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association/College Retirement Equities Fund

Herter Gallery to present ceramic art

By Rebecca Maloney
Collegian Correspondent

"Ceramics Northeast," a first biennial, juried show of ceramic art will be on display Nov. 16– Dec. 20 in Herter Gallery. The opening reception will take place tonight from 5 p.m.–7 p.m. in the gallery.

Participants include both undergraduate and graduate students as well as members of the community and well– known professional artists.

Sponsored by the Arts Council, the University of Massachusetts Ceramics Department and KERAMOS, the exhibition draws together a wide pool of examples of ceramic art from New England and New York artists from all walks of life.

The first event of its kind in this area, the show promises to draw attention to the tradition of ceramic art that has long existed in this region. It will expose students and members of the community to a variety of works such as functional ware and various fired methods that are representative of all ends of the spectrum.

As standard for most competitions, the artists were required to submit slides of their works. However, while most juried competitions only require artists to submit four– to–six slides, artists in this competition were asked to submit eight slides. In this way, jurors were able to get a better idea of the body of work that was submitted.

In many cases more than one piece by an artist was selected, resulting in what John Taylor, director of the Craft Center describes as "a more cohesive show." The slides were judged by the well–known artist and author of several books on ceramics, Leon Vigrosh.

Students have benefited by gaining valuable hands–on experience through the planning of the exhibition. Students have taken an active role in the juror process from designing of literature and publicity material to packing and installation.

The Herter Gallery is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Flamenco dance to be presented

By Seema Gangotirkar
Collegian Staff

The Northampton Arts Council will present Flamenco music and dance at 8 p.m. Friday evening at the Academy of Music. Fiesta Flamenca features world–class Flamenco dancer, Clara Mora, guitarist David Serva and singer Amparo Heredia. The three most recently worked together with Noche Flamenca, the longest running Flamenco theater performance in New York.

Mora, a Northampton native, will be returning to her hometown after many years of performing throughout the United States and Spain. She received her early dance training at the Pioneer Valley Ballet and Smith College.

Mora was described by Jennifer Dunning of the New York Times as "charming," with "the long proud carriage and fiery modulations of the traditional flamenco dancer."

She has taught flamenco workshops at ballet schools throughout Massachusetts and Connecticut and is currently working on a project that combines anthropological research and the creation of a dance theater piece.

Mora will be accompanied by Serva who will also perform as a soloist. His pure Flamenco style follows the heritage of his teacher, the great Diego del Gastor. Serva has accompanied historical Flamenco figures such as Juan Talega, Moliti el de las Maria as well as contemporary artists including la Fernanda de Utera and Agujetas.

He has performed concerts throughout Europe, North and South America and the Far East. He was also stage guitarist and assistant to the composers of the original production of the musical, "Man of La Mancha."

Serva was the recipient of a Meet the Composer grant in 1993.

Amparo Heredia is a talented young singer from a family of Gypsies from Malaga. Spain, who perform under the name Los Canasteros. Amparo is known for the pure Flamenco quality and sheer beauty of her voice.

The concert will benefit the stage improvements fund of the Academy of Music and for other programs sponsored by the Arts Council.

Tickets can be purchased in advance for $10 and $12 at the door. They can be at For The Record in Amherst, St. Fruit Store and Guild Art Centre in Northampton. Group rates for group of 8 or more are available at the Northampton Arts Council from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call (413) 586-0950, ext. 209.

COURTESY NANCY MITCHARD

Clara Mora will perform Flamenca dance tonight at the Northampton Academy of Music.

Open Hearing

The Task Force on International Graduate Student Needs and Concerns invites you to an open hearing. Come and share your stories, your ideas, and any suggestions that you may have about campus services for International Graduate Students. All members of the campus community are invited to attend and particpate.

DATES: Thursday-November 16, 1995
Friday-November 17, 1995.
Place: Campus Center Rm. 1009 (Thurs.)
Campus Center Rm. 804-08 (Fri.)
Time: 12 Noon to 1pm

Magic Lantern

40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
FALL SEASON - ALL NEW SHOW
AMATEUR NIGHT
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM
featuring ... TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place
& runner-up prizes

Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275
Free Admission With This Ad

ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rt. 9 South to Rt. 181 West to Rt. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right

BOSTON RD. • Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

New musical plays off Broadway

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — New American musicals are an endangered species, right up there with the whooping crane and the spotted owl.

And Splendora, based on the novel by Edward Swift, certainly is a rarefied creature. Although it won't single-handedly save the American musical theater from extinction, it is an intriguing show, worth a visit despite its flaws.

Blend a Horton Foote Texas Memory play with an episode of television's "Picket Fences" and you'll have some idea of this oddball tale now running at off-Broadway's American Place Theater.

Jessica Gatewood mysteriously appears one day in Splendora, a small town in east Texas. The pretty woman, dressed in old-fashioned clothes, has arrived to run the local bookmobile.

The local biddies sniff and snoop. There's something strange about Jessica that no one can figure out. A young man, unseen by everyone else on stage but Jessica, is her constant shadow. The lady has a secret — and the authors an interesting plot device — which the audience quickly discovers.

When Jessica falls for the shy assistant pastor of the local church, it makes for one of the musical theater's most peculiar love triangles.

Splendora takes chances with its story; it doesn't with its score. Peter Webb has written a literate book, one that actually holds your interest as it works its way to a genuinely suspenseful ending.

The music by Stephen Hoffman and lyrics by Mark Campbell are uneven. They occasionally lift the spirits and even touch the heart, particularly in a trio for the young woman, her shadow and the clergyman. Yet too often the songwriting team settles for serviceable imitation Sondheim, and lets the music just mark time.

Hoffman and Campbell have distinctive voices. They just need to find them — and to have more fun, especially in the comedy songs.

Nancy Johnston is a ravishing Jessica and Michael Moore is most effective as her enigmatic alter ego. Ken Krugman is a manful, understandably bewildered preacher. And Evalyn Baron deservedly gets most of the evening's laughs as a suspicious townsperson who figures out Jessica's secret.

Director Jack Hofsiss never lets the musical slow down, at least in terms of story, while Robert La Fosse, the New York City Ballet tar, supplies the minimal musical staging.

Consider Splendora a promise of things to come, and you won't be disappointed.

■ soap

continued from page 5

out the cast, but it spiked up the "Loving" ratings.

A dozen "Loving" survivors got the heck out of Corinth and moved into a lovely old cast-iron loft building in Manhattan's SoHo district where, a synopsis assures us, they'll pursue "the dreams and despair of city life."

It gets better. "Loving," which debuted in June 1983 but never had ratings success, hired some instant soap-opera credibility in the form of Morgan Fairchild, who plays the media mogul Sydney Chase.

Fairchild, who began her TV career on "Search for Tomorrow," and cut her prime-time teeth on "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest," would be a mainspring for anybody's soap. Her Sydney is bright, brainy, sexy and dangerous.

In her first entrance on the show, Sydney stepped gracefully from the cockpit of a helicopter, wearing a white Versace suit and calf-high boots. An anxious lover wailed in the limo. "I've left my wife!" he blurted.

"Why'd you want to go and do that?" she replies, trivially annoyed. She dumps him and heads for Washington Square Park, where she regularly plays — and beats — a chess hustler.

Another "newcomer" is soap veteran Roscoe Born as the itinerant guitarist Nick Rivers — a guy with a past, almost certain Sydney-bait. Born has appeared on "Santa Barbara," "One Life to Live" and "Ryan's Hope."

There are more than a dozen other appealing characters in the mix of "The City," and the pace of the show is so brisk that you needn't wait long for something to happen to somebody.

What ultimately sets "The City" apart from other soaps is its cutting-edge production techniques.

Instead of the stage set, studio lighting and four-camera setup used by sitcoms and soaps, "The City" creates its loft building in a huge studio, and uses outdoor locations, movie lighting and the single-camera style of prime-time dramas like "Homicide," "ER" and "NYPD Blue."

"The City" also uses every bit of '90s technology available to it — darting hand-held cameras, floating Steadicams and the boom camera's overhead vantages and telephoto shots.

Shot and edited on videotape, "The City" is transferred to film to give it that rich visual texture. Throw in a hooky sound track with a driving beat and "The City" makes quite a package.

"The City" is such a breakthrough that it can't be long before other soaps are dragged into the 21st century and adopt similar techniques.

Even so, the other soaps might have trouble catching up.

In just the first episode of "The City," the guys brought in a Persian rug somebody had dumped in the street. When they unrolled it, they found a dead guy.

Hey, you've got to love this crazy town.

Pirates set sale with McClatchy aboard

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Kevin McClatchy signed a final agreement Tuesday to buy the Pittsburgh Pirates and now needs only the approval of major league owners to formally acquire the team. McClatchy, who at 32 is younger than several Pirates players, will likely be approved as the team's fourth owner since World War II at the major league owners meetings Jan. 16-18 in Los Angeles.

A California businessman who has convinced a dozen wealthy investors to help him buy the money-losing team, McClatchy already has been approved by baseball's ownership committee. Final approval usually is a formality once the committee has recommended a sale.

"I've had a lot of people say in a nice way, 'Kevin, you've really brought this process together, but I look at it that we have a group of local people who stepped up to the plate and got this done,'" he said.

The agreement all but ends an arduous 15-month search to find a buyer for a historic franchise that has labored to remain competitive in baseball's fast-changing economic climate.

"I think today is a significant day, because we can now put the dealings of this sale behind us and start worrying about ... what goes on on the field and off the field and getting the fans back," McClatchy said.

McClatchy, whose family owns the McClatchy newspaper chain but is not involved in the transaction, will invest $10 million of his own money.

Pulling on a black-and-gold Pirates cap that he had just purchased at a downtown sporting goods store, McClatchy said, "This is the most expensive hat I've ever bought."

Wait until he sees how much it costs to run a major league baseball team, especially the 109-year-old Pirates, who have lost an estimated $60 million in the 1990s.

McClatchy's formula for solving the small-market franchise's ever-worsening financial dilemma: Persuade fans turned off by the Pirates' persistent problems and the long players strike to return to the ballpark; increase ancillary revenue, such as advertising; and build a new ballpark.

McClatchy of Sacramento, Calif., already has a signed agreement with the city requiring financing for the ballpark to be in place by Nov. 1, 1998. If the funding isn't completed by then, and the club has lost $15 million, he would be free to move the club elsewhere.

He doesn't expect that to happen.

"I'm very excited about where we are today, and where we are going to go," McClatchy said. "I see great things for this franchise. I see such things as a new stadium and a competitive ballclub, and I think we have some of the things in place right now. We have the best manager in baseball (Jim Leyland) and we have a good management team in place."

For now, he will keep all club employees, including team president Mark Sauer, whose hiring coincided with the oft-successful club's long backslide since its 1992 National League playoffs loss to Atlanta.

Meanwhile, McClatchy's formal agreement gives him until Dec. 22 to increase his estimated $59 million in cash and equity to the $62 million required under baseball's debt-to-equity ratio rules.

"If anyone has followed this process and the progress of this group, $3 million in five weeks is very attainable," McClatchy said. At least one of his investors may soon increase his stake, he said.

Pittsburgh businessman Eugene Litman on Tuesday became the sixth of the current 10 owners to join McClatchy's ownership group. None of the six will retain their board seats; they paid $2.5 million apiece for their shares, and McClatchy requires $5 million from his general partners.

Cleveland move isn't a fan favorite

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Art Modell, it's been said, can sell anybody anything. Until he tried to sell the Baltimore Browns to NFL fans, that is.

"Green Bay isn't as cold as Art Modell's heart," read a sign displayed during a game Sunday.

That game wasn't in Cleveland, it was in Green Bay, where commissioner Paul Tagliabue was watching the Packers and Bears.

Tagliabue is the man on the spot.

If it were up to him, he would probably like to find a way to keep the Browns in Cleveland. Several top NFL people long close to Modell have suggested that the Browns' owner has done more harm to the league in the last week than the good he did in 35 years. That good includes the major role he's had in negotiating huge television contracts.

There is some reason to think Tagliabue believes the same thing, although he has been very circumspect in his comments. But Tagliabue also believes it is not up to him. He thinks it would be up to the courts if the owners turn down the move, and that the NFL probably would lose a long and protracted suit - as it has in the past.

The owners probably won't turn down the move. Modell, the salesman, defused some of the opposition by telling the owners of the two New York teams, Wellington Mara and Leon Hess, about it before word leaked out of the move. Mara, one of Modell's closest friends, now as much as says he will put his friendship first, although he always has been a league traditionalist.

Two other members of the old guard, Buffalo's Ralph Wilson and Kansas City's Lamar Hunt, probably are the strongest opponents of the move right now, although it is conceivable public opinion in Ohio and elsewhere could swing some others.

But nobody is happy the Browns won't be in Cleveland. The closest similar shock was the move of the Colts from Baltimore, but owner Bob Irsay had been building up to that. And, frankly, Irsay had (and has) little or no respect around the NFL.

Modell, on the other hand, had a lot of respect. Not any longer. For if Jerry Jones remains the No. 1 target on the other owners' hit list, Modell may have surpassed Al Davis as No. 2.

Despite what the other owners say, many are appalled at the way he summarily moved the Browns without even awaiting the vote that was supposed to provide $175 million in improvements to Cleveland Stadium.

That's not monopoly money, particularly in a city that needs schools, housing, health care, law enforcement and items much more basic than football.

But that vote speaks to the loyalty of the Cleveland fans. As Dan Dierdorf, who grew up in northern Ohio, said Monday night, "This one move can undo all the work Art has done for causes like the Cleveland Clinic."

Others suggest the same, and even owners like Alex Spanos of the Chargers, who said from the start that nobody could turn down the cash deal Baltimore gave Modell, knows how a move like that alienates fans.

"I love San Diego," Spanos said. "I'd never move from there."

So the bottom line is the Browns will play out the season in Cleveland, where Super Bowl hopes have given way to despair on and off the field. Then they will go to Baltimore ...And Cleveland will open its treasury for someone else, like Bill Bidwill, who could then move the Cardinals to their third city in less than a decade.

Yes, the Dawg Pound would really love Bidwill.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK

	Round trip
LONDON	$140 $280
PARIS	$175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$220 $439
TOKYO	$859

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurail passes Available. Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

work in BRITAIN & IRELAND student exchange employment program campus presentation
speakers from London & Dublin
Thursday, Nov. 16
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center 903
& display/info table 8:30 a.m. – 3:00 p.m.
Campus Center
visit sponsored by the UMass/Amherst's Career Office
545-6011
usit CIEE

UMass Division of Continuing Education
· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996
· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog · (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to ZZ Top & Everything in Between
With DJ's Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

Northwestern College of Chiropractic is now accepting applications for its next three entering classes.
(April 1995, September 1995, January 1996)
General requirements at time of entry include:
• At least 2-3 years of undergraduate college in a health science or basic science degree program. (Inquire for a complete list of specific requirements.)
• A minimum G.P.A. of 2.5. (A more competitive G.P.A. is favored.)
• A personal interest in a career as a primary care physician.
Northwestern College of Chiropractic offers a rigorous four year professional education. Our focus on science, diagnosis, chiropractic methods, patient care and research provides our graduates with the tools they need to work as primary care physicians in the health care environment. NWCC is fully accredited by North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Chiropractic Education.
Call: 1-800-888-4777 or 888-4777
Write: Director of Admissions
2501 West 84th Street, Minneapolis, MN 55431

Johnson wins AL Cy Young

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Randy Johnson, whose intimidating fastball and improved control led the Seattle Mariners to the playoffs for the first time, overwhelmingly won his first AL Cy Young Award on Tuesday.

Johnson got all but two of the 28 first-place votes in becoming the first Seattle player to win a major postseason award in the team's 19-year history.

Johnson came within one victory of becoming the first AL player since Hal Newhouser of Detroit in 1945 to win pitching's Triple Crown. Johnson went 18-2, led the majors in strikeouts for the fourth straight year with 294 and led the league with a 2.48 ERA. The 6-foot-10 left-hander, who combined his 100 mph fastball with the best control of his career, was the only pitcher listed on all 28 ballots and finished with 136 points in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Cleveland reliever Jose Mesa received the other two first-place votes and was runner-up with 54 points. Boston knuckleballer Tim Wakefield was third with 29, followed by 1994 winner David Cone, who finished the season with New York, with 18. Baltimore's Mike Mussina, who led the league with 19 wins, was fifth with 14. Despite his reputation for being a power pitcher, Johnson said this year that he wanted to be regarded for more than merely throwing fastballs. And unlike the greatest power pitcher ever - Nolan Ryan, who dominated for 27 seasons - Johnson won a Cy Young Award.

Johnson, 32, set a league record for the best winning percentage by a pitcher with at least 20 decisions. The only pitcher ever to better Johnson's .900 percentage is Greg Maddux, who went 19-2 this year for Atlanta and unanimously won his fourth straight NL Cy Young on Monday.

Johnson set a major league mark by averaging 12.35 strikeouts per nine innings, breaking Ryan's record of 11.48 with Houston in 1987. He held AL hitters to a league-low .201 average, including .129 by left-handers.

He averaged just 2.73 walks per nine innings - in 1992, he led the league in walks with 6.16 per game. He also pitched the first complete game of his career without a walk, beating Cleveland while striking out 13 on July 7.

Already the Mariners' career win and strikeout leader, he won the most important game in franchise history - up to that point - by beating California 9-1 with a three-hitter in a one-game playoff for the AL West title on Oct. 2.

That win counted in the regular-season statistics, and made the Mariners 27-3 in games started by their ace, the "Big Unit." He also stopped 13 Seattle losing streaks.

Though Cy Young voting is based only on regular-season performance, Johnson enhanced his reputation by leading the Mariners past the wild-card Yankees in the first of the AL playoffs. With Seattle facing a 0-2 deficit in the best-of-5 series, he won Game 3, then came back on one day of rest to beat New York in the decisive fifth game at the Kingdome.

Johnson was 0-1 in two starts in the AL playoffs against Cleveland. He got a no-decision when Game 3 went into extra innings and, again pitching on only three days' rest, lost the deciding sixth game.

Johnson, who collected a $200,000 bonus for winning the award, finished third in the Cy Young voting last season after going 13-6. He was runner-up to Jack McDowell in 1993 when he went 19-8. In 1990, a year after the Mariners got him with pitchers Brian Holman and Gene Harris from Montreal for Mark Langston, Johnson pitched a no-hitter against Detroit.

This year, Johnson completed six of 30 starts and pitched three shutouts. He was 6-0 after 10 starts, and his lone losses came against Minnesota and California.

In July, he started the All-Star Game in Texas, the fourth time he'd been picked for the game. He was chosen to start by manager Buck Showalter of New York, even though Johnson had touched off a bench-clearing dispute against the Yankees earlier in the season by hitting Jim Leyritz with a pitch. Johnson hit six batters this year.

Mesa led the majors with 46 saves and had a 1.13 ERA as the Indians' closer. Wakefield was 16-8 with a 2.95 ERA for the Red Sox and Cone was 18-8 in a split season for Toronto and the Yankees. The NL MVP award will be announced Wednesday.

■ NFL

continued from page 10

13, Martin leads them all in total yards rushing.

One rookie who will be effective once he has had the time to completely familiarize himself with the Cleveland Browns system is Eric Zeier. He took over the job from opening day starter Vinny Testaverde and no matter what happens, head coach Bill Belichick has said it is Zeier's job for the rest of the season.

• The 38–20 final score of Sunday's game between Dallas and San Francisco wasn't all that surprising. After all, the spread on the game soared to 14 points when Steve Young was pronounced unfit to play and Elvis Grbac once again would stand behind center.

The shock of it all was the fact who was the winning team, the 49ers. Yes, the team whose starting rusher was Derek Loville was able to run against the Big 'D' of Dallas. It's no wonder all these teams around the league are trying to copy the West Coast offense, it's just too bad for them they don't all have a wide receiver as talented as Jerry Rice.

• Good news for all Jets fans, last week was the first time the other football team from New York didn't lose, but there is a good reason for it. They didn't play.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

■ Bruins

continued from page 10

Kennedy scored on a power play at 6:55 of the third, ending Pittsburgh's streak of 16 consecutive penalty kills. Kennedy scored his fourth off Todd Harvey's rebound.

Stars defenseman Derian Hatcher injured a shoulder in the second period and did not return. The Penguins were without defenseman Sergei Zubov, who re-injured a broken finger on his left hand and is expected to miss two weeks.

Francis had two points, raising his career total to 1,171 and allowing him to overtake Bobby Hull for 25th all-time.

Penguins right wing Jaromir Jagr's scoring streak ended at a career-best 11 games.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

at PC, which also produced Devil goalie Chris Terreri.

This season coach Paul Pooley has adopted New Jersey's defense–first mantra and has produced stunning results. Allowing a league low 2.63 goals per game, the Friars have turned heads in Hockey East, currently holding its top spot.

Dennis' play in net, although partly a result of strong defense, has been solid. Dennis leads the league with a 2.40 goals–against–average and a .916 save percentage.

A big weekend looms ahead of the Friars, as they will face off against Massachusetts in a home–and–home series. With a sweep, UMass can claim the top spot in Hockey East.

If you had talked to anyone associated with the UMass program at this time last year, when the team was 0–6–1, about the possibility of being in first place, they likely would have had you committed to a mental institution.

Experience has turned the Minuteman ship around as senior Sal Manganaro and Rob Bonneau have stepped forward on offense. Manganaro and Bonneau are third and fourth in scoring in league games, trailing only Boston University's Jay Pandolfo and Chris Drury.

Coach Joe Mallen has produced nearly incomprehensible results with a team that was 6–28–2 last year, and should continue to do so, as UMass gains momentum, heading into its Dec. 1–2 showdown with BU.

• The vast, outpouring support for Travis Roy continues to astound. Schools around the country have started holding collections at their games. Even hated–rival Maine held a moment of silence in honor of the paralyzed Terrier before last night's game at Orono.

Addresses for the Travis Roy Fund, and Roy's hospital room are listed in the weekly Hockey East press release, ahead of the section proclaiming the league's Player of the Week.

In a night where UMass–Lowell displayed new levels of classlessness Saturday against UMass, the saving grace of the evening was the collection for the Travis Roy Fund, which raised over 600 dollars, my change included.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ cross country

continued from page 10

slack. This support came from numerous sources.

Sophomore Ryan Carrara turned in many fine runs. Seniors Mark Buffone, Timothy Boilard, and Pat Murphy also came up big at times. Their contributions went farther than that.

"Our seniors really saved us," O'Brien said. "They not only turned in huge performances when needed, but their leadership, and presence held the team together."

The whole team had an outstanding season, but two runners truly were the UMass cross country team.

Juniors Matt Behl and Mike Maceiko were the teams workhorses. No other Massachusetts runner crossed the finish line before them. Day in and day out, they were setting the pace for this young team.

"They were so good that you almost took their performances for granted." O'Brien said.

Obviously the rest of the conference did not, as these two were named All–Conference performers for the second straight year. The potential for Behl and Maceiko next year as seniors is astounding.

When speaking of where his program stands, O'Brien is extremely optimistic. His goal is for every class of runners to compete in an NCAA Championship meet. That goal was almost reached this year. The prospects of next year are staggering.

"I wanted the team to reach the NCAA's this year. Then we would have the experience to follow it up next year," O'Brien said. "There is no doubt in my mind that these kids have the ability."

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

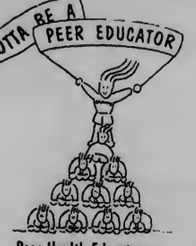
The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service
1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, as a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.
University Health Services
549-2671 X244

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 → 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Sale.
Shoe
Sale.
Shoe
Sale.
Shoe
Sale.
Shoe
Sale.
3 days only!!
Thurs. Nov 16 to Sat. Nov 18
Downtown Amherst

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!



Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!
PEER HEALTH EDUCATION II & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 549-2671 Ext. 181.
Class will meet on Wednesdays from 2 - 4:30 PM.
Priority is given to those who meet with the instructor before November 17th.

GOING HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS?

AMTRAK
15% OFF
NO BLACKOUT DATES
Only with The STUDENT ADVANTAGE℠ Card

Join Today by Calling
1-800-96AMTRAK

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Attn Anscs/Pre-vet club General meeting on Tuesday Nov. 13th @7pm in Paige 202 Questions? Call 549-5851 Don't forget tshirt orders.

Boricuas Unidos Puerto Rican Heritage Week. Workshop on hip-cot/folklorico Puerto Rican music by the polytechnic University of Puerto Rico choir Place: Latin American Cultural Center Time: 8:00 pm

Smith College ASA conference. Examining Asian Pacific American Historical Legacy Nov 18 Registration @ Wright Hall 9am. party after. Info 585-4808. Free for 5-college (intl)ianos!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Rush Tri-Sigma! Interested? Meet Thurs at the campus center information desk at 7pm Questions call Jess 548-6468

The airport shuttle Need to get to the airport? Call Valley Transporter 549-1250

U Mass Hockey!!! The minutemen are HOT! HOT! HOT! with a 4 and 1 record Don't miss out on this exciting Hockey East action! U Mass takes on Providence this Saturday @ Mullins Center. Students pick up your free tickets @ Hicks Cage TODAY!

University Productions & concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 6:00 in room 162 Come get involved!

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9919

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease 12/96 (after finals) 2 rm apartment Amherst center $495/month heat/hot water inc Call 256-4973

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Subaru 1800 DL One owner Runs great Reliable transportation Clean, inside/outside $1,700 323-6085

Convertible 85 Dodge 600 Beautiful rust free car. $2700 obo 549-9240

1985 Subaru GL 5 spd 83K all options $1700 obo 546-6695

'83 BMW 318 i6 black coupe, automatic, Asking $2100 Negotiable, call David 585-5284

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialties: taxation and train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000 $10,000 Great resume builder Possible internship Call 1 800 569 9828

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise Ships Hiring! $$$+ free travel (Caribbean, Europe Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent. No experience necessary Guide (919) 929 4398 Ext C1040

Quick $ for creative motivated people Two 900 #s for rent Call 253-5762 ASAP

Looking for adventure? Marketing firm seeks outgoing representatives for national college promotion Excellent pay & bonuses Expenses paid travel Fax resume to (617) 236-4713 Attn Tricia or call (800) 783-4737 x 334

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves Benefits and Bonuses? Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N 50012

Part time/Full time - earn extra income. Work with people you like at your own pace. No investment-no risk-no travel-no quotas-no sales-no inventory 586-0192 daily 9am-5pm

We want you Unique liquor related product Retails for $700 Inventory required $7500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-788-9001

You can earn $500 to $2000 between now and Christmas. Call Holly 1-800-691-7989

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Gemini mixer Two slides plus crossfader org. price $100. Asking $75 b/o Call John 549-6292

Guiter & Amp For Sale brand new Epiphone LesPaul gold top and Marshall TM30 tube amp $450 each Call 586-5526 for details

Need a extra Bjork ticket? Pd 11-17 Call 546-3303, better hurry

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Maria! Hope you had fun! -J.A.M.-J.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guiter Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Black suede gloves on North Amherst or Sunderland bus last Monday. I'm from the Caribbean, my hands are freezing!! Please help me! Call Maribel 253-0738

Silver ring w/ blue stone & silver frog ring very sentimental reward! Call Kristen 546-8865

PERSONALS

Andrew Bryce You are the biggest dodo-bird on the face of the planet. You call yourself the master of your domain, give me a break! Wake up and smell the roses you sleazeo-hoser! Smell you later! Signed: Joe Rockhead

Attn: Chi Omega Pledges! Jaime, Elizabeth, Jody, Lauren, Amanda, Jamie, Amy, and Amanda you're doing a great job. You're halfway there; Keep up the good work! We love you! Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

Jeff M. You are a hotty (You asked for it!) Guess Who!

Nick Walsh You are the biggest pull master in the world. You are winning, how many? Colossal A.C. in golf? That's huge! Winnaar!

Pasquale, You big dork! Happy 21st birthday! I'm right behind you and I expect nothing but fun. After all, queens deserve the best! Love, Dovie

Rachel No Kai Chicpee because there will be tays in the wind! Happy 22nd! Love, Bill

Steve Spanger It's over for you. You're history. There's a new sheriff in town. His name? Buford T. Justice. His game? Beating you down. Don't act like you can't. don't stink. And I know your name isn't Jon Rockhead. Though it isn't a big description of your brain capacity. Yo Momma

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jtozer 548-7947

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommates needed to share town house for spring semester. 2 min from campus Frank Dey 413-568-9151ex 1225 Night 413 733 8079

SERVICES

Child care Subsidized slot available for toddler at quality cante, route 63 Leverett, 4 miles north of U Mass Call Brian, Hampshire Franklin Day Care, 548-9674.

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art Robert 546-1794

International Students Visitors On greencard program by U S Immigration. Legal Services tel (818) 772 2168 20231 Stagg St Canoga Park CA 91306

Going to Florida during winter/session? I'll bring your car to you. Call Omri 546-1579

Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15-$30 Only at Campus Design and Copy The affordable alternative Upstairs in the student union 545-2271

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eye glass frame repair, and ear piercing Silverscape Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253 3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549 1906

They're almost gone Act now to rent Two 900 #s before they are no longer made Call 253-5762

TO SUBLET

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown prefer female $281/ Jennifer 253-0676

Large Room in furnished 2 bedroom apt on bus route, parking, gym Kosher/vegetarian $240 (on 253-1657

Toka over our lease 1/1/96 Puffton Village $505/month heat/hot water inc Call 549-0578

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $278 r/t Cheap airfares to S America, Asia Africa Middle East and Australia Call (413) 587-0001 Air Tech New England

"Free Travel Spring Break '96" Sun Splash tours Reliable spring break company Organize group/s Travel free/ Party/ Promote Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre/ For free information 1-800-426-7710

Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399 Jamaica from $439, Florida from $89 organize group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800-648-4849 for more info On campus contact Liz at 548-7146, Jason at 546-5529 or Catherine at 549-7994

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys spend it on your own private yacht One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more Organize and go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-783-4001 See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~sss

Winter Break Special Killington week $268 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

2 sets 2 r/ds/rp airfare vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable Food/drink included with hotel by arrgmnt $300/set call Eric @ 549-3788

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted 3 or more bedroom apt. or house near uptown or campus For spring semester Call 549-7403

Wanted to rent a 2,3,or 4 bedroom in Amherst Call 549-8618

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Jesse Jackson says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

ATTENTION CAMPUS SALES REPS

Are you earning the kind of income you'd like to be? Would unlimited earning potential and access to a professional, business marketplace appeal to your entrepreneurial spirit? If so, the Northwestern Mutual sales internship program may be for you. Our top ten college agents last year made in excess of $16,000 as full time college students.

For more information, call or write:
Kate Kane, NML, 1351 Main St., Springfield, MA 01103. 413-748-6000.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Aries(March 21–April 20): A great time to plan entertainment or a dinner—your energies will find focus as a host or hostess. Cultivate goodwill at work—turbulent times may be afoot.

Taurus(April 21–May 21): If you're feeling bored, check out a new opportunity where your experience may be valued more highly. Deepening a personal commitment may also renew your affection for another person.

Gemini(May 22–June 21): Planning an excursion provides a welcome respite from a frantic week at work. The pressure will ease when you learn to better delegate authority. Take the first step to bridge a gap between yourself and an estranged friend.

Cancer(June 22–July 22): The covert approach to office politics may disturb you a lot, but this week it's imperative to remain on the sidelines, at least until you're sure which way the wind is blowing. A weekend adventure provides fodder for contemplation.

Leo(July 23–August 23): A romantic attachment flourishes when you make an effort to appreciate your partner's mind as well as other things. A special treat you plan for your sweetie is much appreciated.

Virgo(August 24–September 22): A new venture you begin is productive from the start, as long as you permit it to develop according to its particular bent. Don't be upset if the reality differs from the theory, as long as it still works.

Libra(September 23–October 23): Any extra time you can spend listening pays off handsomely. Not only could you make a new friend, but the information and experience you gather could be invaluable as you head into a new and different situation.

Scorpio(October 24–November 22): What seems like a boring week presents some unique opportunities for growth. Give aid to someone in need who doesn't expect it—no act of kindness is ever wasted.

Sagittarius(November 23–December 21): As a business deal develops, it may seem as if one of the parties involved is being deliberately obtuse. Take the extra time to explain; the goodwill you cultivate will pay off one way or another.

Capricorn(December 22–January 20): A journey you've begun enters a new phase as you pass a landmark along the way. Celebrate with a trusted friend. Keep your eyes on a central objective in order to avoid being distracted as the week progresses.

Aquarius(January 21–February 18): If there's something you want more than anything, this is a good week to sit down and formulate a plan for getting it. Trust a friend to advise you; then stick to your plan—your goal could be closer than you think it is!

Pisces(February 19–March 20): It may be time to sever a relationship that isn't working. While distance can be painful at first, it may be the best path toward a new freedom and happiness. Trust your inner voice.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Nothing to do on a Wednesday night?

IT'S FREE IT'S LIVE It's JAZZ

Every Wednesday from 6:00 to 10:00 pm at PRUDDY'S Restaurant

While waiting for your dinner or enjoying the best tropical drinks in town..

We are located at the corner of Main and Lessey St. across the Police Station.

(413) 253-2899

You never knew Wednesdays could be so nice!

Open for night life Thursday, Friday & Saturday 9:30-1. This week FREE cordial with every dinner.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

OUR HOUSE IS STILL STANDING. THAT'S A GOOD SIGN.
WE'RE HOME! IS EVERYTHING OK?
FINE
CALVIN DID HIS HOMEWORK, THEN WE PLAYED A GAME, AND CALVIN WENT TO BED.
IT'S AWFULLY LATE FOR JOKES, ROSALYN.
I'VE NOTICED THAT WHEN WE PLAY GAMES WITH GIRLS, YOU GET CAPTURED A LOT.
SOME OF US ARE JUST IRRESISTIBLE

Garfield By Jim Davis

Generation X By Chris Lehman

HI, EVERYONE! I HAVE A MESSAGE TO READ FROM THE CARTOONIST.
DEAR YOLANDA, I WANT EVERYONE IN THE PIONEER VALLEY TO KNOW THAT I LOVE YOU VERY MUCH.
"HAPPY ANNIVERSARY! LOVE, CHRISTOPHER"
THE CARTOONIST WISHES TO APOLOGIZE FOR ANY INCONVENIENCE TO THE READERS. THANK YOU.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

ARE YOU NOTICING THAT THERE IS NOTHING TO BELIEVE IN ANYMORE, BUT ? ATHLETES ARE GREEDY DRUG OFFENDERS, PRIESTS AND TEACHERS ARE SEX FIENDS, AND THE ONLY SOLID PARTICLE IN THIS COUNTRY IS POLITICS AND CORRUPTION
WHATEVER HAPPENED TO THE GOOD OL DAYS? WHATEVER HAPPENED TO THE AMERICAN DOCTRINE OF APPLE PIE, BASEBALL AND MOM ?
SOMETIMES IT AMAZES ME THAT SANTA CLAUS HASN'T BEEN ARRESTED FOR BREAKING AND ENTERING. THE COUNTRY HAS STOPPED BELIEVING IN ITSELF... HENCE IT HAS STOPPED BELIEVING IN ITS CHILDREN.
YOU STILL BELIEVE IN SANTA CLAUS ?
SOMEONE HAS TO, DAMN IT!?

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY LENNY, NO SLEEPING, WE'RE IN A HOUSE OF CAFFEINE. CAFFEINE
RAH...CAFFEINE
I DUNNO.
COME ON, LENNY. HELP ME OUT! HERE, FIGHT LETTERS. OBJECTIVE, MEANS FAITHFUL IN LOVE...
WHOA... BACKOUT
"A" THERE'S ONLY SEVEN LETTERS, AND "B" IT'S NOT AN OBJECTIVE AND "C" I'M NOW GOING TO CAUSE YOU BODILY HARM.
THEN WILL YOU LET ME SLEEP?

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE'RE ANNOUNCING TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR EMPLOYEES
THE FIRST IS A NEW DIGNITY ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM AND THE SECOND IS OUR NEW RANDOM DRUG TESTING INITIATIVE
THE CLUE METER IS READING ZERO
YOU EACH GET A HANDSOME COFFEE MUG AS PART OF THE KICK-OFF
SCOTTADAMS@AOL.COM

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Leeld By Roger & Salem Salloom

I was feeling pretty good. My family was invited to a wedding.

At the reception my father came up to me and said, "Come with me, son."

He took me to the men's room.

As we stood there side by side lacing straight into the wall he said solemnly,.....

"I brought you here for a reason. All that your eyes can see before you will someday be yours or your ex-wife's. I love you, son."

I came out of there feeling pretty darn good. My dad is a prince.

Close to Home By John McPherson

CONGRATULATIONS, DENISE DORTMAN! YOU'RE ONE OF TWO GRAND PRIZE FINALISTS FOR THE WITTL CARIBBEAN GETAWAY VACATION! ALL YOU NEED TO DO TO WIN A SEVEN-DAY VACATION FOR TWO TO BARBADOS IS BEAT OUR OTHER FINALIST IN A LIMBO CONTEST THIS SATURDAY!

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Jim Ganley
Production ..... Brian D. Inocencio
Matt Audette

Dining Commons Menu

Wednesday

LUNCH
Hot Hero Sandwich
Chicken Cutlet
BASICS LUNCH
Bean,corn Casserole
Chicken Cutlet

DINNER
Roast Pork & Gravy
Chicken Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Tofu Fajita
Chicken Fajita

Thursday

LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Hamburger on a Roll
BASICS LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Black-Eyed Peas

DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Fettuccini,Sausage,sauce
BASICS DINNER
Rotisserie Chicken
Fettuccini,Sauce,Tofu

Friday

LUNCH
Meat Pie/Gravy
Turkey Burger
BASICS LUNCH
Humus Veg Pocket
Turkey Burger

DINNER
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Roast Round of Beef
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice and Beans
Cheese Spinach Strudel

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Reasons to Become an Engineer

10. You get one of those cute little choo-choo train hats when you graduate.
9. Computer Systems Engineers can make any Comp USA employee's head spin.
8. If you need a dramatic way to exit a room you can say, "Now if you'll excuse me I've got circuits to analyze."
7. As a Civil Engineer, you can fully appreciate how structurally unstable the buildings at UMass are.
6. The College of Engineering guarantee: Give us one semester, and we'll make you geekier than that Urkel kid."
5. If you're an Electrical Engineer you can perhaps develop a Dolphin-English translator...or dare you live out the American dream?
4. Chemical Engineers develop the skills necesary to analyze the contents of DC food.
3. There's always work for those interested in designing the next Bat-mobile.
2. Government still looking for a person to develop the flux capacitor.
1. Dean Hellman will rock your world.

Quote of the Day

"Sometimes the road less traveled is less traveled for a damn good reason."

-Collegian Proverb

ATTENTION ALL CARTOONISTS & COMIC STRIP WRITERS:

There will be a MANDATORY meeting for anyone interested in drawing for the comics page on Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Collegian Offices. This includes current cartoonists. The meeting will last approximately 30 minutes. Please bring 2–3 strips with you as well as a list of the days you will be able to do strips. Dimensions for long strips are 6 1/4 inches wide by 1 1/4 inches high. Dimensions for square cartoons are 3 inches by roughly four inches. If you have any questions please contact Marni Helfner, Managing Editor at 545–0719.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Sports

Women's hoop opens with NWIT

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Last year, the Massachusetts women's basketball team did something which seemed impossible just a few years ago– produce a winning team.

With an overall record of 19–11, the 1994–1995 season marked the most impressive season of the program's history. This week, the Minutewomen are back in action as they begin their regular season with a road trip to Orono, Maine to play in the first round of the Preseason Women's National Invitational Tournament.

Coach Joanie O'Brien said being invited to play in this tournament is an honor. The field of teams consists of some of the top programs in the nation. The Preseason NWIT, in its second year, includes seven teams which competed in last year's NCAA Tournament, three other NWIT teams (in addition to UMass) and the 1993 NCAA Tournament runner-up Ohio State.

"It'll be a good test for this team because we have so much experience coming back," O'Brien said. "Getting to find out where we are at this point, will be easy for us compared to other teams."

However, O'Brien feels that this tournament will not be an indication of how the Minutewomen will play for the whole year.

"It will be a good indicator of where we are right now in the preseason," O'Brien said. "We'll be able to see areas we need to improve on and who's going to step up and play."

Facing a first round team as strong as Maine, UMass has its work cut out. With Maine returning four starters from last season and three players on the starting lineup of the North Atlantic All-Conference Team, the trip to Orono will not be a cakewalk.

"This will be a real challenge," O'Brien said. "Anytime you go to a place like Maine, where I'm guessing there isn't a whole heck of a lot else to do, they get 4,000 people at a game."

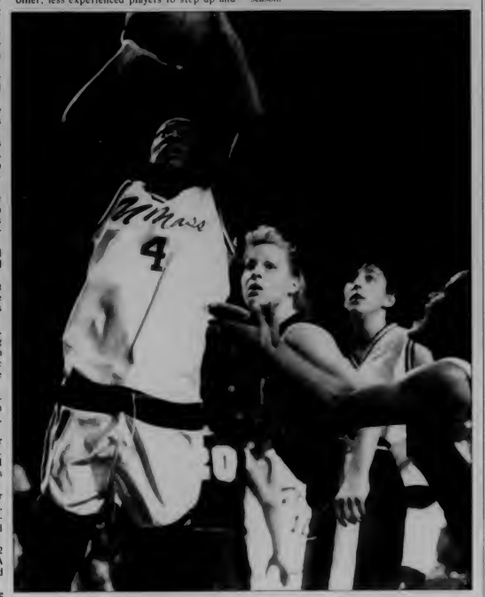
Playing in this type of environment is tough for any visiting team, especially in the season opener. This is something a true UMass hoops fan should know first hand, based on how much visiting teams love to play in the Mullins Center.

For the Bears faithful, there is plenty to cheer about. Led by returning sophomore guard, 5–foot–9 Cindy Blodgett, she leads Maine's offensive threat averaging 20.1 points per game and should test UMass's defense early.

Last season, Maine finished 24–6 overall, 14–2 in the NAC and qualified for the NCAA Tournament, before losing in a first round match–up to the NCAA Champion Connecticut.

The Minutewomen are led by a strong base provided by senior All–American Candidates Octavia Thomas and Melissa Gurile. The two UMass leaders have been at the head of the class throughout the four-year rebuilding process. In fact, O'Brien gives them considerable credit to the program's recent success. Their ability to take control of the game has consistently allowed other, less experienced players to step up and gain experience.

With the new season underway, the Minutewomen would like nothing more than to honor Gurile and Thomas with another winning season.



COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Senior Octavia Thomas and the UMass women's basketball team opens their season tonight, when they take on Maine in the Pre–season NIT.

Year of accomplishment for men's cross–country

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

Finishing 23rd at the IC4A Championships this passed weekend was not the way the Massachusetts men's cross–country team wanted to remember 1995. It was a meet with results that coach Ken O'Brien deemed, "disappointing, and far from what we expected."

However, a minor setback after a groundbreaking year is not going to ruin everything positive that the team accomplished.

"The IC4A Championships was a poor race for us," O'Brien said. "It was definitely discouraging. However this sentiment only lasts about a week or so. One sub par race does not take away from an outstanding season."

This was a year where UMass proved that it can run with nationally ranked teams. It was also a season in which the team captured its first ever Atlantic 10 Championship. These were huge achievements by a young team looking for an identity.

O'Brien arranged a schedule that ran UMass against some of the nation's best teams. It was this aggressive "anything is possible" strategy, that prepared the team for the late season success that they enjoyed. The runners knew what it was like to race against the best, and this forced them to raise their efforts to the level of the teams that they were competing with. When it came time for the crucial second half push, the Minutemen were more than prepared.

It was during the latter part of the season when the team came together, and reached it's peak.

At the New England Championships the team finished fourth overall, and beat the likes of Brown and Boston College. Both are top 20 teams.

"I believed that we belonged somewhere between 8th and 15th place. Beating two teams like Brown, and B.C., exceeded any expectations that I could of had," O'Brien said.

The team then traveled to compete in the A–10 Championships. In this tough, competitive conference, UMass turned out to be the team to beat. The Minutemen ran hard and easily took the title. This was the first A–10 title in the school's history. It was at this meet, that the team ran as a whole for the first time. That Saturday was the best the team looked.

"By this point in the season I was trying to ingrain in the guys' minds, that we had a good team, and had achieved some reasonable measures of success. It was now time to change our perspective, and take our skills to the next level," O'Brien recalled. "That is exactly what we did. That race that we ran at the A–10's would have beaten most of the top 20 teams in the nation."

The formula for success at the A–10's was a simple one. Five runners needed to turn in solid races. This was accomplished with the help of gutsy performances by some forgotten heroes.

These performances came in the form of Paul Blodorn, and Jon Way. Both of these runners were top five performers last season. However, at the end of the season each suffered an injury that would plague them throughout the summer. Blodorn came down with a case of pneumonia, and Way suffered a stress fracture in his leg. The injuries were great obstacles that prevented the runners from being in top shape. In essence, two of the teams' top performers were sidetracked, and could not make the early season contributions that were expected of them.

UMass is a team of great depth, and it was this attribute that saved them from disaster. To offset the loss of Blodorn, and Way, other runners stepped up to pick up the

Turn to CROSS COUNTRY, page 7

Rookies making impact down stretch in NFL

The NFL season is entering its 12th week and the influence of first year players has been readily apparent around the league.

In a season of turmoil on the offensive side of the ball for the Philadelphia Eagles, two rookies on the defense have made a tremendous impact.

When ex–Boston College Eagle Mike Mamula finished his junior year, he thought he was ready to come out of the collegiate ranks the scouts weren't sure. He was first predicted as a third rounder, after the pre–draft workouts he jumped to some place in the first round and on draft day the Eagles of the NFL traded for the seventh spot to make sure they selected him. It turned out to be a stroke of genius on both ends.

Mamula has made a name for himself very early in his Pro career. During the opening weeks of the season, his name was called mostly for offsides penalties. As of late, the referee have been keeping their flags in their pockets and opposing quarterbacks are often sitting on their pockets as Mamula has been in on three sacks the passed three weeks.

It is not only the statistics that speak volumes of his performance, but the little things he does to help the Philly defense.

His speed on the outside helps to string out running backs when they run at him. When they run the other side, Mamula has the ability to catch the back from behind.

Putting pressure on the quarterback doesn't always translate into a sack for Mamula, but it reeks havoc in the backfield. More and more you see holding penalties called on the offensive tackles trying to keep him at away from the quarterback.

Even when the QB gets the ball away, Mamula lets him know that his presence is there. It was Mamula nailing Denver's John Elway Sunday night that left Elway sidelined with a concussion.

Fellow Eagle rookie Bobby Taylor has also been a pleasant surprise in the City of Brotherly Love. He was asked to step in with the loss of Eric Allen. Though the Notre Dame star isn't the seasoned veteran that Allen was, his natural instincts at cornerback has helped him make an impact as a starter.

It will take a while for Taylor to be the number 21 that he wears in the place of Allen, who was also wore the number for the green and white, but at some point the fans at the Vet will barely notice the difference.

• In Seattle, former Ohio State Buckeye Joey Galloway has made big waves as a wide receiver. His lightning–fast speed down the sideline and slick moves have produced 100–yard receiving days five times already this year. That without a full time quarterback.

Galloway's 84–yard reverse for a touchdown Sunday against the Jaguars showed his field smarts by cutting back to the far side of the field where his blockers were. Instead of a five–yard loss, Galloway created six points.

• Bill Parcells took a chance on ex–Pitt running back Curtis Martin to be his next Ottis Anderson. He just may have found what he was looking for.

Martin has run for over 100 yards four times this season. Not coincidentally, the Patriots have won all four of those games. It had been almost two years since an opposing back had gained 100 or more yards against the Miami defense. This past Sunday, Martin went for 142.

The rookie has kept the football from hitting the ground, and in close games when New England has tried to run out the clock, Martin has been the go to guy and come through time and time again.

His health out of college was the reason he was a third round pick and the 13th running back taken in the draft. Out of those

Turn to NFL, page 7

Lightning strikes down Boston

ST PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) - Alexander Selivanov had two goals and an assist as the Tampa Bay Lightning snapped a four-game losing streak with a 5-3 victory over the Boston Bruins on Tuesday night.

The red-hot Selivanov has seven goals and 11 points in his last 10 games. The goals were his ninth and 10th of the season. Tampa Bay, which was 1-6-3 in its previous 10 games, received a boost from the return of goaltender Daren Puppa from a wrist injury. Puppa, who stopped 32 of 35 shots to improve to 4-3-4, had missed the previous three games.

The Lightning had squandered two-goal, third-period leads in its last two games and four times overall, but held on against the Bruins.

Boston lost for the fourth time in six games and remained in last place in the Northeast Division with 12 points.

Lightning center Chris Gratton broke a 10-game pointless streak with his sixth goal at 4:03 of the first, but the Bruins pulled even on Jozef Stumpel's third at 10:25.

A Boston turnover resulted in a 2-1 Tampa Bay lead 16 seconds later on Paul Ysebaert's fifth goal, but Boston pulled even on Raymond Bourque's short-handed goal at 8:05 of the second and took the lead on Cam Neely's ninth at 9:59.

The Lightning again struck quickly. They tied it 4-4 when Selivanov beat Blaine Lacher on a wrist shot 43 seconds later, and took the lead again on Shawn Burr's wraparound at 13:34 of the second.

Selivanov sealed the victory on a wraparound at 10:00 of the third after a Gratton hit forced a Bruins turnover.

Lacher made 24 saves and dropped to 2-5-2.

Pittsburgh 4, Dallas 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Mario Lemieux had two goals and an assist to raise his NHL-leading point total to 40 and help the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Dallas Stars 4-2 Tuesday night.

The Stars are winless in six games, 0-3-3 while the Penguins are on a 7-1-1 streak. Pittsburgh goaltender Tom Barrasso extended his personal unbeaten streak to 7-0-2.

Lemieux has scored points in all 12 of his games this season and has had multiple points in 11 games.

Lemieux scored the first of Pittsburgh's two power-play goals in the first period. After his goal at 9:43, Markus Naslund converted Ron Francis' pass for his sixth goal at 17:37.

Lemieux's breakaway goal at 2:32 of the third gave the Penguins a 3-1 lead. Dmitri Mironov gave Lemieux a lead pass that led him get behind defensemen Craig Ludwig and Kevin Hatcher. He beat Darcy Wakaluk with a backhander for his 16th.

Lemieux made a one-handed pass to set up Dave Roche's first NHL goal at 12:33 of the third.

The Stars started the game by outshooting Pittsburgh 11-0 and scoring at 42 seconds. Corey Millen, left alone in the slot, was able to fire in Grant Ledyard's centering pass. Mike

Turn to BRUINS, page 7

Surprising starts all around the nation

The fall of 1995 has witnessed some unusual names in unusual places on standings charts all around sports. Even the sketchiest of prognosticators did not have Northwestern in the Top 10 national rankings. Hardly a soul picked the Florida Panthers to have the best record in the NHL on November 15, and even fewer had the Sacramento Kings in first place of the NBA's Pacific Division.

After one full month of college hockey action, standings across the nation are similarly juggled.

Preseason top 10 picks Michigan, Michigan State and Lake Superior State all find themselves looking up in the CCHA standings, where surprising Western Michigan is in the driver's seat. Coming off of a 1994–95 campaign that saw the Broncos finish seventh in the conference with a 9–14–4 CCHA record, WMU was tabbed for sixth by the CCHA coaches in their preseason poll.

At 8–2 (5–1 in the CCHA) the start is the Broncos' best in 19 years, and was hardly compiled by pounding patsies. Friday night WMU scored three goals in the final 16 minutes to overtake No. 3 Lake Superior 6–5 in the Soo. The Broncos bucked No. 2 Michigan 7–2 at the Wolverines' Yost Ice Arena before a stunned 7,152 earlier this year.

The team is durable as well. After shocking the Lakers, the team bussed to Ferris State, arriving at 3 a.m. Nothing could stop the Broncos though as the team built a 3–0 lead and cruised to victory. Western Michigan has used exceptional special teams play to overtake these foes. The power play unit is clicking at an astounding 29.7 percent in CCHA games (11–for–37), while the Broncos have killed 90.7 percent of their penalties.

Four of the top five scorers in the conference wear the Broncos' brown and gold. Jeremy Brown, who leads the CCHA with 20 points, was named the conference's offensive Player of the Week. Justin Cardwell (10–7–17) has already surpassed his 1994–95 output, while sophomore defenseman Steve Duke leads the nation with 13 assists.

For one reason or another though, the pollsters have yet to take notice of the first–place Broncos. The team is ninth in the Troy Record poll, behind the Lakers and Wolverines, both of whom WMU has beaten. Saturday's opponent, Bowling Green is also ahead of the Broncos, at No. 7.

Despite his team's hot start, coach Bill Wilkinson, realizes that there's still a long way to go before the Broncos make their reservations for the CCHA's Final Five at Joe Louis Arena.

"I think [Lake State and Ferris State] are two really big wins for us, beating two teams with a four–hour bus ride in between," Wilkinson said. "We're off to a great start, but still have to take one game at a time."

Things have gone well for the Broncos, who have only lost this season by one goal to Michigan and in overtime against Providence College, but they are hardly alone.

The Friars, seventh in Hockey East last year, hold the league's top position after this week's impressive split with Maine.

An experienced Providence defense and solid goaltending from Dan Dennis, held the mighty Black Bears to just three goals in 120 tumultuous minutes at Schneider Arena.

The connections between the New Jersey Devils and Providence College run deep. Devil general manager, Lou Lamoriello is a former player, coach and athletic director

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

UMass hockey gets Nathan Sell's letter of intent

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen has made no secret of the fact that he likes size in his lineup. A quick glance down the roster finds two players over 6–foot–5 and several players weighing in at over 200 pounds.

So when Mallen is watching a high school or a junior hockey game, it is a pretty good bet that he's looking at the biggest guy on the ice.

Nathan Sell, the second recruit that Massachusetts has signed for next season fits right into Mallen's size appreciation. At 6–foot–4 and 200 pounds, the center from Pembroke, Ontario has the dimensions to be a powerful forward.

Mallen said that Sell will be an asset for Massachusetts on and off the field.

"He's an unbelievably nice kid," Mallen said. "He's a good student. He has speed. He has good hands and he has the size."

• • •

Sell is joined by Jeff Blanchard as the other freshmen that will step in next year. Blanchard, a speedy defensemen is particularly Intriguing to local hockey fans. While several Minutemen have some NHL lineage, Blanchard's takes the cake. The Ontario native is the nephew of former Bruin, Bobby Orr.

Mallen said that he doesn't expect any more recruits to be signed before the end of the early signing period.

• • •

Notebook: The current Minutemen will take on Hockey East leading Providence this weekend in a home–and–home series. The Friars have shocked the league early on by sweeping Merrimack and upsetting Maine en route to a weekend split with the Black Bears ...A quick look down the Hockey East scoring leaders finds two Boston University Terriers (Jay Pandolfo, Chris Drury) atop the list, but following that are a pair of Minutemen checking in.

Junior Rob Bonneau (5 goals and 3 assists) and senior Sal Manganaro (4 goals 4 assists) have led the way for UMass in HE with eight points each. Tom Perry and Warren Norris both have six points each.

A time to give thanks
Thanksgiving conjures up many kinds of memories for many different people. See how some recall the most American of holidays (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Hunger Pains
MASSPIRG sponsored a Hunger Banquet last night which portrayed a scaled down version of the food distribution of the world (See story, page 2).

Norton's now killing penalties for UMass
Sophomore defenseman Bard Norton has cut down on his penalties this year for the surprising Minutemen (See Sports, page 20).

Extended Forecast
Today mostly cloudy with scattered flurries and cold with a greater chance of snow this evening. Friday, the sun will come out a little, with higher temperatures. Saturday: Nippy.
Today HIGH: 35 LOW: 25
Friday HIGH: 42 LOW: 35
Saturday HIGH: 40 LOW: 30

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 51 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, November 16, 1995

Date rape survivor tells her story

THANC VO/COLLEGIAN

Katie Koestner spoke last night at the Student Union Ballroom about her experience dealing with date rape. The speech was part of the Distinguished Visitor's Program.

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Survivor Katie Koestner was soft–spoken yet confident when she talked about date rape in her speech "No–Yes" at the Student Union Ballroom last night.

"As long as there is rape, I am not free," Koestner said.

Koestner gave the audience advice on how to prevent rape as she told her story.

"Perhaps you would have said 'get out' or maybe you would have gone down the hall to get help," she said.

Koestner was a freshman when she was raped at the College of William and Mary in Pennsylvania. She invited a friend Peter to her room to dance after dinner one night. She said she wanted only to dance, but he had other ideas.

"Inviting somebody to your room in college means different things to different people. He did not seem much different than the guys I dated in high school. [But] in high school my dad was there. [saying things like], 'if you want to live tonight, you'll have her home by midnight,'" said Koestner.

The difference between high school and college is that in college your father isn't there as a deterrent, so you have to stand–up for yourself, Koestner said.

Communication, responsibility and respect are the keys to preventing rape, according to Koestner.

"Talk to each other; be clear about what you want," she said.

When talking about responsibility Koestner told stories of women who were raped while they were drunk. The two stories she told were of college men who planned and succeeded in getting women drunk so they could rape them.

When Koestner talked about respect she addressed men and women separately. Respect is a something men must have for women and women must have for themselves, she said.

To the men, Koesner said, "I have a great deal of confidence that most guys have laughed at a funny rape joke. It takes a strong man not to laugh and an even stronger one to say I did not find it funny."

Koestner told women to develop a high self esteem and not to stand for the abuse and harassment aimed at them.

"You must be strong. You have to stand up for yourselves. If nothing else, you have to be strong," she said.

The transition from victim to speaker was a gradual one for Koestner and said she reached a point in her recovery when she began to think of herself as not being at fault. Koestner said she got angry because of the way she was treated when she reported the rape.

"I got so angry," Koestner said.

When Koestner told the Dean of Students of her rape, he was not supportive.

"He said to me, 'You could be ruining someone else's life with those charges. He will not be allowed in your dorm for this semester. You make a nice couple; I hope you can work through this tiff,'" Koestner said.

Turn to KOESTNER, page 2

Alums offer a peek at job opportunities

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

After graduating from college, one of the biggest fears many students have going out into the real world is whether or not they will be able to find a job. Many students often go into college looking for occupations which are immediately viable in the work force, rather than pursuing careers in the field of their true heart's desire.

"The best part of [the shadowing] was knowing what I learned in the past three semesters will actually help me in the real world."

There is one program which attempts to give students a prospective look into their possible futures based on their separate majors.

Sponsored by the Careers in New York Shadowing Project, and co–sponsored by the University of Massachusetts University Career Services, Office of Alumni Relations and the Metro Area Alumni Club, the Shadow Project is intended to give students information about career opportunities in the New York area. It also provides an introductory experience of how hectic and exciting the New York metropolitan working environment can be.

Each UMass student who participated traveled to New York and paired with members of the Metro Alumni Club. The Club introduced them to a network of UMass alumni working throughout the New York area.

The students spent their day shadowing the their alumni mentors at work.

Of the many majors open for "shadowing," apparel marketing, communications, marketing and Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration were the most abundant.

This event was coordinated by Ginger Goldsbury, assistant director of the University Campus Career Center.

Twenty students from UMass took part in this project. Upon return, a meeting was scheduled for Nov. 15 for the students to get together and submit a one–page statement about their respective experiences to Goldsbury.

Craig Kelly, a communications major, went to NBC Dateline. He shadowed Jamie Zozzaro (1992 UMass graduate), who's now an associate producer on the show.

"I saw the whole process of how they made an entire news show," Kelly said. During his stay, Kelly also met news anchormen Stone Phillips and Tom Brokaw. He even saw Quentin Tarantino on the set of Saturday Night Live.

Kelly expressed his feeling about the benefits of the Shadow Project. "In general, I think that the Shadow program is a fantastic opportunity to explore careers in your major. I saw what it was like to work in television and became more focused as to what I want to do for a career."

Elizabeth Buzzallino, an apparel marketing major, met with a buyer for Victoria Secret.

"The best part of [the shadowing] was knowing what I learned in the past three semesters will actually help me in the real world."

Mariah C. Howland, a French major, was even offered a job after graduation.

"The entire project is pretty encompassing," Goldsbury said. "It covered quite a variety of programs. It's open to all majors."

The Careers Shadow Project was advertised through the Campus Career News. Another trip is planned for next semester with trips to Springfield, Boston and Washington D.C.

SCERA rallies again to fight proposed financial aid cuts

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) is planning another rally for student financial aid, since the success of the last one on the steps of Government Center. This rally will take place at Representative Peter Blute's office in Worcester on Monday.

Members of SCERA and other concerned students will picket outside of Blute's office before a scheduled meeting with the Congressman. The students hope to influence the representative to save student aid.

SCERA's liaison Vecchio said his group has targeted the Congressman for his approval of student financial aid cuts. Blute had publicly announced he was opposed to the cuts just weeks prior to his signing of the bill. Vecchio said Blute gave in to pressure from his colleagues.

"Like most Republicans, Blute is under the impression that the balancing the budget is most important and that will help everyone," Vecchio said. "Our point of view is that cuts are important and the downsizing of some programs is needed, but there's a big difference between welfare reform and cutting financial aid."

Vecchio pointed out that Blute is coming up for election next year and was pressured to vote conservatively by the republican leadership.

Representative Peter Torkelson is another Republican who reneged on his promise to save financial aid. SCERA does not have the resources to visit Torkelson's office on the other side of the state, but hopes he will hear the same message from the rally outside of Blute's office.

Vecchio argued in many foreign countries, students attend college for free. "Students here have to fight for access," Vecchio said.

Vecchio also cited problems for non–traditional students with families, who have a tough time affording a college education without the cuts.

"It is extremely important for students to get out and fight these cuts," Vecchio said. "We have to mobilize and be a powerful voice."

SCERA hopes to get the same turnout for this rally as the one held on Halloween a few weeks ago outside Republican Committee Headquarters in Boston. It is estimated that 700– 1000 students from 25 public and private colleges across the state attended the rally.

If you would like to participate in the rally in Worcester on Monday, Nov. 20, please call the SCERA office at 545– 0355, or visit their office at 424 Student Union.

New course to teach German culture

By Julia Stoyanovich
Collegian Correspondent

The Germanic languages and literature department is offering a German business course next semester for students with specialized studies.

"Business German 314: Language and Culture" will be taught by graduate student Marion Brenneisen, an English and business administration major who is also a native German speaker.

Returning from an absence of several years, the revitalized business German has reappeared in the spring 1995 course catalog. Brenneisen said she is structuring the course around putting emphasis on reading articles and speaking and writing formal German, rather than on grammar. Classroom discussions will be held mostly in German.

According to Brenneisen, business German has been designed to provide students with a larger variety of courses in the department. The only course of its kind at the University of Massachusetts, it will give students a chance to broaden their knowledge of the practical German.

Brenneisen said she is very enthusiastic about teaching the course, which requires German 240 or equivalent as a prerequisite. The expected size of the class is between 10 and 15, enabling the instructor to work with each student individually which is a significant factor in studying a language.

Brenneisen said she plans to be flexible in choosing the course material. The topics she would like to cover include practical experience in writing business letters and using role–playing to model job interviews.

"We will stress the differences and similarities between the European and the American business worlds," she said.

Brenneisen also said it would be interesting to analyze German advertising techniques, a system in which comparing the product being

Turn to GERMAN, page 2

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Marion Brenneisen, an exchange student from Germany, will assist in the teaching of a new German culture class next semester.

Environment, property examined

Forum held yesterday to discuss Endangered Species Act

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

A panel of experts held a forum yesterday afternoon to discuss rights of property owners and the environment. The forum, entitled "Forum on Property Rights and Regulatory Takings,"held in the Campus Center, was moderated by Professor Rutherford H. Platt, a professor of Geography and planning law at the University of Massachusetts.

The panelists were from varied organizations and the idea of the forum was to discuss the problems of finding common ground between the Property Rights Movement and the Environmental Movement.

"This is a conflict that has been going on at least since the 1920s and we are now facing a new stage in this debate, over the last two or three years in particular, with the rise of a very militant, very vocal, and in some ways, very informed property rights movement," Platt said.

"All sorts of public regulatory programs, such as environmental land use, workplace safety, and water management, are being cast as regulatory takings, which would require compensation to the land owners. Some of these claims are valid, many are not," said Platt. "We've never seen such an onslaught of judicial and legislative efforts to expand the meaning of the Fifth Amendment."

Panelist David Sutherland, of the Nature Conservency's Connecticut Chapter, also got into the discussion of the amendment.

"Regulatory takings refers to the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, which says the government shall not take private property for public use without just compensation," Sutherland said. "What is called the private properties movement has tried to interpret [the Fifth Amendment] to mean the government to regulate what people do on their lands, such as wetlands regulations and endangered species regulations."

The movement, which also refers to itself as the Wise Use Movement, is also trying to weaken and change laws protecting the environment, according to Sutherland.

Jessica Spelke, a research assistant to Professor Platt, reported on some of the specific organizations which make up the property rights movement.

Groups, such as the Washington–based Defenders of Property Rights, are legally challenging the government's regulation of private property by contesting the existing definition of "the taking clause," according to Spelke.

"The taking clause simply states that if the government takes an individual's land, to build a highway or school, for example, the individual must be compensated monetarily," said Spelke. "It's referred to as 'eminent domain.' Property rights groups aren't as concerned with the actual taking of lands. They are much more interested in the government limiting what someone can do with their own land."

The organizations, some with deceptive names such as The National Wetlands Coalition (which actually wants to deregulate wetlands for building purposes), use research, litigation, and lobbying to make their views heard.

The question of endangered species was discussed, as well. Curtice R. Griffin of the UMass wildlife and fisheries conservation, discussed the Property Rights movement and its effect on endangered wildlife.

"The Endangered Species Act, one of the most comprehensive regulations we have in the world. It is also one of this country's most debated issues, as we saw with the spotted owls on federal forested lands in the Pacific NW," Griffin said.

The endangered species act is up for re–authorization in the House and Senate. They want to redefine "harm" of endangered species to not include habitat modification, therefore making these areas more open for development.

The panel included Art Pichette, a land developer from Northampton, to discuss responsible ways to keep both sides of the argument happy. Mr. Pichette gave examples of responsible development, such as re–using obsolete public buildings for private use, and giving tax breaks to those who did re–use.

Some members of the panel saw these property rights movement as "shills" for big business, who feed false information to the public.

"The anti–environmental movement is part of a 'counter– revolution' over environmental regulation. They make it seem that the public is fed up with extreme environmental regulation," panelist Sidney Wolf said.

"The anti–environmentalist want to be seen as the true 'grass roots' movement, with the majority of the American public behind them. This is one of the myths they use to support their argument."

According to Wolf, the Property Rights movement makes itself out to be the voice of the people, when in actuality, it's the voice of big business.

Students famished after banquet

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Correspondent

Students who participated in MASSPIRG's Hunger Banquet last night at Earthfoods found it to be different from any other dinner banquet they had attended in the past. For one thing, some students didn't receive dinner.

One student was taken by surprise when she realized the potent message behind the hunger banquet.

"This is really a learning experience for me," said Bonni Fierstein, a UMass student.

Students received a numbered arm band when they walked through the doors which they were to wear while they waited for the evening's events to begin. If they received an arm band with the number one, they were served vegetable lasagna, with bread and salad, waited on by servants and seated at candlelit tables. The people numbered with a one represented the very top of the economic ladder, accounting for 15 percent of the world population that lives in affluence.

Students who found a number two on their sleeve sat at tables, and served themselves rice and beans from the kitchen. Their lifestyle represented how 25 percent of the world population lives, mostly on a diet of rice and beans.

The remaining 60 percent seated themselves on the cold linoleum floor, squeezed into a small circle that was sectioned off for them. If they were fortunate, a scoopful of rice was given to them for dinner, or a donation of salad or beans was given to them by a charitable student seated at one of the other tables.

Jeff Lourie, one of the organizers of the event, expressed the need for students in the Five College area to become more aware of the growing problems of hunger and homelessness in the community.

"Hunger and homelessness are part of a vicious cycle that people don't recognize. They think it just doesn't happen here," he said, noting students' ignorance to the social inequities that exist within their own community. "It's been heard that there are month long waiting lists to get into shelters in Amherst. The population in the Pioneer Valley is rising and there isn't enough affordable housing to meet their [low-income people] needs."

University professors spoke about hunger on a worldwide, as well as a local level. Professor Peter Pellett, head of the nutrition department, shared with the audience his perspectives on worldwide hunger and starvation. "Malnutrition is a political issue more than a scientific issue," Pellett said, citing United Nations sanctions against Iraq which have brought upon severe consequences for the people of Iraq.

He informed students about the widespread infection and starvation related diseases suffered in Iraq because of political decisions that were made. Pellett's slides painted a more vivid picture of the capacity of political power to produce disaster. Students stared in disbelief at the skeletal images of children who had developed hunger related diseases such as Kwashiorkor and Marasmus.

Pellett claimed there is an estimated 192 million children worldwide suffering from Protein Energy Malnutrition, a condition resulting from chronic undernourishment.

David Sharken, director of the Western Mass. Food Bank, defined the issue of hunger in American culture.

"Hunger is a child who is falling asleep in school, because he or she does not have enough food to eat, and they haven't eaten breakfast," Sharken said. "It could be an elder, who is starving herself because she simply doesn't have enough money to pay for a decent meal. It affects working families, who are doing all the right things, but for whom making $8 an hour can not feed their family of four."

According to Sharken, these are the type of people arriving at soup kitchens and shelters in increasing proportions.

Professor George Cernada, who teaches classes in the public health department, stressed the importance of our role, as students, in world hunger and homelessness. Cernada said, "The U.S. consumes one-third of the worlds' resources yet makes up only four to five percent of the population. We, here, can consume less."

He emphasized the need for our culture to separate "quality of life" from the "consumption factor" and pleaded for a return to the basic values in life.

He encouraged the audience to take advantage of their youth, as students, and the opportunities to make a difference that are available to them today. "Nothing gets done unless you do it. Don't wait around for somebody else to do it. Just do it, you."

■ German

continued from page 1

advertised to other companies' products is not allowed.

Another valuable topic Brenneisen will present to the class is the Trade Unions in the newly formed European Community, of which Germany is a significant part.

Barton Byg, Associate Professor in the Germanic languages and literature department, said that the course is a good opportunity for the students interested in international business to learn from a native German speaker who has experience in the area.

"It is a must for the Europeans to be fluent in more then one language and it is also becoming a must for most Americans," Brenneisen said. "If one wants to go into business, it is very important to know the specialized terminology. It is very helpful to know the business terminology and European business ethics for anyone who wishes to work in the area of international business."

■ Koestner

continued from page 1

Not satisfied, she went to the District Attorney, who said, "I don't take cases like yours," according to Koestner.

Next, Koestner went to the media.

"I'm not ashamed; I didn't do anything wrong," Koestner said.

Koestner allowed HBO to produce a docudrama titled "No Visible Bruises: The Katie Koestner Story" to raise awareness around the issue of rape.

Due to the attention the film has gathered, the administration at the College of William and Mary has re- examined its policy concerning date rape.

Koestner graduated from William and Mary in May of 1994 Magna Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa.

This lecture was sponsored by The Distinguished Visitors Program.

Prof. speaks about the 'shout' of gospel

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

People who have been to a sanctified Pentecostal Christian Church know what "the shout" is all about.

It is the kind of shout that moves the spirit, stirs the soul and makes you want to praise. It is the kind of shout University of Massachusetts music professor Horace Boyer said "shakes your body and sets you free."

It is the shout found in gospel and there are few as schooled in gospel as Boyer.

"We've found [the shout] before through the old Negro spirituals," he said. "It sustained us through slavery. We sung through our problems. It provided hope and strength for people to get up and go back to the same old thing. Nothing but the shout sustained us through that time and during the Civil Rights Movement."

Boyer recently published a book that not only gives a definitive history of gospel music, but includes the knowledge and experience of a man who has been performing and studying gospel music more than half his life.

As a teenager, Boyer made up one half of "The Famous Boyer Brothers," sharing venues with Mahalia Jackson, the Dixie Hummingbirds and the Clara Ward Singers, among others. Last year, Boyer helped create the award-winning National Radio series on gospel, "Wade in the Water".

"How Sweet the Sound: The Golden Age of Gospel Music," Boyer's new book, shows how gospel music has influenced many of today's popular singers and how it has changed over the years to cross over color lines and into the mainstream of contemporary popular music.

"Until 1969, gospel music was an adult music taught to young people," Boyer said. "In 1969, Edward Hawkins released a record called Oh Happy Day which shifted it to a young people's music taught to adults."

This switch to a younger generation of gospel singers also brought about the switch of traditional gospel music to a more contemporary sound, combining the styles of rock, rhythm and blues and jazz, Boyer explained.

"The line between traditional gospel music and black popular music has almost been blotted out," he said. "Groups like Take 6 and the Winans all incorporated new sounds into gospel music so that now, more than ever, gospel's become more of a fusion music. [Like] a fusion of Mahalia Jackson plus Gladys Knight and The Pips all rolled into one."

The transition from traditional gospel music to the new sound of gospel today was hard for those who were not ready for it, Boyer said. The move away from the traditional church and into the entertainment industry had many worrying about the direction gospel music was going.

"Many people get some kind of spiritual fulfillment from contemporary gospel as others got from traditional gospel," Boyer said. "There was a tremendous church base

Turn to GOSPEL, page 16

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel 549-2692
Gobble Up These Super Specials At SCOTT'S
Thank You For Your Patronage
Quantity Discounts Available
Absolut Vodka $20.99 1.75 liter
Bud Dry $5.39 +dep 12 Pack Cans
Red Dog & Ice House $6.99 +dep 12 Pack Cans
Keystone Reg, Light & Ice $4.39 +dep 12 Pack Cans
Columbia Crest Semillon - Chardonnay $3.99 750ml
Jack Daniel's $11.49 750ml
Jack Daniel's Country Cocktails $3.49 4 Pack
Gilbey's Gin $12.99 1.75 Liter
WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Now open Sundays 12-5 until 1996

The Bluewall
"Last Chance To Dance"
with DJ Faye
Thursday, Nov. 16th
9:30pm - 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to ZZ Top & Everything in Between
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"You Want It, We've Got It"

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Nov. 16

Exchange — British Universities North America Club (BUNAC) representatives from London and Dublin will be present to talk about student exchange employment programs in England and Ireland. The event will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 903. There will also be an informational table on the Campus Center Concourse. The event is sponsored by the Mather Career Center Office, for more information call 545-6011.

Smoke-Out Table — Turn in your cigarettes and get a survival kit at the Great American Smoke Out Table in the Campus Center Concourse, 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

Documentary — "Pack of Lies: the Advertising of Tobacco," a documentary on the marketing techniques used by the tobacco industry, will be shown on HSCN Channel 17, every hour on the hour during the Great American Smoke Out.

Discussion — "The Wildlife Society" presents a discussion on the hunting behavior of the Lynx and coyote in the Yukon. Room 203 Holdsworth Hall at 6:30 p.m. The discussion will feature guest speaker Dr. Dennis Murray.

Meeting — Boricuas Unidos is sponsoring a meeting on "Puerto Rican Women and Relationships" in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Workshop — Alex Deschamps and a panel of senior Teaching Assistants from various departments will present "Managing the Classroom as a TA." The seminar will address the difficulties graduate instructors face in their intermediary positions. The workshop is free and open to the public, to register, find the room location and additional information contact the Center For Teaching at 5-1225.

Brown Bag Luncheon — The Stonewall Center presents Hampshire College Professor Margaret Cerullo speaking on "Families That Matter — Family Values, Queer Families, Queer Politics." The event is at noon in Campus Center Room 803 at noon. The event is wheelchair accessible and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Play — The UMass Theatre Guild presents Chess, an '80s pop rock musical. The show will be in Bowker Auditorium until Nov. 17 and 18, starting at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or at the FAC box office. $4 for students and $6 for general public.

Friday, Nov. 17

Band-Aid — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a benefit concert at 7:30 p.m. in the Butterfield basement. The concert features Essex County Greenbelt, Clovis Point, and other mystery guests. Admission is $3 or three canned goods. Proceeds benefit the Food Bank of Western Mass. For more information contact 545-0199.

Sleep Out — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a sleep out on the Butterfield immediately following the Band-Aid Concert. Students are sponsored to sleep out in cardboard boxes. There will be a bonfire, with drum circle and "open stage."

Concert — UPC presents "311" with "Shoootyz Groove" at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $15 for UMass students and $16.50 for non-students. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited, the Northampton Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record.

GLBT Students of Color — A reception is being held for GLBT Students of Color in 120 Mary Lyon Residence Hall at 6 p.m. Food and beverages will be served. For more information contact Rosie at 545-0310.

Lecture — Kyre Mithranir, Reiki Master, will talk about the healing modality Reiki and how it can be used to heal, harmonize and balance your body, mind, spirit and emotions. Oasis, 63 Main St., Amherst, 7-9 p.m., free.

Meeting — There will be a Boricuas Unidos staff meeting at the Latin American Cultural Center at 5 p.m.

Music — There will be a Bruce Springsteen listening session in the Graduate Lounge, Campus Center. Hear his new CD before you buy it, 5 people will win the full CD, refreshments served, 5 p.m.

Chinese Movie — The Conqueror (in Mandarin) Rm. 174- 176 Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Dance — Following Chinese movie, sponsored by Chinese Students & Scholars Association, dancing party is at 9 p.m. in the Graduate Lounge.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177-178. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, no bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Mediators — The Ombuds Office is accepting applications for the Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team. Training for this team will be Jan. 22-26, 1996. For more information, call 545-0867 or stop by 823 Campus Center. Applications are due by tomorrow.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions Should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545-3490 or 545-6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10-11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8-10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549-6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323-6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1-800-750-2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1-800-696- 7732.

Campus Police Log

Larceny

Nov. 12

Two individuals in Coolidge Residence Hall reported that jewelry was stolen from their room. The incident was under investigation.

UMass police sought a warrant from the court and on Nov. 13 arrested Reginald A. Remy, 18, of 22 High St., Brookline for breaking and entering and larceny over $250.

Nov. 13

There was a license plate stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 29.

There was property stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 11.

There was a report of a past larceny of a wallet from the School of Management.

Six loads of laundry were stolen from a laundry room in North Village Apartments.

Nov. 14

There was a report of a past theft of CDs from a room in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

An individual in McNamara Residence Hall reported that his access number was stolen.

Weapons violation

Nov. 13

A BB gun was fired at a window on the fifth floor of McNamara Residence Hall. Housing was called in to repair the window.

Assault & Battery

Nov. 14

An individual in Patterson Residence Hall reported a past assault. He does not wish to pursue court action.

Suspicious person/activity

Nov. 15

There was a homeless individual wandering the halls of Baker Residence Hall, trying the door handles.

Suspicious vehicle

Nov. 14

An investigation into an alleged break-in on resulted in an arrest. Jose A. Delesus, 20, of 240 Salem St., Lawrence, was arrested for attempt to commit a crime, possession of burglarious instruments, receiving stolen property worth over $250 and malicious destruction of property worth over $250. As a result of further investigation, additional charges are being sought.

Vandalism

Nov. 12

There was damage to a vending machine in Cashin Residence Hall.

Nov. 13

There was a window broken in Baker Residence Hall.

Nov. 14

There was Swastika graffiti in the men's bathroom in Marcus Hall.

There was graffiti on the stalls in a men's bathroom in the Campus Center.

There was a report of damage to a locker in Curry Hicks Cage.

Accident/property damage

Nov. 12

An individual reported dents in her vehicle on Sylvan Dr.

A vehicle struck a parked vehicle on John Adams Road, resulting in minor damage.

Nov. 13

There were minor accidents in Parking Lot 65, on Hicks Way and in Parking Lot 11.

Nov. 14

There was a two vehicle accident at the entrance to Parking Lot 63.

Burglory/breaking & entering

Nov. 12

An individual reported that his vehicle in Parking Lot 47 had been broken into and his stereo system was stolen.

Health/safety hazard

Nov. 12

There was a strange odor reported on the seventh and eighth floors of McNamara Residence Hall.

Annoying behavior

Nov. 12

There was a complaint concerning skateboarders on North Pleasant St.

There was a report of individuals banging on windows on the second floor ledge of Gorman Residence Hall.

Nov. 13

There was a complaint about skateboarders in the Campus Center garage.

An individual in the Campus Center disputed hotel charges.

There was an individual throwing snowballs from the roof of Brett Residence Hall.

There was a large group throwing snowballs and yelling on Orchard Hill Dr.

There was an individual throwing water bags from a building in Van Meter Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Nov. 13

An individual, who suffered injuries from an accident earlier in the evening, requested an ambulance. The person was taken from Gorman Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Disturbance

Nov. 14

A problem with a resident in Emerson Residence Hall was resolved.

Fire alarm

Nov. 14

A fire alarm was pulled in the Auxiliary Warehouse for training purposes only.

The News Department needs writers. Any students interested in writing for the news section should contact Chris Conner at 545-1762 or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement.

NEED $150?
WELL-KNOWN COMPUTER COMPANY SEEKS COLLEGE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PURCHASING COMPUTER HARDWARE AND PRINTERS. WILL PAY $150.
$150 REBATE

Macintosh Performa 636CD
RMB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh Performa from the 630 series and an Apple printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.

Personal LaserWriter 300
Toner cartridge and cables included.

Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center 545-2619
Mon - Fri 9-5 Sat 11-3

Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD DOS compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail in rebate. Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa + Printer = Payback" offer, please call 800-950-6354 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, StyleWriter and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation, used under license therefrom. CastAway Plus is a registered trademark of Mindscape. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800-600-7808 or TTY 800-755-0601.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaelis Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmich, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
G. Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Vengeance only does more harm

"Wendy, I just got the filthiest message on e-mail," my friend told me last week. "I don't know if you've read it yet, but I forwarded it to you."

"What kind of message?" I asked.

"It's just this totally, totally sick thing — so sick! — about why — oh, it was so sick — why women shouldn't be allowed to talk."

By now most UMass students with e-mail will have seen this message, titled "Top 75 Reasons Why Women (Bitches) Should Not Have Freedom of Speech." Many of them cannot stop thinking about it.

Originally created by four Cornell University undergraduate (identified in the message as the "four players of Cornell"), this little misogynist rant has created a furor across the country as Internet–users across the countries shuttle from one corner of the country to the other.

Last Friday the Boston Globe ran the story on the front page of the Metro Region section and titled it "misogyny@cornell.edu."

"The list is pretty nasty stuff," wrote Globe staffer Michael Grunwald, going on to list several of the items included on the list: "38. If she can't speak, she can't cry rape"; "39. Of course, if she can't speak, she can't say no."; "49. Whores get payed [sic] by the hour, not by the word."

The message was never intended to offend anyone, say the men who originally wrote it, but offend people it has done to the point where this "joke" has become a rallying point for feminists across the country.

A woman at Dana Hall School in Wellesley said "this kind of humor is not acceptable in 1995." Students at Bryn Mawr in Pennsylvania turned a Take Back the Night rally into a rally to "take back the Net." Last week at Boston College, staffers at the women's center were discussing whether or not it would be possible to "crash the entire Cornell e-mail system."

"Those people are incredibly stupid," one BC student told the Globe. "We want them to pay for what they did."

And pay for it they did, especially since they included their names at the end of the message. Since sending out the list more than three weeks ago, their e-mail accounts have been flooded with angry messages and "flames" from campus feminists offering "75 Reasons You Should Shut Your Mouths."

These guys have probably also received phone calls, postcards and in–your–face verbal harassment. According to the Globe, there have been several death threats.

At the university, the men have been presented with at least one charge of sexual harassment and will probably face disciplinary actions later on.

And all for what? For making a list? For creating a snag in the plans of those who adhere to the philosophy of PC– uber–alles?

To some people, this list is like a smack in the face; to others, like myself, it's just a list. Know what I did around a second after reading this list? I erased it. I looked it over, decided I didn't like it and got rid of it. End of story — no controversy for me whatsoever.

Maybe it would have been different if this was an advertisement or something printed on a t–shirt on sale at Faces in Northampton, but in this case, it was just a list. And the way I see it, with a little list like this, no matter how widely circulated it is, it's still not going to do much damage.

It's not going to be posted on a billboard on the highway where everybody can see it. It's not going to be taught in school. It's not something all men are going to have to sign in order to graduate from high school. It's just a list.

So people can write letters back to the "players." People can use it as an example of misogyny. Hey, the people who agree with it — and I am not one — can even print it out and hang it up on the wall for reference if they want to. It's called democracy.

But charging these men with harassment? Threatening to kick them out of school? Plotting to sabotage their school's computer system? Threatening to kill them? That's called vengeance.

Personally, I believe in the right to freedom of expression more than I believe in vengeance and harassment policies like the one at Cornell and the one proposed here at UMass trouble me deeply.

Isn't it better to let people say their say out loud than force that say underground or convert it straight into action? I'd much rather have someone say their piece and get feedback on it than say it and get thrown out of school.

I'd much rather have compromise than vengeance. I'd much rather have a list than a room full of people tied down so they can't reach their keyboards.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

I DID IT TO STOP THE PEACE PROCESS.
WE HAVE TO BE COLDHEARTED.
Vigal Amir rehearsing his acceptance speech in case there's ever a Nobel Prize for murder.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
DO HOLD YOUR BREATH.

Better luck next time

That's enough, man. I'm sick and tired of doing average work. I'm tired of getting by, of receiving a grade which I feel is sufficient by someone else's standings. Look at that GPA — it could be so much better, it's just a matter of putting time and work into it. I just need to put a bit more effort into the whole school thing.

Screw it, I'm going to do well on that test coming up in two weeks. I mean, I need to. Let's see, tomorrow night, when I get a free chance, I'm going to study for that test. If I consciously study for each day up until the test, I'm golden. That should be easy. What's a little bit of studying each night for the test? Nothing, I can do it.

Dammit, I will do it.

Geez, Bryce. It's Wednesday night, you have to work for 11 hours and you have that test tomorrow which you haven't studied for yet. Again, Bryce, scolding yourself for procrastinating another time. No, that's B.S., I have had so much work to do in the last two weeks and my friends from home came up during the weekend. I've been working my butt off.

I just haven't had enough time, plain and simple.

I'm dead, man. I can't study all of these notes and read the book before 9:30 tomorrow morning. That's 15 pages of notes and six chapters in 10 hours. I'm screwed. This sucks so bad. I'll be lucky if I pass, much rather get a decent grade. This is going to hurt my semester grade big time. How much is this test worth? Oh, who am I kidding, it's worth a ton.

I'm going to shank it.

That professor really pisses me off. What the heck, he doesn't even give us an extension for our test time. He crams everything into those four classes and expects us to know everything he asks. And you know he's going to try and trick us like he always does. If he wanted us to learn it so that we'd know it, he'd tell us what questions would be on the test so we'd learn what we were supposed to learn.

Don't even get me started on him.

I'm just exhausted. If I study up until the last six pages of notes and three chapters, and then I wake up tomorrow morning to finish the rest ... what is it, 4 a.m.? Alright, I'll study 'till 4:30, go to sleep for a little while and set the alarm for 6:30. That'll give me about two hours to finish studying. That should be enough.

Of course I'll be able to get up.

Oh, man ... 7:30? I must've pushed the snooze button all the way through, though I don't remember touching it even once. Now I'm never going to have enough time to study. Now I'm screwed. Way to go, Idiot. Now I'm not going to be able to study everything.

Nice job, Bryce.

Well, I guess this is it. I'm as ready as I'll ever be. I don't care, I'm not worried. I'm set for this. What am I going to do now? Let's just take it and see how I do.

I mean, seriously, what's the worst thing that can happen?

It's over. What a relief. Yeah, it was kind of hard, but it's done with. It's a big load off of my shoulders. I got through it, it's handed in and it's out of my hands.

Thank God.

What the hell's taking him so long to correct. The guy squeezes our work into four classes and he takes over two weeks to correct the tests. Wait a minute ... do I really want my grade back? I mean, I'm curious, but the week's coming up. I don't really want this grade to ruin it. Nah, I have to see what I got on this bad boy. I couldn't have done too bad.

It was mostly multiple choice.

I got a C? Geez, now I probably have no chance at getting a B in this class. Damn, true and false killed me. I could've done so much better. Yeah, yeah, yeah, I know you guys got ABs. I'm not as cool as you, I apologize. No guys, seriously, I'm screwed. Is there any extra credit?

I hope there is.

That's it. I have to do well starting now. When's the next test? A month from now, huh? OK, here's what I'll do — I'll go to class, I'll take good notes, study each night right up until the test, and then ...

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Senator shares view on woman's caucus

To the Editor:

On Nov. 8, the Undergraduate Student Senate voted against a motion to "support the establishment of a Woman's Caucus." The fact that there were women who are most passionate about women's issues, including myself, who voted against the motion is evidence there were things that were severely inadequate with the motion and its proponents. As a student of color, a woman and a senator, I am repulsed by the male–empowerment and self–proclaimed heroic acts some of my fellow senators are asserting in the name of women's empowerment.

The motion itself was abstract and useless since no process has been developed by the Senate to establish any new caucuses aside from the ALANA Caucus, let alone support the establishment of one. More importantly, the motion was extremely ill–conceived by Senators David Gafney and Bill Ramsey, co–sponsors, who seemed to be insincere in their motives for starting a Women's Caucus for the following reasons.

At the previous Senate meeting of Nov. 1, Senators Larry Plano and Bill Ramsey attempted to haphazardly introduce the idea of creating space for any new caucuses within Senate with a sloppy last–minute motion. My initial reaction was that they were trying to disempower the ALANA Caucus by creating other caucuses which would counteract ALANA's voting power. After the events of the Nov. 8 meeting, I can say I have been witnessing an informal White Men's Caucus attempting to pave the way for formal caucuses that would kill ALANA's voices in Senate.

To me, this motion for a Woman's Caucus was especially offensive because it came in the aftermath of an attempt to establish any new caucuses and not something that is specific and sensitive to women and women's issues. Further, not a single woman who is currently in Senate was involved in the process of developing and proposing this motion. In order for the motion to truly serve the needs of women as an underrepresented group in Senate, one needs to start with those women within Senate who are struggling to have their voices heard.

In addition, the Women's Caucus needs to be conceived, discussed and established by a diverse, well–informed group of women since no single woman can represent the needs of all women. It is extremely unacceptable that Senators Gafney and Ramsey presumed the best individuals to speak on the issue are themselves. Senator Gafney claimed he had contacted one woman from the Everywoman's Center, a member of his constituency, who had expressed an interest in forming a Woman's Caucus for Senate.

Not only was she not present at the Senate meeting to speak on the motion, but Gafney claimed she and her "little group" were already working on a charter for the caucus. This illustrates to me that there was a conscious decision to ignore the input of the women of the Senate because there was an ulterior motive behind the initiative, of which the women outside of Senate may not be wary. Women and our issues are being used as a device by men toward our own subjugation.

The most disgusting aspect of this mess is that the women who voted against Gafney and Ramsey's motion were told after the Senate meeting we "don't want women's voices to be heard," and we are "just pissed that we didn't do anything about it first." Verbal attacks such as these illustrate the incredible hypocrisy of senators such as David Gafney because they are humiliating and intimidating the very women they are claiming to want to empower.

There have been and continue to be women in Senate working on strengthening an informal Women's Caucus. Some men are angry that we women and men did not vote in their favor and that we are not grateful for their overwhelming generosity in assisting the poor, helpless underrepresented of UMass. I speak for many women when I say I am not prepared to kiss the knife that is poised to kill me and everything I believe in.

Anh Ly
Commuter Area Senator

Senator responds to motion results

To the Editor:

I am responding to Trustee Dan Rivera's letter to the editor that appeared in the Nov. 14 issue of the Collegian. In his letter, Rivera applauded the Senate's rejection of a motion to create a Woman's Caucus while condemning my intentions to empower women on this campus.

Rivera states, "The Speaker or the President nor I were approached about the issue and asked to take part in the discussion about the idea." Well, as a co–sponsor of this motion, I can distinctly recall a meeting I had with Speaker Dan Castellano three weeks ago to discuss the proposal.

Furthermore, a motion I introduced to the Senate to construct a committee to examine the procedures for the creation of caucuses was overwhelmingly rejected by the Senate one week prior to the Nov. 8 motion to create a Woman's Caucus. This committee was intended to be comprised of women from the Senate, including involvement by SGA President Christine Lopes.

In the same statement, Rivera questioned why the SGA "leadership" was not informed of this motion. I'm sorry. I forgot that the "leadership" had to be informed of any and all legislation appearing before the Senate.

Rivera's subsequent claim that because I am a white male, I should not be introducing legislation to empower underrepresented groups on this campus is the most troubling assertation in the article. As one of those "well meaning white males" he sarcastically refers to throughout the piece, I am enraged that our own Trustee and the entire SGA Senate would reject a bill because of the race, gender and underlying motives of the makers of a motion designed to empower women on this campus.

Being involved with an individual who has ties with the Everywoman's Center, I have been gaining an increased knowledge concerning the troubles facing women on this campus. As a man, I realize I cannot directly relate to these problems. However, this is exactly the reason why I neglected to include specifics within my motion. My reason was primarily to create this body, and then allow the women interested in the caucus to create more detailed governing guidelines.

The Senate made it clear they were not going to allow a "group of well meaning white males" to empower students on this campus. The Senate, and our Trustee, should read up on representative democracy and understand gender, race and class will never have any bearing on my efforts to better students on this campus.

Bill Ramsey
Student Senator

Young column lacks humor (again)

To The Editor:

This letter is addressed to Evan Young himself.

You are such an original thinker. You're so free from modern social constraints. You really think you express original ideas that are somehow being silenced by our "multicultural P.C." society? Get real. You write the same garbage every week, and it's really quite tiresome. Most of what you write echoes mainstream American thought, in addition to reflecting the philosophical underpinning of hundreds of years of conquest, domination and exploitation.

The fact is, this country has consistently tried to subvert and murder only left wing political movements and thought. Ever heard of COINTELPRO? When was the last time the FBI genuinely tried to infiltrate and destroy the KKK? Well, the FBI has launched campaigns against peace activists, environmentalists, the American Indian movement, the Black Panthers and Martin Luther King's Southern Baptist Leadership Conference, to name a few.

Your little analogy the other week about the faster aliens with four legs versus the smarter aliens with their bigger brains was a transparent representation of your own belief in biological–determinism. ("Life in our Galactic Nation," Oct. 29), and I must add that it is apparent that the "space aliens" are meant to be the multicultural "others" that make you so uncomfortable, while the "humans" are the victimized white people like yourself.

You obviously need to be reminded that biological– determinism, an integral part of white– supremacy, and racism was a central belief in Nazi ideology. So stop whining about how people call you a Nazi when you express Nazi ideas. You constantly try to portray your "free speech" as having been stifled, when in fact a small number of people are merely using their own free speech to respond to the stupid things you say. Oh, you're such a victim. You're just another example of how the right–wing politikkkally– correct try to muzzle people for truthfully calling a racist person a racist.

In your most recent column, you wrote, "Screw the Indians. Let's not feel sorry for completely wiping them out because we had the guns. America belongs to us now." Hee–hee, snicker–snicker. Naturally, you try to make it seem like you really don't believe that — it's all just a joke.

But, indeed, nothing in that statement is inconsistent with every other column you've written for the Collegian. I bet you just like the way those words sound. The statement exemplifies the style you use in all of your columns: "we" vs. "them." As plain as day, you are writing to other white people ("we"), talking about people of color (and others you don't like to be around) in the third person.

So, if jokes are going to disguise hate speech and violent rhetoric, here's another joke everybody can laugh at: Idiot fascists should be lined up against a wall and then shot. Hah–huh. Do I really believe that? Of course I don't.

Okwa Fox Tree
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e–mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e– mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545–1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday November 16, 1995

Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 51

Jumping from show to show

If there was ever a week for a plethora of guests, this past week was it.

Arye Gross ("Ellen") made an appearance on "Friends" as Rachel's (Jennifer Aniston) date who suggests that Rachel tell Ross (David Schwimmer) exactly how she feels about him. Well, that confession ended with the long anticipated kiss. Now comes the real suspense ... will Ross dump Julie for Rachel?

Last week, "Seinfeld" managed to avoid the star–crossed Thursday line, but not wanting to be left out of the fun, Julia Louis–Dreyfus showed up on "The Single Guy" as Jonathan Silverman's girlfriend, Tina. Tina's penchant for danger gets to be a bit much for Johnny and he ends up leaving her on top of the Brooklyn Bridge. Incidentally, Louis–Dreyfus is married to "The Single Guy's" executive producer as well as fellow "Saturday Night Live" alum, Brad Hall.

"All In The Family's" Jean Stapleton showed up on "Caroline in the City" as Lea Thompson's favorite aunt. Trying to set her niece up, Stapleton sets Thompson up with a doctor (Peter Krause) and in the process, makes current boyfriend Del a little jealous. Not to be outdone, "In The House" welcomed Isabel Stanford ("The Jeffersons") as Jackie's ex–grandmother–in–law. "In The House" which airs Monday nights at 8:30 p.m. on NBC stars Debbie Allen and L.L. Cool J.

Shelley Long is still looking for a place to cool her heels after her recent attempts at a series failed and on

Turn to TV page 12

Getting Stuffed

For some people, Thanksgiving means gathering with family for a feast including a sumptuous turkey, homemade stuffing, mashed potatoes covered with gravy and pumpkin pie.

For others, Thanksgiving means taking time to reflect upon the things they are thankful for, donating canned food to homeless shelter or watching their home–town high school's football game.

Laura Stock

For most though, it is a combination of all the above, with perhaps a little extra — it all depends on how you celebrate and whom you celebrate with.

There is something intrinsically unique to Thanksgiving compared to all the rest of the national holidays. There is much more warmth and family closeness than on, say, the Fourth of July. Maybe it's being with the family that can make Thanksgiving such a different, if not bizarre, occasion.

I'm sure many of us on campus who have been apart from our extended families for a few months now will return with a slightly different perspective than in previous years. You may sit back in amazement, look at the folks passing around the gravy bowl and wonder, "Am I really related to these people?"

There is a bountiful supply of holiday movies that portray such feelings — disastrous Thanksgiving dinners where feuding family members won't sit next to each other, the food tastes horrible (maybe the dog jumped on the table and stole the turkey) and that happy holiday environment seems to get lost in the shuffle.

Take Holly Hunter in her latest Thanksgiving flick, Home For the Holidays. Her mother meddles in her already– troublesome life, her brother announces at dinner that he has married another man, causing quite a commotion and her crazy aunt wanders around, singing in a squeaky falsetto. All these traumas combined force Hunter to sneak upstairs to the bathroom to smoke a joint.

My trip home for the holidays isn't quite unique or funny enough to be made into a

Turn to THANKSGIVING page 13

THE HIGHS & LOWS OF AMERICA'S MOST TRADITIONAL HOLIDAY

Horror tales

Everybody had them. You know, those embarrassing moments of situations that you often find yourself at during a major family holiday. Call them what you want, but there is at least one Thanksgiving dinner you will have engraved in your head as the best ... and the one that with years of psychotherapy you'll remember as the worst.

Tara MK Connelly
Arts & Living Editor

Best: Having a family we were really close to over for Thanksgiving dinner a looong time ago. There were eight people plus our five. There was this insane amount of food not only because there was so many people, but because they were Italian and had like a ham, five pasta dishes etc. etc. We had leftovers until Christmas.

Worst: The year my grandmother passed away the day before Thanksgiving. I remember coming home from school with my brother an sister being all happy about vacation and then hearing that she was dying as soon as we stepped into the house and noticed Mom wasn't there.

Laura Stock
Arts Associate

Turn to STORIES page 13

A new take on history

OK, you've heard it a thousand times already. Yup, it's the feel–good story of how Thanksgiving became a great American tradition. We all know that the Pilgrims came across the Atlantic on the Mayflower to escape religious persecution in 1620. They landed on Plymouth Rock and almost did not survive the first winter.

Seema Gangatirkar

Then the Pilgrims turned to the Native Americans for help. That year, they had a bountiful harvest and decided to have a massive celebration to give thanks. They invited their new friends, the Native Americans, to dinner and a three. Everyone was so excited that they decided to do it every year.

That's what the history books say anyway.

It's true that the Pilgrims and Native Americans decided to sit down for dinner, but while the women were cooking up turkeys, pumpkin pies and cranberry sauces, the men decided to spend some quality time together and bond.

Of course, a Committee was

Turn to HISTORY page 13

Layout & Design by: Marni E. Helfner & Tara MK Connelly • Collegian Art By: Sean Cahoon

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"The media gave us the power. Now they can't take it away." — Naomi Campbell on Supermodels

"Thanks to my parents who tried to teach me unselfishness. It didn't work, although I admire them immensely for it." — in Nice Boy by George Veltri

"Most people separate their meals into three a day — or five a day. But I sort of make it one big continuous feast." — John Popper, lead singer of Blues Traveler

People and Pop Culture in the News

Looking to see where the sexiest man in the world (Brad Pitt of course) will show up next? Try co-starring with Jason Patric, Robert DeNiro and Dustin Hoffman in Sleepers.

Elizabeth Hurley is following in the footsteps of fellow Supermodel Cindy Crawford by starring in a as-yet-untitled film currently shooting in Africa. Can she redeem the damage Crawford did with Fair Game? Better yet, can she read cue cards with more emotion than a wooden Tikki idol?

You gotta love E! (you'd probably love it more if the Valley actually got it). Their newest show is the "US Magazine's Hot Zone" a show about the latest fashions, the trendiest places and the coolest people. Premieres Dec. 17 at 6 p.m.

Like Meryl Steep, there isn't anything Gérard Depardieu wouldn't do. Add wine maker to his many lists of accomplishments as the French actor owns a 135-acre vineyard somewhere in France. Depardieu is producing a special Chateau de Tinge that will only be available in the restaurant chain.

Do you know anyone who would fight over Maculay Caulkin besides his parents? Now that he's in the rebellious/awkward teen years, the young actors has decided to stop acting and dyed his hair magenta. Hate to see what the actress in Curly Sue might do when she hits 13.

The hottest Hollywood designer appears to be Gucci. Celebrities like Sharon Stone, Nicole Kidman and Lenny Kravitz all flock to the designers house of couture.

Jason Lee, the co-star of the cultish flick Mallrats is taking to success like a fish to water. Aside from Mallrats he was last seen as a skateboarder in Spike Jonze's Sonic Youth Video "100 Percent." He recently wed aspiring actress Carman Lewallen, founded a skateboard company and is now writing a screen play.

Coolio's "Gangsta Paradise" is hitting the top of the charts in just about every country in the world. Reports have it that the rapper is having children named after him in Luxembourg. Also making headlines is the release of Freddie Mercury's final album with Queen Made In Heaven.

And if you are looking for a little intellectual pursuit than what not checkout Patrick Stewart's performance in the well known Shakespeare play The Tempest. Playing at the Public Theater for the New York Shakespea're Festival. Material for this column was taken from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Book — Dating With Success

Those of you who have been having trouble in the dating game — rejoice.

There's a new book titled Dating With Success: Proven Methods & Practical Suggestions for those of you who are looking specific and useful answers about dating.

So if you're wondering if it's polite to chew with your mouth open on the first date, forget Miss Manners and turn to Dating With Success. The book offers 35 first date do's & don'ts along with answers to the 50 toughest questions on dating.

The book, written by Jon Riggle, Joe Preller and Mike Breschi, talks about how to date in a safe and responsible manner. Best of all, it provides keys to getting exactly what you want and feeling just ducky about the whole dating thing.

Forget the personals and turn to Dating With Success instead. Hey, it can only be an improvement.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Video — Apollo 13

Blast off again with Tom Hanks, Kevin Bacon and Gary Sinise on November 24 when Apollo 13 gets released on video.

Thanksgiving weekend is fast becoming one of the biggest release dates in the film industry. So it's no wonder that one of the summer's highest grossing films, Apollo 13, hits the video store next week.

History is reenacted by the directorial talents of Ron Howard, who did not use any of NASA's stock footage when making the movie. Howard's method, though, still provides the movie with an authenticity that brings baby- boomers back in time, remembering the near tragedy that occurred in space.

Apollo 13 has also been touted as an educational film, which, though it is dramatically entertaining, teaches younger viewers about an important event in history. Rent it next weekend for your family get together.

— Laura Stock

Food — Cider

That time of year is upon us again. When the weather is cool and the sweaters are out, there better be some apple cider in the fridge. Cider adds a little bit of New England charm to any autumn get-together.

When you buy your cider, you have to be careful, though. There are two types out there on the market. First, there is the good, hearty "chunky" kind. You know what I'm talking about. It comes most often in containers that resemble gallon milk jugs. It combines excellent flavor and a wonderful texture to provide the drinker with a unique experience, especially when warmed and spiced.

On the other hand, there is also the awful, thin, "apple juice in disguise" type cider. It usually comes in the same glass jars as apple juice and the only way to tell the two apart is by the labels. Keep away from this inferior cider at all costs if you want to enjoy your meal.

—Mark McGrath

Arts & Living... ...the best of everything!
MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN • 113 CAMPUS CENTER • 545-1361

• THE MEADOWS • COMPLETELY ENCLOSED AND HEATED FOR THE WINTER SEASON • THE MEADOWS •
HARTFORD
The Meadows MUSIC THEATRE
NATALIE MERCHANT
TIGERLILY TOUR
SATURDAY DEC. 16 8 PM
With Special Guest
The Innocence Mission
Pick up Natalie's solo debut, Tigerlily, featuring "Carnivel" On Elektra compact discs and Digalog cassettes
http://www.elektra.com
© 1995 Elektra Entertainment Group a division of Warner Communications Inc A Time Warner Company
WHITE ZOMBIE
RAMONES & into another
SATURDAY • DECEMBER 2 • 7:30 PM
Reserved seats available at STRAWBERRIES MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES (cash only) located in CT & W. MASS: and at Extra Extra News & Info, 825 Main St., Hrtfd; M-F 6am-5pm; Sat 7am-5pm.
Budweiser THIS BUD'S FOR YOU
or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX 203-422-0000
NEWS 93
NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility gates. No refunds. No exchanges. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change
people's bank Member FDIC

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
HISTORY CAREER NIGHT DEPARTMENT
WHAT TO DO WITH A BA IN HISTORY?
Rock Star? Gun - Runner For A Cell Of Urban Guerillas? Arctic Explorer? Steamboat CAptain? Empress?
DATE: THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1995
TIME: 4:00 PM - 6:00 PM
LOCATION: HERTER 601 LOUNGE

Carfin Barton	Director Of Undergraduate Studies, Moderator
Susan Hammond	Mather Career Center, Assistant Director, Career Education
William Johnston	Director Of Graduate Admissions
Beth Terhune	Project Manager In Software Industry
Mark Brennen	Attorney At Law
Steve Brewer	Massachusetts State Representative
Suzanne Wilson	Staff Writer, Hampshire Life Magazine
Kristina Lentz Judd	University Fund Raising & Alumni Relations

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY
For more information, please contact : Mather Career Center - 545 - 2224
Refreshments Served - All Students Are Welcome

~ MOVIES ~

Interview with a Greek goddess

Aphrodite star Mira Sorvino talks about life in a Woody's world

By Jon Lupo
Special to the Collegian

Ladies and gentlemen, meet the Next Big Thing: Mira Sorvino. It's true, she's the daughter of Paul (Goodfellas) Sorvino, and yes, she's the one garnering the most consistent praise in Woody Allen's latest comic opus, Mighty Aphrodite. And if she doesn't quite look familiar as Aphrodite's bottle blonde hooker/porn actress, hold that thought. Sorvino has found in Mighty Aphrodite not only a lock on an Oscar nomination, but more importantly, her breakthrough role. You don't need the Psychic Friends Network to know that this woman is going to be a star.

But like all such "overnight successes," the road to Mighty glory is paved with many years of hard work. And up until a few years ago, Sorvino, 25, was working nights as a bartender. That was before hitting her stride with a string of art house work, including perfecting a Castellan tongue for Whit Stillman's Barcelona and the female lead in the Long Island gangster picture Amongst Friends. Not to mention her recent appearances on the "Masterpiece Theater" production of The Buccaneers, Showtime's Parallel Lives, Wayne Wang's star-laden Blue in the Face and her most prominent role, that of Rob Morrow's wife in Robert Redford's Quiz Show.

COURTESY BRIAN HARRELL
Mira Sorvino in Might Aphrodite

Sitting in a private ante room at the Four Seasons hotel last month, the seemingly endlessly talented Sorvino blushes a bit as I go over her resume. It's the only moment in my interview that Sorvino projects less than utter confidence. But I have a feeling I've misread her; she gives that look again, only this time followed by a shudder and a request to turn up the heat in the room. So much for my perceptive skills.

But I guess it serves me right, trying to puzzle out an actress known for completely losing herself in the characters she plays. From her adept Streep-esque accent mastering to chameleon-like shift in look and attitude, Sorvino has more than proven herself as an actress who sees roles not as types or stepping stones, but individual brush strokes in a career canvas she intends to continue to expand. And by the looks of it, Mighty Aphrodite will be the role that will serve as Sorvino's Hollywood calling card for quite a while. But what's so special about Aphrodite's Linda Ash?

"I was really fortunate because the script revealed itself to be just about the greatest dumb blonde role written in the past 25 years, if not ever. And besides, if Woody knocks only your door, you open it, unless you want to pass up a great opportunity," Sorvino said.

Sorvino didn't take this chance lightly. To prepare for her role, the actress "lived" in her role for a weekend in Philadelphia, complete with tight pink sweater and dangerously high heels. Sorvino roamed around the subway and coffeehouses, paying keen attention to how people interacted with Linda.

"The ironic thing is that people responded better to her than to me, although I am her. They talked to her as if she was stupid, but they liked her. I'm not as free as her, so it was quite a release for me," Sorvino said.

Sorvino credits her creation of Linda's now trademark high-octave voice as one of the things that not only helped her get the role, but eventually to distinguish Linda from the other screen bimbos.

"I created her own syntax, her own way of talking. It's part of who she is," she said. "Other than that, I kept one motto in my head to get into Linda's character: 'TF — Tits Forward!'"

The actress kept in character for most of Aphrodite's four- month shoot, and says she was initially nervous that her Method style would be a problem for the no-nonsense Allen. Coupled with that, she says, was her long-standing adulation for the director.

"I was very intimidated by the situation to begin with. He's a great writer and filmmaker. I used to read his books, like 'Without Feathers' and 'Getting Even.' I actually used 'Getting Even' when I was in England working on The Buccaneers as a way of tearing myself up when I needed to start laughing when I wasn't in a particularly happy mood.

"I would read passages out loud in my trailer to the makeup woman and within a few moments, we'd both be cracking up. I told [Woody] that at one point and he was very pleased. But I just came in worried that I wouldn't be able to accomplish the task. He didn't make me feel that way. He was very encouraging. At one point he was sensitive to that he told me, 'relax, you've got the job'."

One point Sorvino is adamant about is that she didn't get the job — or any other job — because of her famous father. For daughter Mira, the road to acting success was one

Turn to INTERVIEW, page 9

Allen's latest overly whimsical leaving characters, plot behind

By Jon Lupo
Special to the Collegian

MIGHTY APHRODITE
Directed by Woody Allen
With Woody Allen, Mira Sorvino, Helena Bonham-Carter, Michael Rapaport
Playing at The Academy of Music

Sloppy and pedestrian are not two words usually associated with the films of Woody Allen. But they're a pair of apt descriptions that kept coming to mind while watching Allen's latest picture, the whimsically titled Mighty Aphrodite.

In fact, the cleverest thing about the film is it's title and the last thing it needs is more whimsy. But the time the film's Greek chorus starts belting out it's second musical number, no amount of smart one-liners can save this clunker. Not that it was very funny to begin with — certainly every Woody Allen picture has its chuckles, but when was the last Allen film that featured such a bevy of non-characters, dead-end scenes and one staggeringly lame-o ending? (Three words: Shadows and Fog).

The fact that Allen fails not in the drippy smoke and mirrors of undergraduate German Expressionist term paper but on his own home turf is even more upsetting. Narrated by a Greek Chorus (led by Amadeus' F. Murry Abraham and Moonstruck's Olympia Dukakis), Mighty Aphrodite follows a New York sportswriter (Allen) married to an aspiring gallery owner (Helena Bonham-Carter) who adopts a child.

When the marriage starts to sour, Allen seeks out the birth mother with the idea that the woman who made such a smart and charming kid would have some of those same qualities. She turns out to be Linda Ash (Quiz Show's Mira Sorvino), a dim hooker and sometimes porn actress. What follows is Allen's attempts at reforming and refining Linda, including setting her up with an even more dumb suitor, a onion-farming boxer played by Michael Rapaport.

Despite its admittingly funny moments, this is the first Woody Allen picture to flub both on the big and small details. The marriage between Allen and Bonham-Carter is barely sketched out — coming after such devastating (Husbands and Wives) and sweetly comic (Manhattan Murder Mystery) portraits of couples, this one is surprisingly bland and sketchy. And the best he could do with the birth mother is the rather obvious choice of a hooker ... with a heart of gold? Sorvino is OK in the role (I think she's garnering the tags of "brilliance" more by default; she's the only one doing anything in the movie) — it's the character that's transparent, and Sorvino does her best to give her personality.

Furthermore, Allen's skin-deep characters leave good actors hanging with nowhere to go. Besides Bonham-Carter, poor Peter Weller (stuck in the Alan Alda role of the predatory other man) has noting to do, and Rapaport keeps lingering at the end of his scenes as if he wants to make more of his debut in an Allen movie. The Greek chorus idea starts off good (especially if you know your Greek drama and mythology) but grinds into irritating Mel Brooksian dopiness. It's an idea that seemed better suited to the short stories Allen used to write for the New Yorker; here, it merely overstays its welcome.

However, one of the best things about being a Woody Allen fan is that no bad Allen movie can linger long — the director's prolific filmmaking allows little clunkers like this to fester. The fact that Allen's next movie is a musical (!) with Julia Roberts, Tim Roth, Drew Barrymore and Bette Midler (reportedly titled Annie Oz) kept me hopeful even as Mighty Aphrodite dashed them for this current Allen picture. Despite what some critics are carping (when Roger Ebert called Aphrodite one of Allen's "best and most ingenious comedies," I kept wondering what kind of crack, exactly, was Roger smoking while viewing), Mighty Aphrodite is not a good movie. Sloppy and pedestrian it is. C

Jon Lupo is the former Collegian film editor.

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities office presents: Something Every Friday a weekly series of events.
Coming this Friday.

Comedian Clinton Jackson followed by the Film
"Dangerous Minds"
Blue wall November 17th
8pm Free 545-3600
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs. Sign up 545-3600
Refreshments Will Be Served

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS
ATTENTION ENGINEERS!!
We can offer you the opportunity of a lifetime.
Graduate with . . .
Experience
References
The Competitive Edge
Paid Co-op positions available with . . .
Digital
Open Software Foundation
Monsanto
Microsoft
IBM
Contact the Field Experience Program at 545-6265.
Don't delay.
Your future could be at stake.

~ MUSIC ~

Erasure's back with mediocre album, Built to Spill brilliant EP

ERASURE
Erasure
Elektra

Erasure's favorite synth-pop duo, Erasure have returned to the music scene with their new eponymous album — "Abba-esque the most (at least year)" rather underrated and disappointing (July 11th) release. Perhaps as a response to that album's lukewarm reception in America, Erasure finds the band's emphasis falling away from their usual disco-mania and instead, collectively, simply, in that order, musically resemble the human brain. The result, unfortunately, is a somewhat confusing album — alternately funky and melancholy, soulful and sad, underrated and overdone, and often quite frustrating.

The album begins promisingly enough with the techno-granular thumper "Stay With Me Tonight Feeling" one of the few tracks that would legitimately work as a club song. However, things really sound more like a neat intro, and soon drift into "Rendezvous Me," an inoffensive but unimaginative hunk about naive conquering one's inner demons.

Following tracks really seem to be the exception here, as nothing on this album is particularly bad, but there is absolutely nothing here to emotionally involve the listener — the exceptions are "Sono Luminous" and "Rock Me Gently," on which Andy Bell actually tenderly takes on a tender and sensitive tone. Even on "Sono Luminous," the effect is undone by stretching the song to a whopping unnecessary ten minutes, with Bell's beautiful, vulnerable vocals being yet another in a long of worthless noodling by Vince Clarke.

Clarke also receives great respect for his outstanding ability to produce a multitude of amazing sounds and songs from his synthesizer (which alone — a talent rounding 80s mimic with Depeche Mode and Yazoo. For the uvula, Erasure fanboy alcoholic Clarke's style is fine, but time can't help wondering if a more delicate touch might have been better suited for some of the potentially lovely ballads on Erasure.

Clarke and Bell have a loyal following, deservedly built up over a decade of hitmaking, and Erasure fans will find something to enjoy here. But even they, already somewhat unfamiliar with the band's unrelenting synthetic sound, may find this album dragging a bit wanting, and at 72 minutes, a bit long as well. C (Josh Wardrop)

Andy Bell and Vince Clarke of Erasure

COURTESY HERB KNOLL

BUILT TO SPILL CAUSTIC RESIN
Built to Spill Caustic Resin EP
Up

Trax On Trax Off

If Trax On here the new Built To Spill EP, which after releasing two stellar albums on Up and C/Z, Doug Marnich and gang are back this time with their pals from their hometown Boise Idaho, Caustic Resin.

At first glance this is a mere four song EP, but sprawled over 26 minutes this collaboration contains some of the purest guitar pop gems your ears are likely to come across. The opening tune, "When Not Being Simple Is Not Enough" is an epic piece clocking in at nine and a quarter minutes — not a moment too short. The sound sung "One Thing" is a monster tune that leaves the unthinkable often heard on Mamach's tunes.

"Get Better Eyes," written by Caustic Resin is a mediocre track that fails to stand out amongst the Built To Spill tunes, the final track a cover of Kicking Giants "She's Real" is an absolute classic tune, one of the best cover songs in recent memory. Like any great cover song it knows off the greatness of both bands simultaneously, but

The Softies

COURTESY K RECORDS

Turn to TRAX, page 13

STEVEN KELLOGG BAND
Rain Summer
Self-Released

Rain and summer are two words that when combined conjure up thoughts of relaxation, days trapped inside with opportunities and frantic searches for cover when the skies freeze. Rain/summer is a culmination of all that can be admitted up on days such as these. The songs are examinations of pent-up emotion given a chance to grow with summer rain.

With two albums behind them and a planned live one in the way, the prolific Steven Kellogg is succeeding in making a name for themselves throughout New England. Their second album, Summer Rain is a step forward in terms of production, approaching its raw emotion and insight.

The 16 songs on the album seem tied together by a common thread woven throughout the bane of the songs. At times they seem to convey a mutual mould or emotion, the most experimental in the aftermath of an unseemly break-up.

Kellogg's personal narrative provides an intimate atmosphere that is thrown by the absence of memorable melodies and finely developed riffs. Tracks like "Colorado Sings We've Sung" with its eerie slide guitar and the evocative "Lady Sunflower" highlight the album with their refined song structure and inspired instrumentation.

However a lack of experimentation and varied sound tend to harm the album's overall character. Perhaps a greater implementation of the eclectic assortment of instruments found on their first album would have enhanced many of the songs which share a similar flavor. This aspiring Mass quartet is talented and seem eager to please, yet they lack diversity and distinction in the rhythm and style of their tunes.

The ambition and drive evident in the Steven Kellogg Band's second release behind their debut, Invest In Us, provides proof that sometimes that good things are awarded to those for fans who have already "invested." The band is playing tonight at the Van Meter Coffee House. B- (Michael McCluskey)

THE SOFTIES
It's Love
K

Simple. Pure. Minimal. Beautiful. Like sitting on a taxi with a friend one, the Softies bring out all the great little things in life. Featuring Rose Melberg and Ian Sibraga, the Softies' taxis music back to its bare minimum. Strap on bass and mini guitars. Sound boring? Hardly, especially when the voices are as angelic as these.

Since the breakup of the highly esteemed Tiger Trap, Melberg has very herself busy as a member of Go Sailor and the Softies. While Go Sailor explores the familiar pure pop soundsoul of Tiger Trap, the Softies takes the music on a more basic level.

Songs like "I Love You More," "It's Love," "Empire Dirt Crush" and "Charms Around Your Wrist" provide prime examples of the songs' focus. The songs are from the heart

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

ANACAONA CULTURAL CENTER
Located in the basement of Thatcher in Northeast
OUR OFFICE HOURS ARE
MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, THURSDAYS 1:00 - 5:00 PM
AND TUESDAYS 3:00 - 5:00 PM.
IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS PLEASE CONTACT THE CENTER AT 545-4387 OR CONTACT SHARLEY BASSETH AT 546-3433
"Come and experience the flavors of Africa and it's Carribean Diaspora!"

YOU'LL BE "THANKFUL" FOR ALL THE SAVINGS AT...
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS

BUDWEISER CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $14.39 + DEP	WINE OF THE MONTH CHATEAU STE MICHELLE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $8.99 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $6.99	CANADIAN CLUB WHISKEY SALE $15.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $10.99
KILLIANS RED CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $15.99 + DEP	WINE OF THE MONTH COLUMBIA CREST CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $6.49 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.99 SEMILLON-CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.49	SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.49
Miller CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $11.49 + DEP		BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK SALE $13.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $10.99
GENESEE CREAM ALE, ICE & RED CASE OF 30-PACK CANS 30 PACK SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP	FRANZIA BLUSH, BURGUNDY, CHABLIS, CHENIN, FRENCH COLOMBARD, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE 5.0 LT BAG-IN-BOX $6.59	DEWARS $24.99
PETE'S WICKED ALE, LAGER, RED, HONEY WHEAT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES SALE $17.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $12.99 + DEP	GALLO RESERVE CELLARS WHITE ZINFANDEL, SAUVIGNON BLANC, WHITE GRENACHE, JOHANISBERG RIESLING, CLASSIC BURGUNDY 1.5L $5.49	JIM BEAM $12.29
BECKS CASE OF 2-12PK BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP	KENDALL JACKSON CHARDONNAY 750 ML $8.49	KAHLUA 750 ML $11.99
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS CUBED $12.89 + DEP		BAILEYS IRISH CREAM & LIGHT 750 ML $13.99
SAM ADAMS WINTER LAGER 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP	MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML SALE $7.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $5.99	SEAGRAM 7 WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 FINAL COST $7.99
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, LT, ICE, ICE HOUSE, RED DOG, MICHELOB, LT, & DK., LITE $39.99 + DEP	FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT 750 ML SALE $4.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $3.49	GLENFIDDICH SINGLE MALT SCOTCH 750 ML $17.49
O'DOULS NON-ALCOHOLIC CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $12.49 + DEP	PAUL MASSON ALL FLAVORS 3.0L $6.49
COKE, DIET COKE & SPRITE 2.0L 99¢ + DEP	BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99	BEEFEATER GIN 1.75L $19.99

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/16/95 THRU WEDS. 11/29/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

■ interview

continued from page 7

with many detours, including a stay at the nation's top university, Harvard.

"My father had nothing to do with me getting into the business. It started in high school with a talent scout who was looking for girls who could act and ride for a film called Sylvester. I got called-back, but I didn't get the role. But it was positive enough feedback for me to get a manager. [My father] always discouraged me from getting into the business. So when I got into college, he was very excited that I was going to Harvard. There was no question that I was going to go, for me and my parents, since neither of them finished school and to have their oldest daughter going to school was a big deal for them. For me too."

At Harvard, Sorvino majored in Chinese studies and spent a year in China. While there, she dabbled in the performing arts, including a job singing in two jazz bands and on native television.

"I loved it there. I wasn't just interested in acting, although I thought it's what I wanted to do with my life. But I was 99 percent sure there was one part of me that thought, 'uh, maybe it's because my dad is in the business' and I wanted to explore other things. So I gave myself the opportunity and found I came back to acting with more resolve than ever."

"At that point in my live, [my father's] involvement in my life was purely in a mentor/ teacher level, not at all on a 'connections'-based level. I went for years without an agent, I just had my manager, the same one I picked up in high school. The combination of getting my third feature on my own without an agent, the buzz from Amongst Friends which was about to hit and a screen test I did for Disney got me an agent."

The roles in Quiz Show, Barcelona and The Buccaneers followed, leading to Sorvino's cameo in Blue in the Face and finally Mighty Aphrodite. In actuality, however, it wasn't the natural succession it appears to be. Because Sorvino's main talent comes from the ability to completely inhabit different characters, the actress says she has had trouble with people — mainly casting directors and filmmakers — remembering her from film to film. Sorvino claims that at first Woody Allen was reluctant to see her for the part in Aphrodite because he had only seen her in Barcelona and thought she was actually Spanish.

"It happens to me all of the time," Sorvino said. "Once I was seated next to Quentin Tarantino at a screening of Blue in the Face. We were talking and halfway through my scene in the movie, he turned to me and went, 'that's you?'"

Her run in with Tarantino not only provided her with an instant fan, but taught her a lesson about the prickly price of fame.

"I saw how Quentin was accosted by people. It was unbelievable. Everywhere he went, people were saying, 'Hey Quentin, can I have your autograph?' and he'd be like, 'I'm just having a nice day here, but how about a handshake instead?' He would shake people's hands but didn't want to be signing things all the time. I thought he handled it very well, but people would really get in his face. They would not leave him alone; everyone acted a bit like they owned him."

"I don't imagine reaching that level of fame, but it bothers me, the idea that other people change because you're famous. I would see that when I was a kid and my family would go to Disneyland and my father would be mobbed by tourists. They wouldn't be themselves — they would be these strange, autograph-grubbing people. They were either over-impressed or frightened by his celebrity and then he couldn't get to know them as them. On the other hand, I think I may be lucky in that I continue to have that face that no one quite recognizes on screen."

Woody Allen seen here in Husbands and Wives

COURTESY BRIAN HAMILL

Don't count on it. Sorvino has two films already in the can — Sweet Nothing, about a couple who dabbles in drug dealing, was intriguingly based upon a journal found under a sink in an abandoned apartment and Beautiful Girls, where the actress plays an anorexic opposite Matt Dillon. Also, Sorvino has just inked a deal to play Marilyn Monroe in a cable movie later this year. She has high hopes not only for these roles, but for her future careers.

"I know this doesn't happen often, but I really want my performances to reach the level of art. There are artists who have done that to me, and I want to do that for others."

Spoken like a true Next Big Thing.

Reason to stay a Supermodel

Baldwin tries to pick up slack, Cindy needs acting classes

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

FAIR GAME
Directed by Andrew Sipes with William Baldwin, Cindy Crawford
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

A ponytailed woman is visible through the glaring yellow sunrise, as she jogs across the beach in running shorts and a skimpy little tank top. It looks as if any second David Hasselhoff will come sprinting down the shore, fluorescent orange rescue tube in hand — but not even "Baywatch" would stoop to the level of acting that Fair Game plummets to.

Supermodel Cindy Crawford does not move as gracefully into the acting biz as she does when she's strutting down runways of the latest Calvin Klein show. Being the highest paid supermodel in the industry, you'd think Crawford could buy herself some acting lessons — but alas, she merely relies upon her days of reading cue cards on MTV's "House of Style" as experience behind the camera.

Remember Elizabeth Berkley in Showgirls? Crawford's acting, er, talents are comparable to that of Berkley's, except (sorry, guys) Cindy does not get the least bit naked in Fair Game.

The game that Crawford and Baldwin are playing is one similar to Die Hard: With a Vengeance meets Pelican Brief. Young and beautiful, but not too brainy lawyer Kate McQuean (Crawford) gets shot at and gets her house bombed by KGB terrorist group.

Sliver and Backdraft Baldwin boy, William, plays McQuean's knight in shining armor, Detective Kirpatrick. Usually known for successfully combining a sense of humor with his sexy, dramatic attitude, Baldwin's performance is brought down a level by his inexperienced co-star.

With the impending danger on McQuean's life, she is forced to stay with Kirpatrick as the two slowly unravel the mystery of who is trying to kill her, and why. The death toll rises up to Rambo proportions, as the two airheads take forever to figure out how the KGB's sophisticated equipment is tracking their every move.

Crawford's unnatural acting (high-pitched voice, everything said with a false smile) is not the only thing unbelievable in this film. Why the KGB would have any problems killing a flaky civil law attorney is questionable.

What is even more preposterous, however, is that once they find her, they change their minds about flat-out killing her and devise some elaborate murder scheme instead.

McQuean and Kirpatrick are not intelligent enough to outsmart the KGB, they are just lucky. And, of course, conveniently falling in love with each other. Puh-lease

Crawford's utter lack of talent may generate a few giggles from the audience, but evokes no other sentiments whatsoever. Baldwin's feeble attempts as resurecting a tired storyline end near the beginning of the film — he gives up on this bomb, too.

Why filmmakers pushed back the release of Fair Game so many times is understandable, but did not help the movie one bit. Hollywood just isn't playing fair on this one. D

~ REVIEWS ~

Barber of Seville makes the Met Opera

By Mary Campbell
Associated Press

THE BARBER OF SEVILLE
The Metropolitan Opera House
Nov. 13

NEW YORK — Even with an uneven cast, Rosini's The Barber of Seville is fun, funny and musically delightful.

So when everyone sings superbly, acts like a seasoned farceur and is a team player — which describes the cast Monday night at the Metropolitan Opera — it makes for one of the most exhilarating evenings possible in the theater.

Making his Met debut in this first Barber of the season, baritone Claudio Desderi, playing the doctor who wants to marry his young ward, sang with warm tones in a musically serious way, while still effectively making himself a figure of fun.

Jennifer Larmore, who made a smashing Met debut last season as the ward Rosina, sang it again. She has lost nothing in characterization, coloratura flexibility or creamy tone. And she has gained in now being a familiar enough performer that the audience doesn't concentrate only on her.

Ramon Vargas was clear-voiced and rambunctious as Count Almaviva, who wins Rosina. And Roberto Frontali's voice rang, singing Figaro, the self-confident barber who pulls some strings.

Stephanie Blythe performed the housekeeper's aria so well she received notable applause.

Another standout was the stage direction by Paul Mills, who cleverly moved his singers around during a long sextet and managed to insert sudden stillness in a wild, farcial scene.

Met titles helped the cast get several laughs, as when Figaro congratulates the Count by saying, "Your cheese fell right on the spaghetti," and when the music teacher, who'd been threatened with a gun, says he doublecrossed the doctor because "there are certain offers you can't refuse."

A MASKED BALL
The Metropolitan Opera House
Nov. 12

NEW YORK — It's delightful to hear an exciting new singer at the opera, and just as nice to see an accomplished singer take on a comfortable old role in an exciting new way.

Sharon Sweet has sung Amelia in Verdi's A Masked Ball at the Metropolitan Opera before, but Friday night, in the first Masked Ball of this season, she sang it with tonal beauty and so many fine shadings of emotion that she made Amelia interesting and vital.

Amelia can rather fade into the background, though she has a lot to sing. She's the wife of the king of Sweden's best friend, and she and the king have fallen in love. They each vow to stay apart and they sing passionately about fighting their love in their one scene together. But her husband, who walks into that scene, decides they've committed adultery and murders the king, at a masked ball.

Paolo Gavanelli sang the husband, sounding secure, a bit strident, older than his wife and primarily concerned what other people think. He does briefly mention that he loves his wife.

Francisco Araiza sang the king, with a youthful, pleasing tone, forceful when he's being resolute, melting when he's thinking about Amelia. He's a fine Verdi tenor.

Dolora Zajick as Ulrica, the fortune teller who prophesies the king's murder, made her low notes meaningful without ever becoming guttural. Elizabeth Norberg-Schulz made her Met debut as the king's page. Her high coloratura was pleasing but she seemed to swallow her low notes.

The staging of the chorus in Ulrica's scene was effectively grand. Mark Elder conducted with care for musical unity.

Verdi sometimes wrote tinkling, frivolous-sounding music, to which serious matters are sung. And he ended this opera, with everybody kneeling to pray, with a soaring, sublime melody. (M.C.)

WANTED:

The Collegian is looking for a librarian. This is a paid position which involves a minimum time commitment of five hours per week. If you have questions or are interested in an application, please contact Marni F. Helfner at 545- 0719 or come down to the Collegian Offices at 113 Campus Center.
We are accepting applications until Friday, November 17.
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

Collegian Classifieds...
...They Work!
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Now Only Local Engagements
Showings at 7 & 9pm thru Nov 23
The New Comedy from Woody Allen
...and the goofiness is almost magical."
"Mira Sorvino Is A Perfect Fit: she squeezes into her role as if it were a pair of hot pants...she is too much fun to miss."
MIGHTY APHRODITE
MIRAMAX
ACADEMY of MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

LATINO SUPPORT GROUP
This group will deal with issues of identity facing Latinos as living or attending college in the mainland USA. Living in a culture where Latinos are viewed as a "minority" will be discussed in the context of how it affects Latinos self perception.
This will be a drop-in group held every week.
UMASS Campus Center
(Check schedule board for room number)
Wednesdays beginning November 8
and running until April.
3:30 - 5:00 PM
ANYONE WHO IDENTIFIES AS:
• Latino/ born in Mexico, South/Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or the Dominican Republic.
• is first generation (meaning born here is the USA from Latino parent(s)
• is of Latino heritage
IS WELCOME TO ATTEND.
Please call 545-2337 to register.
The group will be conducted in English or Spanish depending on membership.

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu for 2 Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Why Is This Man Celebrating?
He just took advantage of Bueno Y Sano's special discount. Try us and you will see why our healthy food is the most talked about in the area.
Bueno Y Sano
(GOOD AND HEALTHY)
1 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST, MA • 253-4000

Now Open
Amherst Barbers
Unisex Hair Stylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across from the Old Town Hall off the Common)
$8 and up
Hours: Mon - Wed 8-5:30
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-3
Proprietors:
Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini
Formerly Of University Barbers
Jim Terri

Martina serves one up; McGuire's not so hot

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

CHRISTINE MCGUIRE
Until Justice Is Done
Pocket Star Books

Christine McGuire's latest novel, Until Justice Is Done, is a sequel to last year's bestseller, Until Proven Guilty. Last time, Kathryn McKay was chasing after a serial murderer. This time around, in a slightly different scenario, the ambitious deputy district attorney is going after a brutal serial rapist.

Until Proven Guilty is a taut, suspense thriller, with plenty of action and fiery dialogue. This time around, the plot feels recycled as Kathryn continues to struggle with the killer combination of single mother and working woman.

As a serial rapist continues to strike, calling all his victims "little pigs," Kathryn works furiously with her friend Inspector Dave Granz to identify the rapist. Along the way, she is sidetracked by a personal tragedy and a series of vigilante killings. It's Detective Michael Gaines whose dogged pursuit of the rapist intensifies as he works with a determination that mystifies both Kathryn and Dave.

Like the previous novel, Until Justice Is Done explains the law, police procedure and autopsy details well. The reader is taken step by step through a medical examination.

Probably the best part of this book is Michael's investigation. His attention to detail and careful logic uncovers the rapist in the nick of time, not to mention revealing a great deal of how the police procedure works.

Unfortunately, while clear and concise, the story drags. None of the suspense that characterized the first novel is in this one. Michael's investigation takes a backseat to Kathryn and Dave's relationship until the second half of the book and McGuire practically gives away the ending several chapters before the actual conclusion.

Chances are if you've read Until Proven Guilty, you've pretty much read Until Justice Is Done also. C

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA WITH LIZ NICKLES
The Total Zone
Ballantine Books

Martina Navratilova has won more Grand Slam championships than any other female player in tennis history. Looking to define herself beyond tennis, Navratilova has served up The Total Zone, a dishy mystery novel that digs deep into the tennis world.

Audrey Armat is the latest tennis phenomenon who comes to physiotherapist Jordan Myles to achieve the total zone– where mind and body are in total harmony and winning is inevitable. Jordan, herself a former tennis champion, is instantly drawn to Audrey.

When Audrey disappears, Jordan takes it upon herself to find her. As the details of Audrey's troubled life begin to emerge, Jordan finds herself increasingly concerned about the young star.

Her search leads her to the tennis mecca of Wimbeldon, where Jordan is forced to confront the ghosts of her defunct tennis career as well as the terrible tragedies that soon overshadow the prestigious tournament.

The novel, co-written with Liz Nickles (Baby, Baby) is filled with wry observations of life and witty commentary, not to mention plenty of behind–the–scenes peeks into the tennis world. Jordan is a thoroughly likeable heroine and her sense of humor, even at the most trying times in the story, lifts the basic doom and gloom premise. Even though the story moves slowly at times, it's a decent attempt at a first novel and definitely worth a try. A

Collegian News
Your reason for living
(or maybe just your reason for reading the paper...)

Bones and Ash to play in Fine Arts Center

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The critically acclaimed theater group Urban Bush Women will present Bones And Ash: A Gilda Story in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall Saturday night at 8 p.m.

Using contemporary idioms and inter–disciplinary forms, the company has created numerous dance/theater works rooted in African–American folklore and spiritual traditions. Through movement, live music and a cappella vocalizations based on field hollers and chants, Urban Bush Women explores the struggle, growth, transformation survival of the human spirit and creates a powerful sense of community on stage that speaks to a broad audience.

Based on a novel by Jewelle Gomez entitled The Gilda Stories, Saturday's performance will feature dance, theater, spoken and sung text with original music and choreography.

The theme centers around the empowerment of women through history and the basic human need for belong to a family or another primary group. It also explores motifs of exploitation, power, discovery, mythology, loss and family

The story, which travels through time and space from New Orleans to San Francisco and Boston, tells the tale of a young woman who escapes from slavery in the New Orleans area and is taken in and raised by two women, one Creole and the other a Native American (who are lovers and vampires). These vampires do not kill their hosts. Instead they have a symbiotic relationship with their victims, where they trade visions and dreams for the blood substance they require. These vampires are nurturers, healers and sometimes warriors.

The theater group was established in 1984 by Artistic Director Jawole Willa Jo Zollar. Zollar, who was raised in Kansas City, was stepped from childhood in both sacred and secular aspects of popular Black culture. She began her dance training with Joseph Stevenson, a student of the legendary Katherine Dunham.

She has toured internationally and her work with Urban Bush Women has earned her five Dance Company grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and a fellowship from the New York Foundation for the Arts.

Among her many accomplishments, Zollar also choreographed "Shelter" for the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, which premiered in 1992.

Bones and Ashes: A Gilda Story promises to be an exciting, intriguing performance and should not be missed.

COURTESY FAC

Urban Bush Women

Tickets to this performance are $20, $15, $10 and $8 for children 16 and under. Five College student tickets are $5. For tickets and more information, please call the Fine Arts Box office at 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS

Loni Anderson's new tell-all book dishes the dirt on Burt

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Loni Anderson, star of "WKRP in Cincinnati," "The Nurses" and the tabloids, assumes a somber role in NBC's Monday night drama, "Deadly Family Secrets."

The suspense movie casts Anderson as a woman who witnesses a murder on the way to visit her sister (Gigi Rice) and new brother–in–law (Greg Evigan). Could her sister's husband be the killer? After Anderson testifies before a grand jury, more violence occurs.

"Besides being a thriller, it's a relationship between two women, and I like that," Anderson said at her home in a gated community off Mulholland Drive.

Anderson lives in the spacious house with attorney Geoffrey Brown, her son Quentin — adopted with ex–husband Burt Reynolds — and her son's nanny. Fittingly, nearly everything is blond: carpets, drapes, couches, staircase.

In addition to the NBC movie, Anderson has another production to talk about: her autobiography, "My Life in High Heels," just published in hardcover.

"What I wanted it to be is the growth of a woman, a woman who survives," she said. "It's about my childhood, the death of my parents, my career, my divorces and my children. Then of course, the trauma of my marriage to Burt.

"I tell everything. I had to wait two years so there was no anger, no bitterness. I think if you're going to write about yourself, you have to do it warts and all. You may not even tell the nicest things about yourself, because you're telling the truth."

How does Reynolds fare in the book?

"I don't know — truthfully. He's real. He's not a monster. And he's not always wonderful. He's a man with a lot of problems, and a man I like that," Anderson said at her home in a gated community off Mulholland Drive.

"I rest of the time, it was a working relationship that certainly had its deception — finding out that there had been another woman in it for most of our marriage. That was a shock. I would have bet any amount of money there was no other woman.

"There was pain. There was some abuse. There was drug addiction, on his part. There was always me trying to save it and feeling very empowered that I thought I could. And there was great love on my part."

Since the split, she said: "I can't help but feel I was in the relationship all by myself."

Ironically, one of her co–stars in the new NBC movie, Gigi Rice ("The John Larroquette Show"), had been an apprentice at Burt Reynolds' Jupiter Theater in Florida and had attended the wedding of Loni and Burt.

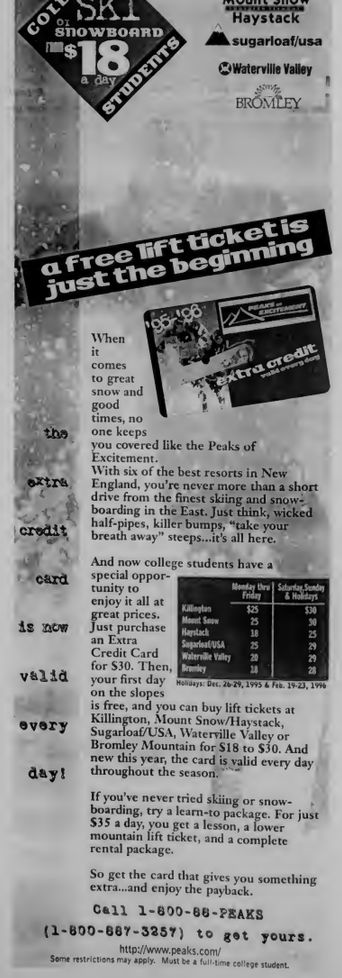
"Everybody said how much Gigi looked like me, and now she's playing my sister," Anderson said.

But after a welcome respite and some location shooting in Austin, Texas, for "Deadly Family Secrets," Anderson finds herself right back in the tabloids.

"It's just kind of never–ending. I just ignore it, unless they do something libelous. Well, it's all libelous," she said. "I ignore it unless they do something harmful, then I think you have to take action. Otherwise, I think it's just wrapping next week's garbage, and nobody remembers who was on the cover last week."

GO School yourself
The Presidents of the United States of America
"The Presidents Of The United States Of America"
Eve's Plum
"Cherry Alive"
G. Love & Special Sauce
"Coast To Coast Motel"
Jamiroquai
"The Return Of The Space Cowboy"
To school yourself on these great new albums, check out:
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/College
And hit your favorite record store, too!
YEAH! WHOA! WORK OKAY!

Available at
For The Record
in Downtown Amherst



COLLEGE SKI or SNOWBOARD $18 a day STUDENTS
Killington
Mount Snow
Haystack
sugarloaf/usa
Waterville Valley
BROMLEY
a free lift ticket is just the beginning
Extra credit
the extra credit card is now valid every day!
When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement.
With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.
And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.
Monday thru Friday / Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington $25 $30
Mount Snow 25 30
Haystack 18 25
Sugarloaf/USA 25 29
Waterville Valley 20 29
Bromley 18 28
Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996
If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.
So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.
Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

Trax

continued from page 8

Although somewhat repetitive, the redeeming qualities from Gilt are the personal lyrics and aggro melodies. Not quite as enjoyable as 1993's Concentration, it is nevertheless a pleasant listening experience. B– (Lisa M. Oliveri)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
A Slice Of Lemon
Kill Rock Stars/Lookout!

Look in the Various Artists section of your favorite record store and it will be flooded with compilations from every independent label imaginable from Bus Stop to Ba–Da–Bing to Bomp! Most are filled with a couple worthwhile tracks but overall they leave much to be desired.

A Slice Of Lemon is not your average album by any means. Spread over two albums or CDs, this compilation offers one of the best documents of the recent west coast punk and pop scenes. There may be no Rancids or Green Days here but that just adds to the fun.

The diversity of the album gives this compilation a boost above the competition. This is hardly filled with 40 bands that all sound the same. Take a listen to the punk rock sounds of the Mr. T Experience's "Adjective," or the cuddle core tunes of Cub's "Green Eyes" or the Dylan–esque folk of Mary Lou Lord's "Eternal Circle" and you will understand. Punk rock is not a sound it is an attitude that all of these artists share.

Other stand out tracks include "Hello Yucko" a near perfect pop song by Emily's Sassy Lime, "Silly" by Go Sailor and Pussycat Trash's "Wish Fulfillment" which definitely will delight any fans of Huggy Bear.

If 40 songs, by many of the key members of the west coast scene, is not enough, the compilation is priced to fit your budget. Two CDs or albums for the price of one. Try a slice of this lemon. A– (Mike Burke)

B.G. KNOCC OUT & DRESTA
Real Brothers
OutBurst

COURTESY OUTBURST

BG Knocc Out & Dresta

Yet another group jumps on the quickly fading "gangsta rap" bandwagon. B.G. Knocc Out & Dresta claim to fame is the fact that they are "actors," they have been though the Compton penal system. What they don't know is that to be a music artist, even a gangsta rapper, you need talent not just a criminal record.

Dresta is no rookie to the rap world, as he previously wrote a track for the late Eazy–E. Similar to so many gangsta rappers, this sibling duo attempts to use every expletive in the book all while singing about the same three regurgitated topics — chronic, hoes and glocks.

Even for a gangsta rap album this one is sub standard. Take away the lyrics and you are left with a decent Bass CD, that might actually sell. If you are into glorifying violence and enjoy hearing the word n*r as many times as humanly possible, you may be interested in wasting your money on these ex–convicts. Don't expect to hear this group's name again. F (Tino Martins)

7 Seconds brings punk to Noho

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

Today bands like Green Day and their ilk sing about girls and growing up in the suburbs and are called punk. Rancid plays rehashed Clash tunes dress like the Sex Pistols and are considered revolutionary. There was a time when punk bands sang about unity, about overthrowing authority and about being an individual. Punk was a way of thinking not a style of dress. If any band represents those old school ideals that band is 7 Seconds. Ten years ago Kevin Seconds sang "It's in my head, it's in my heart." It still holds true for them today.

While Minor Threat was establishing hardcore and straightedge in the east, 7 Seconds was doing it in the west. Combining manic thrash with a melody and sing–a–long choruses 7 Seconds were quickly embraced by the whole country. Earlier songs like "You Lose," "Heavy Metal Jock," and "Young Till I Die" quickly became the anthems of the disenfranchised youth. However it was their classic album Walk Together Rock Together that grabbed the punk communities attention. It was that album that inspired later hardcore bands like Youth Of Today and Gorilla Biscuits.

Ten years after Walk Together Rock Together 7 Seconds are still going strong. After a brief foray into pop and a Kevin Seconds solo album, the original line up is back playing the frenetic thrash they're famous for. Instead of seeing a bands that rehash the past and try to call it their own, go see a band that started it all. H2O from New York a band heavily influenced by 7 Seconds are opening up. Expect a night of stage diving, circle pits and sing–a–longs as both bands tear it up at Northhampton's Pearl Street on Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

Fake talk show fools viewers regularly

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — "Do you want to confront the person who disfigured your face? If so, call us ..."

"Have you or a relative ever made love to President Clinton? If so, give me a call ..."

One of these overtures, and the talk show it was made on, is for real. The other is a hoax. Can you tell which is which?

Now try these: Here's a "Jerry Springer Show" titled "Loving Myself," where an overweight woman who loves to kiss her own breasts displays the lipstick smears to prove it.

Click. On "Sally Jessy Raphael," a man named Rich tells of suing a nightclub where he was attacked by a ghost.

Click. On "Night Stand with Dick Dietrick," four illegal aliens compete in a talent show where the winner gets a green card and the losers are deported.

"Night Stand," of course, is the ringer. Launched earlier this fall, it's a weekly syndicated spoof of talk shows, airing on most stations in a weekend late–night slot (check local listings).

That nocturnal scheduling is one easy way to distinguish "Night Stand" from "Carnie," "Rolonda," "Geraldo," "Gabrielle" and the other weekday talk shows it lampoons.

Other notable differences: "Night Stand" is fully scripted, and rather cleverly. Actors play all the roles on segments such as "Frivolous Lawsuits (Drop Your Briefs and Give Me Ten)," "Whoops! I Think I Like My Cousin," and, as part of the oh–so–caring "Night Stand's" Save Our Kids initiative ... "Teenage Hardbody Prostitutes."

Host Dick Dietrick, a gangly underachiever with an overbite and thinning hair atop a thick head, is played by actor–writer Timothy Stack, who formerly was in the Groundling improv troupe and the father on the sitcom "Parker Lewis Can't Lose."

Now throw in the tearful testimony and heated confrontations, the rowdy audience, the arena set, the throbbing theme music and Dick's transparently insincere sincerity, and it becomes obvious that "Night Stand" is the plastic barf of talk shows — as funny as the real thing, yet no one had to really get sick.

But, boy, does it look real.

"Some people don't see any difference," says Tim Stack, who is also one of the Los Angeles–based "Night Stand's" creators. "We did a show called 'I Have a Dirty Little Secret,' where a young woman broke the news to her mother that she left medical school to become a stripper. We got a letter from a guy — 'Dear Melissa, I'm so proud of you for telling your mom.' "

Wait. That sounds like a reverse twist on "Is There Life After a Career in Porn?" one of the authentic talk–show topics — along with others like "Get Bigger Breasts or Else" and "Women Who Married Their Rapist" — that has William Bennett so riled up.

Earlier this month, the former Education Secretary blasted talk shows as "cultural rot" and cited several by name.

"Night Stand's" host fired back.

"I am deeply disappointed," pronounced Dick Dietrick in an open letter to Bennett — disappointed, that is, at being left off Bennett's list.

What Do YOU Want In A Perm?
Maybe . . .
❤ No frizz!
❤ No smell!
❤ The curl you asked for!
❤ Lasting curl with no damage!

So send your hair to . . .

Shear Bliss
Non-toxic, Holistic Salon Pure flower & plant essences used in every service

☆ Perm Special ☆
Complementary makeup application & free matrix lip color with perm.
$25 Value!

Prices given during free consultation, not over the phone
253-2322
479 West St., Amherst
On UMass/Hampshire Bus Route

ALSO . . . Acrylics Nails • Pedicures • Facials • Lash Tinting • Gorgeous Haircoloring • Makeovers • Men's 100% Botanical Shave/Skin System • And More!

ATTENTION BOARDERS AND SKIERS!!
CHECK THIS OUT:

Mount Snow
Sat., DEC 2nd

LEARN - TO - BOARD:
LEARN - TO - SKI:
$15!!

INCLUDES:

RENTAL LIMITED TICKET LESSON
COACH BUS BREAKFAST

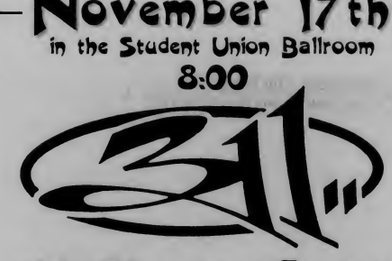
$32.

ALL MOUNTAIN SKIING & BOARDING TICKET
COACH BUS BREAKFAST

HURRY!! SPACE IS LIMITED!!
Sign up at our table - Campus Center Concourse
...or come by / call...

UMASS SKI CLUB
430 student union
545 3437

November 17th
in the Student Union Ballroom
8:00



with Shootyz Groove!

presale tix: $15 for UMASS students, $16.50 for general public
Tickets are sold at Tix Unlimited (at UMASS), Northampton, Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record (in Amherst).
For More Information, Call UPC at (413) 545-2892
Event Sponsored By: Rolling Stone FILA

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Sam Adams (Lager, Ale, Stout, Porter, Light, Scotch Ale)	$4.99/six	Mt. Gay Eclipse Rum	$11.99
Bud	$14.99	Jagermeister	$8.99
Bass Ale	$10.99	Absolute Vodka	$11.99
Oregon Ales	$4.99/six	Jim Bean	$12.99
Harpoon Octoberfest	$4.99 Six	Emmits Irish Cream	$9.99
Bacardi: Light & Amber	$7.99	Finlandia Cranberry Vodka	$21.99
		Berringer White Zinfandel Wine	$3.99

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs In Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

How to cook up a traditional Thanksgiving dinner from scratch

Every year there is some place you go to celebrate the Thanksgiving holiday. Maybe it's your Grandparents or your own home, but most likely it's at the one place where the person is a reasonably good cook.

Thanksgiving dinner isn't easy and most of the time creating the mountain of food for the hungry masses takes timing and a lot of practice. Of course there is always the dreaded dry turkey, the lumpy mash potatoes, the conglomerated gravy and the tarter than sour balls cranberry sauce — but you deal.

If you're up to the challenge here is how to put together a Thanksgiving meal so good the bird of choice for nonbelievers (as in "I can't believe you want to cook this year") to feast upon will be crow.

Tara MK Connelly

Dinner For 12
Celery Seed Cider Dip with crudities
Roast Turkey with Herb Stuffing and Pan Gravy
Baked Yams with Nutmeg Butter
Creamy Mash Potatoes and Green onions
Pumpkin Pie

Can Be Made Three Days Ahead of Time ...

Old Fashion Cranberry Sauce
2 12-ounce bags of fresh cranberries
2 cups water
2 cups sugar

Combine all ingredients in heavy large sauce pan. Stir over medium heat until sugar dissolves. Increase heat to medium-high. Boil until berries are tender and skins have broken, about 8 minutes; sauce will be thin. Cover and chill. Before serving, stir over medium heat until warm.

Can Be Made One Day Ahead of Time ...

Celery Seed Cider Dip with Crudities
— The dressing left over form this can be used as a salad dressing for a variety of tossed greens.

Celery Seed Dressing
1/2 cup chopped onion
5 tbs. cider vinegar
2 tbs. apple cider
1 1/2 tbs. chopped fresh tarragon
3/4 tsp. Dijon mustard
1 1/2 tbs. celery seeds

Dip
3 slices
2 cups plain yogurt
6 tbs. chopped fresh herbs (parsley, tarragon, basil)
1/4 cup fresh grated Parmesan cheese
1/4 cup chopped red bell pepper

Assorted Crudités

Pumpkin Pie
—Makes two 9-inch pies

Crust
2 2/3 cups all purpose flour
1/4 cups sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup (1 stick) chilled unsalted butter cut into pieces
1/2 cup chilled lard or vegetable shortening cut into pieces
8 tsp. (approx.) ice water

Filling
3 cups solid packed pumpkin
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups whipping cream
1 1/4 cups milk
6 tbs. all purpose flour
3 large eggs
3 tbs. dark molasses
1 tbs. ground cinnamon
3/4 tsp. ground allspice
3/4 tsp. salt

Crust: Blend flour, sugar and salt in processor for 10 sec. Add unsalted butter and lard until mixture forms small clumps. Blend in water gradually until dough forms ball. Divide in half and flatten into disks. Refrigerate for 1 hour. Roll out onto floured service. Line two 9-inch plate with crust, crimp edges as pleases. Preheat oven to 350 degrees and bake for 15 minutes. Cool.

Filling: Whisk all ingredients in large bowl to blend. Pour half of pumpkin filling (about 3 3/4 cups) into each prepared pie crust. Bake at 350 degrees until filling is set in center, about 1 hour. Cool pies on rack.

Herb Stuffing

Giblet Broth
6 cups canned low slat chicken broth
Neck, heart and gizzards reserved form 20 lbs. turkey
3 large fresh thyme springs or 1 1/2 tbs. dried
2 large fresh rosemary sprigs or 1 tbs. dried

Stuffing
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
2 lbs. onions chopped
4 cups chopped celery (about 7 lg. stalks)
12 cups herb-seasoned cubed bread stuffing (about 1 1/2 10-ounce packages)
1 cup chopped fresh parsley
1/2 cup chopped fresh tarragon or 2 tbs. dried

Broth: bring broth, neck, heart, gizzard, thyme and rosemary to boil in large saucepan. Reduce heat to medium — cover an simmer until giblets are very tender, about 1 hour. Transfer solids to plate, suing slotted spoon. Cool briefly. Carefully remove all meat form turkey neck. Chop giblets and neck meat. Strain broth.

For Stuffing: Butter 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Melt butter in heavy large pot or dutch oven over medium-heat. Add chopped onions and celery, sauté until tender and just beginning to brown (15 minutes). Transfer to large bowl, add stuffing cubes, chopped herbs, giblets and neck meat tossing to blend. Mix in 1 2/3 cups giblet broth. Add more if needed to barely moisten. Reserve remaining broth for gravy. Season generously with pepper. Reserve 7 cups stuffing for turkey.

Bake stuffing in covered dish alongside turkey for 45 minutes. Uncover; bake until golden, about 15 minutes.

Thanksgiving Day ...

Roast Turkey with Herbed Stuffing and Pan Gravy
— The turkey can be placed in a transparent roasting bag to preserve juices.

Turkey
1 20-lb. turkey
7 cups herb stuffing
1/2 cup (1 stick) melted butter
1 tbs. all purpose flour
1 turkey-size oven bag

Gravy
Giblet broth reserved from Herbed Stuffing (see recipe above)
Herbed Stuffing (see recipe above)
5 tbs. all purpose flour
1 1/2 tsp. chopped fresh rosemary or _ tsp. dried
Fresh parsley sprigs (optional)
Celery tops (optional)

For turkey: Place oven rack in lowest position and pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Set roasting rack in large roasting pan. Rinse turkey inside and out. Pat dry and season main cavity lightly with slat and pepper. Spoon 7 cups stuffing into main cavity. Close cavity with skewers. Tuck wings under turkey. Tie legs together loosely. Brush turkey with half melted butter. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle flour inside oven bag. Place turkey inside bag, seal end of bag with nylon tie. Set bag on rack in roasting pan. Cut several small slits in top of bag.

Roast turkey 2 hours 45 minutes. Remove turkey from oven. Increase temperature to 400 degrees. Cut bag down center (let steam escape) and open to expose turkey. Brush turkey with remaining butter, return and roast until brown all over and thermometer inserted into thickest part of inner thigh registers 180 degrees, about 15 minutes longer. Transfer to platter. Tent loosely with foil to keep warm.

For Gravy: Pour juices from roasting pan into large glass measuring cup. Spoon fat off top, reserve 5 tbs. fat. Pour juices and giblet broth into heavy saucepan. Boil until reduced to 3 cups, about 15 minutes. Heat reserved 5 tbs. turkey fat in heavy large saucepan over medium heat. Add flour; cook 3 minutes, stirring often. Whisk in reduced turkey juices. Add rosemary. Simmer until gravy thickens, stirring occasionally, about 3 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Arrange parsley springs and celery tops around turkey, if desired. Serve gravy with turkey.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist. All recipes were taken from Bon Appetit's "Special Holiday" issue.

Disney's 'Toy Story' a technological triumph

By John Horn
Associated Pres

BURBANK, Calif. — It looks like a mismatch. Robin Williams, Robert De Niro, Whitney Houston and Geena Davis are about to clash with Woody, Buzz, Rex and Mr. Potato Head, playthings that aren't even one foot tall.

The holiday film season is loaded with big stars and Oscar-caliber releases, but it may be Disney's "Toy Story" — and the new computer animation system behind it — that collects most of the attention.

The film about a child's toys come to life not only could be the season's breakout work but also could establish a new benchmark in animation history.

Unlike the elaborately drawn artwork in "Pocahontas" or the stop-motion photography of "A Nightmare Before Christmas," "Toy Story" is the first animated feature wholly born and raised inside a computer. Two dozen artists, many classically trained animators, created the film by manipulating digital models of toys, people and places.

The "Toy Story" animation, by the San Francisco-area Pixar Animation Studios, yields a life-like world where toys such as pull-string cowboy Woody (voiced by Tom Hanks) and intergalactic traveler Buzz Lightyear (Tim Allen) can walk, talk and emote as if they were alive.

Although the toys inhabit a zone that is clearly whimsical, the film's makers have spent two years in front of computer screens trying to make the movie as "real" as possible.

The film's humans and a dog named Scud don't look especially lifelike, but Pixar's animation software captures the appearance and sheen of plastic particularly well and textures and shading of everything from bookshelves to doors are true.

"It's clearly an animated film, but it's so dimensional," said the film's director, John Lasseter. "What we concentrated on was creating a believable world."

The winter's film slate showcases several other films trying to make the unbelievable real. They include Williams in "Jumanji," about a fantastic board game, the stunt-filled James Bond film "Goldeneye" and the Geena Davis pirate movie "Cutthroat Island."

Many studios release their most prestigious titles in late November and December to capture the most Academy Award momentum entering 1996. The last-minute releases introduce room's safety to rescue Buzz, propelling Woody and Buzz into an adventure that includes a demonic neighborhood kid named Sid.

The screenplay, credited to eight writers, evolved over a two-year period. Animation took another two years. Among the critical story decisions was to focus on the toys, not their owner, and to make Buzz and Woody's road trip a new variation on the old buddy movie formula.

"Disney and Pixar spent a lot of time worrying about the story," said Bonnie Arnold, the film's producer and a newcomer to animation. "The technology captures people's interest for about five minutes. The audience has to remember the story, not the technology."

Disney and Pixar enjoyed cooperation from several toy makers, but there were at least two holdouts. Mattel resisted putting its Barbie into the film, and Hasbro declined to let Sid blow up a G.I. Joe doll with a firecracker. (The new victim is cunningly named Combat Carl.)

The filmmakers hope that most viewers won't notice the movie's technical tricks — if they have succeeded at all, the wizardry should be invisible.

"There's a level of emotional believability in traditional animation," said Thomas Schumacher, Disney's senior vice president of feature animation. "This film also relies on emotion and storytelling. But we want you to believe you're looking at a real Etch-a-Sketch."

Disney has plans to make at least two more animated movies using the Pixar studios, but the new technology will not displace the more familiar two-dimensional drawings used in "The Lion King" and "Beauty and the Beast."

"I think it's a new art form in a way," said Pete Docter, one of the film's writers and its supervising animator. "But it won't be replacing anything else."

■ TV

continued from page 5

Sunday, she landed in Metropolis as one half of an evil sister duo on "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman." The former "Cheers" star was joined by "SNL" veteran Mary Gross as the two turned Superman (Dean Cain) mortal with red Kryptonite. Unfortunately for them, they didn't really solve the problem, because Superman's powers were transferred over to Lois (Teri Hatcher), who doesn't lose any ground in declaring herself Ultra Woman. Makes her sound like an ad rep for a hair dye.

Bebe Neuwirth, another "Cheers" alumni, guest-starred on "Newsradio" as Sandi, a temp hired by Dave (Dave Foley) to help cheer up Beth (Vicki Lewis). While Sandi and Beth may have been friends in the past, the two of them ended up at each other's throats. For added gags, Bill (Phil Hartman, yet another "SNL" drop-out) tangled with the security guard played by Tone Loc.

Of course, last week also signalled the end of Rebecca Gayheart and Luke Perry on "Beverly Hills, 90210." Gayheart, who played the ill-fated Antonia, married Dylan and then was murdered by her own father's hitmen the next evening. Dylan rode off into the sunset on a motorcycle and into the glitzy world of grade-B movies.

Those people who miss Antonio Sabato Jr. on "Melrose Place" got another chance to check out the former "General Hospital" hunk in NBC's "Her Hidden Truth" co-starring with "Christy's" Kellie Martin. Billie (Martin) was convicted of setting the fire that killed her mother and sister and after spending eight years in juvenile detention, she escapes and then scurries off to clear her reputation. She teams up Officer Matt Samanie (Sabato) after her only ally, a priest, is killed. As usual with movies of this genre, "Her Hidden Truth" had that implausible quality and was perfect for those who needed a good laugh.

"Sisters" featured a two hour episode on Saturday. Airing after an episode of "Jag" that looked suspiciously like a recent Harrison Ford movie, "Sisters" was a generous helping of cheese. After Alex (Swoosie Kurtz) discovered she's going through menopause and flips out on her talk show. Then her daughter Reed holds a Heidi Fleiss type get- together that was enough to make even the most stalwart "Sisters" fan to change the channel.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

special listening session
the highway is alive tonight
bruce springsteen
the ghost of tom joad
you are invited to a special listening session to hear bruce springsteen's new album "the ghost of tom joad" before it's released!

THE UMASS THEATER GUILD PRESENTS
Cheer
Nov. 15 - 18th in Bowker Auditorium 8pm
Tix Available at FAC box office or door
$4 for Students $6 General Public

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m.- 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
341 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

JUST ENDED A RELATIONSHIP?
WANT A PLACE TO TALK ABOUT IT?
COME TO...
Letting Go & Moving On
A 4 WEEK SUPPORT AND EDUCATIONAL GROUP AT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES
Mondays 3:30 - 5:00PM
PRE-GROUP INTERVIEW REQUIRED.
CALL 545-2337 FOR INFORMATION OR AN APPOINTMENT
Group begins November 20

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATION
586-6843

■ stories

continued from page 5

B: When I was in high school we had an exchange with students from Moscow and I had a Russian girl stay in my home. It was fun to share an American tradition with someone who had never experienced it before.

W: About three or four years ago, a horrible blizzard snowed my family in, and we couldn't drive to my grandmother's house for Thanksgiving dinner. Luckily, my mother had a turkey in the freezer, but my parents, my sister and I didn't get to eat until midnight.

Matt Vautour
Editor in Chief

B: When I was about six, my grandfather, who had Alzheimer's disease pretty severely, joined us for what would be his last Thanksgiving. At that time, he was having more bad days than good but for that one day he was in a good mood and mostly coherent and even let me beat him in checkers.

W: Two words: Stomach virus.

Justin C. Smith
Sports Associate

B: Normally there is a small gathering at my Aunt and Uncle's house in Saugus. I was 12 and all our extended relatives came over for a family reunion/Thanksgiving dinner. After our usual filling meal, all my uncles and cousins went over to the high school down the street and played the most incredible mud football game ever. No one even attempted to wash their clothes, we just threw them away. Yes, we do dress up for Thanksgiving.

W: The one I wasn't at.

Laura Schmidt
Woman's Issues Co-Editor

B: The best Thanksgiving had to be last year. One of my friends who lives far away stayed with my family and shared the holiday with us. It felt good to ease my friend's homesickness by including him in the festivities.

W: Every year after I eat too much.

Wendy Darling
GLB Issues Editor

B: My parents grew up in New York City, so it's always been a tradition to go to the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. We used to stay in this kinda' skeezy hotel near Times Square and do things like wander around Rockerfeller Center at two in the morning. The parade itself was also great — much better than on TV, especially watching those poor people who had to hold down the giant balloons.

W: You know those families where every holiday is a chance to get in a big fight? Well, that's my family. As a result, I have had a lot of bad Thanksgiving experiences. The absolute topper, however, has got to be the time one of my older sisters got so mad at me she squirted a 2-liter bottle of 7-Up right in my face — right in the middle of dinner. She claims she doesn't remember doing this, but I sure do. Temporary insanity?

Mark McGrath
Ed/Op Associate

B: My best Thanksgiving had to have been when the power went out. All of the local restaurants were closed, so we had to wait until the power came back on. Boy, were we hungry, and boy, was that turkey good.

W: My worst Thanksgiving was the one when I broke my leg playing football before the big meal even started. Three hours in a hospital and cold turkey after the others have all eaten can't make for a very enjoyable day.

Andrew Bryce
Ed/Op Associate

B: My buddy and I went to a football teammate's house to hang out on Thanksgiving night during our senior year in high school and I found out this kid's grandparents knew my grandfather. They apparently played golf together on many occasion. They also managed to tell everybody there how they used to call my grandfather "peckerhead."

Somehow, everybody there got a big laugh out of it.

W: During our freshman year in college, all of my high school friends at home had a reunion of sorts, and we got cocked. Probably the best Thanksgiving Eve I've ever had.

Turkey Day itself, though, was a struggle. All the turkey and its fixings looked so good going down, but not as well coming out.

Marni E. Helfner
Managing Editor

B: It was my first Thanksgiving after I moved out of my Mom's house and I was living with a foster family. They took me to one of their sets of in-laws for Thanksgiving dinner. On the way we listened to WNEW, the classic rock station in NYC, who as some form of tradition, play Arlo Guthrie's "Alice's Restaurant."

At 16, it was the first time I had ever heard the song and I loved it. Even now, I can't have a Thanksgiving without hearing "...You can get anything you want, at Alice's Restaurant/Just walk right in it's around the back/just a half a mile from the railroad track/you can get anything you want at Alice's Restaurant."

W: The same Thanksgiving with grandparents/in-laws I had never met before.

Tim White
Collegian columnist

B: The absolute best Thanksgiving was in my freshman year of college. I had been practically suffering from scurvy and rickets due to the lack of nutrition I got at the dining commons. I went home, bloated myself silly and got to see my dog. Oh yeah, and my family too.

W: I was around 12 years old when the family cat decided to let go of its worms near the pumpkin pie. I can never quite enjoy pumpkin pie like I used too ...

Bob Dunn
Collegian columnist

B: The most fun I had during Thanksgiving was watching my Aunt get in an argument with my father over turkey giblets. She swore up and down that someone had removed the turkey heart from the bird and replaced it with a chicken heart. Not only could she apparently distinguish between the two, but somehow thought the turkey heart was better than the chicken heart.

W: Every one besides that is a tie.

■ history

continued from page 5

formed to look into the whole bonding issue and it was finally agreed that some sort of game would be played. You know, Pilgrims versus Indians, a match made in ESPN heaven. Unfortunately, it wasn't quite so easy to pick what to play. Since foreign language wasn't a requirement in Plymouth Rock, it seemed that simplicity was the way to go.

The Indians wanted archery and the Pilgrims were dead set on musketry. Finally, the Indians suggested a game of baseball, using the discarded turkey bones as bats, and all seemed to be in agreement. Then the Pilgrims discovered Albert Belle was playing with a corked bone and that was the end of that.

Noticeably upset at the accusations, the Indians decided to go on strike. The Pilgrims didn't like the way things were going, so they had a mini pow-wow with a mutually agreed upon arbitrator, and together came up with the idea of changing the game from baseball to football. Well, the first game was a slaughter. The Indians, being a baseball team, didn't quite grasp the concept of football. Score: 42-0, Pilgrims.

After the game, all gathered to watch the first Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. Good Wife Kathie Lee Gifford provided commentary and Squanto was Grand Marshall. Some entries included the Mayflower Float made of real mayflowers and the Plymouth Rock Float was so heavy that it sank.

After the parade, the merry bunch prepared to eat. Unfortunately, some of the Pilgrims who were on the 10- meal plan couldn't eat, because the dinner was held on a Saturday. After that fiasco, the Committee For Thanksgiving Day Improvement decided to move the feast to a Thursday, so that all could be accommodated.

Then there was the little question of where the Indians would sleep because the Pilgrims wouldn't give them free room and board because it just wasn't in their budget. Instead a list of local dwellings was passed around with 15 percent discount packet including free continental breakfast.

In the end, a good time was had by all. Miles Standish had the privilege of winning the big side of the wishbone and he wished that the new holiday would be celebrated for hundreds of years to come. Fortunately for us, his wish came true and November will never be the same again.

Mark McGrath contributed to this column.

■ Thanksgiving

continued from page 5

movie, but it may be a story that many people can relate to.

Every year, I go to my old high school's football game, where the players battle it out with their rival team on the field while I get frostbite on the sideline. I love football — but the Millis Mohawks winning is not as interesting as watching the Patriots lose. The only reason I brave the cold and crowd is to see my old friends and teachers who go for the same reason.

Thanksgiving dinner is held at my grandparents' house, which necessitates an hour-long car ride. My grandmother's quirk? She eats dinner extremely early, around noon or so, but by the time my aunts, uncles, and cousins get assembled, we begin eating around one — much too early in my opinion.

We have the usual spread of turkey and stuffing — but the real selection in my family is found on the dessert table. The sweet-tooth thing is genetic, I guess.

After the gravy-stained dishes have been cleared, the house becomes segregated. The men head for the livingroom, my father being the leader of the pack, and tum on the T.V. In a tryplophane-induced trance, they lean back in their respective armchairs, unbuckle their belts and drowsily watch the obligatory football game.

The women seem to linger in the dining room, sipping tea, having seconds on dessert and spreading the latest gossip about "so-and-so at the church Bingo night and Mrs. What's Her Name who's husband passed away ..." — my grandmother always being in the know. She prattles on about people I have never heard of and I usually wander into the livingroom to watch the game with my dad.

I can never escape without the usual drilling. "So how is school going? How's the newspaper thing working out? Tell me about this guy you're dating. " I just smile, and respond, "fine," to everything.

Kisses on the cheek all around and Tupperware bowls filled with left-overs, we get ready to leave. It takes my mother about an hour to say goodbye to everyone, so my father just continues watching the game until she heads out the door.

This is my Thanksgiving tradition and I have learned to enjoy it, not dread it. The year-to-year routine is always being broken up by events like marriages and births and the more the family expands, the more interesting it becomes.

So, whether you are looking forward to Turkey Day or not, just remember it could be worse. Cut your losses, and take a bunch of leftovers back up to school with you. And don't forget, Christmas is right around the corner.

Laura Stock is Collegian staff member.

Muhammad Ali says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!
From the UMass Recycling Program
It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00
Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.
All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.
Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

UMass Division of Continuing Education
• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996
• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
VETERANS DAY SALE!
★WINTER SPORTS★
Exel World Cup Cross Country Ski Package ★Aurora 75mm Boot ★3 PIN 75MM Binding ★Fiberglass Pole ★Mounting $89.99 FREE Lesson
Exel 2.8 ADV Downhill Ski Package ★Salomon Quad 5 Binding ★Salomon SX 5 O-Nordica AFA 46 Boot ★Pole ★Mounting $279.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
SNOWBOARD PACKAGE ★ZEKE BOARD ★NALE BINDING ★DANIELLO DUNE BOOT $439.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
HOCKEY STICKS BUY ONE GET ONE AT 1/2 PRICE
Bauer TURBO SR $54.99 JR. $49.99
Exel 797C Downhill Ski Package ★Salomon 677 Binding ★Salomon SX 40 Boot ★Pole ★Mounting $249.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
Exel Jr. Lightning Downhill Ski Package ★Salomon Quadrax 3 Binding ★Salomon SX25 Boot ★Pole ★Mounting $179.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
AVALANCHE SNOWBOARD PACKAGE ★999 OR P1099 ★RANGER BINDING $299.99 FREE LIFT TICKET
Cooper NCB EQUIPMENT BAG $19.99
CCM COMPETITOR FIGURE SKATE SR $29.99 JR. $27.99
YOUR CHOICE! Cooper OR CCM $44.99
FREE
GORE MOUNTAIN LIFT TICKET with the Purchase Of Any Complete Downhill Package
CARNET HILL with the Purchase Of Any Complete Cross Country Package • X-Country Ski Lesson • 1/2 Price Ski Pass & MORE!
Columbia BUGABOO $99.99
SKI CLOTHING 20-50% OFF
NORDICA edelweiss
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY

~ SPORTS ~

Different game with departure of top players

By Ken Berger
Associated Press

Once again, the intrigue of another college basketball season lies in what might have been.

What if North Carolina had Rasheed Wallace and Jerry Stackhouse? What if Maryland had Joe Smith?

Arkansas would have Corliss Williamson and Scotty Thurman. Had Antonio McDyess stayed around, Alabama would be gunning for its first Sweet 16 appearance since the Wimp Sanderson days.

Instead, they're all gone, lured by the riches of the NBA and leaving a changed game behind.

"It just throws more uncertainty into our game," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said. "Just think if Rasheed Wallace and Stackhouse had stayed together, or the Fab Five. So you really can't count on a run for a championship and keeping a nucleus together, because a great nucleus is constantly broken up."

In last year's NBA draft, the first four players chosen were sophomores. Smith was the second sophomore in three years to go No. 1. Even scarier, the fifth pick was Kevin Garnett, who never even went to college.

The delicate process of building a winner with smart recruiting and coaching has been thrown into chaos.

"I know from experience now that it's a tough thing to overcome," said Alabama coach David Hobbs, who seemed to be on the fast track to great things until McDyess left school early to be the No. 2 pick. "If you've got 12 guys on scholarship, one guy can make a whole lot of difference, particularly when he's your best guy. If Antonio McDyess is back in this program, he's the best player in [the Southeastern Conference]."

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson thinks there's a lot more to be concerned about than how good teams would be if their stars had stayed in school.

"The kids today are going to see [Garnett] skip the whole deal, and they're going to say, 'Hey, if I'm good enough my senior year in high school, I'm going to the NBA,'" Richardson said.

"I'm scared. I'm worried. It scares me when I think that 90 percent of those kids are black. That's very frightening, because I know the percentage of kids that make it to the NBA," he said.

Pitino, who coached in the NBA with the New York Knicks, has come to accept players leaving college early for the draft. But he agrees with Richardson that Garnett's jump from high school to the pros could rekindle a precedent set by Shawn Kemp, who went from high school in little Elkhart, Ind., straight to "the league."

"I think that's fool's gold," Pitino said. "I think emotionally and physically, they need college basketball. I know from coaching in the pros that they just cannot do it physically. The demands are so great. They should not choose that path."

Hobbs, an assistant at Alabama under Sanderson, desperately needed McDyess back for another NCAA tournament run this season. Last year, Alabama went 23-10 and got knocked out in the second round of the tourney by Oklahoma State, which went on to the Final Four.

Most notable about Alabama's tournament showing was the play of McDyess, a raw talent who averaged a modest 14 points a game during the season. The Quitman, Miss., native exploded on the NCAA stage, tantalizing NBA scouts with 61 points and 36 rebounds in two games. Hobbs said a high-stakes battle for McDyess kicked in almost immediately.

"I think at the end of [the tournament], in Antonio's mind, he was coming back," Hobbs said at the SEC media tipoff. "But there was so much talk, and you know how they do it. [Agents] don't just try to get to the kid, they get to everybody around the kid — his mom, his brother, his high school coach."

McDyess didn't make his decision to leave school until two days before the end of the spring recruiting season, highlighting a problem Hobbs hopes the NCAA will fix.

"I think you give a guy a certain amount of time after the season's over to decide," he said. "And then when that decision time is over with, there needs to be at least a month for the college to recover from that. Not two days."

Hobbs has another suggestion that would no doubt stir some controversy and maybe even lawsuits.

"If they're going to take guys into the NBA out of high school, then we ought to have a rule like they have in baseball," Hobbs said. "If he goes out of high school, then go. If he doesn't go out of high school and goes to college, then he ought to stay three years."

Richardson said the NBA's rookie salary cap should be enough to slow down the mass exodus, or at least clean it up.

"A kid don't need an agent anymore, in reality," Richardson said. "He can be his own agent. He can have his momma be his agent. They've got a cap. The money is already spelled out."

Whatever becomes of the college game, coaches hope the success stories don't obscure the memory of those who left school and failed to make it in the pros.

Owners make proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners on Wednesday made their first bargaining proposal to players since the end of the strike. While the union didn't perceive it as a breakthrough, it wasn't met with hostility.

"We'll look at it, study it and make a report to our players," said Eugene Orza, the union's No. 2 official.

Randy Levine, the owners' new negotiator, presented the plan in a thick binder during a 1 1/2-hour meeting at the union's office. It was the first formal bargaining session since March 30, the night before a federal judge issued an injunction that led players to end their strike after 232 days. And it was the owners' first proposal since March 27.

"It was a very professional, very cordial meeting," Levine said.

Neither side would elaborate on the plan, but a person familiar with the proposal confirmed it was a taxation plan, a format on which the sides traded offers in February and March.

The union regarded the plan as a small step forward, one source said. After owners provide a computer disk detailing how the plan would work, the sides will schedule a technical meeting sometime next week. The union's executive board meets in Florida the week of Nov. 29 and probably will respond to owners the following week.

"It's very good that the process has resumed," Levine said.

A source familiar with the owners thinking but with no knowledge of the exact proposal said the teams had been considering having the tax levels rise or fall depending on revenue, a suggestion the union had made.

In addition, owners had talked about making changes salary arbitration and to the limitations on maximum salary cuts. Unlike last year, when talks took place following the cancellation of the World Series, bargaining this fall is much more low-key. Talks last year were conducted with the owners' repeatedly threatening to implement a salary cap.

Larkin named NL MVP, beats Bichette, Maddux

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Barry Larkin was the surprise choice as NL Most Valuable Player on Wednesday, beating out Dante Bichette and Greg Maddux to become the first shortstop to win the award in 33 years.

Maddux, who won his fourth straight Cy Young Award this week, and Bichette, who led the league in home runs and RBIs, were considered the leading candidates.

But rather than pitching or power, voters clearly looked at the all-around contributions Larkin made on and off the field to the NL Central champion Cincinnati Reds, and made him a convincing choice. Larkin hit .319 with 66 RBIs and 51 steals, is likely to win his second straight Gold Glove next week and was the team's clubhouse leader.

He was also the Reds' best player in the postseason, although that performance is not considered in the selection. Larkin, who was on a cruise in Mexico when the award was announced, received 11 first-place votes and finished with 281 points. Bichette, whose 40 homers and 128 RBIs led Colorado to a wild-card playoff spot, got six first-place votes and had 251 points.

Maddux, 19-2 with a 1.63 ERA for the World Series champion Atlanta Braves, got seven first-place votes and 249 points. He is the first pitcher to finish as high as third in the NL MVP voting since Los Angeles reliever Mike Marshall in 1974.

"If you look at sheer numbers, there are guys who have more homers and RBIs," Reds second baseman Bret Boone said. "But it's nice to see people look at most valuable." He was really great on our team. He was our leader."

Dodgers catcher Mike Piazza was fourth, getting three first-place votes and 214 points. The top four finishers were named on every ballot by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Ron Gant, Larkin's teammate, received the only other first-place vote.

Larkin is the first NL shortstop to win the award since Maury Wills in 1962, the season he stole a then-record 102 bases. He is the sixth shortstop to win the honor, joining Ernie Banks (1958-59), Dick Groat (1960) and Marty Marion (1944).

Larkin is the first Reds player to be named MVP since George Foster in 1977 and 11th overall. Joe Morgan, Pete Rose and Johnny Bench also won in the 1970s.

Along with leading the league in homers and RBIs, Bichette was third in batting at .340. Some voters, however, may have discounted his big numbers because he played in hitter-friendly Coors Field.

Maddux, whose winning percentage was the best in history for starters with at least 20 decisions, had the highest finish for a starting pitcher since Tom Seaver was runner-up in 1969. The last pitcher to win the NL MVP was Bob Gibson in 1968 when he had a 1.12 ERA, and some voters have been reluctant to give the award to a pitcher.

Collegian Graphics:

Collegian News - It's Spiffy.

Boricuas Unidos
The Puerto Rican Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Presents
Boricua Heritage Night
Dinner & Dance
Featuring:
Martin Espada
The "Latino poet of his generation."
Cayena
folkloric dance group performing choreographed merengue, bachata, and salsa dances.
"Borin-Plena"
will be performing traditional and original folkloric music of Puerto Rico
Date: Friday, November 17, 1995
Time: 6:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
Place: Campus Center Auditorium
Admission: $5.00 before 9 p.m. $3.00 after.
(Dinner will be served from 6:00 to 7:00 p.m.)
Music will be provided by: D.J. BERTO
Boricuas Heritage Night co-sponsors: AASA, Ahora, ALANA Caucus, Arts Council, Bilingual Collegiate program, Casa Dominicana, Collegian, Office of ALANA Affairs, Puerto Rican Graduate Resource Organization, Student Activities cultural enrichment fund, SGA finance, WMUA.

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

Go through law school in one day.
Prospective students can expect to have a very satisfying day at the Western New England College School of Law Open House.
In the most recent Princeton Review/National Jurist survey of law students across the country, we were rated in the top 10% for student satisfaction. The environment is supportive yet academically challenging. Our faculty are deeply committed to teaching and have outstanding legal credentials. In fact, the most recent Chicago-Kent Law Review faculty scholarship survey ranked our law school among the top 50 in faculty publications.
We invite you to our Open House where you can tour the campus, speak with faculty and current students and attend a mock law class.
There is no charge to attend and free childcare is available for children over three.
Advance registration is preferred.
OPEN HOUSE
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1–4PM
S. PRESTLEY BLAKE LAW CENTER
- Mock law class and group discussion
- Application process and financial aid seminar
- Reception following Open House:4–4:30pm, with law school faculty, staff and students
- Tours from noon–1pm
- Curriculum and career planning sessions
To register call 413-782-1406 or email to lawadmis@wnec.edu
Western New England College School of Law
This School of Law is fully accredited by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools. We invite applications from all persons, regardless of gender, race, sexual orientation, or physical ability.
1215 Wilbraham Rd., Springfield, MA 01119-2689 413-782-1406 Visit us on the World Wide Web at http://www.law.wnec.edu

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Natural Light" $8.99 case cans
Freixenet Cordon Negro $4.99 750 ml
Sutter Home W. Zinfandel $3.99 750 ml
Red Dog or Icehouse "wide mouths" case bots. $13.99
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Sam Adams- All Flavors
Catamount- Porter, Amber, Gold, includ. 'X-Mas Ale!'
Harpoon- all flavors including Winter Warmer!
Pete's Wicked- Ale, Lager, Wheat, Red, & Winter Brew!
Brooklyn- Lager, & the Rich Brown Ale!
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Baileys Cream $13.99 750ml
Jack Daniels $11.99 1.75 liters
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

~ SPORTS ~

GaTech, Okla., win in NIT action

Georgia Tech 87, Manhattan 67

ATLANTA (AP) — Matt Harpring scored 24 points and Stephon Marbury added 16 while playing despite having tonsilitis as Georgia Tech beat Manhattan 87-67 in the opening round of the Preseason NIT Wednesday night.

The Yellow Jackets will meet the winner of the Jackson State-Oklahoma game in a second-round game in the Georgia Dome Friday night.

Tech surged to a 12-point lead late in the first half, saw the Jaspers rally to cut the lead to 48-45 early in the second half on a dunk by Heshimu Evans, then began steadily pulling away after that.

Manhattan had 27 turnovers in the season opener for both teams. Georgia Tech had 16.

Harpring scored 17 of his points while leading Tech to a 46-36 halftime lead.

Marbury, getting frequent breaks because of his illness that had him listed as doubtful right up to game time, also had 4 rebounds, 5 assists and 4 steals in his college debut. The Brooklyn, N.Y., native was one of the nation's top recruits last year.

Evans and Jason Hoover led the Jaspers with 13 points each and Justin Phoenix added 11.Drew Barry added 15 and 11 assists for the Jackets, one of those an alley oop pass to Marbury on a dunk that gave the Jackets a 61-51 lead with 11:14 to play.

Tech led by more than 10 points for the final 8:24 when Barry hit a 3-pointer from the left corner, followed a half-minute later by Marbury's driving layup for a 70-56 advantage.Tech's biggest lead came with 1:57 left, 83-61, when Barry converted a steal into a back-over-the-head dunk.

Oklahoma 99, Jackson St. 68

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Ryan Minor and Ernie Abercrombie scored 18 points apiece Wednesday night, helping lead Oklahoma past Jackson State 99-68 in the first round of the Preseason NIT.

The Sooners (23-9 last year) will play their second-round game Friday against Georgia Tech, which beat Manhattan 87-67.

Oklahoma controlled the offensive backboard and took advantage of poor first-half shooting by Jackson State. The Tigers (12-19) only made 9 of its 42 shots in falling behind by 25 at halftime. Minor, named to the Associated Press preseason All-America team Tuesday, was not particularly sharp. The Big Eight's player of the year last season hit just six of his 15 shots and fouled out with 5:33 left.

Abercrombie had nine rebounds. He and Jason Yanish, who had a career-high 17 points and 10 rebounds, helped the Sooners control the Tigers inside from the start.

Jackson State was out-rebounded 56-30 and finished the night shooting 34 percent. Titue Hooten scored 27 for the Tigers, members of the Southwestern Athletic Conference.

After shooting so poorly in the first half, the Tigers made seven of their first eight shots in the second half to get within 58-43. But then Dion Barnes scored eight points during a 14-2 run. The Sooners used a 17-3 run to move out to a 32-14 lead midway through the first half. Yanish came off the bench to score six during that time and Minor added four.

Jackson State only made three field goals in the final 7 1/2 minutes, all of them 3-pointers. The last of the three was by Trent Pulliam with 5:42 to play. That made the score 40-25, and Oklahoma closed out the half with 10 straight points, eight from Abercrombie.

Utah 102, Boston 90

BOSTON (AP) — Karl Malone scored 34 points, including 11 in a row for the Jazz on Wednesday night, to give Utah a 102-90 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Celtics rookie Eric Williams, who finished with 17 points off the bench, scored 13 consecutive points for Boston to cut a seven-point deficit to 81-78 with 7:47 to play.

But that's when Malone, who has led Utah in scoring seven of eight games, checked back in. The Jazz forward matched every move by the Celtics' first-round pick and then some, adding eight rebounds to lead Utah to its eighth consecutive victory over Boston. Jeff Hornacek scored 17 for the Jazz. Eric Montross had 14 points and 14 rebounds and Dino Radja scored 13 with 10 rebounds for Boston.

It was 78-71 Utah with 8:41 left when Williams hit two free throws. After two free throws by Hornacek, Williams made a falling, three-point play bank shot that made it 80-76. Antoine Carr hit one free throw for Utah and then Williams put back his own miss to make it a three-point game. Then Malone came back in.

Williams tried to shoot it around Malone and wound up on the floor. Meanwhile, Malone was finishing a fast break to extend the Jazz lead to five. Next time down, Williams drove by Malone to make it 83-80. At the other end, Williams fouled Malone to give Utah a three-point play. Back under the Celtics basket, Williams hit two free throws to keep it at four, then grabbed a rebound at other end.

Showalter will manage expansion Diamondbacks

By Mel Reisner
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Buck Showalter, a lifelong Yankee before splitting with George Steinbrenner, signed a $7 million, seven-year contract Wednesday to manage the Arizona Diamondbacks, a job that will keep him on the sidelines until 1998. Showalter, 39, had rejected Steinbrenner's $1.05 million, two-year offer to stay with the Yankees because the owner wanted partial control of the coaching staff.

"A lot has been said regarding the reason why we decided to close early in terms of naming our manager," said Jerry Colangelo, the Diamondbacks managing general partner. "Simply put, when the best manager in baseball is available, you go for it regardless of what timetable you have."

Diamondbacks general manager Joe Garagiola Jr. said Showalter and the team were a perfect fit and listed the qualities he was seeking:

"Someone who has significant experience as a player or manager, a good teacher, good motivator, patient, someone who buys into our philosophy, someone who can pick up a player's spirits when they're down."

Showalter, initially interested in vacancies at Detroit and Oakland, said he was swayed by the commitment shown when Colangelo called him at 12:02 a.m. on Nov. 1, two minutes after his Yankees contract expired. He got clearance to hire any of the coaches on his staff in New York and said at least some of them would relocate to Phoenix.

"That's something that we'll delve into on a more definitive nature fairly quickly," Showalter said.

His parting with Steinbrenner was due to the owner's insistence that he fire batting coach Rick Down.

Showalter said he hadn't yet decided how much he would do with the Diamondbacks' two rookie teams, which begin play in Phoenix and Lethbridge, Alberta, after the June 1996 amateur draft. Rather than stay on the field with either short-season club, Showalter may shuttle between the two, giving help and advice to the managers, Diamondbacks president Rich Dozer said.

"I would imagine that there's a very good chance he'll turn up in Lethbridge at least once next year," said Dozer, 38. "He might stay five days or a week, or he might go back twice, but he's probably not going to stay the season."

Dozer said Showalter will have every chance to build on his reputation as a workaholic.

"His duties haven't been delineated, but there is a whole host of six, seven, eight, nine items that we think he'll be involved in," Dozer said. "From helping us prepare for the expansion draft as far as scouting players and helping us set it up, to helping write the player development manual.

"He's also going to be involved in the community, charity things and speaking appearances. We'll probably have him help some in marketing."

Dozer said Showalter also will have to familiarize himself with NL personnel, both for the November 1987 expansion draft and because Colangelo is lobbying other owners to have the Diamondbacks assigned to the NL West.

Showalter played seven seasons in the Yankees organization, then had a 360-207 record in five seasons in the minors before Steinbrenner made him manager of New York before the 1992 season. Showalter led the Yankees to a 312-269 record in four seasons, winning the 1994 AL Manager of the Year award. This year, he led them into the postseason for the first time since 1981.

Brown placed on injured list

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics placed guard Dee Brown on the injured list Wednesday with a sprained left knee he suffered in practice.

The Celtics' captain had been averaging 12 points as a starter in the first four games. He joins Pervis Ellison and Doug Smith on the injured list.

Ellison (left knee) was eligible to be activated after Wednesday night's game.

Modell gets a stadium, needs league approval

By Todd Spangler
Associated Press

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Art Modell got his deal Wednesday — a 30-year, rent-free lease to a $200 million stadium the state will build next to Camden Yards. Now the Cleveland Browns owner needs league approval.

The Board of Public Works unanimously approved the agreement to bring the Browns to Baltimore, despite complaints the team has been promised too much and money to build the stadium is lacking. Modell last week announced he will move the team after this season. Cleveland has filed a lawsuit to block the move and has asked the NFL to withhold its approval.

Gov. Parris Glendening is chairman of the three-member state oversight board, whose other members are Comptroller Louis Goldstein and Treasurer Lucille Maurer.

Some legislators have balked at the deal, which promises Modell all the proceeds from parking and concessions at the stadium, as well as $75 million from the sale of permanent seat licenses. In Charlotte, N.C., the licenses, which give the holder the right to buy a season ticket, were used to finance that city's stadium. In Baltimore, the Browns can use the money to pay moving expenses and build a training facility.

A Browns-connected corporation, to be named BSC, will also collect more than half the proceeds from any non-football event staged at the stadium.

It is a somewhat different deal from the one with Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos, who pays $5.3 million in rent and allows the state to pay for maintenance and operation of Oriole Park at Camden Yards. In the football deal, the Browns pay no rent but must reimburse the state for maintenance and operation costs.

Also, Angelos splits parking and concession revenues with the stadium authority. The state would get all of the profits from non-baseball events, but, according to stadium authority director Bruce Hoffman, "you can't have any" because of the length of the baseball season.

"The whole thing is a sweetheart deal," said Sen. Chris Van Hollen, (D-Montgomery). "This is a bad deal for the Maryland taxpayers. We got caught in a bidding war for an NFL team."

Another legislator, Delegate Robert Flanagan, (R-Howard), said it looks as though "they're breaking the bank on this one." Glendening disagreed, saying the presence of an NFL team in Baltimore will mean some 1,400 new jobs and add $123 million a year to the state economy, including $17 million in new tax revenue.

"These are complicated issues," Glendening said. "We're going to receive some political criticism, particularly some partisan political criticism."

A portion of instant-ticket lottery proceeds would be used to pay for the bonds to fund the new 70,000-seat football stadium, which should open in time for the 1998 season. Instant lottery games already are being used to pay for Camden Yards, which opened in 1992.

According to legislative analysts, instant lottery games have produced about $20 million a year — a far cry from the $35 million needed to pay for both stadiums.

Lawmakers say the special lottery games needed to fund the stadiums would pull money away from other lottery games that fund such items as school construction and social services.

"There is no more money from the lottery," said Flanagan, who sits on the House Appropriations Committee. "We have peaked out on the lottery."

Hoffman said even though the lottery's instant games earmarked for the Maryland Stadium Authority haven't done better than $26 million in any one year, they could be expanded and improved to bring in more money.

The governor maintained no taxpayer is being forced to fund the stadium construction.

"Don't buy a lottery ticket, you don't pay for this stadium," Glendening said.

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

ATTENTION UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
ALPINE COMMONS RTE. 9, AMHERST
All utilities included • 1.5 baths with Hollywood Lighting • Private patio area • On-site laundry facilities
FALL MOVE-IN SPECIAL!
CALL JENN 256-0741

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

When Appearance Counts,
Count on Jonathan Reid for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS
ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go also $3.99 Only $3.99
ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99
7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.
LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri. 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425
SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99
COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

ATTENTION CAMPUS SALES REPS
Are you earning the kind of income you'd like to be? Would unlimited earning potential and access to a professional, business marketplace appeal to your entrepreneurial spirit? If so, the Northwestern Mutual sales internship program may be for you. Our top ten college agents last year made in excess of $16,000 as full time college students.
For more information, call or write:
Kate Kane, NML, 1351 Main St., Springfield, MA 01103, 413-748-6000.

Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale.
3 days only!!
Thurs. Nov16 to Sat. Nov18
Downtown Amherst

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bott. $18.49 + dep ALL FLAVORS	SARANAC 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + dep	HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 + dep	MICHELOB &LT 24-12 oz. bott. $13.49 + dep	BUD 30 PKS $14.49 + dep	ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. btl. $12.49 + dep	KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD ICE $36.99 + DEP "KEGS" $39.99 + DEP (LITE, RED DOG, M.G.D., LOWENBRAU, ROLLING ROCK, LITE ICE / BUD, BUD LT, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK)
BUSCH & LT 30 pk. cans $11.99 + dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz bott. $9.99 + dep	NATURAL LT 24-12 oz cans $8.49 + dep	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.19 + dep	BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 +DEP
ABSOLUT VODKA $19.99 1.75L	BAILEYS IRISH CREAM $14.49 750 ml	SOUTHERN COMFORT $14.99 1.75L	LUKSUSOWA VODKA $9.99 750 ml	LETS GO! UMASS BASKETBALL & HOCKEY!	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.65L	HAPPY HOLIDAYS! HAVE A HAPPY & SAFE THANKSGIVING Sale Thru 11/29/95.
TURKEY WINES! →	INDIAN SPRINGS CHARD. $6.99 750 ml	FETZER BARREL SELECT CHARD. $7.99 750 ml	RODNEY STRONG CHARD. $6.99 750 ML	R.H. PHILLIPS BARREL CUVEE CHARD. $5.49 750 ML	NORTH RIVER WINES $6.99 750 ML

~ SPORTS ~

■ college football

continued from page 20

possessed last Saturday, running for 314 yards on 36 carries.

That performance may have single-handedly won him the Heisman.

• Notre Dame's win last weekend was worth about eight million dollars. The Irish have all but solidified a Top 10 finish which will give them a berth in a major bowl in the new alliance, and give them a shot at an eight million dollar payday.

Had the Irish lost, it would have meant a much less prestigious bowl and a much smaller payday.

Since this column will not run next week due to the holiday, we'll look ahead to the big games over the next two weeks.

Nov. 18 — Northwestern at Purdue

Gary Barnett is the coach of the year and the Wildcats are one win away from at least tying for the Big 10 title.

Darnell Autry has keyed a tough running attack and Paul Burton has led a kicking game which has been weapon for the 'Cats all year.

Purdue shouldn't be much of a test and the 'Cats will be pumped up for their regular season finale. Barnett's club runs the table in the Big 10. Northwestern 30, Purdue 20.

Michigan at Penn State

Penn St. has not played since it was upset by Northwestern two weeks ago. The time off will be pivotal in the outcome of this ballgame.

Two weeks of prep time for Joe Paterno, the time to rest bodies, and the fact the Nittany Lions lost their last time out will all be key factors in this game. State needs this one if it wants to go to a big bowl game — enough said.

Brian Griese has been steady since taking over for Scott Driesbach at the helm of the Michigan offense. Running back Tim Biakabatuka, along with wide outs Amani Toomer and Mercury Hayes, provide Griese with some offensive firepower. But it's the defense that will be the factor here.

You have to like State's prep time and the home field. Happy Valley gets a lot happier. Penn State 28, Michigan 25.

Nov. 24 — Oklahoma at Nebraska

When Howard Schnellenberger took over as the coach of the Sooners, you know he had to have circled this game as the one the Sooners wanted most. It's a huge rivalry and the Sooners' season finale.

One problem, the Sooners have about as much chance of winning this game as you and I do hitting the lottery.

Oklahoma has lost four games in Big-8 play and are not strong on either side of the ball. The Sooners cannot hang with the Huskers and they better hope emotion carries them a long way.

Ahman Green was injured last week in the Kansas game but Nebraska fans don't seem to be too worried. Why not? Maybe because this team is loaded with tailbacks and Lawrence Phillips is ready to pick up were Green left off.

Tommy Frazier will have another solid game and make his statement for the Heisman. The Big Red Machine packs for Arizona. Nebraska 47, Oklahoma 17

Nov. 25 — Florida State at Florida

Had Virginia not upset FSU, this game could have pitted two undefeateds going head-to-head. But unfortunately, the Gators will be the only team with a perfect record in this ballgame, providing they beat Vanderbilt this weekend.

The 'Noles have looked susceptible on defense and will have to try to outscore the Gators. Danny Kanell and Warrick Dunn can put up some big numbers, but the strength of the Gators is QB Danny Wuerffel and the offense.

The Gators win and spurrier finally beats both Terry and Bobby Bowden in the same season — more fuel to the ego. Florida 46, Florida St. 38.

Ohio State at Michigan

This game is huge for the Buckeyes. If Northwestern beats Purdue then the Buckeyes have to go undefeated to get to the Rose Bowl. John Cooper will have his troops ready for their biggest game of the year.

Michigan has the home field and the incentive to play the spoiler, but the Wolverines don't have the offense nor the defense to beat the Buckeyes. George seals the Heisman and the Buckeyes head to Pasadena. Ohio State 32, Michigan 20.

Greg Corey is a Collegian columnist.

■ Donahue

continued from page 20

recruited her heavily.

"I knew she was talented when I was recruiting her," LaFreniere said. "I knew that she would be an excellent college runner, and I really wanted her as part of my program."

Choosing a college was a difficult task for Donaghue, who was strongly considering Boston University. But when the time came, she cited the friendly, comfortable team feeling at UMass when she decided to enroll in the fall of 1994.

It was a tough choice for me, because they are both good schools," she said. "At UMass the team was so supportive, so close, and I really liked that. I felt like I would fit in right away. My schedule also worked out a lot better at UMass. At BU, I would have had to run on my own a lot, because my classes would have been at the same time as practice. I didn't run into that problem at UMass."

Donaghue, a Fine Arts major, came into her first season of collegiate running with fresh legs and a tough, competitor's spirit. She did well, taking eighth place at both the New England Championships and the Atlantic 10s.

"Rebecca's high school coach did an excellent job of keeping her legs fresh, and I am thankful for that," LaFreniere said. "He knew that her place to shine would be in college. She had a very successful freshman season."

After a season of cross country, Donaghue moved on to indoor track. Knowing the indoor season is especially rough on the body, Donaghue often ran only twice a week in order to keep herself ready for the outdoor track season. During the outdoor season, LaFreniere didn't increase the quantity of Donaghue's training mileage, but rather the quality. Donaghue was also introduced to a weight-training program, which she continued over the summer hiatus.

"Rebecca came back to school much stronger, and much leaner than she was when she left for the summer," assistant track coach Jim Giroux said.

When the 1995 season began, there were several questions surrounding the cross country program. LaFreniere had looked at her roster for the upcoming season in August, and she had visions of postseason glory in her head. But by September, the program had lost Melissa Langevin to a medical redshirt. The torch was passed to Donaghue to lead the team.

And lead the team she did, crossing the line as the first Massachusetts runner in every meet this season. Never finishing any lower than third in the opening meets of the season, Donaghue took 12th at the Paul Short Invitational and second at the New England Championships.

"I prepared myself all summer, lifting and training," Donaghue said. "It built up my confidence to run so strong at the beginning of the season. It felt really good to be out in front, but I try to concentrate on the race in front of me."

Donaghue continued her incredible performance streak at the Atlantic 10 Championships, taking second place overall. Clocking an impressive time of 17:38 for the hilly course, Donaghue was pleased with her performance.

"I think I probably could have given a little more, but overall I was pleased," Donaghue said. "That was a great meet, not just for me, but for the whole team.

"Everyone ran so well, it was a total team effort. When we won A-10's, it was the greatest feeling. It was incredible."

With her A-10 finish and a place on the All-Atlantic 10 team securely under her belt, Donaghue set her sights on the ECAC Championships. The meet at Franklin Park was especially important because it was what Donaghue had worked for all season — a shot at qualifying for the NCAA Championships.

"I knew I had a shot, a very realistic shot, at qualifying," Donaghue said. "There were some incredible runners there and I just tried to run a strong race. I figured that if I could stay with the top group, I would have enough kick left at the end of the race."

And in the end, Donaghue did have enough, propelling herself to eleventh place overall. That place, and her personal record time of 17:28, was enough to put Donaghue into the bracket of qualifiers who will head to Ames, Iowa for Monday's national meet.

Although Donaghue expressed some surprise about her finish, LaFreniere knew that her star was capable of such a performance.

"I was really happy, but still kind of surprised," Donaghue said. "I'm overwhelmed. It is such a great feeling, such an honor."

"I knew that she had that kind of performance in her," LaFreniere said. "She is running with top caliber college runners right now and I think she is comfortable with that. I think Rebecca still has her best race in her and we should see her peak in Iowa."

Donaghue, who is the first UMass woman to ever qualify for the NCAA's, will leave on Saturday for Iowa. From there she will prepare for Monday's meet.

"There is a fire in her eyes when that gun goes off," LaFreniere said. "Physically, she is ready to compete at the national level, and I think she's mentally ready too."

There are many reasons Rebecca Donaghue is so successful. Her love for the sport that she once despised has carried her to glory. She has turned the saying "no pain, no gain" into her personal credo, working tirelessly and diligently to achieve more with each race.

The young runner, who Massachusetts men's cross country and track & field coach Ken O'Brien has nicknamed "the baby-face assassin," will continue her attack on rivals and record books well into the future.

"She takes no prisoners," LaFreniere said.

When asked to describe her star in a few simple words, LaFreniere didn't have to think very long before she came up with an answer.

"Dedication. Commitment. Rebecca is one of the hardest- working athletes I have ever had," LaFreniere said. "Not only is she diligent, but she's also extremely coachable. There aren't very many kids like that. She's smart about her running. She knows she has to have a day for recovery. Rebecca loves competing, she lives this sport. And that makes all the difference, because you can't just go through the motions in this sport."

"You have to like to train at this level and Rebecca does," Giroux added. "In high school you compete so much more often, you can afford to not like the training schedule. But in college, it's a whole different ball game."

"Rebecca is as solid as a rock," LaFreniere said. "She has an athlete and a half, something many people don't realize because cross country is not a big headliner. And what I think is even more impressive than her dedication to her sport, is the fact that she has a heart of gold. Nowadays, it's really unusual when a star athlete is as modest and unassuming as Rebecca. In a day and age when we're so used to stars having big heads and huge egos, she's a refreshing change."

When Donaghue toes the line in Iowa on Monday morning, she still won't cut an imposing figure. But there is no question that among today's athletes, Rebecca Donaghue stands tall.

■ season opener

continued from page 20

Blodgett leading the way. Blodgett averaged 20.1 ppg last year and abused the UMass defense, lighting up the Minutewomen for 25 points, including 3–for–5 from three–point land.

For UMass, it was senior co–captain Octavia Thomas who led the scoring. Thomas shot 8–for–15 from the floor and 2– for–4 at the charity stripe to lead the squad with 18 points. Behind Thomas, senior co–captain Melissa Gurrle tallied 4– for–17 from the floor and was a perfect 6–for–6 in foul shooting for a total of 14 points.

Junior guard Beth Kuzmeski,

Octavia Thomas

who was the go–to–player on the perimeter last season, shot zero percent (0–for–6) from the floor and 0–for–5 from outside the arc.

The lone outside attack came from sophomore forward Tez Kraft, who hit two treys and netted four field goals for 10 points.

While this opening performance was much less than expected, one has to remember that ewen last year didn't open very well. In fact, Massachusetts kicked off the season rather flat, not winning a single game in its first five contests. As O'Brien said, this tournament would not be an indication of the season to come, but a good indication of where they are now.

■ Norton

continued from page 20

He can score. He wants to pass off more than shoot. He can score on the shot," Mallen said. "He has an absolute bomb. He can shoot the puck so hard. We want him to put the puck hard on the goaltender, and even if he doesn't score, he'll create a rebound."

Norton scored his first collegiate goal Saturday night, but it wasn't on a slapshot.

Junior forward Tom Perry had the puck on a partial breakaway, with one defenseman angling across the ice to catch him. As the defender got closer, Perry slowed up to allow himself to get taken out. Just before the defender's momentum carried him out of the play, Perry slid the puck between his legs to Norton, who fired a shot past goaltender Craig Lindsay.

Norton was glad to finally reach that first milestone.

"I had been saying my God, when's it going to come," he said. "But once you get one ..."

While Norton has made improvement, Mallen said there is still room for even greater things from him.

"He's made a big step up, but he still has a lot of potential to go," Mallen said. "But within the next two years, he should be looking to improve those skills so that they can be utilized on a night–in, night–out basis.

"Brad absolutely has a future in hockey. The NHL likes big defensemen. A lot of effort and a lot of diligence can lead to success down the road."

Norton expects more from himself as well.

"I think I can get a lot better," said the tenth round draft choice of the Edmonton Oilers. "I watch tapes of last year and I look at myself and say 'God. What was I doing?' I'm hard on myself, so if I can see improvement, then I can keep going."

And while all the progress has been made, the opponents still remember the Norton of old. The temptation for taking penalties is still there.

Against Merrimack and Lowell (the team that broke Norton's jaw last season), players were hacking and slashing at the big defenseman in hopes of goading him into retaliation. But Norton isn't biting. He'd rather stay on the ice. And instead of just being the biggest body on the ice, Norton has become a big part of the UMass defense.

Pearl Street Nightclub

THURSDAY NOV 16
WHMP DANCE PARTY
18 & OVER/hosted by Nick Danger
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
FREE 1000 CIGARETTES OF GIVEAWAY
Inline Skate Giveaway from Western Village Ski & Sport

DOWNSTAIRS 7:30 PM
Record Release Party
7 SECONDS
H2O/Ugly Truths/Bane Tom Shotgun

FRIDAY NOV 17
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70'S & 80'S
FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD

SATURDAY NOV. 18
CLUB NIGHT
DJ Dove Playing
"Retro to Techno"
NOW AVAILABLE "THE CLUB CARD"
Also, come to receive a FREE Dinner Certificate at the Depot

UPSTAIRS 6:30 pm
THE MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
Buzzkill/Spring Heeled Jack

DOWNSTAIRS 9:00 PM
THE BOGMEN
Free with Bosstones Tix
Emmit Swimming

SUNDAY NOV. 19
2:00 PM ALL AGES
THE BATTLEFIELD BAND

8:00 PM
THE MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
Buzzkill/Mephiskapheles

TUES. NOV. 21 7:30 PM
KORN
Monster Magnet

WEDNESDAY NOV. 22
GAY NIGHT
With DJ Dennis
Drink Special: All ABSOLUT Drinks $3.00

THUR. NOV. 23 9:00 PM
THE SIGHS
Bamboo Steamers/Frank Mantl

FRIDAY NOV. 24
RETRO NIGHT
Downstairs 8 pm
Teen Dance Night
Ages 16-20 Welcome

COMING TO PEARL STREET...
11/25 THE EQUALITES
11/30 DYNASTYHERIA
PHINEAS GAGE
12/1 TREVENOR
12/8 VELOCITY GIRL
12/8 GOVERNMENT MULE
12/9 CHUCKLEHEAD
12/12 MERCURY REV
12/16 MAX GREEK

Tickets for all shows available at Newbury Comics, Tower Records, Strawberries, For The Record in Amherst, Music Mania in Greenfield, Box office 586-8686, 1-800 THE TIX
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413.584.7171

Collegian Graphics
We're up with the stars.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD
ON THURSDAYS!

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES

ANTONIO'S Does Not Deliver However LARRY Delivers ANTONIO'S Beep HimAt 961-7559 $3 DELIVERY CHARGE

The Great American Smoke Out
YOU CAN QUIT
GIVE IT A TRY
Turn in your cigarettes and get a survival kit.
Thursday, Nov. 16, 1995
9:30AM - 2:30PM
Campus Center Concourse Table
SPONSORED BY THE STUDENT HEALTH ADVISORY BOARD

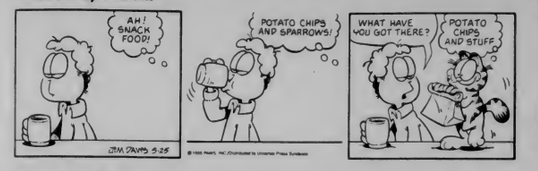
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DROP YOUR TROUSERS AND TURN AROUND. I NEED A DNA SAMPLE.
WE'RE SCANNING FOR ANY FATAL GENETIC PROBLEMS THAT COULD HURT PRODUCTIVITY
UH. WE DECIDED TO MOVE YOUR PROJECT DEADLINE UP A WEEK.

Garfield By Jim Davis

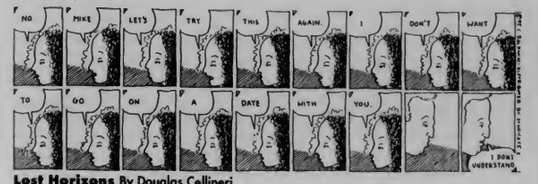


Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Lowell and I were walking down the street and I thought this girl was waving at me but she was actually fanning her face from the heat. I almost said, "hi".
I'm a jerk.
I told Lowell, "We're losers. We have nothing going on in our lives."
Lowell said, "yeah, we're losers."
Then I said, "Actually I'm not a loser Lowell, but you are."
I said, "Really Lowell, you can't be a loser. It's virtually impossible because you have a beautiful new mountain bike."
Lowell said, "Thanks Leold, I forgot I had the bike."
I said, "yeah, no problem.....
.....loser."

Close to Home By John McPherson

Bruno By C. Baldwin



Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

TONIGHTS TOPIC IS OUTCOME BASED EDUCATION... FIRST UP IS, JOEL OVER IN PUFFTON.
HEY, NEIL!
OBE IS STUPID! I TOOK STANDARDIZED TESTS AND I STILL GOT ACCEPTED TO UMASS!
WHICH IS NOW ONE OF THE TOP-FIFTEEN SCHOOLS IN THE ENTIRE COUNTRY!
UH. WHICH POLL IS THAT, JOEL?
ALL OF EM! A.P., U.J., COACHES...
HELLO? HELLO?..
I SHOULD HAVE GONE TO TEMPLE.

Geofrey By Embryo

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

ATTENTION ALL CARTOONISTS & COMIC STRIP WRITERS:

There will be a MANDATORY meeting for anyone interested in drawing for the comics page on Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Collegian Offices.

This includes current cartoonists.

The meeting will last approximately 30 minutes. Please bring 2–3 strips with you as well as a list of the days you will be able to do strips. Dimensions for long strips are 6 1/4 inches wide by 2 inches high. Dimensions for square cartoons are 3 inches by roughly four inches.

If you have any questions please contact Marni Helfner, Managing Editor at 545–0719.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tim J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Production ..... David Voldan
Amy Paradysz, Leon Latino

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH	DINNER
Duchess Meat Pie	Cheese spinach strudel
Turkey burger	Roast top round of beef
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Hummus veg. pocket	Roman rice and beans
Turkey burger	Cheese spinach strudel

Saturday

LUNCH	DINNER
Veg. omelet	Cajun style scrod
Waffles & sausage	Chicken hoagie
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Waffles	Latin stew
Mexican veg. stew	Chicken hoagie

Sunday

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrambled eggs	Chicken stir fry
Bacon breakfast pizza	Manicotti in sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Spinach breakfast pizza	Stir fry veg. & tofu
Caponata w/bread	Manicotti in sauce

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Least Popular Businesses

